SOHAM, a par. in the hund. of Staploe, co. Cambridge, 18 miles N.E. of Cambridge, 8 N. of Newmarket, and 6 S.E. of Ely, its nearest station on the Great Eastern railway. There is a navigable canal called "The Lode," which joins the Ouse at Ely. The par. is 9 miles in length, and comprises the chplry. of Barway. It formerly included a large mere or lake and about 10,000 acres of fen, but these have been drained, and are now in a high state of cultivation. The chief employment of the inhabitants is agricultural, with dairy farming and market gardening. Excellent Cottenham cheese and butter are made, and large quantities of fruit are sent to the London and other markets. The town, which is straggling and irregularly built, consists principally of one street, and has been much improved within the last quarter of a century. It is lighted with gas, but indifferently supplied with water. There are a branch bank, breweries, and tile works. The principal seat is The Place. In the Saxon times it was selected as the seat of a diocese founded in 630 by St. Felix, but removed to Dunwich in 870, when the convent was destroyed by the Danes. A court-leet is held in the town annually. The living is a vic. with the cur. of Barway annexed, in the dioc. of Ely, val. £1,653 10s., in the patron. of Pembroke College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, or St. John the Baptist, is a cruciform structure, with an old tower containing a peal of ten bells. The register dates from the early part of the reign of Eilzabeth. There are places of worship for Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, Independents, Baptists, and Unitarians. The boys' school has an income from endowment of £100 per annum, and Haggitt's Sunday-school one of £10. The parochial charities produce about £700 per annum, including the endowment of Thomas Peachey's almshouses for 17 widows, founded in 1582, and the bequest of Bishop Laney for apprenticing poor children of Ely and Soham. The Commissioners of the Bedford Level allotted a certain portion of fen lands in lieu of common rights. Roman urns and other antiquities have been found here. An annual cattle fair is held 9th May and a pleasure fair on the Monday nearest to St. John's Day.

SOHAM, EARL, a par. in the hund. of Loes, co. Suffolk, 3 miles E. of Debenham, and 4 W. of Framlingham station on the Great Eastern railway. Wickham-Market is its post town. It was formerly a market town, but is now a village. The manor anciently belonged to the Bigods, earls of Norfolk, from which circumstance it takes the prefix to its name. Near the village is Soham Lodge, an old moated house of the Cornwallises. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £515. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There are some small charities. The Baptists and Wesleyans have each a chapel, and there is a free school. A fair is held on the 4th August.

SOHAM, MONK, a par. in the hund. of Hoxne, co. Suffolk, 4 miles N.E. of Debenham, and 6 N.W. of Framlingham. Wickham Market is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £530. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The register dates from 1712.

SOHO, a hmlt. in the par. of Handsworth, hund. of Offlow, co. Stafford, 2 miles N.W. of Birmingham, of which it is an important suburb. It has stations on the Great Western, and London and North-Western railways. The chief part of the land was in heath till 1762, at which period a rolling-mill was established by Boulton, who carried on an extensive manufacture of buttons, buckles, and silver-plated goods up to 1774, when Watt joined him, and the two brought to perfection the invention of the steam-engine. The principal residence is Soho House. See BIRMINGHAM.

SOKEHOLME, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Warsop, Hatfield div. of Bassetlaw wap., co. Nottingham, 3½ miles N.E. of Mansfield, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. A short distance from the village is a spring which at one time was resorted to for bathing. The chapel-of-ease is a small ancient structure. The township of Sokeholme is connected with the manor of Nettleworks. Sir H. Fitzherbert is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

SOKENS, THE, a lib. in the hund. of Tendring, co. Essex. It includes the pars. of Kirby, Thorpe, and Walton.

SOLAR, formerly a par. in the bar. of Upper Glenarm, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, but now incorporated with the pars. forming the benefice of Connor, on the road from Larne to Cushendall.

SOLDIERSTOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Aghalee, bar. of Upper Massareene, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 6 miles S.W. of Lisburn, so named from a body of soldiers having been stationed here during the disturbances of 1641. It is situated on the Lagan canal.

SOLENT, the channel separating the Isle of Wight from the opposite coast of co. Hants. It is about 7 miles long by 2 broad, and deepens towards the Needles.

SOLE STREET, a hmlt. in the hund. of Toltingtrough, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, near Rochester. It is a station on the London, Chatham, and Dover railway.

SOLE-STREET, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Peter's, Isle of Thanet and lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, near Margate.

SOLEY END, a vil. in the par. of Astley, co. Warwick, 5 miles N. of Coventry, on the river Sow.

SOLIHULL, a div. in the hund. of Hemlingford, co. Warwick, contains the pars. of Baddesley-Clinton, Barston, Berkeswell, Bickenhill, Elmdon, Hampton-in-Arden, Meriden, Great and Little Packington, and Solihull, comprising an area of 43,560 acres.

SOLIHULL, or SILHILL, a par. and post town in the Solihull div. of Hemlingford hund., co. Warwick, 6½ miles S.E. of Birmingham, and 14¾ from Warwick. It is a station on the Birmingham and Oxford railway.

It is situated betwixt the Warwick and Stratford-on-Avon canals, on the river Blythe. It is a polling-place for the county, and a decayed petty sessions and market town, containing the vils. of Shirley Street, Shirley Heath, Solihull, and Olton, the old seat of the barons of Limesi. There is a townhall over the market-place, also a savings-bank. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £1,455. The church, dedicated to St. Alphege, is a cruciform structure with a spired tower containing eight bells. The parochial charities produce about £560 per annum, of which £511 are realised from the town estates. There is a free grammar school, where Shenstone was educated, and National schools for both sexes at Shirley Street. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship, and the Roman Catholics a church recently erected.

SOLLERSHOPE, a par. in the hund. of Greytree, co. Hereford, 6 miles N. of Ross, its post town, and 2½ from Fawley railway station. The village, which is small, is situated near the river Wye, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is of a clayey and loamy nature, with a subsoil of limestone rock. The living is a rect. annexed to that of How Caple, in the dioc. of Hereford. The church has a square tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £1 10*s.* per annum. There is a free school for both sexes. Mrs. A. G. Coleman and Mrs. C. Holt are ladies of the manor.

SOLLOGHODBEG, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2¼ miles N.W. of Tipperary, on the road to Borrisoleigh. The soil is good, but susceptible of improvement by draining. Grazing is principally attended to. The living is a rect. forming portion of the benefice of Cullen, in the dioc. of Emly. It is in the Roman Catholic parish of Ulla and Solohead.

SOLLOGHODMORE, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, co. Tipperary, South Riding, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3¼ miles N.W. of Tipperary. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the road to Limerick. Grazing is chiefly attended to. The living is a rect. in the benefice of Cullen and dioc. of Emly. It is in the Roman Catholic parish of Ulla and Solohead. There is a school in connection with the National Board, founded by Lord Derby, whose seat of Ballykisteen, in this parish, commands a view of the Galtee mountains.

SOLPORT, a tnshp. in the par. of Stapleton, ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 7 miles N.W. of Brampton.

SOLVA, or SOLFACH, a vil. in the par. of Whitchurch, co. Pembroke, 3 miles S.E. of St. David's, on St. Bride's Bay, under the cliffs at the mouth of the Sowa river, which flows 8 miles S.W. of Llanreithion. It is a sub-port to Milford. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the coasting trade.

SOMBOURN, KING'S, a hund. in the Romsey div. of co. Hants, contains the pars. of North Baddesley, Houghton, Romsey Extra, Timsbury, and part of King's Sombourn.

SOMBOURN, KING'S, a par. partly in the above hund., and partly in that of Lower Buddlesgate, co. Hants, 3 miles S. of Stockbridge, its post town, and 8½ W. of Winchester. The village, which is large, is chiefly agricultural. King's Sombourn is mentioned in Domesday Book, where it is spelled Somberne Regis. Prior to the Norman conquest it was part of a demesne belonging to the crown, and now forms part of the duchy of Lancaster. John of Gaunt had a palace here, the site of which remains near the National school. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the iron foundries. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Little Sombourn annexed, in the dioc. of Winchester, joint val. £696. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient edifice with a wooden tower containing four bells. The register dates from 1762. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. The President and Fellows of Magdalen College are lords of the manor.

SOMBOURN, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of King's Sombourn, co. Hants, 2 miles S.E. of Stockbridge. It adjoins the parish of King's Sombourn, to which it is now annexed.

SOMBOURN, UP, a tythg. in the par. of King's Sombourn, co. Hants, 3½ miles S. of Stockbridge.

SOMERBY, a par. in the hund. of Framland, co. Leicester, 6 miles W. of Oakham, its post town, and 7 from Melton Mowbray. The village is small, and the land chiefly pasture. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in framework knitting. There are some brick kilns. The soil is clayey. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £224. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient cruciform structure with a square tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £43 per annum, of which £15 go to the school. The Wesleyans have a place of worship, adjoining which is a Sunday-school. The Earl of Dysart and — Babington, Esq., are lords of the manor.

SOMERBY, a par. in the wap. of Winnibriggs, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 3½ miles S.E. of Grantham, its post town and railway station. The village is of small extent. The par. includes the hmlt. of Great Humby. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Humby annexed, in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £645. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, is an ancient structure with a square tower containing one bell. The interior of the church contains an effigy of a crusader, also two brasses, one bearing date 1509. There is a National school for both sexes.

SOMERBY, a par. in the S. div. of Yarborough wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4½ miles N.W. of Caistor, and 2 from the Barnetby-le-Wold and Housham railway stations. The village is situated on the Wolds, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £184. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret.

SOMERBY, a hmlt. in the par. and wap. of Corringham, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2½ miles E. of Gainsborough.

SOMERCOTES, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Louth Eske, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 9 miles N.E. of Louth, its post town, and 3 N.W. of Saltfleet. The village, which is large and straggling, is situated on the coast. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is of a sandy and loamy nature, and a large portion is rabbit warren. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £500, in the patron. of the Duchy of Lancaster. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a tower containing three bells. The interior of the church contains a font of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum, exclusive of an allotment of 80 acres. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans, and Free and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship, and the former have a school for both sexes. At Donna-Nook is a range of buildings, recently erected, in connection with the coastguard service. S. T. Scrope, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SOMERCOTES, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Louth-Eske, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 8 miles N.E. of Louth, its post town, and 1 mile S. of North Somercotes. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The soil is of a loamy nature, with a subsoil of clay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £559, in the patron. of the Duchy of Lancaster. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower with a spire containing three bells. The church goes by the name of the "Queen of the Marsh," owing to its towering spire. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum, exclusive of an allotment of 40 acres. There is a school for both sexes, free to the children of North Somercotes. There is also an endowed Church school. The Wesleyans and Free Methodists have each a place of worship. S. T. Scrope, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SOMERDEN, a hund. in the lathe of Sutton-at-Home, co. Kent, contains the pars. of Chiddingstone, Cowden, Heiver, Penshurst, and part of Speldhurst, comprising an area of 13,650 acres.

SOMERFORD, a lib. in the par. of Brewood, co. Stafford, 1 mile E. of Brewood, and 10 miles S. of Stafford, betwixt the North-Western railway and the Grand Junction canal, on a branch of the river Trent.

SOMERFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Astbury, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 3 miles S.W. of Congleton, its post town, and 3 W. of Astbury. It is situated on the river Dann, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is a mixture of sand and clay. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £40. Somerford Park is the principal residence. Sir C. P. Shakerley is lord of the manor.

SOMERFORD-BOOTHS, a tnshp. in the par. of Astbury, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 3 miles N.W. of Congleton, and 3 N. of Astbury. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship, and a Sunday-school. Somerford-Booths Hall is the principal residence.

SOMERFORD, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Malmesbury, co. Wilts, 7 miles N. of Chippenham, its post town, and 4 S.E. of Malmesbury. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Avon, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Startley. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £447, in the patron. of Exeter College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, has a square embattled tower containing four bells. The interior contains several tablets. There is a school for both sexes. Mrs. Birtill is lady of the manor.

SOMERFORD-KEYNES, a par. in the hund. of Highworth, co. Wilts, 5 miles N.W. of Cricklade, its post town, and 3 N. of the Minety railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Thames, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £261. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a tower containing six bells. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a school, which is partly free. The Rev. C. Faucett, M.A., is lord of the manor.

SOMERFORD, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Malmesbury, co. Wilts, 3 miles S.E. of Malmesbury, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £241. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure with a square tower. The Rev. Charles Wightwick is lord of the manor.

SOMERLEYTON, a par. in the hund. of Mutford, co. Suffolk, 5½ miles N.W. of Lowestoft, its post town, and 8 S. of Yarmouth. It is a station on the Great Eastern railway. The village is situated on the river Waveney. In the vicinity are extensive brick, tile, and earthenware works. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the fisheries. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £386. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a square pinnacled tower containing five bells. It was rebuilt in 1854. The interior of the church contains an effigy of a knight, on which is an inscription. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £36 per annum, realised from poors' allotment. There is an endowed village school and a British school for both sexes. The Baptists have a place of worship, built by Sir S. M. Peto, Bart., as was also the British school. The principal residence is Somerleyton Hall, which has been entirely reconstructed by Sir S. Morton Peto, Bart., who is lord of the manor and sole landowner SOMERSALL-HERBERT, a par. in the hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 3½ miles N.E. of Uttoxeter, its post town, and 3 N. of the Sudbury railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Dove, and is wholly agricultural. The par. includes Church Somersall and Somersall Hill. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £225. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. Lord Vernon is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

SOMERSBY, a par. in the hund. of Hill, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5 miles N.E. of Horncastle, its post town, and 7 E. of the Alford railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Wolds near the river Steeping. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £92. The church, which was restored in 1833, is dedicated to St. Margaret, and is an ancient structure with a square tower. In the interior is a brass bearing date 1612. In the churchyard is an old cross. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. Alfred Tennyson, the Poet-Laureate, is a native of this parish. The Rev. L. B. Burton, M.A., is lord of the manor.

SOMERSETSHIRE, a maritime co. in the W. of England, is bounded on the N. by the Bristol Channel, the estuary of the Severn, and Gloucestershire, E. by Wiltshire, S. by Dorset and Devon, and W. by Devon. It lies between 50° 49′ and 51° 30′ N. lat., and between 2° 14′ and 3° 50′ W. long. Its extreme length from E. to W. is 68 miles, and its greatest breadth from N. to S. 43 miles; but its main breadth does not exceed 22 miles. Its area is 1,636 square miles, or 1,047,220 statute acres, of which about 900,000 are cultivated. The population in 1801 was 273,577; in 1851, 443,916; and in 1861, 444,873. At the time of the Roman invasion, the eastern districts, according to Richard of Cirencester, were held by the Hedui, a Belgic tribe, and the western by the Cambri. The Romans included the county in the province of Britannia Prima, and founded the town of Bath, known by the ancients as Aquæ Solis, and also as Thermæ; many evidences of the Roman occupation remain in the neighbourhood of Bath, Yeovil, Ilchester, Glastonbury, and other places. On the arrival of the Saxons, many important struggles with the Romanised Britons took place in this county, and it was not till 577 that Cealwin of Wessex succeeded in capturing the town of Bath. Seventy years later (658) the entire county became subject to the Saxons, who named it Sumersætas; and Cenwalch, having gained a signal victory over the Britons at Penzelwood, near Wincanton, incorporated it with Wessex. It suffered severely from the incursions of the Danes, who found a secure anchorage for their vessels in the broad estuary of the Severn; but after a long-protracted struggle, they were defeated with great slaughter at the mouth of the Parret, in 845, and again, some thirty years later, at the battle of Edington, near Westbury, when their leader, Guthrum, consented to be baptised at Alre, now Aller. In 1016, a great battle was fought between Canute and Edmund Ironsides at Penzelwood; and in 1013 Sweyn received the submission of all the W. country at Bath. At the Norman conquest, Sir William Mohun obtained a grant of a large portion of this county with the title of Earl of Somerset, which descended to his posterity till the reign of Henry VI., when it was raised to a dukedom, but was confiscated by Edward IV. in 1472, who attainted the duke for his fidelity to the late king. After having been successively revived in favour of the third son of Henry VII., and of an illegitimate son of Henry VIII., the title was finally conferred in 1546 on Edward Seymour, the Lord Protector, whose descendants still enjoy it. In the civil war of Charles I., several engagements took place, as the fight of Aller Moor, the battle of Lansdown Hill in 1643, and the siege of Taunton. In 1685, this county was the principal scene of the ill-fated Duke of Monmouth's attempt to seize the crown, for participation in which 239 persons were afterwards executed by order of Judge Jeffreys.—Few counties in England exhibit a greater variety of soil and surface than Somerset. The north-eastern district, in which the city of Bath is situated, abounds in rocks, and is intersected by the Mendip hills, a lofty mineral tract, through which, on the N. side, the Avon makes its way sluggishly to the estuary of the Severn; while on the S., numerous rivulets steal their way into the centre of the county, and there form marshes and fens. Towards the W. and N.W., from Taunton to Bridgwater Bay, is a low range called the Quantock hills. The Mendip and Quantock hills naturally divide the county into three parts, the northern, central, and south-western. The northern generally consists of extensive levels, which are in some parts liable to inundation by the sea, and presents a variety of meadows, relieved by hills of considerable altitude, intersected by fertile and well-cultivated valleys. Over 3,000 acres on the S. border of this district are drained into the river Yeo, and are 5 feet below the level of spring tide at high-water within the embankment through which the river flows; and another tract of 4,000 acres are protected from inundation by a wall of masonry 10½ feet above the level of the land. The Mendip hills extend from the coast in a south-easterly direction to the neighbourhood of Frome, being from 25 to 30 miles in length, and at one place, between Stoke Rodney and West Harptree, from 6 to 7 miles broad, with an altitude of 1,000 feet above the sea. The Polden hills are a long, low ridge, extending for 20 miles, and separated from the Mendips, to which they are nearly parallel, by a marshy tract, through which the Brue winds slowly, and which includes East Sedgmoor and the adjacent moors. In the central district, the Brent marshes or fens, lying N. of the Polden hills, are drained by the Brue by means of a barrier, provided with a flood-gate at Highbridge to resist the tides. It is cut into sections by ditches, which are provided in some places with sluices for damming up the water in times of drought. Upwards of 20,000 acres have thus been reclaimed, but a large extent of bog yet remains, and supplies excellent peat fuel to the inhabitants. The south-western district comprises the Vale of Taunton, a fertile tract of diversified uplands, to the N. of which the Quantock hills rise, extending, in a north-westerly direction, to the Bristol Channel, a distance of 14 miles. They flank the fens, and have an extreme breadth of 5 to 6 miles. Their general elevation is about 1,020 to 1,060 feet; but Bagborough Station, or Will's Neck, rises to 1,270 feet. Most of the county W. of this range consists of an irregular hilly district, called Exmoor, a tract of considerable extent, which reaches into the adjoining county of Devon. It measures about 20 miles from E. to W., and about 12 from N. to S.; the higher portions contain peat swamps of considerable size, and the entire district is almost destitute of trees, except on the banks of the streams by which it is drained. Dunkerry Beacon, the highest point in the county, belongs to this tract, and is 1,668 feet above the level of the sea. The only harbours of importance in the county are formed by the mouths of the Avon on the N.E. corner, and the Parret. The general direction of the coast is W.S.W. In the eastern portion it is for the most part low and marshy, with occasional interruptions of limestone cliffs. About 9 miles from the Avon lies Clevedon, beyond which the Yeo makes its way through fens and marshes to the sea. Farther on the character of the ground changes, and between St. Thomas's Head and Sand Point, a range of limestone cliffs line the shore for about a mile. A little south of Anchor Head is the favourite watering-place of Weston-super-Mare. Then the coast trends southwards to Brean Down, which is lofty and precipitous on every side, and almost surrounded by the sea. Government works for fortifications are here in progress. Bridgwater Bay, the principal harbour in the county, lies 7 miles farther W., and receives the waters of the Parret, the intervening shore being low and sandy. The bay is about 8 miles broad, and the land bordering on it is in many places marshy. Towards the western extremity the mountain range of the Quantock hills extends down to the coast, and appears in the form of lias cliffs, which a little farther on rise to the height of 100 feet, and in some places even higher. A marshy district succeeds to these, and is followed by a reappearance of lofty cliffs composed of slate to the W. of Minehead, and they again line the coast from Portlock Bay to the western extremity of the county.—The principal river of Somerset is the Avon, which rises in the N. of Wiltshire, but has a course of 30 miles in this county. It is navigable for barges to Bath, and large ships can use it as far as Bristol. At its mouth the spring tides generally rise 40 feet, and occasionally even more. Its most important affluents are the Frome, 20 miles long, from the Mendip hills; the Midford Brook, 10 miles in length; and the Chew. The Yeo rises at Compton Martin, on the skirts of the Mendip hills, and takes a N.N.W. course of 13 miles to the Bristol Channel. The Axe issues in a little torrent from the Wooky Cavern, near Wells, on the S. of the Mendips, and flows for 21 miles W.N.W. along the upper edge of the fen country before reaching the Channel. The Brue, rising in Selwood Forest, has a course of 36 miles along the marshes between Mendip and Polden hills, and then N.W. to the N. side of the estuary of the Parret. The Parret, which is 42 miles long, is navigable for vessels of 200 tons up to Bridgwater, 16 miles from its mouth. It rises on the borders of Dorsetshire, and through its entire course is sluggish, and in many places canal-like. Its principal tributaries are the Isle, the Yeo or Ivel, the Tone, and the Carey. The Exe rises on the southern side of the Quantock hills, near the N.W. corner of the county, and flows along the borders of Exmoor for 16 miles before entering Devonshire, where it empties itself below Exeter into the English Channel. The Kennet and Avon canal connects the Avon at Bath with the Thames, following the course of the former river to the borders of Wiltshire, where it crosses it through the Dundas aqueduct, and passes through the counties of Dorset, Wilts, and Berks to the Kennet. The Somersetshire canal, 9½ miles long, connects the collieries in the neighbourhood of Taunton with the Kennet and Avon canal. The Glastonbury canal follows the course of the river Brue from Glastonbury to Bridgwater Bay. The Bridgwater and Taunton canal, 12½ miles long, opens into the Parret at the former town. There is also a short canal between Chard and Ilminster.—The county is well provided with railway communication, the principal line being the Bristol and Exeter, which is connected at the former town with the Great Western line, and runs past Nailsea, Highbridge, Bridgwater, Taunton, and Wellington, with branch lines to Clevedon and Weston-super-Mare on the one side, and to Yeovil, on the other; a branch is also projected to Axbridge and Wells. The Wilts, Somerset, and Weymouth railway runs into the Great Western near Chippenham, in Wiltshire, passing through Frome and Yeovil. These lines are all on the broad-gauge system, and communicate with the N. of England by means of the Bristol and Birmingham line. The central Somerset railway, which is narrow gauge, runs from Burnham to Glastonbury and Wells, joining at Glastonbury a line which passes Wincanton to Templecombe, and across Dorsetshire to the east of England, and at Wells a line running by Shepton Mallet to Witham on the Weymouth line. The roads are numerous, well laid off, and generally kept in good order.—In the north-eastern part of the county the prevailing strata belong to the oolite formation, and contain many quarries of the famous Bath stone. Most of the eminences in the neighbourhood of Bath belong to this system. The inferior oolite, being the highest of the formations of the district, except those of the diluvium and alluvium, extends over the Bristol coal basins. Broadfield and Leigh Downs, near Bristol, consist of carboniferous limestone, which, crossing the valley of the Avon, again appears in the precipitous rocks of Clifton. Millstone grit, the lowest of the coal measures, forms the S.E. escarpment of Leigh Down. In Broadfield Down are Cleve and Brockley, two precipitous combes or valleys, well wooded, and presenting many attractions. Magnesian limestone is largely developed on the N.E. side of the Mendip hills, and extends from near Frome towards Keynsham. Wookey Cavern and the Cheddar Cliffs belong to this formation. The higher portions of the Mendips are of Old Red sandstone, which is in some places covered by calcareous strata; and in others lias, consisting of strata of blue slaty clay, upon which rest the marshy lands along the S. of the Mendips, are found above the New Red sandstone. In the western parts of the county, the prevailing formation is the Old Red sandstone, which extends into Devonshire. The moorland of Exmoor Forest consists of slates of the Devonian range. The Quantock hills, which lie to the N. of this district, are of coarse gritstone, also belonging to the Devonian system. The western coalfield of England lies almost wholly in Somersetshire, and is extensively worked at Keynsham, Bedminster, Frome, and Nailsea. Thirty-five collieries are under inspection, and though the seams are comparatively thin, they will not soon be exhausted. Large quantities of calamine, lead, and other minerals were formerly raised from the Mendip hills, but they are now little sought for. There are slate quarries at Wiveliscombe, and lead is found at Wellington; fuller's earth, marl, and ochre are also met with; and limestone, freestone, and gypsum are extensively quarried.—Somerset is very poorly wooded, the entire extent of woods and woodlands scarcely exceeding 20,000 acres. The ancient forest of Selwood, near Frome, appears to have covered 20,000 acres, which are now for the most part cornfields and pasture, only about 2,000 acres of coppice remaining, chiefly oak and ash trees, and hazel and alder underwood. Exmoor Forest exists only in name, there being scarcely a tree upon it to relieve the expanse of moorland, which covers about 20,000 acres.—The county presents a variety of climate, the lands along the coast being so mild that winter is scarcely felt, and the western portion generally being genial and temperate; while on the higher ground of the Polden and Mendip hills, the weather is often very wild and harsh. The soil is in general fertile, producing luxuriant herbage, and is suitable for grazing purposes and dairy husbandry. Crops of the finest wheat are raised in the alluvial tracts and in the Vale of Taunton. Potatoes, flax, and hemp are also much grown, and woad and teasel are cultivated in some places. Hops are slightly grown. More attention is given to grazing and the rearing of cattle. The breeds most approved of are Devons, Herefords, and shorthorns. Dairies are numerous, and large quantities of Cheddar cheese are made from the pure milk without the addition or subtraction of cream. It is now principally made in the marshes around Glastonbury, the name being derived from the village of Cheddar, in the Mendip hills, where it was first produced. The stock of sheep is estimated at 500,000, generally of the Southdowns or Leicester breeds, or crosses of these with Cotswold sheep, and fed upon the hilly districts and rich pastures in the centre of the county. A good breed of Welsh pigs is much attended to; the hogs are in many places fed on whey. Geese and poultry are reared in large numbers. Estates and farms are numerous, and of all sizes. Large quantities of cider are made. Wild fowl and fish are abundant and good.—The woollen manufacture was formerly extensively carried on at Taunton; but the silk trade was introduced there in 1778, and has since occupied the principal attention. Shepton Mallet is also a seat of the silk trade. Handloom broad-cloth is made at Frome, Ilminster, and Chard; cassimeres at Frome; serges at Wellington; linen fabrics at Crewkerne and Yeovil; hair cloth at Castle Carey; there are cement mills at Bridgwater and in other parts; and stockings, gloves, shoes, crapes, blankets, paper, glass, and leather are made at various places through the county. The commerce is almost concentrated at Bristol, there being a small business done also at Bridgwater, Watchet, Minehead, and Porlock.—Somersetshire consists of 40 hundreds, in two divisions. The population of the eastern division in 1861 was 172,712, and that of the western was 159,551. In the ecclesiastical arrangement it is nearly co-extensive with the diocese of Bath and Wells in the province of Canterbury, and constitutes three archdeaconries—Bath, Wells, and Taunton. The first contains the deaneries of Bath and Chew, in the other two the bishop has jurisdiction equally with the archdeacons. The county contains 466 entire parishes, and parts of two others. The civil government is entrusted to the lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum, high-sheriff, about 65 deputy lieutenants, and 280 magistrates. It is in the western circuit. The spring assizes are held at Taunton, and the summer assizes alternately at Wells and Bridgwater. There is a county gaol at Ilminster, one also, with a house of correction, at Wilton, near Taunton, besides a house of correction at Shepton Mallet. The city of Bath has its own gaol, and there is one in the borough of Bridgwater, and a city and county lock-up house at Wells. The gaol for the city of Bristol is at Bedminster, in this county. County-courts are held at 16 places, and quarter sessions at Bath, Bridgwater, Taunton, and Wells. There are asylums for the insane at Wells and Taunton, and the Somerset hospital is at the latter place. The county is in the western military district. Before the passing of the Reform Act, it returned 16 members to Parliament. The number is now reduced to 13, of whom two are returned for the eastern division—constituency, 11,867, in 1865, and two for the western—constituency, 8,632; two are sent from each of the following boroughs, Bath, Bridgwater, Taunton, and Wells, and one from Frome. Wells is the place of election for the E. division, and Taunton for the western.—The county abounds in seats and richly-wooded demesnes, of which the principal are Farleigh, of the Duke of Somerset; Brimpton, of Earl of Westmoreland; Longleat, of the Marquis of Bath; Butleigh, of Lord Glastonbury; Wilsham, of Lord Somerville; Ashley Lodge, of Lord King; Hardington, of Lord Poltimore, besides many others belonging to baronets and private gentry. At Stanton Drew are the remains of a Druids' circle, consisting of four groups of stones, arranged to form, when complete, two circles. The Roman remains are most interesting, including camps, stations, tesselated pavements, baths, arches, and other remains, more fully noticed under the places where they occur; also ruins of the abbeys of Glastonbury and Langport, of the priories of Woodspring, near Weston-super-Mare, Stavordale, near Wincanton, a Carthusian priory, near Bath, and of Montacute Cluniac priory, near Yeovil. The Duke of Wellington took his title from the town of that name in this county, near which an obelisk, 120 feet in height, has been erected to his honour. Roger Bacon was born at Ilchester, Blake at Bridgwater, Cudworth at Aller, Fielding at Sharpam, and Locke at Wrington.

SOMERSHAM, a par. in the hund. of Hurstingstone, co. Huntingdon, 5 miles N.E. of St. Ives, its post town, and 9 N.E. of Huntingdon. It is a station on the St. Ives and Wisbeach branch of the Great Eastern railway. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on the road to March and Wisbeach. It is well-built and paved, and consists of one principal street about three-quarters of a mile long, extending from E. to W., with a shorter street crossing about midway. This place, formerly a market town, was given by Brithnoth to Ely Abbey in 991. In the reign of Charles I. it formed part of the jointure of Queen Henrietta Maria. The land is generally fertile, with a small proportion of fen. About midway on the St. Ives road is a chalybeate spa, which was formerly of great repute. Roman coins have been found in this parish. The living is a rect., with the curs. of Colne and Pidley annexed, in the dioc. of Ely, val. £1,770. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient edifice, with embattled tower and open roof. It contains tombs of the Hammonds, Whiston, and others, and the brass of a priest. The parochial charities produce about £90 per annum. There is a National school partly endowed, and two Sunday-schools. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a place of worship. Near the church once stood the bishop's palace, the site of which is now partly built upon. J. G. Scott, Esq., is lord of the manor. Annual fairs are held on the 23rd June, and on the Friday prior to 22nd November.

SOMERSHAM, a par. in the hund. of Bosmere, co. Suffolk, 5½ miles N.W. of Ipswich, its post town, and 2½ S.W. of the Claddon railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £245.

The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The register dates from 1570. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum, realised from town land. The Independents and Baptists have each a place of worship.

SOMERS TOWN, a chplry. in the par. of St. Pancras, co. Middlesex, 2 miles N.W. of St. Paul's Cathedral, London. This place, about 40 years ago, was built over, and became a populous suburb. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of London, val. £400, in the patron. of the vicar. The church is a modern edifice. See PANCRAS, ST.

SOMERTON, a par. in the hund. of Ploughley, co. Oxford, 8 miles N.E. of Woodstock, its post town, and 4 S.E. of Deddington. It is a station on the Oxford section of the Great Western railway. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Oxford canal, near the river Cherwell, and is wholly agricultural. Archbishop Juxon was once rector of this parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £275. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient stone structure, containing tombs of the Fermors of Tusmore. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is Fermor's endowed boys' school, and a girls' and infant school endowed by the Countess of Jersey. The Earl of Jersey is lord of the manor.

SOMERTON, a hund. co. Somerset, contains the pars. of Aller, West Carmel, Charlton-Adam, Charlton-Mackrell, Kingston, East Lydford, Somerton, Long Sutton, and Yeovilton, comprising an area of 25,450 acres.

SOMERTON, a par., post and market town in the above hund., co. Somerset, 5 miles N.E. of Longport railway station, and 7 S. of Glastonbury. It is situated at the bridge over the river Carey, and on the high road from Wells to Taunton. The par. contains the tnshps. of Somerton Borough, Somerton Earl, and Somerton Door, with the hmlts. of Catsgrove, Highbrooks, and Midney. There was a castle here in the Saxon times, in which, subsequently, King John of France was confined by Edward III. In 877 the town was destroyed by the Danes, but being rebuilt, became the principal town of Somersetshire. The town, consisting of about five narrow streets, has recently been considerably improved, and is now paved, and lighted with gas, and has a good supply of water. The public hall stands nearly in the centre of the town, and is used by the county magistrates, who hold their sessions on Monday. There are three banks and a police station of recent erection. The gaol is on the site of the old castle. Glove making is carried on to a considerable extent in connection with houses in Yeovil, ropes and twine are manufactured, there is also a brewery. The market cross, which is of great antiquity, is in good preservation. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £259. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone edifice, with an octagonal tower containing a clock and six bells. The interior contains several brasses and effigies, including one of Edithe the Nun. The parochial charities produce about £139 per annum. There are an endowed free school for boys, a female school, supported by Col. Pinney, M.P., and Sunday-schools for both sexes. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. A court-leet is held in October. The county court is held at Langport. Market day is on Tuesday. Fairs for cattle are held on the Tuesday in Passion week, every third Tuesday after for three months, and on Michaelmas day, 8th November, and on the last Monday in January.

SOMERTON, a par. in the hund. of Babergh, co. Suffolk, 6 miles N.W. of Sudbury railway station, 7 N.E. of Clare, and 9 S.W. of Bury St. Edmund's, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on a branch of the river Stour, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £207. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, has a tower containing four bells. The register dates from 1538. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum. J. G. W. Poley, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SOMERTON, EAST, a par. in the hund. of West Flegg, co. Norfolk, 4 miles N. of Great Ormesby, and 8 N.W. of Yarmouth, its post town. It is situated near the coast, overlooking the North Sea. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Winterton, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is in ruins, but the tower, covered with ivy, is remaining. Burnley Hall is the principal residence.

SOMERTON, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Flegg, co. Norfolk, 9 miles N.W. of Yarmouth, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. In the reign of Henry II. a hospital for lepers was founded by Ralph de Granville, lord-chief-justice of England, as a cell to Butley Priory in Norfolk. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £98. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a round tower and octangular lantern. A court-leet is held annually by T. F. Grove, Esq., who is lord of the manor.

SOMPTING, a par. in the hund. of Brightford, rape of Bramber, co. Sussex, 3 miles N.E. of Worthing, its post town, and 1 mile W. of the Lancing railway station. The village, which is considerable and chiefly agricultural, is situated under the Downs which rise in the N. of the parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £150. The church is an ancient cruciform structure, with a singular Saxon tower, terminated by a gable at each side, and crowned with a wooden spire. There is a National school.

SONNING, a hund. in the co. of Berks, contains the pars. of Arborfield, Ruscomb, Sandhurst, and parts of Hurst, Sonning, and Wokingham, comprising an area of 21,830 acres.

SONNING, a par. partly in the hunds. of Sonning and Charlton, co. Berks, and partly in that of Binfield, co. Oxford, 3 miles N.E. of Reading, its post town, and 2 N.W. of Twyford railway station. The village, which is large, is situated on the Great Western railway, at the bridge over the river Thames, which separates it from the county of Oxford. The par. includes the hmlts. of Early, Woodley, and Eye. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of All Saints annexed, in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £451, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a square flint tower containing eight bells. The interior of the church contains monuments of great antiquity, with five brasses, the earliest bearing date 1434. There is also the district church of St. Peter's, the living of which is a perpet. cur.* val. £100. This church was erected in 1844 by subscription, and endowed by the late Viscountess Sidmouth. The parochial charities produce about £185 per annum, of which £30 are the endowment of Sir T. Riche's school, and £54 arise from church lands. There is a National school for girls. Holme Park House, Earley Court, and Balmirshe Court are the principal residences.

SONTLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Marchwiel, hund. of Bromfield, co. Denbigh, 3 miles S.E. of Wrexham.

SOOTHILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Dewsbury, lower div. of Agbrigg wap., West Riding co. York, 1½ mile N. of Dewsbury, and 6 miles N.W. of Wakefield. The Batley railway station is in this township. The tnshp. includes the hmlts. of Hanging Heaton, Chidswell, Shawcross with Haybeck, Earls-Heaton, and Chickenleg. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the collieries and stone quarries. In the vicinity are the remains of a church, now used as a malthouse.

SOPERS-FARM, an ext. par. place in the par. of Walcot, hund. of Bath Forum, co. Somerset.

SOPLEY, a par. in the hund. of Christchurch, Ringwood div. of co. Hants, 6 miles S. of Ringwood, its post town, and 2 N. of Christchurch. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the eastern bank of the river Avon. The par. includes the tnshps. of Avon, Ripley, and Shirley. A short distance from the village is a ford by which Sir Walter Tyrrel is said to have passed to Poole when making his escape after the death of William Rufus in the New Forest. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £230. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a square tower surmounted by a spire and containing five bells. The interior contains several monuments, some of which are of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum. There are schools for both sexes. The Independents have a place of worship.

SOPWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Chippenham, co. Wilts, 6½ miles S.W. of Tetbury, and 7 S.W. of Malmesbury. The village is situated on the north-western border of the county, and is wholly agricultural. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as being held by William d'Ewe, from whom it came to the family of Maltravers. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £265. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Mary. The Duke of Beaufort is lord of the manor.

SORBIE, a par. in the co. of Wigton, Scotland, containing a vil. of its own name and that of Garlieston. It extends 6 miles square. The surface abounds in hills, covered with verdure. The coast-line is about 7 miles in extent, and indented by numerous bays, the principal of which are Rigg, Garlieston, Port Allan, and Innerwell; there are also two large caves. In the vicinity is Dowalton lake, which abounds in perch and other fish. On the coast between Rigg Bay and Port Allan are the ruins of Crugleton Castle, formerly the seat of the earls of Buchan. The parish is traversed by the road from Whithorn to Wigton, and other branch roads. The village of Sorbie is about 4½ miles N. of Whithorn, and 6 S. of Wigton, and is small but well built. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in a damask manufactory, and others in the fisheries. About three quarters of a mile E. of the village are the ruins of Sorbie tower, formerly the seat of the Hannay family. This par. is in the presb. of Wigton and synod of Galloway, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is about £244. There are a Free church and several schools. The Independents have a chapel at Garlieston. The principal seat is Galloway House.

SORLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Alvington, co. Devon, near Kingsbridge.

SORN, a par. in the district of Kyle, co. Ayr, Scotland. It contains a vil. of its own name, and the quoad sacra par. of Catrine. It was anciently called Dalgain, and formed part of the Mauchline parish till 1692, when it was erected into a separate parish. It extends about 6½ miles in length by about the same in breadth, and is bounded by the pars. of Galston, Muirkirk, Auchinleek, and Mauchline. The surface, stretching along the northern bank of the river Ayr, is diversified with hill and moorland, attaining its greatest altitude at Blackside Hill, which rises 1,540 feet above sea-level. Part of the land is barren waste, and the remainder is in wood, pasture, and arable. The soil is chiefly a reddish clay upon a subsoil of blackish till. The parish is traversed by the road from Mauchline to Muirkirk, and is within easy access of two stations on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. The village of Sorn is 4 miles N. of Cumnock and 4 E. of Mauchline. It is situated on Ayr Water, and is principally inhabited by colliers, miners, and persons employed in agriculture. West of the village are the remains of Sorn Castle, built upon a projecting rock overlooking the water of Ayr. The lands and castle of Sorn formerly belonged to the Hamiltons of Cadzow, from whom they passed by marriage to the earls of Winton, by whom they were sold to the Loudoun and Tennent families. In this parish is a cairn 250 feet in circumference and 10 feet high. This par. is in the presb. of Ayr and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The stipend of the minister is about £195. The parish church was erected in 1658, and was enlarged and restored in 1826. There are several schools. In that part of the parish now forming the quoad sacra parish of Catrine are a Free church, a United Presbyterian church, a chapel-of-ease, and a Morisonian chapel.

SORNHILL, a vil. in the par. of Riccarton, co. Ayr, Scotland, 6 miles from Riccarton.

SOSGIL, a hmlt. in the par. chplry. of Loweswater, co. Cumberland, 4 miles S.W. of Cockermouth.

SOTBY, a par. in the E. div. of Wraggoe hund., Parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 6 miles E. of Wragby, its post town, and 8 N.W. of Horncastle. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Wolds, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £193. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The register dates from 1658. There is a Sunday-school. Robert Vyner, Esq., of Gautby Hall, is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

SOTHERTON, a par. in the hund. of Blything, co. Suffolk, 4 miles N.E. of Halesworth, 7 S. of Beccles, and 2 N.W. of Wangford, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Blyth, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Uggeshall, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew.

SOTTERLEY, a par. in the hund. of Wangford, co. Suffolk, 4 miles N. of Wangford, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Beccles. The village is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £257. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, has a square embattled tower containing two bells. The interior of the church contains several old monuments and five brasses of the Playton family, the earliest bearing date 1479. The register dates from 1547. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum, realised from enclosure and poor's land. There is a parochial school for both sexes. The Hall, which is the principal residence, is situated in a well-wooded park.

SOTWELL, a par. in the hund. of Moreton, co. Berks, 2 miles N. of Wallingford, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Thames, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Wallingford, in the dioc. of Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. James. The parochial charities produce about 10*s.* per annum. B. Hezel, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SOUGHTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Northop, hund. of Coleshill, co. Flint, 4 miles N.W. of Harwarden, and 3½ S.W. of Oswestry. It is situated on Wat's Dyke. There are collieries which employ many of the inhabitants. The Hall was built by Bishop Wynne in 1714.

SOUGHTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Llansilin, upper div. of Oswestry hund., co. Salop, 4 miles S.W. of Oswestry, its post town. It is situated in a bleak and mountainous district. The houses are scattered and the inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The Independents and Welsh Methodists have chapels. The Earl of Powis is lord of the manor.

SOULBURY, a par. in the hund. of Cottesloe, co. Bucks, 3 miles N.W. of Leighton-Buzzard, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the North-Western railway and Grand Junction canal. The par. includes the hmlt. of Hollingdon. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £116. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities produce about £131, of which £90 go to Lovett's free school. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

SOULBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Dacre, Leath ward, co. Cumberland, 5 miles S.W. of Penrith. It is situated on the margin of Ullswater, under Soulby Fell. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. E. W. Hasell, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SOULBY, a chplry. and tnshp. in the par of Kirkby-Stephen, East ward, co. Westmoreland, 2½ miles N.W. of Kirkby-Stephen, and 4 S.W. of Brough, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated at the three-arched bridge over the Scandale, a branch of the river Eden. The manor of Soulby passed from Henry de Sulleby to the Musgraves in 1296, and has remained in that family ever since. The land is divided between arable, meadow, and pasture. The soil is of a fertile character. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £78. The church was erected in 1663. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is an endowed free school, and a chapel for Wesleyans. Sir G. Musgrave, Bart., is lord of the manor. Cattle fairs are held on the Tuesday prior to Easter Sunday, and on the 30th August.

SOULDERN, a par. in the hund. of Ploughley, co. Oxford, 7 miles S.W. of Brackley, its post town, and the same distance N.W. of Bicester. The village, which is considerable, is situated on a branch of the river Cherwell, near the Oxford canal. In Henry III.'s time Souldern came into the possession of Richard Basset. The soil on the more elevated parts consists of sand and stone brash, but towards the river of clay and loam. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £453, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a massive tower. It contains tombs of the Goughs. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum. There is a boys' school with a small endowment. Wordsworth composed some of his sonnets in this neighbourhood. Many Saxon antiquities have been recently found here.

SOULDROP, a par. in the hund. of Willey, co. Bedford, 10 miles N.W. of Bedford, its post town, and 5 S. of Higham Ferrers. The village is wholly agricultural. A few of the females are employed in the manufacture of lace. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of Knotting, in the dioc. of Ely. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity or to All Saints, has a spired tower containing three bells. There is an infant school, founded by the Duke of Bedford, who is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

SOULTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Wem, co. Salop, 2 miles N.E. of Wem.

SOUND, a tnshp. in the par. of Wybunbury, hund. of Nantwich, co. Chester, 3 miles S.E. of Nantwich. It is situated on a branch of the river Weaver. The Primitive and Association Methodists have chapels. The old hall is now converted into a farmhouse. Mrs. Beckett is lady of the manor.

SOURTON, a par. in the hund. of Lifton, co. Devon, 4½ miles S.W. of Okehampton, its post town. The village, which is irregularly built, is situated near Dartmoor Forest, on the road from Okehampton to Tavistock. The par. comprises Sourton Quarry, Lake, Southerleigh, and 5 other hmlts.; also a large tract of common formerly belonging to Dartmoor. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Bridestow, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket, has a tower containing five bells. There is a Wesleyan chapel.

SOUTH-ABERDEEN, a par. in the city of Aberdeen, Scotland. See ABERDEEN. The like for other names with this prefix.

SOUTHACOTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Okehampton, co. Devon, 3 miles W. of Okehampton.

SOUTHALL, a chplry. in Norwood precinct, par. of Hayes, hund. of Elthorne, co. Middlesex, 3 miles N.W. of Brentford, and 9 W. of London. It is a junction station on the Great Western and West London railways, and lies between the Paddington and Grand Junction canals. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of London. The church, dedicated to St. John, is a modern structure built and endowed by the late Henry Dobbs, Esq. Southall House is the seat of Lord Montford. There is a cattle and sheep market on Wednesday.

SOUTHAM, a div. in the hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, contains the pars. of Birdingbury, Grandborough, Upper and Lower Hodnel, Hunningham, Bishop's Itchington, Long Itchington, Ludbrook, Leamington-Hastings, Martin, Napton, Upper Radbourn, Lower Radbourn, Upper Shuckburgh, Southam, Stockton, Wappenbury, Watergall, Weston, and Wolfhamcote, comprising an area of 40,000 acres.

SOUTHAM, a par., post, and small market town in the Southam div. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, 10 miles S.E. of Warwick. At Southam-road is a station on the Oxford and Rugby railway. The town is situated on the river Stowe, a branch of the Ichene, here crossed by a bridge of two arches. It consists of two streets of well-built houses, and is a polling-place for South Warwickshire. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as Suchem, or Suthan, and had anciently a mint. In the vicinity are several mineral springs, one of which, designated the Holy Well, was formerly held in high estimation, its waters possessing similar properties to those at Leamington. In 1818 an institution for diseases of the eye and ear was established, principally through the exertions of H. L. Smith, Esq. A county court is held here, and the magistrates meet in petty sessions on the first and third Mondays in every month. There are brick and tile kilns, and cement is manufactured to a considerable extent. The Poor-law Union embraces 19 pars. or places. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £534, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. James, has a spired tower containing five bells. It was repaired and part of it rebuilt in 1854. There are several stained windows. The parochial charities produce about £225 per annum, of which £180 are realised from town lands. There are National schools for both sexes, and places of worship for the Independents and Wesleyans. Market day is on Monday, chiefly for corn. Fairs for cattle are held on the first Monday in every month, also on Easter Monday and 10th July.

SOUTHAMPTON, a div. of co. Hants, contains the libs. of Beaulieu and Dibden, and the pars. of Upper and Lower Mainsbridge, comprising 4,850 acres.

SOUTHAMPTON, a seaport, market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, and a county of itself, locally in the hund. of Mainsbridge, co. Hants, 14 miles S.S.W. of Winchester, 17 N.E. of Lymington, and 11 N.W. of Portsmouth. It is situated on a peninsula at the head of Southampton Water, between the river Test, or Anton, on the W., and the Alre, or Itchen, on the E. It is a constantly and rapidly-increasing place, the population having risen from 7,913 in 1801 to 35,305 in 1851, and 46,960 in 1861, occupying 7,712 houses. About a mile to the S.W. of the present town stood the Roman Clausentum, the site of which is now occupied by Bittern Farm, and is still indicated by a fosse and vallum on the land side. The present town, supposed to have been refounded by the Saxons, is called in Domesday Book Hantune, from the river Anton, or Test, which flows by it, and in the Saxon chronicle Hamtune, or Suth-Hamtun. It was often attacked by the Danes, who pillaged it in 980, and again in 992, and there established their winter quarters in 994. Athelstane made it a mint town. On the accession of Canute to the English throne, in 1016, it became a favourite residence of that king, and it is said that he there rebuked the flattery of his courtiers by vainly commanding the waves to retire. In the reign of Henry II. it had four churches and a castle, and in 1215 was made a staple for wines. In 1339 it was plundered and partly burnt by the combined French, Spanish, and Genoese fleets, but was immediately rebuilt and fortified. In 1346 Edward III. sailed with his army from this port for the conquest of France, as did also Henry V. in 1415. In 1377 the French made a descent on the town, which caused Richard II. to surround it with a wall and strengthen the fortifications. It took an active part in the wars between York and Lancaster, and the latter party was defeated here with great loss. In 1554 Philip II., when coming to espouse Queen Mary, landed here and was sumptuously entertained by the corporation. In 1665 the plague which devastated London here also committed dreadful ravages. The subsequent history of the place presents few points of interest. At the commencement of the present century it was comparatively unimportant, but the impetus given to our trade with India and America by the application of steam as a motive power in vessels, the tide of emigration which has set in to Australia and our other colonies, and the convenience of this port as a point of arrival and departure, all tended to its rapid development, and have caused an increase in the population since 1801 of nearly 600 per cent. The town occupies a high gravelly bank rising gradually from Southampton Water, and sloping in every direction. It is washed on the W. side by the Anton, and on the E. by the Itchen, the streams mingling in the estuary, which stretches for 7 miles in a south-easterly direction, and is 2 miles broad at its mouth. The approach by the London-road lies through Southampton Common, 365 acres in extent, left to the town many centuries ago for public purposes. It cannot be otherwise disposed of without the common consent of the inhabitants and the approval of parliament, for which end several unsuccessful attempts have been made. It is richly wooded and well laid out with promenades and drives, and nearer to the town are avenues of elm-trees. The town consists of the old and new portions. The former occupies the S.W. corner, and was originally surrounded by walls 1¼ mile in circumference, flanked by round towers, considerable portions of which remain, particularly on the W. side. It was entered by several gates, three of which are yet standing—West Gate, South Gate, and Bar Gate. The last is a structure standing across the principal street in the present town; it is embattled and machicolated, and is sufficiently large to serve as the townhall. On the N. front are two gigantic figures, representing Sir Bevois of Southampton and the giant Ascupart. From the great increase in the extent of the town, this gate now stands nearly in its centre. The street which it crosses is 2 miles long, and runs nearly N. and S., being divided into Above Bar and Below Bar, or High-street. The latter part, which is three-quarters of a mile in length, terminates near a pier erected in 1832, and opened by the Princess, now Queen Victoria, in honour of whom it is called Victoria Pier. The principal streets run at right angles to this central one, those of older erection being irregularly planned; while the modern buildings Above Bar are generally imposing. This part of the town has more than doubled itself within the last thirty years, and beyond it are extensive suburbs containing villas surrounded by gardens, and mansions skirted with tuftings of wood. Along the shore, for half a mile at the end of High-street, is a raised walk lined with trees, and commanding a view of the harbour. The county of the town comprises all the peninsula formed by the rivers Itchen and Anton, and extends 3 miles along the bank of the former, with a mean breadth of half a mile. It contains 6 pars., but is united under a local Act for purposes connected with the relief of the poor. There are 5 parish churches within the town, of which one is in the gift of the Bishop of Winchester, one in that of Queen's College, Oxford, and three in that of the lord chancellor. Holy-rood Church, standing in the principal street, is an ancient building with a tower and spire, containing six bells, and a colonnade or portico occupying the entire front. The church of St. Lawrence is an ancient structure, with a tower only rising to the ridge of the nave. St. Michael's, the oldest church in the town, occupies the E. side of a square which was formerly used as a fish-market, and serves as a landmark from the harbour. It is an ancient structure partly Norman, with a tower surmounted by a lofty octagonal spire containing six bells, and has a W. window. All Saints is a Grecian building with a turret and dome. St. Paul's, a proprietary chapel in the same parish, displays considerable architectural beauty. St. Mary's is a plain ancient structure, much modernised. There are also three chapels-of-ease. The Independents and Baptists have each two chapels, and there are places of worship for English Presbyterians, Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists, Unitarians, Roman Catholics, Friends, and Jews. There are parochial, National, British, and infant schools, a school of industry for girls, founded in 1828 through the influence of Queen Adelaide, a diocesan grammar school, and a grammar school with a small endowment, founded in 1553 by Edward VI. A mechanics' institute has been established here, with library and museum, also a literary and scientific institution. There are several almshouses, a dispensary established in 1823, infirmary, and many other charities, among which is one left under the will of Alderman Taunton in 1760, which provides for the instruction of 10 boys, supplies a stipend of £10 a-year to 16 aged persons, and gives rewards to deserving female servants. There are also an extramural cemetery of 10 acres, recently formed out of a portion of the common on the south-east, several benefit societies, a female penitentiary, and Royal Humane Society. The gaol and house of correction, erected in 1855 at a cost of £24,000, is in the Tudor style, built of red brick with stone dressings. The custom-house, in the vicinity of the docks, is a commodious building of recent erection, as is also the corn exchange, where the Chamber of Commerce meets. The Ordnance Survey Office for England is now fixed at Southampton, having been removed thither from the Tower of London, and occupies the old barracks. The Admiralty and Transport Office and the Government Emigration Office are also established in the town. The Royal Southern Yacht Club, established in 1844, have here a club-house in the Italian style of architecture, facing the Royal Pier and commanding a view of the harbour. Other buildings are the baths, erected at a cost of £7,000, two sets of assembly-rooms, and a theatre. The annual regatta is generally held in August, and there is a racecourse, but the races have been discontinued. There are also archery grounds and a botanic garden. Southampton claims to be a borough by prescription, but its first known charter was granted by Henry II. Under the Municipal Reform Act it is divided into five wards, the corporation consisting of 10 aldermen and 30 councillors, from among whom the mayor is chosen; and under the Public Health Act the corporation is also a local board of health. The town is well paved, lighted with gas, and kept clean. Pure spring water is obtained from a reservoir in Southampton Common, about 1½ mile from the town, supplied by an artesian well, 910 feet deep—the shaft being 560 feet, and the artesian bore 350 feet. The borough has returned two members to parliament since the reign of Edward I. The trade of the town is considerable, chiefly connected with the supply of the shipping; but few manufactures are carried on, the principal being sugar refining, castings, coachbuilding and shipbuilding. There are also some large breweries. The harbour affords good anchorage, its depth varying from 2 to 6 fathoms. Vessels of 300 tons can come up to the quay, and a pier has been made for the passenger and mail service from the Continent, to which large steamers have access. It has also been selected as the terminus of the Peninsular and Oriental and the West Indian mail packets, and of the Union Screw Company, whose united fleets number upwards of 80 large steamers; and it has been selected by Government as one of the emigration ports. Once clear of the harbour and in the English Channel, the navigation is no longer difficult, and vessels are thus saved from the dangers and delays which attend those sailing from London in rounding the Forelands and Beechy Head. Dock accommodation is very extensive. A large tidal dock, completed in 1842 at a cost of £140,000, with 18 feet of water at the lowest tides, is accessible at all times to steamers of 2,000 tons, and at high-water to almost any vessel. It is paved with granite, its sides are lined with warehouses, covering an area of 16 acres, and it has 3,100 feet of quay room. An inner Dock, for colliers, was opened in 1851. There are also three graving docks. The customs duties received in 1863 amounted to £107,598. The number of British vessels which entered inwards was 2,347, with an aggregate tonnage of 458,979, and of foreign 440, tonnage 108,752. In the same year there cleared outwards 1,561 British vessels, tonnage 280,416, and 409 foreign, tonnage 106,067. The principal articles of import were stone from the western, and coal from the north-eastern maritime counties, corn and provisions from Ireland, timber from the Baltic and America, wine and brandy from France, Spain, and Portugal. About 3 miles to the S.E. of the town, on the shores of Southampton Water, are the ruins of Netley Abbey, founded by Henry III. in 1229; and near it the large hospital erected under the auspices of the late Prince Consort. A canal follows the course of the Anton to Andover, and the Itchen is navigable to Winchester. The South-Western railway communicates with London on the one side, and Dorsetshire and the western counties on the other. Market days are Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, and there is a corn market on Friday. Fairs are held on 6th and 7th May, and on Trinity Monday and Tuesday for cattle, &c.

SOUTHAM-WITH-BROCKHAMPTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Bishop's-Cleeve, hund. of Cleeve, co. Gloucester, 2 miles N.E. of Cheltenham. It is situated near Cleeve Cliff, and its principal attraction is Southam House, built by Sir J. Huddlestone in Henry VII.'s time. The interior contains relics of great antiquity, with portraits of Jane Shore, Edward VI., &c.

SOUTHAWS, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Meols, co. Lancaster, 7 miles N.W. of Ormskirk.

SOUTHAY, a hmlt. in the par. of Kingsbury Episcopi, co. Somerset, 5 miles S.W. of Ilchester.

SOUTHBOROUGH, a chplry. in the par. and lowey of Tunbridge, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 2 miles N. of Tunbridge Wells, its post town, and 3 S.W. of Tunbridge. It is a large village situated on the road betwixt Tunbridge and the Wells. It was formerly much resorted to for its celebrated mineral waters, and is still visited during the summer season. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £153, in the patron. of trustees. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is situated on the common. The register dates from 1830. A new church, dedicated to St. Thomas, has recently been built at the expense of Mrs. Pugh, the same lady who founded an institution in 1856 for 6 widows of the counties of Kent, Surrey, and Sussex. There are an endowed free school for boys of the pars. of Tunbridge, Bidborough, and Speldhurst, and National and infant schools. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Bentham Hill, Broom Hill, and Great Bounds Park are the principal residences. A. Pott, Esq., and Mrs. Deacon, are lord and lady of the manor.

SOUTHBROOM, a chplry. in the par. of Bishop's Cannings, hund. of Potterne, co. Wilts, 2 miles from Devizes, its post town. It is situated on the Kennet and Avon canal. The Devizes Union poorhouse and a lunatic asylum are situated in this district. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £150, in the patron. of the vicar. The church is a modern structure. Southbroom House is the principal residence.

SOUTHBURN, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkburn, Bainton-Beacon div. of Harthill wap., East Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Great Driffield, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Hull, and is wholly agricultural. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

SOUTHCHURCH, a par. in the hund. of Rochford, co. Essex, 1 mile from Southend, its post town, and 3 miles S.E. of Rochford. The village is situated near the sea, and at a little distance from the Thames, which bounds the parish on the S. At South Wick, about half a mile to the N.E., is a prospect over the Medway, Thames, and neighbouring counties. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the oyster-fisheries. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £760, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The church is an ancient edifice with a spired tower.

SOUTH-CLAY, a div. in the wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Nottingham, contains the pars. of Askham, Bevercoates, Bilsthorpe, Drayton, Dunham, Eakring, Eaton, Egmanton, Gamston, Grove, Headon, Kirkton, Laneham, Laxton, East and West Markham, Ragnall, Rampton, Stokeham, Treswell, Tuxford, Wellow, and part of Kneesal, comprising an area of 41,160 acres.

SOUTHCOATES, a tnshp. in the par. of Drypool, middle div. of Holderness wap., East Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of Hull, near the river Humber. It is a station on the Hull and Holderness branch of the North-Eastern railway.

SOUTHCOT, a tythg. in the par. of St. Mary Reading, hund. of Reading, co. Berks, 2 miles S.W. of Reading.

SOUTHDEAN, a par. in the district of Jedburgh, co. Roxburgh, Scotland. It contains the vil. of Chester, and extends in length about 9¼ miles from N. to S., with an extreme breadth of 6½ miles. It is bounded by England on the S., and by the pars. of Castleton, Hobkirk, Bedrule, Jedburgh, Oxnam, and Edgerstone. The surface is of a hilly character, and is principally in sheep-walks. In the parish are Carter and Peel Fells, and other peaks of the Cheviots. The prevailing rocks are red and white sandstone and limestone, which are worked to a considerable extent, also traces of coal. The village of Southdean is about 6 miles S. of Jedburgh, and 52 from Edinburgh. It stands on the rivers Jed and Rule, and has traces of British camps and Border peelhouses. This par. is in the presb. of Jedburgh, and synod of Merse and Teviotdale. The stipend of the minister is about £234. The parish church was erected in 1690, and has several times been repaired. The father of Thomson, the poet, was once minister, and lies buried in the churchyard.

SOUTHDOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Owermoigne, co. Dorset, 6 miles S.E. of Dorchester.

SOUTHEASE, a par. in the hund. of Holmstrow, rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, 4 miles S.E. of Lewes, its post town, and three from Newham. The village is situated on the river Ouse, over which is a bridge. The inhabitants are wholly employed in agriculture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £210. The church is an ancient structure, with a round tower, surmounted by a shingled spire.

SOUTHEND, a par. in the district of Kintyre, co. Argyle, Scotland. It contains the vil. of Newton Argyle. The par. lies at the extremity of the peninsula of Kintyre, and includes the Promontory of the Mull of Kintyre, on which is a lighthouse, and off it is Sanda Island. It extends in length about 11 miles from S.W. to N.E., with an extreme breadth of about 5 miles, and is bounded on the N. by the par. of Campbellton, and on the other sides by the sea. The distance across the channel from this point to Ballycastle, in Ireland, is only 7 leagues. The surface is of a hilly character, and the valleys are fertilised by numerous small streams. The highest summit is Knockmoy, 2,036 feet above sea-level. The E. coast is principally low and sandy, but the W. is bold and rocky. The prevailing rocks are mica slate, Old Red sandstone, trap, and limestone. The soil in the valleys is a light loam, with sand or gravel near the sea-coast, and a thin covering of gravel on the hills. The village of Southend is about 6½ miles S.W. of Campbelltown. In the vicinity are the ruins of Dunaverty Castle, once a stronghold of the Lords of the Isles, built on a precipice overhanging the sea. It once afforded shelter to Robert Bruce. In 1647 it was taken by General Leslie, who put the garrison to the sword. Here are the remains of St. Columba and St. Bland chapels, and along the coast are ruins of several Danish forts, the most remarkable of which is called Balemacumra, on the promontory of the Mull of Kintyre. This par. is in the presb. of Kintyre and synod of Argyle. The stipend of the minister is about £158. The parish church was erected in 1774. There are an United Presbyterian church, a parochial school, and several other schools. The Duke of Argyle is the principal landowner.

SOUTHEND, a small town and chplry. in the par. of Prittlewell, co. Essex, 3 miles S.E. of Rochford. It is the terminus of the London, Tilbury, and Southend railway. The town is a coastguard station, situated directly opposite the Nore and the river Medway, nearly at the southern extremity of the county, from which circumstance it derives its name. There is a prospect of the river and shipping from the shrubbery in front of the Royal Hotel, and a parade has been formed and partly enclosed. The old village consists principally of an irregular line of houses facing the sea, but a terrace and a new village called Clifton have recently been added. There are assembly rooms, theatre, library, and baths. The wooden terrace pier is 1,500 feet in length, with a causeway of 4,000 feet by 14. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £50, in the patron. of trustees. The church is a modern structure.

SOUTHEND, a hmlt. in the par. of Soberton, co. Hants, 4 miles S.E. of Bishop's Waltham.

SOUTH-END, a tythg. in the par. of South Damerham, co. Wilts, 9 miles S. of Salisbury.

SOUTHERLEIGH, a hmlt. in the par. of Stourton, co. Devon, 6 miles S.W. of Okehampton.

SOUTHERNBY-BOUND, a tnshp. in the par. of Castle-Sowerby, Leath ward, co. Cumberland, 9 miles N.W. of Penrith.

SOUTHERNDOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Bride Major, hund. of Ogmore, co. Glamorgan, 3 miles S.W. of Bridgend. It is a small watering-place. In the vicinity are the Wind Hole, 231 feet in depth, Fairy Cave, &c.

SOUTHERNESS, a vil. in the par. of Kirkbean, co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 11 miles S.E. of Dalbeattie, and 16 S. of Dumfries. It is situated near Southerness Point, on Solway Frith, which has a fixed light in N. latitude 53° 54′, and W. longitude 3° 35′. It is 50 feet in height, and visible at 11 miles distance. This village is frequented for bathing during the summer season.

SOUTHERY, a par. in the hund. of Clackclose, co. Norfolk, 7 miles S. of Downham Market, its post town, and 3½ S.E. of Hilgay railway station. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the road from London to Lynn at the ferry over the great Ouse river. The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture. The soil was formerly fenny, but a steam-engine of 60 horse power was erected in 1842 to drain the low-lying grounds. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £700. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a tower containing one bell. A new church has been erected. The Wesleyans and Baptists have chapels. R. Cunningham Taylor, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SOUTHEY, a vil. in the tnshp. of Ecclesfield, West Riding, co. York, 4 miles N. of Sheffield.

SOUTH FEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Bourne, co. Lincoln, near Bourne.

SOUTHFIELDS, a lib. in the par. of St. Mary, hund. of Guthlaxton, co. Leicester, adjoining Leicester, of which it is a suburb. Frame-work knitting is carried on to some extent.

SOUTHFLEET, a par. in the hund. of Axton, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 3 miles S.W. of Gravesend, its post town, and 3 S. of Northfleet railway station. Its gardens, designated Spring Head, are celebrated for watercresses. The par. contains the hmlts. of Betsome, Hook Green, and Westwood. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as Suthfleta, from a flete or creek of the Thames, which flowed up from Northfleet, and was then a place of considerable importance. From the numerous Roman relics found here, and its relative position with regard to the station Durobrivis, or Rochester, it is supposed to occupy the site of the Roman station Vagniacæ on Watling Street. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £523, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure with a tower and six bells. It contains a modern stained-glass window, a piscina, antique font, and several brasses, the earliest bearing date 1414. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes.

SOUTHGATE, or SOUTH-STREET, a chplry. and suburban vil. in the par. and hund. of Edmonton, co. Middlesex, 8 miles N.W. of St. Paul's, London, and 1 mile from the Southgate and Colney Hatch station of the Great Northern railway. This place derives its name from its situation at the south gate, or entrance to Enfield Chace, once a royal forest. The village, which is built round a green, contains many good houses. The neighbourhood is well wooded, and is traversed by the New River. The chplry. includes the hmlt. of Palmer's Green, and the mansions of Minchendon, once a seat of the dukes of Buckingham and Chandos, Culland's Grove, the residence of Sir W. Curtis, Bart., Southgate Grove, with Ionic portico designed by Nash, and Southgate House. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of London, val. £200, in the patron. of the Vicar of Edmonton. The church, originally built in 1615 at the expense of Sir John Weld, of Arno's Grove, has been pulled down and rebuilt. There is besides a new church. The Independents have a chapel. There are National schools situated on the green. In an adjacent field, called "Camp Field," have been found several pieces of cannon, and a gorget belonging to Oliver Cromwell, with his initials inlaid with jewels, now in the British Museum.

SOUTHILL, a par. and tnshp. in the hund. of Wixamtree, co. Bedford, 3 miles S.W. of Biggleswade, its post town, and 2½ from Shefford. It is a station on the Midland railway. The par., which is extensive, includes the hmlts. of Broom and Stanford. It was formerly the seat of the Byngs. The living is a vic.* annexed to that of Old-Warden, in the dioc. of Ely, val. £384. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a tower, and containing monuments of the Byngs. The parochial charities produce about £28 per annum. There is a National school. The Baptists have a chapel. The principal residence is Southill House.

SOUTHILL, a par. in the middle div. of East hund., co. Cornwall, 3 miles N.W. of Callington, its post town, and 9 E. of Liskeard. The parish is situated betwixt the rivers Tamar, Lynher, and Inny, and near the high road from Callington to Bodmin. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture, but copper, lead, and silver mines have been worked. In the vicinity is an ancient British encampment designated Catsonbury. The living is a rect.,* with the perpet. cur. of Callington annexed, in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £748. The church, dedicated to St. Sampson de South Hill, is an ancient stone structure. The mother church of Callington is dedicated to the Virgin Mary. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum, of which £5 go to Knill's school. There is a National school for both sexes, and a Wesleyan chapel. A Sunday-school is held at the church. Lord Ashburton is lord of the manor.

SOUTHINGTON, a tythg. in the par. of Overton, co. Hants, 3 miles N.E. of Whitchurch. Here was formerly a Knights Templars' preceptory.

SOUTHMERE, or SUMMERFIELD, a hmlt. in the par. of Docking, co. Norfolk, 5 miles S.W. of Burnham-Westgate. It is mentioned in Domesday Book, and was then a separate parish, but the church, dedicated to All Saints, no longer exists.

SOUTHMINSTER, a par. in the hund. of Dengie, co. Essex, 10 miles S.E. of Maldon, its post town, and 3 N. of Burnham. The village, which is extensive, is situated betwixt the river Crouch and Blackwater. The land is marshy. In the Saxon times the manor belonged to the see of London. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £418, in the patron. of the Charter House. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is an ancient cruciform structure with a tower containing a clock and six bells. The font is of great antiquity. The register dates from 1760. The parochial charities produce about £41 per annum. There are National and British schools for both sexes. The Independents and Baptists have chapels. A fair is held on the 29th September.

SOUTHMUIR, a vil. in the par. of Kirriemuir, co. Forfar, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Montrose.

SOUTHOE, a par. in the hund. of Toseland, co. Huntingdon, 7 miles S.W. of Huntingdon, its post town, and 3½ N.W. of St. Neot's. It is situated near the river Ouse, on the Great North-road from London to York. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. Southoe was formerly held by the Lovetots, John of Gaunt, and the Pickerings. The living is a vic. with that of Hail Weston annexed, in the dioc. of Ely, val. £288. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is an ancient structure with a square embattled tower containing a clock and four bells. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. R. W. Standley, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SOUTHOLT, a par. in the hund. of Hoxne, co. Suffolk, 5 miles N. of Debenham, and the same distance S.E. of Eye, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Worlingworth, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is an ancient structure, and contains a brass of the date 1585.

SOUTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Barnack, co. Northampton, 1 mile from Barnack, and 5 miles S.E. of Stamford.

SOUTHORPE, an ext. par. place in the wap. of Corringham, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 6 miles N.E. of Gainsborough.

SOUTHOVER, a par. in the hund. of Swanborough, co. Sussex, adjoining Lewes, of which it is a suburb. It is situated on the river Ouse, and is within the borough of Lewes. The manor once belonged to St. Pancras Cluniac Priory, and was presented by Henry VIII. to T. Cromwell and Anne of Cleves, who died here. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £35. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, has recently been restored.

SOUTHOVER, a hmlt. in the par. of Frampton, co. Dorset, 5 miles N.W. of Dorchester, near the river Frome.

SOUTHOVER, a hmlt. in the par. of Tolpuddle, co. Dorset, 5 miles N.E. of Dorchester, near the river Trent, or Piddle.

SOUTHPORT. See PORTSEA, co. Hants.

SOUTHPORT, a chplry., post town, and watering-place in the par. of North Meols, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 7½ miles N.W. of Ormskirk, and 22 N. of Liverpool. It is a station on the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. It is situated on the sands at the mouth of the river Ribble, and has of late years been much resorted to for sea-bathing. It was, at the commencement of the present century, a cluster of fishermen's huts, called South Hawes, but is now a town consisting of 13 streets, the chief of which is called Lord-street, extending nearly a mile in length. In this street is the townhall, erected in 1853 at an outlay of £4,500. There are also a market-house, savings-bank, theatre, &c. It is lighted with hydrocarbonic gas, and is well paved and supplied with excellent water. It is much resorted to by invalids in consequence of its mild atmosphere and general salubrity. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £469. Besides the parish church there is also Trinity church, situated in Hoghton-street. The Roman Catholics, Wesleyans, Independents, and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel, and there is a Friends' meeting-house. The principal residences are Martindale Lodge, Sea-view House, &c.

SOUTHROP, a par. in the hund. of Brightwell's-Barrow, co. Gloucester, 3½ miles N.W. of Lechdale, its post town. The village is situated on the river Leach, and is chiefly agricultural. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £192, in the patron. of Wadham College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Peter, and was restored in 1852. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes. The Warden and Fellows of Wadham College, Oxford, are lords of the manor.

SOUTHROPE, a tythg. in the par. of Herriard, co. Hants, 6 miles N.W. of Alton.

SOUTHROPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Hook-Norton, co. Oxford, 5 miles N.E. of Chipping-Norton.

SOUTHROW, a hmlt. in the par. of Bardney, W. div. of Wraggoe hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 7 miles S. of Wragby, on the river Witham.

SOUTHSEA, a district in the par. of Portsea, co. Hants, adjoining Portsmouth, within which borough it is situated. The London, Brighton, and South Coast railway has a station here for Portsmouth, opposite Spithead and the Isle of Wight, and it is a coastguard station and watering-place. The houses are well constructed, and there is a promenade leading from the assembly rooms, along the beach, to Southsea Castle, now converted into an hospital. It has been much improved through the exertions of the late Lieutenant-Governor Lord F. Fitzclarence, who erected the two statues of Wellington and Nelson near the entrance. See PORTSEA and PORTSMOUTH.

SOUTHSHORE, a hmlt. in the par. of Poulton-le-Fylde, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 15 miles S.W. of Lancaster. It is situated near the mouth of the river Wyre, and has a church recently built.

SOUTH-STREET. See SOUTHGATE, co. Middlesex.

SOUTHTON, or VALLENCE, a tythg. in the par. of Collingbourn-Kingston, co. Wilts, 4 miles N.W. of Ludgershall.

SOUTH-TOWN, or LITTLE YARMOUTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Corleston, co. Suffolk, 1 mile from Yarmouth, its post town, and 9 miles from Lowestoft. It is situated on the river Yare, opposite Yarmouth, of which it constitutes a large suburb. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the fisheries and in shipbuilding. The living is a rect., annexed to the vic. of Gorleston, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is in ruins.

SOUTH-TOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of West Pennard, co. Somerset, 5 miles S. of Wells.

SOUTHWARK, an ancient parliamentary borough, forming one of the great divisions of the metropolis, locally in the E. div. of Brixton hund. and Lambeth union, co. Surrey. It is situated on the south-eastern bank of the Thames, opposite the City of London, to which it is joined by the London, Southwark, and Blackfriars bridges, and the Thames tunnel. The Greenwich, Brighton, South-Eastern, Croydon, and Crystal Palace railways have their central termini at Tooley-street, adjoining London-bridge. It was called in Saxon times Suthwerc, from an ancient earthwork or fort, erected for the defence of the ferry here across the river. It was fired by William the Norman in 1066 on his approach to London. In 1327 it was granted by Edward III. to the City, of which it became in 1551 a portion, under the name of the Borough of Southwark, or Bridge-without, being presided over by one of the senior aldermen. As one of the metropolitan boroughs, it possesses an independent franchise, and has returned two members to parliament since the reign of Edward I. The high bailiff is the returning officer. It was occupied by the malcontents, under Wat Tyler, in the reign of Richard II., and again in 1554 by the insurgents under Wyatt; on the former of these occasions the rioters destroyed the stews of Southwark, then belonging to the Lord Mayor, Sir William Walworth, which act, Mr. Cunningham suggests, may explain the unusual loyalty displayed by the Lord Mayor in stabbing the insurgent leader in cold blood with his own hand. On the passing of the Reform Act in 1832 the bounds of the borough were extended, so as to include, besides the old borough, with the liberties of the Mint and manor of Suffolk, the parishes of Rotherhithe, Bermondsey, and Christ-Church, with the Clink liberty of the parish of St. Saviour. The whole area of the old borough, extending about 1¾ mile from E. to W., and about one mile from N. to S., is crowded with streets, houses, and public buildings, but a considerable portion of the recently-added parishes are occupied by wharves, docks, yards, and other conveniences for shipping, and extensive manufactories reaching nearly 4 miles along the S. bank of the river. In form the new borough nearly resembles a parallelogram, being bounded on the S. by Lambeth, and on the other three sides by the Thames, that part of the river called Lambeth Reach separating it from Westminster on the W., and the other part called Limehouse Reach separating it from the Isle of Dogs on the E. The principal streets are the Borough High-street, leading southwards, and Tooley-street, running eastward from London-bridge, Bridge-street, running southward from Southwark-bridge, and Great Surrey-street, near the western limits of the borough, running southwards from Blackfriars-bridge to the Obelisk in St. George's-fields, where the main streets from the several bridges, known as the Borough-road, Blackfriars-road, Waterloo-road, Westminster-road, London-road, Lambeth-road, and New Kent-road meet, the exact distances being marked on the Obelisk. Amongst the most conspicuous edifices may be mentioned the church of St. Saviour, or St. Mary-Overy, one of the largest parish churches in England, standing at the foot of London-bridge; the townhall of Southwark, a modern structure with Ionic pilasters, situated on St. Margaret's-hill; the Union-hall, in Union-street, occupied as a police-office; the New Surrey Theatre, in the Blackfriars-road; Guy's Hospital, founded in 1721, in St. Thomas's-street; the Magdalen Hospital, built in 1769; the Albert Institution, in Gravel-lane, near Blackfriars-road, erected on the site of a once notorious haunt for thieves, by the Rev. Joseph Brown in 1859, as a school, model-lodging house, and reading-room, with baths and washhouses, and beds for single men; the Queen's Prison, at the bottom of the Borough-road, established in lieu of the old Queen's Bench, Fleet, and Marshalsea prisons for debtors and bankrupts, and for persons committed for contempt of court; the New Bridewell, near Bethlem Hospital; and Barclay, Perkins, and Co.'s brewery, the largest, probably, in the world, a fuller account of which will be found under the article LONDON, to which also the reader must refer for ecclesiastical and other returns. See also articles, BERMONDSEY, LAMBETH, and ROTHERHITHE.

SOUTHWELL, a div. in the wap. of Thurgarton, co. Notts, contains the pars. of Bleasby, Bledworth, Edingley, Farnsfield, Halam, Halloughton, Hockerton, Hoveringham, Kirklington, Morton, Southwell, Thurgarton, Upton, Winkbourn, and part of Rolleston, comprising 33,820 acres.

SOUTHWELL, a par. and market town in the Southwell div. of Thurgarton wap., co. Notts, 7 miles W. of Newark, and 12 N.E. of Nottingham. It is connected by a branch line of 2½ miles with the Nottingham and Lincoln section of the Midland railway. The town, which is situated on an eminence in the vale of the small river Greet, celebrated for the abundance of its red trout, is nearly surrounded by an amphitheatre of hills of various elevation, and is supposed to occupy the site of the Roman station Ad Pontem, on the ancient Ermine Street. It is very ancient, and was selected as the site of one of the earliest Christian churches founded in this part of the island by Paulinus in 627. It is frequently referred to in Saxon MSS. as Tiofulfingaceaster, most probably from the Roman camp in the vicinity, which our Saxon ancestors, being at a loss to account for, referred to the agency of the Evil One, but subsequently changed its name to Southwell, from one of the numerous wells or springs that formerly existed in this neighbourhood, but of which only a few are now to be met with. The chief object of interest is the ancient minster, which was made collegiate before the Norman conquest, and was refounded in 1541 by Henry VIII. The college was dissolved by Edward VI., but was finally restored by Queen Elizabeth in 1585, and is still preserved as a cathedral establishment, with a choir. [See below.] During the civil war of Charles I. the old minster was occupied by Cromwell's troopers as a stable, and all the records except the "Registrum Album," which dates from 1109, were then destroyed. Within the close are the remains of an ancient palace of the archbishops of York, which was occupied by Charles I. on several occasions, and lastly in 1646, when he gave himself up to the Scottish army at the "King's Arms," now the "Saracen's Head." The town, which is straggling, comprises, besides the High Town, or Southwell proper, the suburbs of East and West Thorpe, Westgate, Burgage, or Burridge, and the parks of Hexgreave, Norwood, and Hockerwood. The four principal streets are straight, but irregularly built. The public buildings are the townhall, a modern structure situate in Westgate, where the market is held; the house of correction, in Burgage, rebuilt in 1828 on the site of the original bridewell, founded in 1656; assembly rooms, commercial branch bank, savings-bank, and union poorhouse; this last building is situated in the adjoining parish of Upton, and was built in 1824 at a cost of £6,596. Southwell is a polling place for the southern division of the county. Petty sessions are held fortnightly on Friday. A considerable business is done in the malt and hop trades, and many of the people are employed in the manufacture of cotton stockings, silk-spinning, and lace-making. The population in 1861 was 3,469. At an old house in Burgage the poet Byron passed many of his boyish days; and in Norwood park, formerly a seat of the archbishops of York, but now of the Sutton family, is the oak known as "Cludd's Oak." The surrounding country is fertile, the soil being a rich clay upon a subsoil of New Red sandstone. It is evenly divided between arable and pasture, and until recently hops were extensively grown. There are remains of the hall and chapel of the palace where Cardinal Wolsey resided the year before his death, but which was afterwards destroyed by Cromwell's troopers. Two county synods were formerly held here annually. The collegiate chapter, as at present reduced, consists of one canon, a rector residentiary, curate, and two minor canons, organist, and 16 choristers. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £450, in the patron. of the bishop. The collegiate church is also the parish church. This pile is a specimen of Gothic architecture, the greater portion being Norman, with portions of Early Decorated and later styles. It is dedicated to St. Mary, and is being thoroughly restored. It is cruciform, measuring 306 feet by 59 feet, or 121 through the transepts, with a low tower rising from the centre, and two towers each of 7 stages ornamented, forming the western front. Between these towers is the principal entrance, through a semicircular arch, with a W. window above it enriched with tracery. It is decorated inside with carvings, and contains an oak roof, carved screen, brass reading-desk, stone stalls, effigies of Archbishop Sandys, and tombs of many other prelates. The charity or singing school, on the E. side of the N. transept, has been converted into a library for the college, and contains a valuable collection of books, chiefly on divinity. On the N. side of the church is the chapter-house, built in 1377 in the Decorated Pointed style, with an ornamented doorway and stone roof and niches. On the E. side of the close is the rectory, a modern edifice, with houses for the vicars choral on either side of it. Besides the above church there is the district church of the Holy Trinity, the living of which is a perpet. cur. val. £100, in the patron. of trustees. The church, which stands in the hamlet of West Thorpe, was built in 1846 at a cost of £4,000, including the site, and has a tower surmounted by a lofty spire, and containing one bell. The Baptists and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. There are a free grammar school, under the supervision of the chapter, with an income from endowment of £56, and two scholarships at St. John's College, Cambridge, also National schools in both districts, and a Sunday-school belonging to Holy-Trinity. The charities, including the school endowment, produce about £180 per annum. The Poor-law Union comprises 49 parishes, associated under Gilbert's Act. Southwell gives name to a deanery in the archdeaconry of Nottingham and diocese of Lincoln. It is the head of a superintendent registry district, but is divided between Newark and Worksop new County Court districts. Market day is on Saturday. Fairs are held on Whit Monday and on 21st October.

SOUTHWELL-PARK, a lib. in the par. of Hargrave, co. Suffolk, 6 miles S.W. of Bury St. Edmund's.

SOUTHWICK, a par. in the hund. of Portsdown, co. Hants, 4 miles N.E. of Fareham, its post town, and 3 N. of Porchester railway station. The village is considerable, and near Bere Forest. The par. includes the manor of Aplestede. It had formerly a priory of Black Canons, in which Henry VI. was married to Margaret of Anjou. At the Dissolution the revenues were returned at £257, and the site given to the Whites. The living is a don. cur.,* annexed to that of Boarhunt, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. James, has a square tower containing four bells and a brass to J. White, date 1567. The parochial charities produce about £150 per annum, chiefly the endowment of Thistlethwayte's school, of recent foundation.

SOUTHWICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Monk-Wearmouth, E. div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 1½ mile N.W. of Sunderland, its post town. It is situated on the river Wear, and contains several glass and lime works, potteries, shipbuilding yards, &c. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is modern. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a National school.

SOUTHWICK, a par. in the hund. of Willybrook, co. Northampton, 2¾ miles N.W. of Oundle, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in a valley on a branch of the river Nen. The inhabitants are wholly agricultural. The par. includes Cross-wayland Lodge, and is almost entirely surrounded with woods belonging to Rockingham Forest. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £90. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £24 per annum. G. Capron, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SOUTHWICK, an ancient par. in the co. of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 10 miles S.E. of Castle Douglas, now joined to Colvend. It is a station on the Castle Douglas railway.

SOUTHWICK, a tythg. in the par. of Bradley, co. Wilts, 2 miles S.W. of Trowbridge. The village is considerable. The weaving of cloth is carried on to some extent. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £160, in the patron. of the vicar. The church is a modern structure, dedicated to Christ.

SOUTHWICK, a tnshp. in the par. and borough of Tewkesbury, co. Gloucester, 2 miles from Tewkesbury. It is in conjunction with the hamlet of Park.

SOUTHWICK, a par. in the hund. of Fishergate, rape of Bramber, co. Sussex, 1½ mile E. of Shoreham, its post town, and 4 miles W. of Brighton. It is a station on the South Coast railway. The village is situated near Shoreham Harbour on the ship canal, by means of which a considerable trade is carried on in corn, coals, &c. The inhabitants are chiefly seafaring. Southwick is a preventive station. The par. includes the hmlt. of Fishergate. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £207, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The register dates from 1654. There is a National school, also a reading and lecture room. A fair is held on 19th May.

SOUTHWOLD, a par., seaport, market town, and municipal borough locally in the hund. of Blything, co. Suffolk, but having separate jurisdiction, 4 miles N.E. of Dunwich, 12 S.W. of Lowestoft, and 30 N.E. of Ipswich. It is situated on an eminence, nearly surrounded by the river Blythe, at its influx into the German Ocean, and is bounded on the N. by Buss Creek. It was called by the Saxons Sudwald, i.e., Southwood, from an ancient forest now cleared, and was given by Bishop Alfric to the Abbey of Bury St. Edmund's, to which it paid 25,000 herrings. At the time of the Domesday Survey it was above a mile from the sea, which has here so encroached upon the land that it is now close to the shore. Henry VII. granted it a charter of incorporation. In 1659 a fire consumed nearly the whole town, with the townhall, gaol, granaries, and court-baron rolls, in consequence of which the whole body of copyholders under the corporation became freeholders. Two naval engagements took place in the bay opposite the town, commonly called Sole Bay, between the Dutch and English; the first battle in 1665, when the Dutch were entirely defeated, and the second in 1672, when the Dutch fleet under De Ruyter drew off under cover of night, the English being too shattered to follow them. In October, 1745, William Duke of Cumberland landed here on his return from the Continent and presented the town with six pieces of ordinance, which occupy the battery on the cliffs. About the middle of the last century the harbour was improved by the construction of two piers, and the clearing out of the haven, which had been choked up with sand. A breakwater has also been constructed beneath Gun-hill Cliff to prevent the encroachment of the sea, which had become serious. It is a coastguard station, and pilot-boats and life-boats are kept here. There is a considerable maritime trade, chiefly coastwise, and the fisheries are prolific, principally in herrings, cod, soles, and sprats, which are sent to the London market. Salt works have long been established, and there are an iron foundry, brewery, and rope-walks. The town, which is clean and well kept, is triangular, and contains many good houses and several villas surrounded by grounds and gardens facing the sea, and in front is a promenade along the cliff. There are lodging-houses, and accommodation for visitors during the season for sea-bathing. The streets are well paved, lighted with gas, and the houses supplied with excellent spring water. It contains a guildhall, rebuilt in 1819, a sailors' reading room, a gaol, commercial bank, two batteries (one now unfit for service), and a bridge. The population in 1851 was 2,102, exclusive of 200 fishermen then away on distant voyages, and in 1861 2,032, showing a slight decrease. Under the new Act the town is governed by a mayor, 4 aldermen, 12 common councilmen, treasurer, and town clerk, with the style of "bailiffs, aldermen, and burgesses of the borough of Southwold." The corporation revenue is about £1,000, chiefly derived from the manorial rents. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £90. The church, dedicated to St. Edmund, is a Gothic structure built in the middle of the 15th century, 143½ feet by 56, with a steeple 100 feet high, containing eight bells. It is constructed of freestone, intermixed with flint of various colours, and has a good porch with a niche in it. In the interior are carved seats, painted screen and ceiling, and a monument to Gardner, the town historian. The church is now being restored. The register commences in 1602. The parochial charities produce about £50 per annum. There are places of worship for the Independents and Wesleyans, also National and infant schools. Fossil remains of the mammoth and elephant are met with. This part of the coast is also remarkable for the early arrival and late departure of the swallow. Market day is on Thursday. An annual fair is held on Trinity Monday and the two following days.

SOUTHWOOD, a par. in the hund. of Blofield, co. Norfolk, 9 miles from Yarmouth, 1 mile from Cantley railway station, and 4 miles S.W. of Acle, its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The village has fallen into decay. The living is a rect., with the vic. of Limpenhoe annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £292. The church is dedicated to St. Edmund. The register dates from 1675. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. H. R. Nevill, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SOUTHWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Baltonsborough, co. Somerset, 5 miles W. of Castle Carey.

SOUTHWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Evercreech, co. Somerset, 3 miles N.W. of Bruton.

SOUTHWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Laurence, hund. of Thanet, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, near Ramsgate.

SOUTHWORTH-WITH-CROFT, a tnshp. in the par. of Winwick, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 3 miles S.E. of Newton-in-Mackerfield. The village is considerable.

SOUTRA, an ancient par. in the co. of Haddington, Scotland, now joined to Fala.

SOW, the name of several small rivers; one rises near Broughton in Staffordshire, and joins the Trent near Tixall; another rises near Withybrook in Warwickshire, and joins the Avon at Stoneleigh; while a third rises near Oulart in county of Wexford, Ireland, and falls into Wexford Harbour.

SOWDLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Cheswardine, co. Salop, 6 miles N.W. of Newport, near the Grand Junction canal.

SOWE, a par. partly in the city of Coventry, and partly in the hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, 3 miles N.E. of Coventry, its post town. The village is situated on the river Sow, from which it takes its name.

The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the collieries and in ribbon weaving. This parish is also known by the name of Walsgrave-upon-Sow, its original name. The living is a vic., annexed to that of Stoke, in the dioc. of Worcester. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There are National and infant schools. The Independents and General and Particular Baptists have chapels. There is a new parochial school at Hawkesbury-Sow. The Earl of Craven is lord of the manor.

SOWERBY, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Michael-on-Wyre, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 5 miles N.E. of Kirkhave. It is in conjunction with Inskip.

SOWERBY, a chplry. in the par. of Thirsk, wap. of Birdforth, North Riding co. York, 1 mile S. of Thirsk, of which it is a suburb. The village, which is extensive, is situated on a branch of the river Swale, near the Great North of England railway. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £310, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is a cruciform structure with a square tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes.

SOWERBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Halifax, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 3½ miles S.W. of Halifax, its post town, and 9½ N.W. of Huddersfield. The village, which is extensive, is situated on the river Calder. The par. contains part of the vils. of Sowerby Bridge and Mytholmroyd. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the cotton and woollen mills, foundries, and stone quarries. There is a large portion of moorland, and the substratum is productive of coal. Several Roman coins were discovered here in 1678. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £160, in the patron. of the Vicar of Halifax. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a square tower containing eight bells. The interior of the church contains a statue of Archbishop Tillotson, who was born here in 1630, and died 1694, also a tablet to ten soldiers who fell in the Crimean war. In addition to the parish church are the following district churches, viz., St. Mary's, St. George's, Sowerby-bridge, and Stainland, the livings of which are all perpet. curs., varying in val. from £230 to £150. The parochial charities produce about £127, of which £16 go to Bairstow's school, and £10 to Horton's almshouses. There is a National school for both sexes, also places of worship for Dissenters. Lead-stone Rock, formerly a very perfect Druidical remain, with an altar and seat round it, was broken up in 1830, and used in building a church.

SOWERBY-BRIDGE, a chplry. in the par. of Halifax, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 1½ mile S.W. of Halifax, of which it is an extensive suburb. It includes the tnshps. of Norland, Skircoat, Sowerby, and Warley. See SOWERBY and HALIFAX.

SOWERBY, BROUGH. See BROUGH-SOWERBY, co. Westmoreland.

SOWERBY CASTLE. See CASTLE-SOWERBY, co. Cumberland.

SOWERBY TEMPLE. See TEMPLE-SOWERBY, co. Westmoreland.

SOWERBY-UNDER-COTCLIFFE, a tnshp. in the par. of Sigston Kirby, wap. of Allertonshire, North Riding co. York, 3 miles E. of Northallerton.

SOWLEY, a small lake in the co. of Hants, 3 miles E. of Lymington.

SOWTON, a par. in the hunds. of Wonford and East Budleigh, co. Devon, 3½ miles E. of Exeter, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Great Western road from London to Exeter, and on the Clyst, a branch of the river Exe. The par. includes the hmlt. of Clist-Satchfield. The soil is of a sandy nature, with a subsoil of gravel. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £216, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a tower containing a peal of eight bells, also several stained windows. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is also held. John Garratt, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SOYLAND, a tnshp. in the par. of Halifax, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 4½ miles S.W. of Halifax, its post town. The mountain ridge of Blackstone Edge separates this place from Lancashire. The tnshp. is extensive, and contains the vils. of Ripponden and Soyland, besides several scattered hmlts. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in the cotton and woollen mills. There is a mineral spring called the Swift Cross Spa. [See HALIFAX.]

SPA, a hmlt. and watering-place in the pars. of Ballynahaglish and Clogherbrien, bar. of Trughanacmy, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2¾ miles W.N.W. of Tralee.

SPACEY HOUSES, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Follifoot and Kirkby Overblow, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.W. of Wetherby.

SPALDING, a par., seaport, and market town in the wap. of Elloe, parts of Holland, co. Lincoln, 16 miles from Boston, of which it is a subport, 40 S.E. of Lincoln, and 95 N. of London, by rail. It is a station on the Great Northern railway. This place is situated in a level district, formerly fen, but now well drained into the river Welland and the Nene. The par., which is of large extent, includes the chplry. of Wykeham, the hmlts. of Winsover, Fulney, and the extensive level called Spalding Common. The town, which takes its name from a spa or spring of chalybeate water in the market place, is evenly divided by the river Welland, which is crossed by five bridges, the Highbridge, rebuilt in 1838, being for vehicles, two for foot passengers, and two railway bridges. Spalding was a place of considerable importance in the Saxon times, being the capital of the extensive district called Parts of Holland, which belonged to Earl Morcar, and at the Norman conquest was given by William I. to his nephew Ivo Tailbois, who had a castle at Coney Garth. Thorold de Brokenhall founded a Benedictine house here as a cell to Angiers Abbey, but which subsequently came to be a mitred priory to Croyland Abbey. There are still some remains of the out-buildings, which have been converted into dwelling-houses. Abbot Egelric formed the Elrick-road to Market-Deeping through Arundel Forest, then a marsh. In the reign of Edward III. the town returned members to the parliament which was held in the eleventh year of that sovereign, but it was never afterwards summoned, and the privilege consequently lapsed. It is a prosperous and trading place, being the port for Stamford, Market-Deeping, and Croyland; and, since the Welland has been deepened, vessels of 100 tons come up to the quays. The streets are clean, well paved, and lighted with gas; the houses are well built and abundantly supplied with good water from works situated in the Pinchbeck-road, which were commenced under an Act of Parliament in 1860. It has a market place and several public buildings, as the corn exchange, with an illuminated clock, erected in 1856, at the cost of £3,000, in lieu of the old town-hall or court-house, built in 1620 by Hobson; the sessions house, in the Sheep-market, erected in 1840 at a cost of £6,000, with the gaol and house of correction for the Parts of Holland, which cost £1,500, adjoining; also the police station, erected in 1851 at a cost of about £900. Other buildings are the butter-market, erected in 1857, a small theatre, assembly rooms, union poorhouse, savings-bank, three commercial branch banks, and mechanics' institute, established in 1845, under the patronage of the Earl of Yarborough. An extensive trade is carried on in corn, meat, flour, timber, wool, oil cake, and agricultural produce of all kinds, including fruit and vegetables, which are sent in large quantities by the Great Northern railway to London. There are also lime kilns, steam saw and flour mills, breweries, maltings, coach builders, tile works, brick-fields, and several windmills for grinding corn. The town is not incorporated, but is governed under a recent Act by 15 commissioners, who are expected to carry out great improvements. The population of the parish in 1851 was 8,829, and of the town 7,627, but which in 1861 had decreased to 8,723 and 7,032 respectively. One weekly newspaper, the Spalding Free Press, is published in the town on Tuesday. An extramural cemetery has recently been formed. Quarter sessions for the Parts of Holland are held regularly, and petty sessions for the wapentake of Elloe every alternate Tuesday, also a county court monthly; courts of sewers, courts of request, and courts leet and baron are held occasionally. The Poor-law Union comprises 9 parishes, as does also the superintendent registry district. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £1,200, in the patron. of trustees. The church, dedicated to SS. Mary and Nicholas, has a crocketed spire and Lady chapel, was built by the Prior and people of Spalding in 1284, but much altered in the 15th century, and substantially restored in 1866. The Wesleyans, Independents, Baptists, Society of Friends, and other denominations have chapels. There are National schools, built in 1845, also a free grammar school, endowed by Blanche in 1588 with 89 acres of land, now held in Our Lady chapel. The Willesby or Pettit school has an endowment of 60 acres of land, now producing £180. The Blue-coat school, founded by Sir Matthew Gamlyn in 1590, has an income from endowment of £100, and is aided by voluntary contributions. There are almshouses for 22 poor persons, founded in 1590 by Sir M. Gamlyn, and rebuilt in 1844 in the Gothic style; also almshouses endowed by W. Willesby with an income of £40, and others by Mrs. Sparke for 8 poor persons. The parochial charities altogether produce upwards of £1,000 per annum, including the schools' and almshouses' endowments mentioned above, and the "Town husbands'" charity of £310. Spalding gave title of baron to the lords Eardley. M. Johnson, Esq., founder of the Spalding gentlemen's society, of which Sir Isaac Newton was a member, was born here, and died in 1755. Several Roman cisterns and coins have been found. Market day is Tuesday for corn, sheep, cattle, meat, fish, and fruits and vegetables; and on Saturday meat and fish are sold in the market place. Fairs are held on 27th April, 29th June, 28th August, 25th September, and 6th December for cattle and merchandise, and statute fairs in May and October for hiring servants.

SPALDINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bubwith, Holme Beacon div. of Harthill wap., East Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Howden. It contains the hmlt. of Spaldington Outside, and the Hall, an Elizabethan mansion, formerly the seat of the Vavasours.

SPALDWICK, a par. in the hund. of Leightonstone, co. Huntingdon, 4 miles E. of Kimbolton, its post town, and 7 N.W. of Huntingdon. It is a small, well-built village, situated on a branch of the river Ouse, and on the road from Cambridge to Northampton. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £96, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. James. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Baptists have a place of worship. The Duke of Manchester is lord of the manor. Fairs are held on Whit Monday and 28th November.

SPALFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of North Clifton, N. div. of Newark wap., co. Nottingham, 6 miles S.E. of Tuxford.

SPA LODGE, an ext. par. place, adjoining the par. of King's Cliffe, co. Northampton.

SPANBY, a par. in the wap. of Aveland, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 3¼ miles N.E. of Folkingham, its post town. The village is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect., annexed to the vic. of Swaton, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. W. Cragg, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SPANCEL HILL, a vil. in the par. of Clooney, bar. of Upper Bunratty, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3¾ miles N.N.E. of Ennis, on the road from Quin to Gort. It is famous for its horse fairs, which are held on 24th June and 20th August in each year.

SPANISH COVE, a small bay in the par. of Kilmoe, co. Cork, Ireland, between Crookhaven and Barley Cove, on the S.E. of Mizen Head.

SPANISH, or GREEN ISLAND, in the par. of Creagh, eastern div. of the bar. of West Carbery, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles W. from Skibbereen. It is situated in the mid channel of the river Ilen, where it flows into Baltimore Harbour.

SPANISH POINT, a headland in the par. of Kilfarboy, bar. of Ibricane, co. Clare, Ireland. It lies on the S. side of the entrance to Liscanor Bay, and is 5¼ miles S. of Haggs Head, and 2 W.S.W. from Milltown Malbay. Two vessels belonging to the Spanish Armada were wrecked upon this point.

SPARHAM, a par. in the hund. of Eynsford, co. Norfolk, 8 miles N.E. of East Dereham, and 4 E. of Elmham railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Wensum, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £548. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel. The Earl of Leicester is lord of the manor.

SPARKENHOE, a hund. in the co. of Leicester, contains the borough of Leicester and the pars. of Aston-Flamwell, Bardon, Barwell, Codeby, Congerston, Croft, Desford, Fenny Drayton, Elmsthorpe, Enderby, Glenfield-Frith, Heather, Higham-on-the-Hill, Hinckley, Ibstock, Kirkby-Mallory, Market-Bosworth, Markfield, Nailstone, Narborough, Newbold-Verdon, Norton-juxta-Twycross, Orton-on-the-Hill, Peckleton, Ratby, Sapcote, Shackerstone, Sharnford, Sheepy Magna and Parva, Sibson, Snareston, Stanton-Stoney, Thornton, Thurlaston, Twycross, Witherley, and parts of Appleby, Aylestone, and Merevale, comprising an area of 108,730 acres, exclusive of Leicester.

SPARKFORD, a par. in the hund. of Catsash, co. Somerset, 6 miles from Ilchester, its post town, and 5¼ S.W. of Castle Carey. It is a station on the Great Western railway. The village is of small extent and chiefly agricultural. The soil is a sandy loam, with a subsoil of blue clay and marl. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £266. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, has a tower containing three bells; it was rebuilt, with the exception of the tower, in 1824. The register dates from 1729. There are day and Sunday schools for both sexes. Sparkford Hall is the principal residence. The Rev. H. Bennett, J.P., is lord of the manor. Roman and British antiquities have been found here.

SPARKFORD, BISHOP'S and WEST, tythgs. in the par. of St. Faith, co. Hants, 1 mile from Winchester.

SPARSHOLT, a par. in the hunds. of Wantage and Shrivenham, co. Berks, 4 miles W. of Wantage, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the Great Western railway and the Berks and Wilts canal. The par. includes the hmlts. of Fawler and Kingston Lisle. The soil is rich and productive. The ancient Icknield Street passed through the vale of White Horse to the S. of the village. The living is a vic.,* with the cur. of Kingston Lisle annexed, in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £363, in the patron. of Queen's College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to the Holy Cross. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum.

SPARSHOLT, a par. in the hund. of Buddlesgate, co. Hants, 3½ miles N.W. of Winchester, its post town. The village is of small extent. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £300, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Stephen, has a wooden tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school.

SPATH, a hmlt. in the par. of Uttoxeter, co. Stafford, 2 miles N. of Uttoxeter, between the canal and the river Dove.

SPAUNTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Lastingham, wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 7 miles N.W. of Pickering.

SPAXTON, a par. in the hund. of Cannington, co. Somerset, 6 miles W. of Bridgwater, its post town, and 3 from Nether Stowey. The village is situated under the Quantock hills. The par. includes the hmlts. of Courtway and Merridge. The soil consists of red clay, with a subsoil of stone. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £594. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, has a square tower containing a clock and five bells. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £106 per annum, of which £68 go to Cooke's school, almshouses, &c. There is a National school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. The Baptists and Wesleyans have each a chapel. Lord Taunton is lord of the manor.

SPEAN, a stream of the co. of Inverness, Scotland, rises in Loch Laggan, and joins the Lochy near Spean Bridge, where fairs are held.

SPECKINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Yeovelton, co. Somerset, near Ilchester.

SPEDDYD, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandrynog, co. Denbigh, 5 miles N. of Ruthin.

SPEECH-HOUSE-WALK, an ext. par. place in the par. of West Dean, hund. of St. Briavells, co. Gloucester, 4 miles W. of Newnham. In the vicinity is the Lodge, where the courts are held.

SPEEN, a par. in the hunds. of Faircross and Kintbury-Eagle, co. Berks, 1½ mile N.W. of Newbury, its post town. The village, which is of large extent, is situated betwixt the rivers Kennet and Lamborne, near Donnington Castle. The par. includes the hmlts. of Bagnor, Marsh, Benham, Speenhamland, Stock Cross, and Wood-Speen. This place occupies the site of the Roman station Spinæ, mentioned by Antonine, situated on Icknield and Ryknield Streets, whence a way turned to Bath. It was the scene of the second battle of Newbury, fought between Charles I. and the parliamentary army in 1646. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £250, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary, and contains a monument to the Margrave of Anspach. In addition to the parish church are the district churches at Speenhamland and Stock Cross, the livings of which are perpet. curs. The parochial charities produce about £38 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes. Benham Park is the principal residence. The Wesleyans have a chapel at Stock Cross.

SPEENHAMLAND, a chplry. in the par. of Speen, co. Berks, 1 mile E. of Speen, and 9 miles from Hungerford. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £152, in the patron. of the vicar. The church was built in 1831.

SPEENWOOD-WITH-BAGNOR, a tnshp. in the par. of Speen, as above.

SPEETON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Bridlington, wap. of Dickering, East Riding co. York, 5½ miles N.W. of Bridlington, its post town. It is a station on the Hull, Bridlington, and Scarborough railway. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated near the coast. Numerous flint instruments, spearheads, and other ancient relics have been discovered in this parish. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £50. The church is an ancient stone structure with a turret containing one bell. There is a parochial school for both sexes. Lord Londesborough is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

SPEKE, a tnshp. in the par. of Childwall, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 6 miles S.W. of Prescot. It has stations on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire, and London and North-Western railways. It is situated on the river Mersey. The village is considerable.

SPELBROOK, a hmlt. in the par. of Bishop Stortford, co. Herts, 2 miles S. of Bishop Stortford.

SPELDHURST, a par. in the hunds. of Washlingstone and Somerden, co. Kent, 3 miles N.W. of Tunbridge Wells, its post town. The par., which is intersected by a branch of the river Medway, includes a portion of the town of Tunbridge Wells, and the chplry. of Groombridge. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the Barden iron-furnace. Hops are extensively cultivated. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £303. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower containing five bells. It was rebuilt in 1792, the old one having been destroyed by lightning in 1791. The register dates from the 16th century. There are also the district churches of Rusthall and Groombridge, the livings of which are perpet. curs. The parochial charities produce about £23 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. C. Powell, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SPELHOE, a hund. in the co. of Northampton, contains the town of Northampton, and the pars. of Abington, Great and Little Billing, Boughton, Kingsthorpe, Moulton, Overstone, Pisford, Spratton, and Weston-Favell, comprising an area of 17,650 acres.

SPELSBURY, a par. in the hund. of Chadlington, co. Oxford, 2½ miles S.W. of Enstone, and 4½ S.E. of Chipping-Norton. Charlbury is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated near the river Evenlode. The par. includes the hmlts. of Dean, Ditchley, Fulwell, and Taston. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £211, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church is dedicated to All Saints. It contains brasses of John, Earl of Rochester, and of his father Lord Wilmot. The charities consist of Cary's almshouses, with an endowment of £12. There is a free school, chiefly supported by Viscount Dillon, who is lord of the manor.

SPELTHORNE, a hund. in the co. of Middlesex, contains the pars. of Ashford, East Bedfont, Feltham, Hampton, Hanworth, Laleham, Littleton, Shepperton, Staines, Stamwell, Sunbury, and Teddington, comprising an area of 23,500 acres.

SPEN, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Gomersall, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N.W. of Dewsbury.

SPENNITHORNE, a par. in the wap. of West Hang, North Riding co. York, 2 miles S.E. of Leyburn, and 1 mile N.E. of Middleham. It is a station on the Northallerton, Bedale, and Leyburn branch of the North-Eastern railway. The village is situated on the river Ure, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. comprises the tnshps. of Bellerby and Harmby. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £425. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure with a square tower, and a clock and three bells. The interior of the church contains tablets to the family of Chaytor. There is also a district church at Bellerby, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £78. There is a parochial school for both sexes. Hutchinson, the Hebraist, was born here in 1674. The Hall is the principal residence.

SPERNALL, a par. in the Alcester div. of Barlichway hund., co. Warwick, 3½ miles N. of Alcester. Bromsgrove is its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the Cheltenham road, near the river Arrow. The inhabitants are wholly agricultural. The Warwickshire hounds meet in this parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £154. The church is dedicated to St. Leonard. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. S. R. Throckmorton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SPETCHLEY, a par. in the lower div. of Oswaldslow hund., co. Worcester, 3½ miles S.E. of Worcester, its post town, and 22 from Cheltenham. It is a station on the Midland railway. The village is small and wholly agricultural. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as Speclea. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £109. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a tower. It contains effigies of Judge Berkeley, &c. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a Roman Catholic school supported by R. Berkeley, Esq. Spetchley House is a square mansion situated in a well-wooded park. R. Berkeley, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SPETISBURY, a par. in the hund. of Loosebarrow, co. Dorset, 3 miles S.E. of Blanford, its post town, and 8 from Wimbourn. It is a station on the Dorset Central railway. The village is situated on the river Stour, and is chiefly agricultural. In the vicinity is a round camp called Spettisbury Rings, in which many Saxon antiquities have been discovered. Here was formerly a priory cell to Preaux Abbey in Normandy, founded by the Earl of Mellent in the reign of Henry I., but afterwards joined to Monks-Toft, in Norfolk. The living is a rect.,* with the cur. of Charlton Marshall annexed, in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £517. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, was rebuilt in 1859, except the tower. The register dates from 1705. The parochial charities produce about £110, which go to Dr. Hall's and Dr. Sloper's schools. There are National and infant schools, also the convent of St. Monica. The Independents and Primitive Methodists have chapels.

SPEXHALL, a par. in the hund. of Blything, co. Suffolk, 2 miles N. of Halesworth, its post town. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £277, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure with a ruined tower. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum, realised from poors' land.

SPEY, a river and loch of the cos. of Inverness and Elgin, Scotland. It rises in Badenoch, under the Grampians, and flows by a rapid course of 80 miles in a N.E. direction to the Moray Frith at Garmouth. It is apt to flood, and has a salmon fishery said to be worth £6,000 a-year.

SPEYMOUTH, a par. in the co. of Elgin, Scotland. It contains the vils. of Garmouth, Kingston Port, and Mosstodlach. The present par. consists of the two ancient pars. of Dippel and Essil, and the barony of Garmouth, which were erected into one par. by a decree of the Court of Session, dated the 14th of July, 1731, when the present name was given to the united par. from its situation at the mouth of the river Spey. It extends in length about 6½ miles from N. to S., with a mean breadth of about 1½ mile, and is bounded on the N. by the Moray Frith, on the E. by the river Spey, which is said to be the most rapid river in Scotland, on the S. by Rothes, and on the W. by Urquhart. The surface is level near the coast, but rises gradually towards the interior, and terminates in a high hill to the S. It abounds in wood and moorland, with about 50 acres of moss. The parish is traversed from S. to N. by the great road from Garmouth, and from W. to E. by the road from Keith to Elgin. It has water communication, and is within easy access of the Inverness and Aberdeen railway. This par. is in the presb. of Elgin, synod of Moray. The stipend of the minister is about £135. The parish church was erected in 1732, and enlarged and restored in 1799. There is a free church, also parochial and four other schools. The ancient hospital of St. Nicholas was founded by one of the Bishops of Moray.

SPIDDLE, a post-office hmlt. in the par. and bar. of Moycullen, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 11 miles W.S.W. of Galway. It is a fishing station on Spiddle Cove.

SPIKE, an islet in Cork harbour, co. Cork, Ireland, 1 mile S. of Queenstown. It is occupied by a battery and barracks, and was made a convict depôt in 1847.

SPILSBY, a par., post, and market town in the E. div. of Bolingbroke hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 10 miles S.E. of Horncastle, and 30 E. of Lincoln. It is a station on the Great Northern railway. It is situated on an eminence near the river Steeping, and includes the hmlt. of Eresby, the ancient seat of the Willoughbys and Berties. Spilsby is a petty sessions and polling town for the county. The town, which is well built, consists mainly of two streets, with a market-place in which is an ancient octangular market-cross on five steps, at one end. It is well paved and lighted with gas. It contains a townhall and court-house, house of correction, erected in 1824 at an outlay of upwards of £25,000, corn-exchange, savings bank, and three commercial branch banks. Petty sessions are held every Monday, and the general quarter sessions for the southern division of the parts of Lindsey alternately here and at Louth, also a New County Court monthly. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £109. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient structure with a tower of Henry VII.'s time, containing six bells. The interior contains several brasses—one to Margaret Willoughby, bearing date 1391, also tombs of the Bekes and Willoughbys. The parochial charities produce about £95 per annum. There are a free school and National schools for both sexes. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have chapels. The union poorhouse was erected in 1838. The board of guardians meet every alternate Thursday. The late Sir John Franklin, Kt., was born here in 1786. Market day is on Monday. Fairs for cattle are held on the Monday prior to Whit-Monday, and on the Monday following the 12th July.

SPINDLESTONE, a tnshp. in the par. of Bambrough, N. div. of Bambrough ward, co. Northumberland, 3 miles S.E. of Belford. It was formerly a Roman station, with remains of Danish camps, &c. The soil is clayey.

SPINKWELL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Dewsbury, West Riding co. York, near Dewsbury.

SPINNINGDALE, a vil. in the par. of Criech, co. Sutherland, Scotland. It is situated near Dornoch Frith, and had formerly a cotton manufactory, which was destroyed by fire in 1809.

SPIRRINGATE, a tythg. in the par. of Cirencester, co. Gloucester, near Cirencester.

SPIRTHILL, a tythg. in the par. of Bremhill, co. Wilts, 2 miles N.W. of Calne.

SPITAL, a station on the Manchester, Chester, Birkenhead and Liverpool railway.

SPITAL, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Peter, co. Essex, near Maldon.

SPITALFIELDS, or CHRISTCHURCH, a populous metropolitan par. in the Tower div. of Ossulstone hund., co. Middlesex. It was anciently called Lolesworth Field, and was a Roman cemetery, but is now a densely populated district in the N.E. part of London, which see.

SPITHEAD, an important anchorage beyond the Spit Sand, midway between Portsmouth and the Isle of Wight.

SPITTAL, a par. in the hund. of Dungleddy, co. Pembroke, 5 miles N.E. of Haverfordwest, its post town, and 10 from Fishguard. The village is situated on a branch of the river Cleddy. It had formerly a chapel or hospital belonging to Slebech preceptory. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £79, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a chapel.

SPITTALFIELD, a vil. in the par. of Caputh, co. Perth, Scotland. It is situated near Dunkeld, and is traversed by the high road from Dunkeld to Dundee.

SPITTAL-IN-THE-STREET, a hmlt. in the pars. of Hemswell and Glentworth, co. Lincoln, 10 miles E. of Gainsborough. It is situated on the Roman way Ermine Street. Here is St. Edmund's hospital, which was founded for poor women prior to 1330, and is now under the management of the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln.

SPITTLE, or SPITTAL, a tnshp. in the par. of Tweedmouth, hund. of Islandshire, co. Northumberland, formerly in Durham, 1 mile S.E. of Berwick-on-Tweed, its post town. It is an improving village, situated on the coast of the North Sea, at the mouth of the river Tweed, and consists of two principal streets, one about a mile in length. It is a coastguard station and bathing-place much frequented during the summer. There is also a mineral spa. In the village is an iron foundry and spade and shovel manufactory. The inhabitants are engaged in fish curing. In the summer months two steamers ply between this village and Berwick every half-hour during the day. There is a large school for both sexes. The United Presbyterians have a chapel. The Berwick and Tweedmouth Gas Company's works are situated in this township.

SPITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Ovingham, E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 9 miles N.E. of Hexham.

SPITTLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Fangfoss, East Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Pocklington.

SPITTLE. See POULTON-CUM-SPITTLE, co. Chester.

SPITTLE-BOUGHTON, an ext. par. place, in the city and co. of Chester.

SPITTLEGATE, a tnshp. in the par. of Grantham, Winnibriggs wap., co. Lincoln, 1 mile S.E. of Grantham, within which borough it is situated. It is a petty sessions town, and contains the Grantham union poor-house. The tnshp. includes Houghton and Walton. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, in the patron. of the Vicar of Grantham. The church, a modern structure, is dedicated to St. John. See GRANTHAM.

SPITTLE-HILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Mitford, W. div. of Morpeth ward, co. Northumberland, 2 miles from Morpeth. It is situated on the river Font, and had formerly an hospital dedicated to St. Leonard.

SPIXWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Taverham, co. Norfolk, 4 miles N.E. of Norwich, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on a branch of the river Brue, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £362. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. Spixworth Hall is situated in a well-wooded park. J. Longe, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SPOAD, a tnshp. in the par. of Clun, co. Salop, 6 miles S.W. of Bishop's Castle, on the river Clun, near Offa's Dyke.

SPOFFORTH, a par. and tnshp. in the upper div. of Claro wap., West Riding co. York, 3¼ miles N.W. of Wetherby, its post town, and 4 S.E. of Knaresborough. It is a station on the York and Harrogate section of the North-Eastern railway. The parish is extensive, and is bounded on the N.E. by a branch of the river Nidd, and on the S. by the river Wharfe. It includes the tnshps. of Wetherby, Follifoot, Linton, Plumpton, Little Ribston, and Spofforth. In the vicinity are ruins of the castle of the Percys, built prior to 1309, and demolished by the Yorkists after the battle of Towton. The village is neatly built, and contains several good houses. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £1,538. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone structure with a tower and four bells. There is also a district church at Wetherby, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £120. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. Lord Leconfield is lord of the manor.

SPONDON, a par. in the hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 3¼ miles S.E. of Derby, its post town. It is a station on the Midland counties railway. The village is situated near the Derby canal and the river Derwent. The par. formerly included the chplries. of Stanley, Chaddesden, and Lockhay, but these have recently been erected into separate parishes. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in the cotton mills, and in framework knitting. The village, situated on an eminence overlooking the Vale of Derwent, is of considerable extent, and contains many good houses. The chief produce is cheese. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £162. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a spired tower and five bells. There is also a district church at Stanley, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £64. The parochial charities produce about £186 per annum, of which £17 go to Gilbert's school. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel.

SPOONBED, a tythg. in the par. of Painswick, Bisley hund., co. Gloucester, 2 miles from Painswick. The village is considerable. On Spoonbed Hill is a Roman camp 3 acres in extent. In 1052 it was occupied by Earl Godwin, and in 1643 by the royalists. Roman coins and other antiquities have been discovered here.

SPOONHILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Ellesmere, co. Salop, near Ellesmere. It is in conjunction with Oteley. Spoonhill House is a meet for the United Pack hounds.

SPOONLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Adderley, co. Salop, 2 miles N.W. of Market-Drayton.

SPORLE-WITH-PALGRAVE, a par. in the hund. of South Greenhoe, co. Norfolk, 2½ miles N.E. of Swaffham, its post town. The par., which is extensive, includes the hmlts. of Great and Little Palgrave, formerly separate parishes. The village is scattered, and the inhabitants chiefly agricultural. Here was formerly a priory of Black Canons, founded in Henry II.'s time as a cell to Saumur Abbey, and presented by Henry VI. to Eton College. The soil consists of clay upon a subsoil of clay and marl. The living is a vic., with the rects. of Great and Little Palgrave annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £300, in the patron. of Eton College. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a tower and two bells. It has several stained windows. The register dates from 1563. The parochial charities produce about £110 per annum, of which £90 is realised from a fuel allotment. There is a National school for both sexes. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel. The lordship of the manor belongs to St. Katherine's Hospital, London.

SPOTLAND, a tnshp. in the par. of Rochdale, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 1 mile N.W. of Rochdale, of which it forms a populous suburb. See ROCHDALE.

SPOTT, a par. in the co. of Haddington, Scotland. It contains a vil. of the same name. This parish consists of two detached portions, comprehending a fertile lowland district, and part of the hilly district of Lammermuir, the former about 2¾ miles in length, with a mean breadth of three-quarters of a mile; and the latter about 3¾ miles, with an extreme breadth of 2¾ miles. The surface of the larger section is hilly, including part of the Lammermuir hills, which attain an elevation at Sparkleton Hill of 700 feet above sea-level. The soil is principally light and sandy, though in some parts clayey. The underlying rocks consist mainly of Old Red sandstone, the detached section being greywacke. The parish is touched by the road from Edinburgh to Berwick. The village of Spott is about 2½ miles S.W. of Dunbar, and 4 N.W. of Innerwick. It is situated on Spott Water, under Lammermuir, and within easy access to the Dunbar and Innerwick stations of the North British railway. On the top of Spott loan witches were burnt as late as 1705. About half a mile E. of the village is Doon, or Down Hill, where Leslie encamped before the battle of Dunbar, more generally called in Scotland the battle of Down Hill. A little to the S.W. of the village are traces of an ancient camp, and at Kisthill is a mineral spring, formerly resorted to for scorbutic complaints. This par. is in the presb. of Dunbar and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The stipend of the minister is about £313. The parish church was restored in 1790. There is a subscription school. The principal seats are Spott House of the Hays, situated upon a rock in a low glen, and Bowerhouses.

SPRATTING STREET, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Laurence, hund. of Ringslow, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 1 mile N.W. of Ramsgate.

SPRATTON, a par. in the hund. of Spelhoe, co. Northampton, 6½ miles N.W. of Northampton, its post town. The village is situated on the road from Northampton to Leicester and the river Nen. The Pytchley hounds meet in this neighbourhood. The par. includes the hmlt. of Little Creaton, belonging to the ward of Guilsborough. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £375. The church, dedicated to St. Luke, was restored in 1846. The parochial charities produce about £48 per annum. There is a free school for both sexes, also an infant school. The Independents and Baptists have each a chapel.

SPREYTON, a par. in the hund. of Wonford, co. Devon, 7 miles N.E. of Okehampton, its post town, and 3 from Whiddon Down. The village, which is of small extent, is chiefly agricultural. There are some traces of lead in the parish. The village occupies the highest ground in the county, and commands a view of 30 churches. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £135. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. Barton Hall is the principal residence.

SPRIDLINGTON a par. in the E. div. of Aslacoe, wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, and 8 S.E. of Spittal. Market Rasen is its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Ancholme. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £454. The church is dedicated to St. Hilary. The register dates from 1573. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a free school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

SPRINGBURN, a quoad sacra par. in the lower ward of co. Lanark, Scotland, 1½ mile N.E. of Glasgow, and within easy access of the Cowlairs station of the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway. It is bounded by Duke-street, Glasgow, on the S., and by the Molendinar-burn, the Monkland canal, and Balgray-brae on the W. The town, which may be considered a suburb of Glasgow, is well built and paved. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the cotton mills and other manufactures of Glasgow. The church was for some time a chapel-of-ease, and was originally built as an extension church. There are an United Presbyterian church, and several schools.

SPRING END, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Muker and par. of Grinton, North Riding co. York, 2 miles from Muker, and 56 N.W. of York. It is situated in the moorlands, under Shunner Fell.

SPRINGFIELD, a vil. in the par. of Gretna, co. Dumfries, Scotland, 9 miles E. of Annan, and 1½ mile N. of Sarkfoot. It is situated on the river Sark, near Solway Moss. The vil. is well built, and has Todd's print works.

SPRINGFIELD, a vil. in the bar. of Upper Belfast, co. Antrim, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles W. of Belfast.

SPRINGFIELD, a hmlt. in the bar. of Lower Iveagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles S. of Moira.

SPRINGFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Chelmsford, co. Essex, 1 mile N.E. of Chelmsford. This parish, which is separated from that of Chelmsford by the river Chelmer, derives its name from the number of springs within its limits. The surface rises gently from the banks of the river, and is wooded. The village, which is large, is built on an eminence. It may be considered a suburb of Chelmsford, and contains the county gaol. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in an extensive iron foundry. The tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £848, and the glebe contains 55½ acres. The living is a rect. with the cur. of Trinity annexed, in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £1,016. The parish church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a tower, and contains a carved oak screen and an antique Norman font. It was repaired in 1837. There is also a new church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, the site of which was presented by Sir Henry and Lady Mildmay. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and the Dissenters a school endowed by the late Dr. Williams with £35 per annum. There are National and infant schools. Dr. Goldsmith is said to have written his "Deserted Village" whilst residing at a farmhouse nearly opposite the church. Joseph Strutt, the engraver and antiquary, was born here in 1749.

SPRINGFIELD, a vil. in the par. of Cupar, co. Fife, Scotland, 2 miles from Cupar. It has a station on the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee railway; and is situated near the river Eden. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in weaving.

SPRING GROVE, a hmlt. in the par. of Isleworth, hund. of Gore, co. Middlesex, 11 miles S.W. of St. Paul's, London. It is situated near Hounslow Heath, and has a station on the loop line of the London and South Western railway.

SPRING GROVE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Clayton, West Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Barnsley.

SPRING GROVE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Kirk-Burton, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Huddersfield.

SPRINGHOLM, a vil. in the par. of Urr, co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 5 miles N.E. of Castle-Douglas, near Loch Urr, not far from the Solway Frith.

SPRING MILL, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Smithwaite, West Riding co. York, near Huddersfield.

SPRINGTHORPE, a par. in the wap. of Corringham, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4½ miles S.E. of Gainsborough, its post town, and 3 from Lee railway station. The village, which is small, is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Shorgate. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £150. The church is dedicated to SS. George and Laurence. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels.

SPRING VALE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Nether Hallam, West Riding co. York, 1 mile W. of Sheffield.

SPRING VALE, a hmlt. in the par. of Newchurch, Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 2 miles S.E. of Ryde. It is close to the shore, and consists of about a dozen marine villas.

SPRINGVILLE, a vil. in the par. of Upper Kells, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles W.S.W. of Kells. The principal residence is Springville House.

SPRINGWELL, a station on the Newcastle, Sunderland, and South Shields branch of the North Eastern railway.

SPRINKLING, a tarn under Scafell, co. Cumberland, 3 miles N.W. of Wast Water, famous for its trout fishing.

SPRINT, a feeder of the Kent, rises under Harter Fell, co. Westmoreland.

SPROATLEY, a par. in the middle div. of Holderness wap., East Riding co. York, 7 miles N.E. of Hull, its post town, and 3½ N. of Hedon railway station. The village is situated on the Hull and Aldborough turnpike road, and is chiefly agricultural. A police station was erected in 1840, where the magistrates meet once a month. The soil is of a clayey nature. The Constable hounds meet in this parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £230. The church, dedicated to St. Swithin, has a tower and two bells; it was rebuilt in 1820. The parochial charities produce about £111, which go chiefly to Biggs's free school. There is also a Sunday-school. The Wesleyans have a chapel. Sir T. A. C. Constable is lord of the manor.

SPROSTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Northwick, co. Chester, 2 miles N.E. of Middlewich, its post town. It is a small agricultural village on the river Dane.

SPROTBROUGH, a par. in the N. div. of Strafforth wap., West Riding co. York, 2½ miles N.W. of Doncaster, and 1 mile from the Sprotbrough station of the South Yorkshire railway. The par., which is situated on the river Don, contains the tnshps. of Sprotbrough and Cadeby, and the hmlts. of Cusworth, Newton, and Doncaster Bridge. The manor belonged to the Fitzwilliam family, who founded a hospital dedicated to St. Edmund, in the 14th century, which flourished till the Dissolution, when its revenue was returned at £9 13*s.* 11*d.* The Hall, built in the reign of Charles II., is a Grecian structure with a centre and two wings, containing an extensive library and a collection of paintings. The village is well built, and has a bridge erected at the expense of Sir J. W. Copley, Bart. At Cusworth is the seat of W. B. Wrightson, Esq. On the banks of the Don is a flint-mill. The surface is undulating and well wooded. The soil is loam on a subsoil of limestone. The living is a rect.,* with the cur. of Cadeby annexed, in the dioc. of York, val. £780. The parish church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a Gothic structure with a tower and six bells, and has a Decorated ceiling and screen, painted windows, carved pulpit and reading desk, antique font with a Gothic canopy, and monuments of the Fitzwilliam and Copley families. The register commences in 1539. There is also a chapel-of-ease at Cadeby, erected in 1856 at a cost of £5,000. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There are village and Sunday schools.

SPROUGHTON, a par. in the hund. of Sampford, co. Suffolk, 3 miles N.W. of Ipswich, its post town, and 1 mile from Bramford railway station. The village is situated on the river Gipping. The inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. The Essex and Suffolk hounds meet in this parish. The Stowmarket and Ipswich navigation passes through the parish, a part of which is within the liberty of Ipswich. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £519. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a tower. The register dates from 1541. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum, and there is an almshouse for two widows, and a National school for both sexes. Boss Hall and the Chantry are the principal residences. The latter, which has recently been much enlarged, is the seat of Sir Fitzroy Kelly, Bart., who is sole landowner.

SPROUSTON, a par. in the district of Kelso, co. Roxburgh, Scotland. It contains a vil. of its own name and that of Lempitlaw, and extends in length about 5½ miles from N.E. to S.W., with an extreme breadth of about 4 miles. The parish is bounded by Berwickshire and England, and by the pars. of Linton, Eckford, Kelso, and Ednam. The surface is moderately even, and that part which lies along the bank of the Tweed is flat and fertile, but subject to inundation. The substratum abounds in whinstone, sandstone, and limestone, all of which are worked. The system of agriculture has been greatly improved of late years. The hamlets of Redden and Hadden were formerly considerable villages. The parish is traversed by the S. road from Kelso to Berwick, and by the English North-Eastern railway, on which it has a station. The village of Sprouston is about 2 miles N.E. of Kelso. It is situated at the Ferry over the Tweed, and near the railway station. This par. is in the presb. of Kelso and synod of Merse and Teviotdale. The stipend of the minister is about £243. The parish church was erected in 1781, and restored in 1845. There are a Free church situated in Kelso, and two non-parochial schools.

SPROWSTON, a par. in the hund. of Taverham, co. Norfolk, 3 miles N. of Norwich, its post town. The village, which is large, but much scattered, is situated on the road from Norwich to North Walsham. In the vicinity are several corn and saw mills. The soil is of a light nature, upon a subsoil of gravel and clay. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £94, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to SS. Mary and Margaret, is an ancient structure much altered by repairs. It contains tombs of the Corbet family. The register dates from 1727. There is a village school. Mr. Boycot is lord of the manor.

SPROXTON, a par. in the hund. of Framland, co. Leicester, 9 miles N.E. of Melton-Mowbray, its post town, and 6 N.E. of Stapleford. The village, which is small, is situated on a branch of the river Wreak. The living is a vic.* with that of Saltby consolidated, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £282. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is an ancient structure with a tower and three bells. The parochial charities consist of about £1 per annum, besides 2 acres of land. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The Duke of Rutland is lord of the manor.

SPROXTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Helmsley, wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 2 miles S. of Helmsley. It is situated on the river Rye, and is wholly agricultural. There is a school for both sexes. Lord Feversham is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

SPURN HEAD, a promontory in the par. of Kilnsea, S. div. of Holderness wap., East Riding co. York, 12 miles S.E. of Patrington. It is the Ocellum Promontorium of Ptolemy, and projects into the mouth of the river Humber, near its influx into the North Sea. It is connected with the mainland by a narrow isthmus which is overflowed at high-water, and is a life-boat station under the direction of the Trinity House of Hull.

SPURSHOT, a tythg. in the par. of Romsey, co. Hants, near Romsey.

SPURSTOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Bunbury, first div. of Eddisbury hund., co. Chester, 2 miles S. of Bunbury, and 6 N.W. of Nantwich. The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture. It was once celebrated for its mineral spring, and was a resort of bathers. A farm now stands on the site of the bath-house. There is a chapel for the Primitive Methodists. The Hall is the principal residence.

SPUTY, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanwddyn, co. Montgomery, 10 miles W. of Llanfyllyn.

SPYNIE, or NEW SPYNIE, a par. in co. Elgin, Scotland, containing the vils. of New Spynie and Bishopmill, and the site of Old Spinie, which was made a burgh of regality in 1452. It extends in length about 4 miles from W. to E., with a mean breadth of about 2 miles, and is bounded by the pars. of Duffus, Drainie, St. Andrew's Chanbride, Elgin, and Alves. The surface is moderately even, with the exception of a ridge of hills, 3 miles in length, which crosses the centre of the parish. The southern boundary is watered by the river Lossie. The parish is traversed by the roads to Burghead and Torres, and by the railway from Elgin to Lossiemouth. The village is situated about 2 miles N.W. of Elgin, and near Spynie Loch, now drained. In the vicinity is the tower of the ancient palace of the bishops of Moray, whose cathedral was removed to Elgin in 1224. This par. is in the presb. of Elgin and synod of Moray. The stipend of the minister is £185. The parish church, which was erected in 1736, is situated at Quarrymount Hill, under a Danish camp. There are a private school and a parochial library. Oyster beds are found below the surface, which was under water in the 13th century, when small boats could sail from the village of Spynie to fish in the sea. Spynie gave title of baron to the Lindsays, to whom James VI. granted the lands.

SQUARETOWN, a vil. in the par. of Newton, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Edinburgh.

STABANNAN, a par. in the bar. of Ardee, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Ardee. Drogheda is its post town. It is situated on the river Dee, and is crossed by the road from Ardee to Castle-Bellingham. The vils. of Drumgoolstown and Rootstown are within the limits of the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £162, in the patron. of the vicars choral of St. Patrick's, Dublin. The church is modern. Here are a Roman Catholic chapel and two private schools. There are ruins of Rootstown Castle.

STABLEFORD, a hmlt. in the pars. of Eccleshall and Swinnerton, co. Stafford, 2 miles from Eccleshall.

STACK, a cluster of rocks near Holyhead Point, co. Anglesea. They are marked by a revolving light 201 feet above sea-level.

STACK, or STALK, a small loch under Ben Stalk, co. Sutherland, 6 miles E. of Scowrie.

STACKALLAN, a par. in the bar. of Upper Slane, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Navan, its post town. The surface lies along the river Boyne, and is intersected by the road from Navan to Slane. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £420, in the patron. of the crown and bishop. The church was erected about 200 years ago. There is a parish school. Stackallan House is the seat of Viscount Boyne.

STACK CASTLE, a group of rocks off the coast of co. Pembroke, 1½ mile N.W. of St. Govan's Head.

STACK-HOUSES, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Giggleswick, West Riding co. York, near Settle.

STACKPOLE-ELIDOR, a par. in the hund. of Castlemartin, co. Pembroke, 3 miles S. of Pembroke, its post town. It is situated on the shore of Stackpole Creek and Head, opposite the Stack Rocks in the Bristol Channel. The living is a rect., with that of St. Petrox annexed, in the dioc. of St. David's, joint val. £350. The church is dedicated to St. James. Stackpole Court is erected on the site of the ancient castle.

STACKS, a mountain range, co. Kerry, Ireland, near Tralee. The highest point is Ballincollig, 1,170 feet above sea-level.

STACKSTEADS, a hmlt. in the par. of Whalley, co. Lancaster, 8 miles N. of Rochdale, and 1½ mile from Bacup. It is a station on the West section of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway.

STACUMNEY, a par. in the bar. of North Salt, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Leixlip, its post town. It is seated on the road from Lucan to Celbridge, and contains Stacumney House. See LEIXLIP.

STADDLETHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Blacktoft, East Riding co. York, 6 miles S.E. of Howden. It is a station on the Hull, Selby, and Milford junction railway. The hamlet is situated near the river Humber.

STADDON, a vil. in the par. of Holsworthy, co. Devon, near Holsworthy.

STADHAMPTON, a par. in the hund. of Dorchester, co. Oxford, 6 miles N. of Wallingford, its post town, and 8 S.E. of Oxford. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Thames, and is chiefly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur., annexed to that of Chiselhampton, in the dioc. of Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The parochial charities produce about £24 per annum, which go to a school. There is a day school for both sexes. The Particular Baptists have a chapel. C. Piers, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STADMORESLOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Wolstanton, N. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford, 1 mile N.E. of Newcastle-under-Lyne, and 4 N. of Burslem. It includes the hmlt. of Harrisey Head.

STAFFA, a small island, one of the Hebrides, on the W. side of Mull Isle, in the pars. of Kill-Ninian and Ulva, co. Argyle, Scotland, 7½ miles N.E. of Iona, and 3 S. of Gometra. It extends about 1 mile in length by half a mile in breadth. Its coasts are steep and craggy, consisting of a mass of lava overlying the famed basaltic pillars, and hollowed by various caverns. The most remarkable of these caverns are the Clam or Scallop-shell Cave, 50 feet in height, 16 to 18 in width, and 130 in length, consisting of bent columns resembling the sides of a ship; Buachaille, or Herdsman Rock, 30 feet in height; Fingal's, or the Great Cave, 70 feet in height, 42 in breadth, and 227 in length, being the greatest natural curiosity in the island; Boat Cave, only reached by the sea, 16 feet in height, 12 in breadth, and 150 in length; and Mackinnon's, or Cormorant's Cave, 45 feet in height, 48 in breadth, and 224 in length. The steamboats from Oban call at the island five or six times weekly, and generally land the passengers at Fingal's Cave. The most elevated part of the island is over this cave, where the cliffs of basalt rise in regular colonnades about 214 feet above the sea at ordinary tides.

STAFFIELD, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirk-Oswald, Leath ward, co. Cumberland, 1½ mile N. of Kirk-Oswald. It is a small agricultural village, situated on Croglin Water. The tnshp. includes the hmlts. of Scaromanie, Little Croglan, and Haresceugh. The soil is gravelly.

STAFFIN, a loch on the N.E. side of the Isle of Skye, co. Inverness, Scotland, 5 miles S.E. of Aird Point.

STAFFORD, a midland county in England, is bounded N. by Cheshire and Derbyshire; E. by Derbyshire, Leicestershire, and Warwickshire; S. by Worcestershire; and W. by Shropshire and Cheshire. It lies between 52° 23′ and 53° 14′ N. lat, 1° 36′ and 2° 27′ W. long. The extreme length from N. to S. is 60 miles, and its greatest breadth is 38 miles. The area is 1,138 square miles, or 728,468 acres, of which 630,000 acres are arable and pasture. The population in 1801 amounted to 242,693. Since then it has rapidly increased, being 608,599 in 1851, and 746,943 in 1861, or 308 per cent. of the population in 1801. The number of inhabited houses in 1861 was 147,105, and of uninhabited 9,043. Previous to the Roman invasion the county seems to have been occupied by the Cornavii, whose territory was overrun by the Brigantes a short time before the arrival of the Romans, who found in the Brigantes a sturdy foe. It subsequently formed part of the Roman province Flavia Cæsariensis, and was traversed by three great ways, or streets, called Watling Street, Rykneld Street, and the Via Devana, on the first of which were situated the town of Etocetum, now Wall, near Lichfield, and Pennocrucium, near the village of Penkridge. Many remains of camps are found in different parts of the county, but it is difficult to decide whether they are of Saxon, Roman, or Danish formation. Roman coins and other antiquities have been found in many places, especially at Rowley Regis and about Wall, where large quantities of pavements of Roman bricks and foundation stones have been dug up. This county next formed part of the Anglo-Saxon kingdom of Mercia, and after the introduction of Christianity in the 7th century became a bishopric, the seat of which was subsequently fixed at Lichfield. The Danes overran the county in the 9th century, and in the division of territory made by Alfred the district N. of Watling Street was included in the Danelagh, but was afterwards recovered from their power. They were defeated in 910 at Tettenhall Regis, near Wolverhampton, and again in 911 at Wednesfield; and in 913 Ethelfleda, Countess of Mercia, built castles at Tamworth, Stafford, and Eadesbyrig, to keep them in check. Eadesbyrig is by some supposed to be the modern Wednesbury, so called from its having been the principal seat of worship to the god Woden. William the Conqueror granted a portion of the lands to Richard de Todeni, or de Stafford, who built a castle, and established himself near the town of Stafford. Edward II. defeated at Burton-on-Trent the Earls of Lancaster and Hereford, who were in insurrection against him. During the civil wars between York and Lancaster a battle was fought at Blore Heath, on the western side of the county. The field of battle is marked by a stone pedestal, upon which stands an old wooden cross. Mary Queen of Scots was for some time confined in the castles at Tutbury and Chartley, the ruins of which yet remain. In the struggle between Charles I. and his parliament the county generally sided with the latter, though many took an active part in the royal cause, and seized and garrisoned Lichfield Cathedral, which was taken by the parliamentarians, but regained under Prince Rupert. An indecisive battle was fought at Hopton Heath, near Stafford, after which the parliamentarians occupied Stafford and Wolverhampton, together with Eccleshall Castle, and also took and destroyed Stafford Castle. Skirmishes took place in many places, in which the royalists were generally unsuccessful. After the battle of Worcester, in 1651, Charles II. was sheltered for some time in Boscobel House in this county. In 1745 the army of Prince Charles Edward, the young Pretender, occupied Leek, while that of the Duke of Cumberland was at Stone.—The aspect of the county is various. The N.E. district, called the moorlands, and comprising one-sixth of the entire, is the commencement of the mountain range known as the Pennine Chain, which runs through the N.E. of Derbyshire, along the western border of Yorkshire, and on to the Cheviot Hills. This district is a strange variety of wild desolate scenery and rich fertile valleys. The moorlands, rising in many parts to elevations of 1,200 to 1,500 feet, consist in some places of heaps of gravel, and in others of cliffs with rock scattered about their bases, while in some districts in the extreme N. they are mere upland wastes expanding into peaty mosses and spongy moors, as at Axe Edge, the Cloud Heath, High Forest. The glen at the river Dove, at Ilam, is said to resemble the ravines of the Alps, while the valleys of the Manifold, Hamps, Blyth, and Dean, tributaries of the Dove, intersect the moorlands, and abound in spots of picturesque scenery. The Weaver hills, rising in some places to 1,500 feet, lie between the vales of the Dove and the Churnet, and rival the peaks of Derbyshire. The north-western district, in which the potteries are situated, and nearly identical with Pirehill hundred, presents a contrast to the part just described, being for the most part level and fertile. The midland and southern portions partake also of this character, consisting for the most part of level country. Cannock Chase was an open heath of 25,000 acres, extending from the vicinity of Stafford southwards through the county, and is in one place 715 feet high. It was formerly covered with woods, but is now bleak and naked. Part of it has been reclaimed. Rowley Regis Mountain is an isolated eminence between Dudley and Halesowen, about 900 feet high, and terminating in summits, of which the chief are Oakham, Corney, and Turner's hills. Barbeacon, about 700 feet high, is the principal summit of the Clent hills in the detached district of the county.

The principal river is the Trent, which rises from Newpool, near Biddulph, on the borders of Cheshire, and flows in an irregular south-easterly course of 50 miles across the county to Burton, on the borders of Derbyshire. It is rapid throughout, but is not navigable above Burton. Its chief affluents are the Sow and the Tame from the right, and the Blyth and Dove from the left. The Sow rises on the Welsh border near Broughton, and flows past Eccleshall and Stafford to the Trent, being joined by the Penk, a tributary which comes from Wolverhampton. The Tame is formed by the confluence of several small streams S.W. of Walsall, and has a winding course of 42 miles, partly in Warwickshire, but chiefly in this county, before it falls into the Trent. It flows past Tamworth, and is joined by the Rea, which comes from Birmingham; the Cole from Colehill; the Blythe from Watley Moor, in the potteries; and the Anker. The Dove rises in the moorlands to the N.W. of Longnor, and soon enters the vale of Dovedale, where it receives from the right the waters of the Manifold, a subterranean stream, and the Churnet, and, forming the boundary between this county and Derbyshire for several miles, finally joins the Trent.—The county has a large railway development. The London and North-Western traverses it in a N.N.W. direction, entering near Bilston, and leaving it near Crewe; while the Trent Valley, the Shrewsbury and Birmingham, and other branches, bring all parts into easy communication with the midland and south-western lines. The roads are numerous and well arranged, the principal being the old mail-coach road from London to Holyhead, the Chester and Holyhead road, the London and Liverpool, the London and Manchester by Derby, and the road from Birmingham to Derby, connecting the south-western with the northern counties. The canals are extensive and ramified, making up an aggregate length of 250 miles, and cost about £500,000. The Trent and Mersey or Grand Trunk canal enters from Cheshire, near Sandon, on the N.W. and follows the course of the Trent, passing into Derbyshire near Buxton. The Stafford and Worcester canal branches from it at Haywood, near the mouth of the Sow, and runs past Wolverhampton, connecting Bristol with Liverpool and Hull. The Coventry and Oxford canal connects the Thames navigation interiorly with the Mersey and Humber, joining the Trunk canal at Fradley Heath. The Birmingham canal passes through the coal and iron districts by Dudley and Wolverhampton, and runs into the Stafford and Worcestershire canal near the latter town. A junction line branches from near Wolverhampton to Nantwich, in Cheshire. The Wyrley and Essington canal, with thirty locks in a distance of 23 miles, leaves the Birmingham canal at Wolverhampton, and runs eastward to Wyrley Bank, communicating also with the Coventry canal between Fradley Heath and Fazeley; it has three short branches. The Fazeley and Birmingham canal, only a small part of which is in this county, leaves the Coventry and Oxford canal at Fazeley. In the N. the Newcastle-under-Lyne canal connects that town with the Trent and Mersey canal, from which, in the neighbourhood of Stone, the Caldon canal branches to Hanley in the potteries, and past Leek and Uttoxeter to the valley of the Dove. There are other canals, some of which are private property.—A substratum of New Red sandstone generally prevails in the central and southern districts, and of limestone in the upland region in the N. Limestone also appears in the Sedgley Hills, at Rushall, and Hayfield, and underlies most of the South Staffordshire coalfields, particularly in the neighbourhood of Dudley. Quarries of sulphate of lime, or alabaster, are worked on the banks of the Dove, and ragstone of a rusty blue colour at Rowley. Sandstone suitable for mouldings is quarried at Bilston. Clays of great variety are found at the surface, and at mineable depths in abundance. At Darlstown a blue clay, used by glovers, is met with. Potter's earth is extensively procured in the neighbourhood of Newcastle-under-Lyne, and at Amblecoat a kind of clay is raised from 45 feet below the coal strata, in quantities exceeding 4,000 tons a year, which is suitable for making crucibles, fire-bricks, and glass-house pots. Copper is found at Ecton and Butterton, and lead at Ecton and on Stanton Moor. There are extensive works for smelting and refining brass and copper at Brookhouses, Oakamoor, and Whiston, near Cheadle, but the calamine and ore are principally procured from other counties. The great mineral wealth of Staffordshire, however, consists in its supplies of iron and coal. The North Staffordshire or Potteries coal-field embraces an area of 80 square miles. It is of triangular form, and extends from Lane End in the Potteries to Congleton in Cheshire, a distance of 13 miles. The base of the triangle, which is in the southern part, is 8 to 10 miles in length. The Cheadle coal district, which is to the E. of this, may be considered a portion of the same field. The strata are generally from 3 to 10 feet thick. The coals raised in the southern part, near Cheadle, are for the most part of better quality and thicker than are got in the N. The number of collieries under inspection is 127. From beneath this coalfield the coarse sandstone called millstone grit crops out, and covers a considerable district. The South Staffordshire or Dudley field is celebrated for the thickness of its strata and the excellence of its coal, which is specially suited for the smelting of iron. It contains an area of upwards of 100 square miles, and extends from Walsall to Wolverhampton, and from a line in Crannock Chase to a line near Stourbridge, in Worcestershire. Its length is 20 miles from N. to S., and its breadth is 10 miles, but this includes Rowley hills. The number of collieries under inspection in this district is 422. Coal is found in strata in some places of the aggregate thickness of 24 to 36 feet. But iron is the most valuable mineral of the county, which has been called the Chalybia of England. Strata of iron ore are everywhere underlying and alternating with the coal seams, the most abundant mines being at Wednesbury, Wolverhampton, Tipton, Bilston, and Sedgley. The amount annually produced exceeds 600,000 tons, and is only equalled by the South Wales district, which yields upwards of 700,000 tons.—The climate, particularly in the high grounds and moorlands of the N.E., is characterised by coldness and humidity, and harvests are in consequence later and more precarious than in other parts of the county. The rainfall averages 36 inches, while the amount in London seldom exceeds 21 to 22 inches, and though drainage is carefully attended to in the S., a retentive subsoil in the N. prevents the wet from sinking through, and this moisture affects the temperature of the entire county.—The soils vary from light soils managed on the four-course system to the stiffest clay farmed on the six-course principle. About three-fourths of the entire is arable, but much of the land is cold and best suited for moorland oats, which is often grown for three years in succession, and the land then laid down with grass while full of weeds. In the S., however, a better system is observed, and friable loam of a sandy, calcareous nature admits of improved husbandry being adopted. Rich pastures and meadows are found generally on the banks of the rivers, producing excellent cheese. About 10,000 to 12,000 acres of Cannock Chase are still unenclosed. Lord Hatherton's estate at Tiddesley was formerly a waste part of it, but is now thoroughly drained, and produces good crops. Farm buildings are generally good; farms are mostly held from year to year, and fields are small and surrounded by hedgerows. Long-horned cattle are most esteemed, but the short-horns have many admirers, and crosses between them are not unfrequent. Dairy husbandry is not much practised; cheese is made rivalling that of Derbyshire and Cheshire, and quantities of cattle are stall-fed on turnips, hay, and oil-cake. Southdown and Leicester sheep are successfully reared, and many other breeds may be found. It is, however, chiefly a manufacturing county.—The Potteries in the N. are the principal seat of the earthenware and china business, and to the iron and coal district of the S. England owes much of her wealth and greatness. Both of these branches of industry are of comparatively recent date.

The manufacture of earthenware was little attended to at the commencement of the last century, and owes much of its prosperity to the enterprise and ingenuity of Josiah Wedgwood, who commenced working on his own account in 1760, and before his death in 1795 quite changed the character of the pottery business. The population of the Potteries exceeds 80,000. The chief towns in the district are Stoke-upon-Trent, Longton, Shelton, Burslem, Hanley, and Lane End, but these, though formerly distinct places, have so considerably increased as to present the appearance of one town; they form together the borough of Stoke-upon-Trent. The finest clays used are principally brought from Dorsetshire, soapstone from Cornwall, and flints from chalk-pits near Gravesend, and from Wales and Ireland. A considerable business in boots and shoes is done in Stafford, where tanning is also much attended to. Glass is made on the confines of Worcestershire. Cotton mills have been erected at Rocester and other places, and there are extensive breweries at Burton-on-Trent and Wolverhampton.—The county constitutes the archdeac. of Stafford, in the dioc. of Lichfield and prov. of Canterbury, and comprises 138 whole pars., besides parts of 12 others, and 15 ext. par. places. It is divided for civil purposes into 5 hunds., in 2 divs.: Offlow North, Pirehill, North and South, and Totmonslow, North and South, forming the northern div.; and Cuttlestone, East and West, Offlow South, and Seisdon, North and South, constituting the southern. The government is entrusted to a lord lieutenant and custos rotulorum, high sheriff, and about 327 deputy lieutenants and magistrates. The county returns 17 members to parliament—2 for the northern div., population 289,663, constituency, 10,703 in 1865; 2 for the southern div., population 457,280, constituency 10,841; 2 each for Stoke-upon-Trent (2,858), Tamworth (451), Wolverhampton (4,533), Stafford (1,495), Lichfield (704), and Newcastle-under-Lyne (976); and 1 for Walsall (1,219). Prior to the passing of the Reform Bill the number was only 10. Stafford is the place of election for the northern division, and Lichfield for the southern. The county is in the midland military district and the Oxford circuit. Assizes and quarter sessions are held at Stafford, where the county gaol is situated. County courts are held at 13 places. The county lunatic asylum is at Stafford. Owing to the large manufacturing population, education is not attended to among the lower orders. Staffordshire has 21 market towns, and upwards of 400 smaller towns and villages. It is in the West Midland division for registration purposes, and comprises 16 superintendent registrars' districts, or Poor-Law unions, and 60 subdistricts.—It abounds in seats of the nobility and resident gentry, of which the following are the principal: Trentham, Duke of Sutherland; Ingestrie, Earl Talbot; Alton Towers, Earl of Shrewsbury; Beaudesert, Marquis of Anglesea; Stone Park, Earl Granville; Sandon, Earl of Harrowby; Sandwell, Earl of Dartmouth; Shugborough, Earl of Lichfield; Aston, Viscount St. Vincent; Tiddesley, Lord Hatherton; Blithfield, Lord Bagot; Enville, Earl of Stamford; Weston, Earl of Bradford; Chartley, Earl Ferrars. Some of the antiquities have already been noticed in connection with the early history of the county. In addition to these there are some Druid remains at Biddulph; Danish pillars at Wolverhampton, Draycot, and Checkley; ecclesiastical ruins at Fairwell, Tamworth, and Over Arley; an old cathedral at Lichfield; abbeys at Burton, Croxton, and Dieulacres; and castle ruins at Dudley, Stourton, Tamworth, and Tutbury.

STAFFORD, the county town of co. Stafford, a municipal and parliamentary borough, market town, and the seat of a Poor-law Union, is 141 miles W.N.W. from London by road, 133 miles by the North-Western railway, 29 miles N. from Birmingham, a like distance W. from Shrewsbury. It is situated on the left bank of the river Sow, a tributary of the Trent, about 6 miles from its confluence with that river. It is in the united pars. of St. Mary and St. Chad, in the S. div. of Pirehill hund. The municipal and parliamentary boroughs are coextensive, comprising an area of 2,510 acres, with a population in 1851 of 11,829, and in 1861 of 12,532, occupying 2,241 houses. The earliest mention of Stafford is in 913, when the Saxon chronicle records that Ethelfleda, Countess of Mercia, and sister of Edward the Elder, there built a fort to keep the Danes in check; but of this there is now no trace. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as a city under the name of Staefford, or Stafeford. A Norman castle was built in the neighbourhood by Richard de Todeni, or de Stafford, who had obtained a grant of the place from William the Conqueror. The castle was restored in the reign of Edward III., and was visited in 1575 by Elizabeth. During the civil wars between Charles I. and the parliamentarians the royalists withdrew to Stafford after Lichfield was wrested from them, and an indecisive battle was fought early in March, 1643, between the rival parties at Hopton Heath, about 2 miles from the town. Later in the same year the town, which was walled, was taken by Sir William Brereton at the head of a parliamentary force, and sustained considerable injury at their hands. The castle, which is in Castlechurch parish, 1½ mile from the town, was also surrendered and demolished. The only trace of the town wall which remains is one of the gates, named Gaol-gate, now used as a blackhole, or bridewell. The custom of borough English prevails. The town is low, but generally well built; the houses are of stone or brick, and slated. The lower and older portion occupies an irregular four-sided area of about 1½ mile in circumference, and is disposed in two principal streets called Gate-street and Gaol Gate-street, with which small squares or open areas are connected by subordinate streets and alleys. On the S. a suburb called Forebridge communicates with the town by a bridge, and on the N. are traces of what seems to have been a suburb. The streets are paved and lighted with gas, and there is a good supply of water from public and private pumps. The county hall with assembly rooms in the market square is of recent erection, and has a front 120 feet long. The other public buildings are the county gaol, recently erected, county infirmary, district lunatic asylum, theatre, public library, savings-bank, and mechanics' institute. Stafford has returned two members to parliament since the reign of Edward I., constituency 1,495 in 1865. Down to the passing of the Reform Act the right of election was in the resident freemen. It was first chartered in 1206 by John, and is divided under the Municipal Reform Act into two wards, which are governed by 6 aldermen and 18 councillors, from among whom a mayor is chosen. The spring and summer assizes and the quarter sessions for the county are held in the town, which is also the place of election for the northern division of the county. A considerable quantity of leather is tanned in or near the town, and there are some ale breweries, but the principal manufacture is of boots and shoes, which are made in large quantities, chiefly for the London market and for exportation. The Trent Valley railway passes close to the town, and with the Staffordshire and Worcestershire canal affords great facilities for commerce. The Poor-law Union and superintendent Registration district comprise 20 parishes. About 1½ mile to the S.W. of the suburb of Forebridge, the ruins of the ancient castle occupied a conspicuous position; they were removed in 1810, and a massive castellated building erected. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £365, with a residence, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The parish church of St. Mary, formerly collegiate, was restored in 1846 at the cost of £16,000. It is cruciform and embattled, with nave, side aisles, and a transept 100 feet long, with a three-aisled chancel. A lofty octagonal tower, containing a peal of eight bells, rises from the intersection; the upper part of the tower is of recent date. Within the church is an ancient font. In addition to the parish church there are the following district churches, viz., St. Chad's, a Norman structure recently restored; and Christchurch Marston, the livings being perpet. curs., val. respectively £220 and £85. The Independents, Baptists, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. There is a grammar school refounded by Edward VI., with an income from endowment of £370, of which two-thirds are allotted to the master, and one-third to an usher; also National, infant, British and Foreign, and ragged schools. The charities include Palmer's and Noel's almshouses, and an institution for the relief of infirm clergymen, and orphans and widows of clergymen, within the archdeaconry of Stafford, the income of which amounts to £2,500 from funded property, besides voluntary contributions. Saturday is the market day, and fairs are held on Tuesday before Shrove Tuesday, and 14th May for cattle, Saturday before 29th June and 10th July for wool, 16th and 18th September and first Monday in October for cheese, and 4th December for horses and cattle.

STAFFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Barwick, Houndsborough hund., co. Somerset, 2 miles S.E. of Yeovil.

STAFFORD BARTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Dolton, co. Devon, 5 miles N.E. of Hatherleigh.

STAFFORDSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Skreen, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles E. of Navan. The parish contains Staffordstown House, also remains of an old burial-ground.

STAFFORD WEST, a par. in the hund. of Culliford-Tree, co. Dorset, 2½ miles S.E. of Dorchester, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Frome, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the old par. of Frome-Billet. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £303. The porch of the church bears the date 1640. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes. Stafford House, an Elizabethan mansion, was formerly the seat of the Goulds.

STAG, a dangerous rock off the W. coast of co. Anglesea, one third of a mile N.E. of Holyhead Pier.

STAGBATCH, a tnshp. in the par. of Leominster, co. Hereford, 2 miles S.W. of Leominster.

STAGS, the several groups of rocks on the coast of Ireland, as the Stags of Cork, on the side of Cork Harbour; the Stags of Arran, off the W. coast of co. Donegal; the Stags of Broadhaven, off the coast of co. Mayo, near Benwell Head; and the Stags of Castlehaven, off the coast of co. Cork, near Toe Head.

STAGSDEN, a par. in the hund. of Willey, co. Bedford, 4½ miles S.W. of Bedford, its post town, and 8 N.E. of Newport Pagnell. The village, which is extensive, is situated near the river Ouse, and on the main road from Newport Pagnell to Wolverhampton. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is a stiff clay. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £240. The church, dedicated to St. Clement, or S. Leonard, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower and five bells. The interior contains a brass of the Cooke family. It has been thoroughly restored, chiefly at the expense of the late Lord Dynevor. There is a free school for both sexes. The Independents have a chapel. There is a chalybeate well in the village. The heirs of Lord Dynevor are lords of the manor.

STAHOLMOG, a par. in the bar of Lower Kells, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Nobber. Soil good, with some bog. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, and in the patron. of the crown.

STAIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Withern, Wold div. of Caleworth hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles N.W. of Alford. It was formerly a separate parish.

STAIN, a vil. in the par. of Cambusnethan, co. Lanark, Scotland, 7 miles N.E. of Wishawton. It is situated on the left bank of the South Calder, which separates it from the par. of Shotts. It is of great antiquity. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the collieries, and in the Shotts ironworks.

STAINBROUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Silkstone, wap. of Staincross, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Barnsley, its post town. It includes the hmlts. of Stainbrough Folds, Hood Green, and Ratten Row. The village is small, and chiefly agricultural. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon. The church was rebuilt in 1841, and is situated in the park. The parochial charities produce about £40 per annum, which go towards the support of the school. Wentworth Castle was erected in 1730-68 by the second and third earls of Stafford. It is situated on an eminence in the midst of a well-timbered park. F. Wentworth, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STAINBURN, a tnshp. in the par. of Workington, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 1 mile E. of Workington. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated on the river Derwent and on the Cockermouth road. Here was formerly an oratory subordinate to the priory of St. Bee's. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor.

STAINBURN, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby-Overblow, upper div. of Claro wap., West Riding co. York, 4¼ miles N.E. of Otley, and 6 W. of Kirkby-Overblow. Wetherby is its post town. The tnshp. includes the hmlts. of Braythorne and Moorside. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £66, in the patron. of the Vicar of Kirkby-Overblow. There is a chapel, also a parochial school for both sexes. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum.

STAINBY, a par. in the wap. of Beltisloe, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 2 miles S.W. of Colsterworth, its post town, and 6 W. of Corby railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the S.W. border of the county adjoining Leicestershire, and is bounded on the E. by the river Witham. There are traces of a Roman villa on Ermine Street. The living is a rect.,* with that of Gunby consolidated, in the dioc. of Lincoln, joint val. £466. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a tower with a clock and two bells; it was rebuilt in 1805. A school was erected at the expense of the rector in 1840, for the children of this parish and that of Gunby. The Earl of Dysart is lord of the manor.

STAINCLIFF AND EWCROSS, EAST, a wap. in the West Riding co. York, contains the pars. of Barnoldswick, Bracewell, Broughton-in-Aredale, Burnsall, Carlton, Gargrave, Keighley, Kettlewell, Kildwick, Linton, Marton, Thornton-in-Craven, and parts of Addingham, Arncliffe, Kirkby-Malham, and Skipton; comprising an area of 160,240 acres.

STAINCLIFF AND EWCROSS, WEST, a wap. in the West Riding co. York, contains the town of Settle, and the pars. of Bentham, Bolton-by-Bowland, Clapham, Giggleswick, Gisburn, Horton-in-Ribblesdale, Long Preston, Sawley, Sedbergh, Slaidburn, Thornton-in-Lonsdale, with parts of Arncliffe, Kirkby-Malham, Mitton, and Whalley; comprising an area of 268,620 acres.

STAINCLIFFE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Batley, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N. of Dewsbury.

STAINCROSS, a wap. in the West Riding co. York, contains the town of Barnsley, and the pars. of Cawthorne, Darton, Felkirk, Hemsworth, High-Hoyland, Penistone, Royston, Silkstone, Tankersley, and parts of Darfield and Wragby; comprising an area of 83,010 acres.

STAINCROSS, a hmlt. in the par. of Darton, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Barnsley.

STAINDROP, or STAINTHORP, a par. and market town in the S.W. div. of Darlington ward, co. Palatine of Durham, 6 miles N.E. of Barnard Castle, 11 N.W. of Darlington, and 19 from Durham. It is situated on a tributary of the river Tees, in a vale near Raby Park, and includes the tnshps. of Raby and Shotton, Langley-dale and Cleatham. The manor was formerly held by the Nevilles, who founded three chantries in 1343 and a college in 1378. Petty sessions are held every alternate Saturday. The town, which is of great antiquity, consists chiefly of one long, irregular street. It is partially paved and the houses lighted with gas. There are extensive lead works N. of Langley Dale. In the town is a library with news-room. Courts-leet and baron are held annually by the lord of the manor. The living is a vic.,* annexed to the rect. of Cockfield, in the dioc.

of Durham. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is an ancient structure with a tower and six bells. The interior contains effigies, &c., of the Nevilles and Vanes of Raby. The parochial charities produce about £100 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents, Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Society of Friends have each a place of worship. Market day is on Saturday. A fair is held on St. Thomas-à-Becket's Eve.

STAINE, a hund., co. Cambridge, contains the pars. of Bottisham, Stowe-cum-Quy, Swaffham Bulbeck, and Prior, and Great and Little Wilbraham; comprising an area of 18,397 acres. It is traversed by the Roman way to Caistor.

STAINES, a par., post, and market town in the hund. of Spelthorne, co. Middlesex, 6 miles S.E. of Windsor, and 18 S.W. of London. It is a station on the London and South-Western railway. This place, which is of great antiquity, is situated on the S. bank of the Thames, at the spot where a stone bearing the date 1285 marks the bounds of the jurisdiction of the corporation of London over the river to the W. It is believed to occupy the site of the Roman station Ad Pontes, and was the Saxon Stane, on the way to Silchester. Previously to 1227 the parish formed part of an extensive forest, extending to Hounslow. The bridge which here crosses the Thames was erected in 1832, at a cost of £40,000, in lieu of an ancient one. The town, which has been much improved of late, consists principally of one wide street, with houses on either side of the highway, and several smaller streets branching from it. Petty sessions are held at the "Clarence Hotel" once a month. The town is not incorporated; but is a lordship of the crown, governed by two constables and four headboroughs. A literary and scientific institute was erected in 1836. There are extensive mustard mills and a brewery. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of London, val. £304, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1828, with the exception of the tower, which was erected by Inigo Jones in 1631, and contains a clock and eight bells. It had formerly a guild or chantry, founded by Lord Berners in 1656. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. There are National and infant schools. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Society of Friends have chapels. Yoveney, Hammonds, Duncroft House, Shortwood Common, and Withygate are the principal residences. R. Taylor, Esq., is lord of the manor. Races take place yearly. Market day is on Friday. Fairs are held on 11th May and 19th September.

STAINFIELD, a hmlt. in the par. of Hacconby, wap. of Aveland, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 1 mile W. of Hacconby, and 3 miles N.W. of Bourne.

STAINFIELD, a par. in the W. div. of Wraggoe wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3½ miles S.W. of Wragby, its post town, and 3 from the Bardney railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on a branch of the river Langworth, near the Fosse Way, and is chiefly agricultural. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £71. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew, and was rebuilt in 1811. There is a National school. Here was formerly a Benedictine nunnery, founded in Henry II.'s time by Henry Percy, and valued at the Dissolution at £112 5s. T. T. Drake, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STAINFORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Giggleswick, W. div. of Staincliff wap., West Riding co. York, 2½ miles N. of Settle, its post town, and 16 N.W. of Kirkby-Lonsdale. The village, which is of small extent, is situated in the vale of Ribblesdale, and on the Roman way to Ilkley. In the vicinity are several seats. The land is chiefly in pasture. The soil is of a clayey nature, with a subsoil of limestone and bluestone. The par. includes the hmlts. of Stainforth-under-Burgh and Knight-Stainforth. Several waterfalls are formed by the Ribble, the principal being Stainforth and Cataract Force. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £68, in the patron. of trustees. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is modern, with a tower and three bells. There is an endowed school for both sexes.

STAINFORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Hatfield, S. div. of Strafforth wap., West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Thorne, and 2 from Hatfield. It is a station on the South Yorkshire and Lincolnshire railway. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on the river Don, near its communication with the Keadby canal. There are bridges over the river and canal; and on the latter, which is only 15 miles long, is a spacious quay. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in boat-building. There is a chapel-of-ease to Hatfield, and chapels for Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Unitarians. The charities produce about £4 per annum.

STAINLAND-WITH-OLD-LINDLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Halifax, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Halifax, its post town, and 1½ mile from North Dean railway station. The village, which is extensive, is situated on an eminence above the vale of Dean Head, near the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway, and the Roman way from Slack to Manchester. The tnshp. includes the hmlt. of Holywell Green. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in the cotton, worsted, and paper mills. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Halifax. The Wesleyans, Independents, and Methodists of the New Connexion have chapels.

STAINLEY, NORTH, or STAINLEY-WITH-SLENINGFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Ripon, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N.W. of Ripon, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the S. bank of the river Ure, and near the Roman way to Catterick. The tnshp. contains the new palace of the bishops of Ripon, recently erected on the farm of Bramley Grange. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £100, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is modern.

STAINLEY, SOUTH, a par. in the wap. of Lower Claro, West Riding co. York, 2½ miles N.E. of Ripley, its post town, and 6 S.E. of Ripon. The village, which is small, is situated on a branch of the river Ure, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Cayton. The soil consists of clay, loam, and gravel. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £75. The church is modern. The register dates from 1658. There is a church Sunday-school. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

STAINMORE, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Brough, East ward, co. Westmoreland, 3 miles S.E. of Brough, its post town. It is situated on the river Beelah, near Stainmore Forest. In this township are Maiden Castle and Rere or Rey Cross camps, situated near the ancient Watling Street. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the lead mines, collieries, and stone quarries. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £119. The church has been recently constructed at the expense of the Rev. L. Jefferson, M.A. The parochial charities produce about £81 per annum, of which £68 go to the Tufton school.

STAINSACRE. See HAWKSER-CUM-STAINSACRE, North Riding co. York.

STAINSBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Ashby Puerorum, hund. of Hill, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3 miles N.E. of Horncastle.

STAINSBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Ault-Hucknall, hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 5½ miles S.E. of Chesterfield.

STAINTON, a par. and tnshp. in the W. div. of Langbaurgh lib., North Riding co. York, 4 miles N.W. of Stokesley, its post town, and 5 from Yarm. The village, which is small, is situated on a branch of the river Tees. The par. contains the hmlts. of Thornton, Hemlington, Ingleby, Stainsby, Barwick, Maltby, and Thornaby. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £323, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is ancient. The interior contains monuments of the Pennyman family. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum, exclusive of other small charities. There is a National school.

STAINTON, a par. in the S. div. of Strafforth wap., West Riding co. York, 2 miles W. of Tickhill. Rotherham is its post town. The village, which is small, is situated near the Roman way to Castleford. The par. includes the hmlt. of Hellaby. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £323, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Winifred, is an ancient edifice with a tower and three bells. The parochial charities produce about £26 per annum.

STAINTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Downholme, wap. of West Hang, North Riding co. York, 5 miles S.W. of Richmond, near the river Swale. S. Scrope, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STAINTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Dacre, Leath ward, co. Cumberland, 2½ miles S.W. of Penrith. It is a small village situated on the river Emont, near the Lancaster and Carlisle railway. The soil consists of clay and sand. Stainton was formerly a Roman station. H. Howard, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STAINTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Stanwix, ward and co. of Cumberland, 3 miles N.W. of Carlisle, near the Picts' Wall. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor.

STAINTON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Heversham, ward of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 4 miles, N. of Milnthorpe, its post town, and 3 S. of Oxenholme railway station. The village, which occupies the site of a Roman station, is situated on a tributary of the Belo. It is intersected by the Roman way from Lancaster, and by the Lancaster railway and canal. There are a corn, woollen, and two flax mills. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £89, in the patron. of the Vicar of Heversham. The church is situated at Crosscrake, and was founded by the Flemings, but rebuilt in 1773.

STAINTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Urswick, Lonsdale North of the Sands hund., co. Lancaster, 2 miles S.E. of Dalton-in-Furness.

STAINTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Gainford, S.W. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 2 miles N.E. of Barnard Castle. It is joined with the hmlt. of Streatham to form a township.

STAINTON-BY-LONGWORTH, a par. in the W. div. of Wraggoe hund., co. Lincoln, 8 miles N.E. of Lincoln, its post town, and 4 W. of Wragby. The village, which is small, is situated on the Fosse Way and the river Langworth. The par. contains the hmlts. of Newbold, Reasby, and South Langworth. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £183. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. There is a school for both sexes with a small endowment. The Earl of Scarborough is lord of the manor.

STAINTON-DALE, a tnshp. in the par. of Scalby, Pickering Lythe wap., North Riding co. York, 8 miles N.W. of Scarborough, on the coast near Wade's Causeway. Agates and corallines are found in this township.

STAINTON-FARM, a hmlt. in the par. of Millom, Allerdale-above Derwent ward, co. Cumberland.

STAINTON, GREAT, or STAINTON-LE-STREET, a par. in the N.E. div. of Stockton ward, co. Durham, 5 miles N.E. of Darlington. Bishopton is its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the road from Darlington to Sedgefield, and near the Clarence railway. The par. contains the tnshps. of Elstob and Great Stainton. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £355, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The register dates from 1561. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum, being the endowment of Nicholson's school. There is a National school for both sexes. The Durham hounds meet in this parish.

STAINTON-LE-VALE, a par. in the S. div. of Walshcroft hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 6 miles N.E. of Market-Rasen, its post town, and 2½ W. of Binbrook. The village, which is small, is situated in a valley on the Wolds. The inhabitants are wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £99. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. W. Angerstein, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

STAINTON, LITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Bishopton, S.W. div. of Stockton ward, co. Durham, 1 mile S. of Stainton-le-Street and 7 miles N.W. of Stockton.

STAINTON MAGNA. See STAINTON, GREAT, co. Durham.

STAINTON MARKET, a par. in the wap. of North Gartree, co. Lincoln, 6 miles N.W. of Horncastle. It is now a small agricultural village, situated near the river Bain, but was formerly a market town. In the centre of the village is a green, once the market-place. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £100. The church is an ancient structure dedicated to St. Michael, and was repaired at the commencement of the present century.

STAIR, a par. in the district of Kyle, co. Ayr, Scotland. It contains a vil. of the same name. This parish extends about 6 miles in length from S.W. to N.E., with a mean breadth of 2 miles, lying between the rivers Ayr and Kyle. The surface is undulating, and the whole is enclosed and well cultivated. The soil is generally a stiff clay, except along the streams, where it is loamy. A species of whetstone, known by the name of Water-of-Ayr stone, is very abundant, and is exported to a considerable extent. Sandstone and coal are worked. On the lands of Dalmore are traces of copper and antimony, and plumbago exists in great quantities. At Tribboch and Drongan are remains of two ancient towers. The parish is traversed by two roads, and is within easy access of the Glasgow and South-Western railway. The village of Stair, which is small, is about 5 miles S.W. of Mauchline, and 2½ S. of Tarbolton. It is situated on the river Ayr. The par. is in the presb. of Ayr and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The stipend of the minister is £214. The church is old. There are a Free church and a non-parochial school. The parish of Stair formed a part of Ochiltree till 1653, and gives title of earl, viscount, and baron to the ancient family of Dalrymple. The principal seats are Barskimming, Stair House, Drongan, and Gadgirth Castle.

STAITHES, a vil. in the par. of Easington, North Riding co. York, 9 miles N.W. of Whitby. It is a coast-guard station, and the place where Captain Cook was apprenticed. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the fisheries.

STAKESBY, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Ruswarp, North Riding co. York, near Whitby.

ST. ALBAN'S. See ALBAN'S, ST., and the like for all places having a similar prefix.

STALBRIDGE, a par. and market town in the hund. of Brownshall, co. Dorset, 15 miles N.W. of Blandford, its post town, and 5 N.W. of Sturminster. It is a station on the Somerset and Dorset railway. The par. is situated on a branch of the river Stour, and contains the tythgs. of Gomershay, Thornhill, and Weston. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as Staplebridge, and then belonged to Sherborne Abbey, but subsequently came to the Seymours, Audleys, Boyles, and Walters. In the centre of the town, which is built upon a rock, stands an ancient stone cross, 30 feet in height, resting on three flights of steps, and adorned with sculptured figures of the Virgin, St. John, &c. The town consists chiefly of one long street, with another street diverging from the S. end, where stands the cross. It was formerly noted for the manufacture of stockings, and silk-winding is carried on. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £888, in the patron. of Christ Church College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a tower. It has been recently restored, and a gallery added. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a place of worship. The Marquis of Westminster is lord of the manor. Market day is Monday. Fairs are held on the 6th May and 4th September.

STALEYBRIDGE, a chplry., tnshp., market and post town in the par. of Ashton-under-Lyne, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 2 miles W. of Ashton, and 8 N.E. of Stockport. It is connected by branch lines with the London and North-Western, the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire, and Lancashire and Yorkshire railways. It is a prosperous manufacturing town, situated upon the Tame, under a hill called "Wild Bank," which rises 1,300 feet above sea-level. This place derives its name from the Staveleighs, a family who resided here, and from the bridge over the river, which has recently been rebuilt at an expense of £4,000, and connects the county of Lancaster with that of Chester. The growth of the town has been rapid since 1776, when the first cotton-mill was erected here. The streets are paved and lighted with gas, and there is an abundant supply of good water. The staple trade is in cotton-spinning, but it, and the cloth trade, once predominant, have declined. Large quantities of firebricks are manufactured. The population of the borough is probably nearly 27,000. It contains a townhall, lock-up, savings-bank, news-room, and two commercial branch banks. The Huddersfield canal passes in the vicinity. There are five churches in the borough, St. Paul's, St. John's, Dukinfield, St. George's, Holy Trinity, and the old chapel of the place, St. George Cockerhill. Market day is Saturday. A fair is held on 5th March.

STALHAM, a par. and market town in the hund. of Happing, co. Norfolk, 14 miles N.E. from Norwich, its post town, and 8 S.E. of North Walsham. It is situated near the navigable river Ant, and on the high road from North Walsham to Yarmouth. The town is spacious, and an extensive trade is done in corn, coals, &c., for which there are commodious wharves. A corn hall was erected in 1855. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £180. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, the tower of which was destroyed by lightning. The interior contains a font and a brass. A new chancel was erected in 1827, and the church was restored in 1854. The register dates from 1560. The parochial charities produce about £49 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, erected in 1841. The Wesleyans and Baptists have chapels. Stalham Hall is the principal residence. J. C. Webb, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STALISFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Faversham, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 7 miles S.E. of Faversham, its post town, and 3 N. of Charing. The village, which is small, is chiefly agricultural. The land is partly in common and hop-grounds. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £134, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a tower and spire. W. Rigden, Esq., is owner of the manor.

STALLINGBOROUGH, a par. in the E. div. of Yarborough wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 6 miles N.W. of Great Grimsby, and 8 N.E. of Caistor. It is a station on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway. The village, which is large, is situated near the river Humber. There are a coastguard station, a lighthouse, and a ferry. The par. includes the hmlt. of Little London. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £127, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul. The interior contains tombs of the Ayscough family. The register dates from 1530. There is a school, supported by R. Boucherett, Esq., who is lord of the manor. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

STALLING-BUSK, a chplry. in the par. of Aysgarth, wap. of Hang-West, North Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Hawes, and 15 S.W. of Middleham, its post town. It is situated on the river Ure, which here forms a cataract. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £86, in the patron. of the Vicar of Aysgarth.

STALLINGTON, a lib. in the par. of Stone, co. Stafford.

STALMINE, a tnshp. in the par. of Lancaster, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 4½ miles N.E. from Poulton-le-Fylde, and 7 W. of Garstang. Fleetwood is its post town. The vil. is situated near Wyre Water. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £267, in the patron. of the Vicar of Lancaster. The church is dedicated to St. James. C. Bourn, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

STAMBOROUGH, a hmlt. in the par. of Old Cleeve, co. Somerset, 5 miles S.W. of Watchet.

STAMBOURNE, a par. in the hund. of Hinckford, co. Essex, 10 miles N.W. of Halstead, its post town, and 6 N.W. of Sible Hedingham railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Colne, and is chiefly agricultural. The land is partly in common. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £353, in the patron. of the Duchy of Lancaster. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum, besides a share with Finchingfield. There is a National school. The Independents have a place of worship.

STAMBRIDGE, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Rochford, co. Essex, 1½ mile N.E. of Rochford, its post town, and 5 miles from Southend. The vil., which is small, is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes part of Wallisea Island. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £600, in the patron. of the Charterhouse, London. The church is dedicated to St. Mary and All Saints. The children of this parish have the privilege of attending the National school at Rochford.

STAMBRIDGE, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Rochford, co. Essex, 6 miles from Rayleigh, and 2 N.E. of Rochford, its post town. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. There is an extensive brewery. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £177. The church is an ancient structure, consisting of nave and chancel. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum.

STAMFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Embleton, S. div. of Bambrough ward, co. Northumberland, 4 miles N.E. of Alnwick.

STAMFORD, or NEWSTED, a market and sessions town and municipal and parliamentary borough, locally in the wap. of Ness, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 12 miles N.W. of Peterborough, 44 S. of Lincoln, and 89 N. of London by road, or 82 by the Great Northern railway. It can also be approached by means of the London and North-Western and Great Eastern railways. The town, which is of great antiquity, is situated near the borders of the county adjoining Northampton and Rutland shires, on the N. bank of the navigable river Welland, here crossed by a bridge of three arches, rebuilt in 1849. The Ermine Street passes near the town on its western side. It is mentioned by Bede, who spells it Stanford, as the place where Hengist first routed the Picts. It subsequently became a stronghold of the Danes, who rebuilt the castle, and made it one of their Fif Burgas, or Five Borough towns, and retained possession of it till 1041. In the Domesday Survey it is described as a place of considerable importance, having 141 mansions. Near it, on the E., was situated St. Leonard's Benedictine Priory, founded about 658, by Wilfrid, Bishop of York. About the reign of Henry III. a Carmelite monastery was founded here, and visited at various periods by Edward I., II., and III.; the outer gateway, which still exists, bears the arms of the last-named monarch. Colleges or schools were supported by different monasteries in the town and neighbourhood. Brasenose College owed its origin to a secession from Oxford in 1333. The castle was demolished in the reign of Richard II. It was frequently visited by succeeding sovereigns, and Cecil, in 1566, here entertained Queen Elizabeth at the Blackfriary, which had now become the property of his family, together with the manor or honours of Burleigh House, about 1½ mile S. of the town, and at present the seat of the Marquis of Exeter. The borough has occasionally returned two members to parliament from the reign of Edward I., but regularly since Henry VIII., the chief influence being with the Marquis of Exeter. On the passing of the Reform Act the bounds were enlarged so as to include, besides the old borough with its five parishes, the parish of St. Martin. The population in 1851 was 8,933, and in 1861, 8,047, showing a decrease in the decennial period of no less than 896, while the houses had increased from 1,616 to 1,636. It was first chartered by Edward IV., and under the New Act is divided into two wards, and governed by a mayor, who is also returning officer, 6 aldermen, and 18 councillors, with the style of "mayor, aldermen, and capital burgesses of the borough of Stamford." The extent of the borough is 1,950 acres, and the municipal revenue under £4,000. The town has recently undergone improvement, and is well paved, drained, and lighted, though formerly proverbial for its ill-paved ways and obstructed approaches. The houses are in general built of freestone and slated, and several blocks of building have been recently added, as Rock-terrace, Rutland-terrace, Red Lion-square, and Rock-house. The public buildings include a town-hall, rebuilt in 1766, with a room 52 feet by 25; borough gaol, and house of correction adjoining; the corn exchange, situated in Broad-street, erected in 1859; the literary and scientific institution, with a library and museum on St. Peter's-hill, the Stamford Hotel, with Corinthian portico and façade, built in 1810 at a cost of £43,000; the Stamford and Rutland Infirmary, theatre, assembly-rooms, savings-bank, three commercial branch banks, including the structure in Broad-street belonging to the Joint Stock Banking Company, public baths, and the union workhouse in St. Martin's parish on the borders of Welland, erected in 1837 at a cost of £5,000. A little way out of the town is the new cemetery on the Casterton Parva-road, and the race-course at Wittering, on which races are run in July, under the patronage of the Marquis of Exeter. It is the head of a Poor-law Union, comprising 13 parishes in Lincolnshire, 1 in Huntingdonshire, 14 in Northamptonshire, and 9 in Rutland; also the seat of New County Court and superintendent registry districts. A weekly newspaper, the Lincoln and Stamford Mercury, is published in the town every Friday. The Greys of Groby take the title of earl from this place. The custom of borough English prevails in the manor. The feast day is the 13th November, on which a bull used to be baited by the butchers. An extensive general trade is done chiefly in corn, coal, timber, malt, and all kinds of agricultural produce. There are no manufactures of any consequence, but an iron foundry, agricultural and machine works, terra-cotta works, several breweries, and corn-mills, a soap boiler's, and bone-crushing mill; also quarries of lias stone at Barnack and Ketton. There are five churches within the borough, viz., St. Mary's, the reputed mother church, a structure of the 13th century, with a tower and spire, and a peal of eight bells and a set of chimes; All Saints', an ancient structure with a lofty tower and octagonal crocketed spire; St. Michael's, a Gothic structure rebuilt in 1836; St. George's, an ancient structure, situated in St. George's-square; and St. John the Baptist, with a timbered roof and carved wooden screen; besides the extra-mural parish church of Stamford Baron, dedicated to St. Martin, and containing the mausoleum of the Burleigh family. There are places of worship for the Roman Catholics, Independents, Wesleyans, Reformed Methodists, and Particular Baptists. The Ratcliffe free grammar school, founded in 1548, has an income from endowment of about £600, besides a preference to three fellowships and five scholarships at Clare Hall, and a scholarship at St. John's College, Cambridge; also a blue-coat school, supported partly by subscription and partly by bequest; Wells's charity, or the petty school on St. Peter's hill, founded in 1604; besides National, infant, and Sunday schools; W. Browne's hospital, founded in 1493 for a warden, confrater, or chaplain and ten brethren, two nurses, and has an income of about £3,000; there are besides amongst the numerous minor charities several almshouses for the aged poor with small endowments. Among the antiquities are remains of St. Wilfred's Priory, originally founded in the 7th century, but rebuilt by Bishop Carileph; the W. gate of Henry III.'s White Friary at the Stamford and Rutland Infirmary; the postern gate of Henry's Grey Friary; and a curious gateway of the 13th century on the S. side of St. Paul-street, supposed to be University or Brasenose gateway. There were besides several other religious houses, but all traces of these are now lost. Market days are Monday and Friday. There are numerous cattle fairs for fat stock, the principal being on 4th January, 11th February, 4th and 11th March, 4th April, 6th May, 3rd June, 5th August, 6th September, 4th October, 8th November, and 6th December.

STAMFORD-BARON, or ST. MARTIN, a par. in the lib. of Nassaburgh, co. Northampton, half a mile S.E. of Stamford in Lincolnshire, within which borough it is included. It is a station on the Midland Counties railway. The parish is situated on the bank of the navigable river Welland, here crossed by a bridge of five arches connecting the cos. of Lincoln and Northampton. It includes, besides the large vil. of its own name, which may be considered a suburb of Stamford, the hmlt. of Walthorpe. It appears to have been a place of considerable importance in the Saxon times, having been walled round by Edward the Elder, and made a mint town by Athelstane. It subsequently became a barony to Peterborough Abbey, and in the reign of Henry II. Abbot William de Waterville founded a nunnery as a cell to Peterborough, which at one period had 40 nuns, but at the Dissolution possessed a revenue of only £72 18*s.* 10*d.* The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £215. The church of St. Martin, which stands in the High-street, was built in the 15th century by Bishop Russel, of Lincoln, and contains monuments to the Cecil family, including the great Lord Treasurer Burleigh, whose ancient mansion, called Burleigh House, is now the seat of the Marquis of Exeter. In the churchyard is the grave of Daniel Lambert, who died in 1809, at the age of 39, when he measured 9 feet 4 inches in girth, and 3 feet 1 inch round the leg, and weighed 739 lbs. The charities produce about £510 per annum, of which £240 belong to the hospital founded in 1597 by Lord Burleigh for a warden and 12 poor brethren, and £234 to Fryer's almshouses, founded in 1722, for six poor widows. There are also two charity schools founded by Dorothy, Countess of Exeter, in 1596, one for the education of ten poor girls, and the other for a like number of boys. The poor-house for the Stamford union is situated in this parish.

STAMFORD BRIDGE, EAST AND WEST, tnshps. in the par. of Catton, East Riding co. York, 8 miles N.E. of York. Wharton's school is situated here.

STAMFORDHAM, a par. in the N.E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 10 miles N.E. of Hexham, and 12 N.W. of Newcastle. The par., which is extensive, comprises the chplry. of Matfen, besides 14 tnshps. The substratum abounds with coal and limestone, which are partially worked. The village is considerable, and was formerly a market town under a charter granted to the Swinburnes in 1399. The market has long been discontinued, but the market cross, erected by Sir John Swinburne in 1735, is still in good preservation. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £520, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The parish church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, containing effigies of the Fenwicks of Fen Tower. There are also a chapel-of-ease at Ryall, and a district church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, at Matfen. A free school was founded in 1663, by Sir T. Widdrington, who endowed it with 76 acres of land, now producing £200 per annum. The charities consist of a rent-charge of £12, bequeathed by Henry Paston, in 1698, to be annually distributed amongst the poor. Fairs are held on the second Thursday in April and 14th August, chiefly for cattle and pigs, also statute fairs on the Thursday before Old May Day and the last Thursday in February.

STAMFORD HILL, an ecclesiastical district in the par. of Hackney, lower div. of Ossulstone hund., co. Middlesex, 3½ miles N.E. of St. Paul's. It is situated on the line of the ancient Ermine Street, near the Cambridge section of the Great Eastern railway, and forms part of the borough of the Tower Hamlets. The village, now a rising suburb of the metropolis, is beyond Abney Park Cemetery, overlooking the valley of the river Lea. It had a population in 1861 of 5,483. The New Asylum for Infant Orphans was founded in 1844. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of London, val. £207, in the patron. of the Rector of Hackney. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas, which stands in the road to Hackney, was built in 1850, from designs by Mr. L. Vulliamy, at a cost of £8,700. See HACKNEY.

STAMULLIN, a par. in the bar. of Upper Duleek, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles S.E. of Duleek, containing Gormanstown. Drogheda is its post town. The surface lies on the E. coast, and consists mostly of profitable soil. There is some bog, and limestone is quarried. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Julianstown £363. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, two public schools, and a dispensary. Gormanstown is the seat of Viscount Gormanstown.

STANAGE, a lordship in the par. of Brampton, hund. of Knighton, co. Radnor, 2 miles E. of Knighton, near the river Teme.

STANBOROUGH, a hund. in the co. of Devon, contains the pars. of East Allington, West Allington, South Brent, Buckfastleigh, Churchstow, Dartington, Dean Prior, Diptford, Holne, North Huish, South Huish, Kingsbridge, Malborough, South Milton, Moreleigh, Rattery, Thurlestone, Woodleigh, and part of Loddiswell, comprising an area of 61,870 acres.

STANBRIDGE, a tythg. in the lib. of Romsey, co. Hants, near Romsey.

STANBRIDGE, a par. in the hund. of Badbury, East Shaston div. of co. Dorset. See HINTON PARVA.

STANBRIDGE, a chplry. in the par. of Leighton-Buzzard, hund. of Manshead, co. Bedford, 4 miles N.W. of Dunstable, its post town, and 3¼ S.E. of Leighton-Buzzard. At Stanbridgeford is a station on the Leighton and Dunstable branch of the London and North-Western railway. The village, which is small, is chiefly agricultural. , A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the straw plait manufacture. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £100, in the patron. of the Vicar of Leighton-Buzzard. The church is dedicated to St. James. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There are two Sunday schools. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship.

STANBURY, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Haworth, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Keighley, on a branch of the river Aire, near Stanbury Moor.

STANCILL-WITH-WELLINGLEY AND WILSICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Tickhill, S. div. of Strafforth wap., West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Tickhill.

STANCOMBE, a hmlt. in the par. of Litton Cheney, co. Dorset, 5 miles E. of Bridport.

STAND, or WHITEFIELD, a chplry. in the tnshp. of Pilkington, and par. of Prestwich, co. Lancaster, 5½ miles N. of Manchester, its post town, and 1½ mile S.E. of Radcliffe railway station. The village is situated on the Bury and Manchester turnpike road. The soil is of a sandy character, with a subsoil of sand and gravel. It contains numerous villa residences. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £270. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a lofty tower, with a clock and eight bells. There is a stained E. window. The church was erected in 1826, at a cost of £15,000. There is also a New Jerusalem church, with a day and Sunday school adjoining. There are National and Sunday schools. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Unitarians have chapels. The Dales, Park Hill, Stand House, and Stand Hall are the principal residences.

STANDARD HILL, an ext. par. place in the borough and co. of Nottingham, near the Nottingham Infirmary. Here Charles I. raised his standard against the parliament in 1642.

STAND-BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Sandall Magna, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S. of Wakefield.

STANDERWICK, a par. in the hund. of Frome, co. Somerset, 4 miles N.E. of Frome. Beckington is its post town. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The par. includes Old Ford. The land is chiefly in pasture. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Beckington, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells. Mrs. Edgell, of Standerwick Court, is lady of the manor and principal landowner. There are remains of an ancient encampment.

STANDFORD, a par. in the hund. of Stouting, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 4 miles N.W. of Hythe, its post town, and near the Westenhanger station on the South-Eastern railway. It is a small agricultural village, situated on the ancient Stane Street, which here crosses a brook, from which the village derives its name. In the vicinity are remains of the mansion of Westenhanger, in which tradition asserts that Fair Rosamond resided previously to her removal to Woodstock. The soil consists of a rich loam. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was rebuilt, with the exception of its chancel, in 1846. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There are a National and infant schools. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. J. Fitzpatrick, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STANDGROUND, a par. in the hund. of Norman Cross, co. Huntingdon, 1¼ mile S. of Peterborough, its post town, and 5 miles from Whittlesey. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the Ely railway and the river Nen. The par. includes the chplry. of Farcet. At Horsey Grange are traces of a stronghold. The soil is rich and productive. The living is a vic.,* with the cur. of Farcet annexed, in the dioc. of Ely, val. £1,299, in the patron. of Emanuel College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure with a lofty spired tower. There is a National school for both sexes, and a Sunday-school. The Baptists have a place of worship. W. Laurence, Esq., of Fletton Tower, is lord of the manor.

STANDHILL, a lib. in the hund. of Pirton, co. Oxford, 4 miles N.W. of Watlington, and 3 S.W. of Tetsworth.

STANDISH, a par. in the upper div. of Whitstone hund., co. Gloucester, 4 miles N.W. of Stroud, and three-quarters of a mile from Haresfield railway station. Stonehouse is its post town. The Great Western and Midland railways here form a junction. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in a woollen mill. The soil is a mixture of loam, clay, and sand, with a subsoil of blue lias and oolite. On one of the spurs of the Cotswold hills in this parish is a camp of British origin, but afterwards occupied by the Romans; also a beacon. The living is a vic.,* with that of Hardwick consolidated, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £527, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has a spired tower containing five bells. There are two parochial schools for both sexes. Lord Sherborne is lord of the manor.

STANDISH, a par. in the hund. of Leyland, co. Lancaster, 3 miles N. of Wigan, its post town, and 14 S. of Preston. The station on the London and North-Western railway is three-quarters of a mile from the village. The village is situated on the old road to Preston. The par., which contained a population in 1861 of 10,410, includes the tnshps. of Adlington, Coppull, Anderton, Charnock Heath, Charnock Richard, Duxbury, Shevington, Standish-with-Langtree, Welsh Whittle, and Worthington. There are extensive collieries, a paper mill, and a cotton mill, which together afford employment to a large number of hands. Standish has belonged to the Standish family from near the period of the Conquest. In the vicinity Roman coins have been found. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £1,874. The church, dedicated to St. Wilfred, has a spire of the 15th century containing six bells, it was rebuilt in 1584 by the Rev. R. Moody. The register dates from 1558. In addition to the parish church are the following district churches, viz., at Addington, Coppull and Charnock Richard, the livings of which are perpet. curs. varying in val.

from £150 to £120. There is an endowed grammar school, with an income of about £100, also girls' school, with about £50, founded by Mrs. Mary Smalley. There are National and Sunday schools. The Wesleyans and Roman Catholics have each a place of worship. Standish Hall is the principal residence. C. Standish, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Fairs are held on the 29th June and 22nd November.

STANDLAKE, a par. in the hund. of Bampton, co. Oxford, 6 miles S.W. of Witney, its post town, and 5 from Bampton. The village, which is extensive, is situated at the confluence of the rivers Windrush and Thames. The par. includes the hmlt. of Brittenton. The land is chiefly arable, with a small tract of common, and about 300 acres of meadow and pasture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £373, in the patron. of Magdalen College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is an ancient cruciform structure, with a tower and five bells. The parochial charities produce about £91 per annum, of which £9 go to a school. There is a free school for both sexes. The Baptists have a place of worship. The manor was once held by the Greys, De la Poles, and other families of distinction. W. Strickland, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STANDLINCH, a par. in the hund. of Downton, co. Wilts, 5 miles S.E. of Salisbury. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated on the river Avon, and is wholly agricultural. Trafalgar House, the principal residence, is in a well-wooded park. It was purchased by the crown trustees to be conferred on the brother of Lord Nelson in 1805.

STANDON, a par. in the hund. of Braughin, co. Herts, 6 miles N.E. of Ware, its post town, and 7 W. of Bishop-Stortford. It is a station on the Buntingford branch of the Great Eastern railway. The village, which is extensive, is situated on the river Rib, over which a bridge has recently been constructed. The par. contains the hmlts. of Collier's End, St. Edmund's College, High Cross, Puckeridge, and Wadesmill. The village was formerly a market town, under the abbots of Croyland, the Clares, D'Amorys, Mortimers, Sadleirs, and Astons. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture, and in the manufacture of paper. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £320. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a tower surmounted by a spire and containing six bells. The interior contains four brasses bearing date from 1412, also tombs and effigies of the Astons, Sadleirs, and other families. There is also a district church at High Cross, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £150. The parochial charities produce about £187 per annum, of which £55 go to Fysher's school. There are National and Sunday schools. The Roman Catholic College of St. Edmund is situated about a mile W. of the village. The Duke of Wellington is lord of the manor.

STANDON, a par. in the N. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford, 4½ miles N.W. of Eccleshall, its post town, and 5 N.W. of Stone. It is a station on the London and North-Western railway. The village, which is small, is situated on the Mees Brook, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the tnshp. of Bowers. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £590. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was rebuilt, with the exception of the tower, on the site of the old one in 1846. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a school for both sexes, principally supported by the rector. T. Salt, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STANDON MASSEY. See STONDON MASSEY, co. Essex.

STANE, a vil. in the par. of Cambusnethan, co. Lanark, Scotland, 7 miles S.E. of Airdrie.

STANE, or STANES, a hmlt. in the par. of Mablethorpe St. Mary, co. Lincoln, 6 miles N. of Alford. It was formerly a separate parish.

STANESGATE, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. of Steeple, co. Essex, 5 miles S.E. of Maldon, its post town. It is situated on the river Blackwater, and had a Cluniac priory cell to Lewes Abbey. The living is a vic., annexed to that of Steeple, in the dioc. of Rochester.

STANFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Launditch, co. Norfolk, 3 miles N.E. of Litcham, its post town, and 3½ N.W. of North Elmham railway station. The village, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £298. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. Stanfield Hall is an old building, formerly held by J. Jermy, who, with his son, was murdered by his tenant Rush, of Potash Farm, in 1849.

STANFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Southill, hund. of Wixamtree, co. Bedford, 2 miles N.E. of Shefford, on the river Ivel.

STANFORD, a par. in the hund. of Grimshoe, co. Norfolk, 7 miles N.E. of Brandon, its post town, and 9 S. of Swaffham. The village, which is small, is situated on the Wissey, a branch of the river Stoke, and near the ancient Pedder Way. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. There is a rabbit warren of near 600 acres. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £80, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has recently been restored and enlarged. The register dates from 1824.

STANFORD, a par. in the hund. of Guilsborough, co. Northampton, 5 miles S.E. of Lutterworth, its post town, and 3 S.W. of Welford. It is a station on the Rugby and Stamford branch of the London and North-Western railway. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Avon and the Leicester border, near the Union canal. It formerly belonged to Selby Abbey. The Pytchley hounds meet in this parish. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £85. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has a tower containing four bells. The interior contains brasses of the Cave family, bearing date from 1558. The Baroness de Braye is lady of the manor.

STANFORD-BISHOP, a par. in the hund. of Broxash, co. Hereford, 3 miles S.E. of Bromyard, its post town, and 10 from Ledbury. The village, which is small, is situated on the turnpike road from Bromyard to Malvern, near the river Frome, and the Roman way from Kenchester to Winchester. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is of a clayey and loamy description, upon a subsoil of limestone rock. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £65, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient stone structure with a square tower containing three bells. The parochial charities produce about £1 10*s.* per annum. There is a free school for both sexes, also a school supported by voluntary contributions.

STANFORD-DINGLEY, a par. in the hund. of Faircross, co. Berks, 10 miles N.W. of Reading, its post town, and 8 N.E. of Newbury. The village, which is small, is situated on a branch of the river Thames, and is chiefly agricultural. There is a large tannery in the village. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £257. The church is dedicated to St. Dennis. The interior contains a brass of Margaret Dyneley, bearing date 1444. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a school supported by the rector. W. H. H. Hartley, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STANFORD-IN-THE-VALE, a par. in the hunds. of Ock and Ganfield, co. Berks, 4 miles S.E. of Faringdon, its post town, and 2 from the Faringdon-road station, on the Great Western railway. The village is situated in the vale of White Horse, on the river Ock, and is chiefly agricultural. Stanford includes the tythg. of Goosey-Green, and was formerly a market town. Stone of inferior quality is quarried, and is chiefly used in repairing the roads. The living is a vic.,* with the cur. of Goosey annexed, in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £337, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster. The church, dedicated to St. Dennis, was erected about 1280. It was partially restored in 1851.

The parochial charities produce about £48 per annum, of which £7 go to a school. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents have a chapel. Pryse Pryse Loveden, Esq., M.P., of Buscot Park, is lord of the manor.

STANFORD-LE-HOPE, a par. in the hund. of Barstable, co. Essex, 16 miles S.E. of Romford, its post town, and 3 E. of Orsett. It is a station on the Tilbury and Southend railway. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated near Hope Reach, in the Thames. A large portion of the land is marshy. The Essex hounds meet in this parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £840. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is an ancient structure with a tower and five bells. The parochial charities produce about £55 per annum, of which £38 go to Davison's school. A parochial school was erected in 1853.

STANFORD-ON-TEAME, a par. in the upper div. of Doddingtree hund., co. Worcester, 13 miles N.E. of Worcester, its post town, and 6 N.W. of Martley. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Teame, and is chiefly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £260. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower and four bells. It was rebuilt in 1768. Stanford Court is a manor situated in an extensive park, containing the Stone House Hermitage.

STANFORD-REGIS, a tnshp. in the par. of Bishop's-Frome, hund. of Radlow, co. Hereford, 3 miles S.E. of Bromyard. Here is a petrifying spring.

STANFORD RIVERS, a par. in the hund. of Ongar, co. Essex, 9 miles N. of Romford, its post town, and 2 S.W. of Chipping-Ongar. This village, which is considerable, and chiefly agricultural, derives its name from a stone ford over the river Roding, and its adjunct from the family of Rivers, to whom the manor once belonged. The Ongar Union poorhouse is situated in this parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £1,007, in the patron. of the crown, in right of the Duchy of Lancaster. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice, with a tower surmounted by a spire and containing two bells. The interior contains three brasses bearing date from 1492, and the chancel has a stained window. The register dates from 1558. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents have a place of worship.

STANFORD-UPON-SOAR, a par. in the S. div. of Rushcliffe wap, co. Nottingham, 1 mile N.E. of Loughborough, its post town and railway station, and 13 miles S. of Nottingham. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Soar, near the Midland Counties railway and the borders of Leicestershire. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. This parish was once a Roman station. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £435. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, or St. Luke, is an ancient structure, with a tower and three bells. It contains stained windows and a brass of a priest bearing date 1400. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. Stanford Park is the principal residence. Rev. S. P. Dashwood is lord of the manor.

STANFREE, a hmlt. in the par. of Bolsover, co. Derby, 6 miles N.E. of Chesterfield.

STANGOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Skelton, E. div. of Langbaurgh lib., North Riding co. York, 4 miles E. of Guisborough.

STANHOE, a par. in the hund. of Smithdon, co. Norfolk, 10 miles from Rougham, its post town, and 2 E. of Docking. It is a station on the West Norfolk Junction branch of the Great Eastern railway. The village, which is small, is chiefly agricultural. The soil is productive, with a subsoil of chalk and marl. There is a savings-bank. This living is a rect., with the vic.* of Barwick annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. respectively £480 and £30. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has recently been restored. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum, which go to a school. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. Miss S. M. Hoste, of Barwick House, is lady of the manor.

STANHOPE, a par. and market town in the N.W. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 5½ miles N.W. of Wolsingham and 17 from Bishop Auckland. It is a station on the Wear Valley branch of the North-Eastern railway. It is situated on the northern bank of the river Wear, and near the confluence of the Stanhope burn with the river Wear. The parish is rugged and mountainous, except near the river-banks, but is rich in mineral wealth, especially lead ore. It stretches from Wolsingham on the E. to the borders of Cumberland on the W., being one of the most extensive parishes in the co. of Durham, and is divided into the townships or quarters of Forest, Newlandside, Park, and Stanhope. It is a polling place for the county, and was formerly a market town. The town chiefly consists of one long street, and near the western extremity is Stanhope Hall, an ancient mansion regularly defended by a curtain. The water supply is from the public fountain in market-place. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the lead works on the banks of the Wear, belonging to the London company, and in agriculture. Petty sessions are held monthly. The river is crossed by a bridge. The living is a rect.,* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £1,650. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas the Apostle, has a low square tower. The register dates from 1608. In addition to the parish church are the district churches of Heathercleugh, St. John's, Rookhope, Eastgate, and Frosterley, the livings of which are perpet. curs., val. £400 each. The parochial charities produce about £204 per annum, of which £15 go to Hartwell's, £89 to Weardale, £21 to Westgate, and £10 to Boltsburn and Chapel schools. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. The park is 12 miles in circumference, and was formerly the Bishop of Durham's hunting-ground. It is memorable as being the place where Douglas retired before Edward III. in 1327. Market day is on Friday. Fairs are held on the Wednesday before Easter, on the second Friday in September, and on the 21st December.

STANHOPE-BURN, a feeder of the Tweed, co. Peebles, Scotland. On its bank is Stanhope House, the seat of Sir G. Montgomery, Bart.

STANHOPE QUARTER, a tnshp. in the par. of Stanhope, N.W. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham.

STANION, a par. in the hund. of Corby, co. Northampton, 4¾ miles S.E. of Rockingham, and 6 N.E. of Kettering. Thrapstone is its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the river Nen, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a cur., annexed to the vic. of Brigstock, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. There is a free school. The Earl of Cardigan is lord of the manor.

STANK, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Winton, par. of Sigston Kirby, North Riding co. York, 3 miles N. of Northallerton.

STANKS, a hmlt. in the par. of Barwick-in-Elmet, West Riding co. York, 6½ miles N.E. of Leeds.

STANKTHREAD, a fall of 20 feet of the river Eden, in the par. of Kirkby Stephen, co. Westmoreland.

STANLEY, a chplry. in the par. of Spondon, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 6 miles N.E. of Derby, its post town, and 4 W. of Ilkeston railway station. The village is small, and chiefly agricultural. Rope making is carried on. The living is a perpet. cur., annexed to the vic. of Spondon, in the dioc. of Lichfield. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. The charities produce about £1 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

STANLEY, a hmlt. in the district par. of St. Anne's, borough of Liverpool, co. Lancaster, 2 miles E. of Liverpool. It contains the cattle market.

STANLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Leek, N. div. of Totmonslow hund., co. Stafford, 4½ miles S.W. of Leek. It is situated near the Caldon canal. The manor anciently belonged to the Aldithleys, or Audleys, from whom it passed to Adam de Stanlegh, ancestor of the Stanleys.

STANLEY, a quoad sacra par. in the pars. of Aughtergaven and Redgorton, co. Perth, Scotland, 6 miles N. of Perth, and 9 S. of Dunkeld. It is a junction station on the Highland and Scottish North-Eastern railways. It is situated near Linn-of-Campsey fall, on the right bank of the river Tay. This village, which is considerable, was founded in 1784, and was named in honour of the daughter of James Stanley, Earl of Derby, who married a brother of one of the dukes of Athol. It chiefly owes its prosperity to the cotton manufacture which was established here at the end of the last century. The living is in the presb. of Perth, and in the patron. of the Stanley Company. The stipend of the minister is about £150. The church, which has a tower 85 feet in height, was erected in 1828, at an outlay of £4,000, defrayed by the Stanley Company. There is also a chapel belonging to the Free Church. The principal seat is Stanley House, formerly occupied by Lord Nairn. A short distance from this mansion are the ruins of Inchbervie.

STANLEY, or STANLEIGH WITH STUDLEY, a tythg. in the par. of Chippenham, co. Wilts, 2 miles E. of Chippenham. It contains ruins of a Cistercian priory, which was brought from Quarr (Isle of Wight) in 1154, by Henry II. At the Dissolution the revenue was valued at £177, and the site was then given to the Baytons.

STANLEY, KING'S, a par. in the lower div. of Whitstone hund., co. Gloucester, 1¼ mile S. of Stonehouse railway station. The village is situated on the Thames and Severn canal, and is included in the borough of Stroud. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of woollen cloths, introduced here in the time of Elizabeth. The soil is of a sandy nature, with a subsoil of clay. There are quarries of freestone and ragstone. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £312, in the patron. of Jesus College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. George. The parochial charities produce about £34 per annum, of which £6 go to a school. There is a National school for both sexes, also a British school. The Baptists have a chapel. Stanley Park is the principal residence. W. Leigh, Esq., and the trustees of the late Joseph King, are lords of the manor.

STANLEY, NORTH. See STAINLEY, co. York.

STANLEY-PONTLARGE, a par. in the lower div. of Kiftsgate hund., co. Gloucester, 2½ miles N.W. of Winchcomb, its post town, and 4 S.W. of Toddington. The parish, which is inconsiderable, is wholly agricultural. The surface is flat, and the soil a deep clay. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Toddington, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol. The Earl of Wemyss and March is lord of the manor.

STANLEY, ST. LEONARD'S. See LEONARD-STANLEY, co. Gloucester.

STANLEY WITH WRENTHORPE, a tnshp. in the ancient par. of Wakefield, lower div. of Agbrigg wap., West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of Wakefield, its post town, and 2½ from Normanton railway station. It is situated on the river Calder, and includes the hmlts. of Stanley, Lake Lock, Bottom Boat, Stanley Lane End, Lee Moor, Lofthouse Gate, Lingwell Gate, Wrenthorpe Eastmoor, and Newton Lane End. At Lingwell Gate a number of crucibles, moulds, and above 40 lb. weight of silver and copper coins were discovered in 1812, some of which are now in the British Museum. Near this place was a Roman station, as well as at Lake Lock. The battle between Robin Hood and the Pindar of Wakefield was fought in this township. On its southern extremity were the hunting-grounds of the earls of Warren, now converted into farms, which retain the names of Park Lodge, Old Park, and New Park. The extensive collieries in this township are worked by Messrs. Robert Hudson & Co. and Messrs. J. & J. Charlesworth, who employ upwards of 500 persons. In Ferry Lane and at Field Head are the reservoirs and engines of the Wakefield waterworks, erected in 1839, but largely extended in 1866. The West Riding pauper lunatic asylum is also in this township. Its first buildings were erected in 1818, at a cost of £100,000, and additions have been since made, so as to enable it to receive 1,200 patients. It is one of the largest and best conducted asylums in the country. The Aire and Calder Navigation Company have constructed a commodious canal, which is carried over the Calder by an aqueduct which cost £40,000. The Lancashire and Yorkshire railway also crosses the Calder near Broad Reach by a viaduct. At Wrenthorpe an extensive pottery once existed. The new line of railway from Outwood to Methley crosses this township, and has a station for passengers at Lake Lock. The population in 1851 was 7,257. There are three ecclesiastical districts, St. Andrew's, Wakefield, St. Peter's, Stanley, and St. Mary Magdalene, Outwood. The charities are two almshouses for widows, and Taylor's gift for putting out apprentices, and for the aged and decrepid. There are National schools at Eastmoor, Lake Lock, Bottom Boat, and Outwood. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Wesleyan Reformers have chapels. The principal residences are Hatfield Hall, Stanley Hall, Stanley Lodge, Clark Hall, Stoke House, Field Head, Moor House, Outwood Hall, Springfield. S. W. L. Fox, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STANLOW, an ext. par. place in the higher div. of Wirrall hund., co. Chester, 4 miles E. of Sutton, and 5 W. of Frodsham. It is situated on the river Mersey, and consists of a few cottages. In 1178 a Cistercian abbey was founded by J. Lacy at Stanlow Point, which was made a cell to Whalley in 1296, and of which some traces still remain.

STANLOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Worfield, higher div. of Wirrall hund., co. Salop, 6 miles N.E. of Bridgnorth.

STANMER, a par. in the hund. of Ringmer, rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex, 4 miles from Lewes, its post town, and 1 mile from the Falmer station, on the Brighton and Lewes railway. The par., which is inconsiderable, is situated near the South Coast railway and the Roman way over the Stanmer Downs. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £141. The church was rebuilt in 1839, at the expense of the Earl of Chichester. Stanmer House is a square building, erected in 1724 by the Pelhams. The Earl of Chichester is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

STANMORE, a tythg. in the par. of Beedon, co. Berks, 2 miles S.W. of East Ilsley.

STANMORE, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Gore, co. Middlesex, 13 miles N.W. of St. Paul's, London, and 1¼ mile from Edgware. It is situated on the road to Watford, 2½ miles from the line of the London and North-Western railway, and includes the district of Stanmore Marsh. Half a mile to the E. of Stanmore Hall lies Brockley Hill, the site of the Roman station Sulloniacæ. At the time of the Domesday survey the manor was held by the Earl of Moreton; in the 13th century it passed to St. Alban's Abbey, and subsequently to the priory of St. Bartholomew, Smithfield. At a later date it belonged to Sir Peter Gambo, a Spaniard, the Lake, Brydges, and Drummond families, and is at present vested in J. Kelk, Esq., M.P., the possessor of the estate and mansion of Bentley Priory, situated on the southern slope of the hill: for rather more than a year it was the residence of the late Queen Adelaide, who died there on the 2nd December, 1849. It was to Stanmore that George IV., then Prince Regent, went in great pomp to meet Louis XVIII., then on his way from his retreat at Hartwell to ascend the French throne, after the occupation of Paris by the Allies. The village which extends for nearly a mile, is built on the slope of the hill, commanding a prospect over the vale of the Thames to the S., with the Surrey hills in the background, and towards the N. the vale of Herts. It was lighted with gas in 1859, and contains a population of 1,450. The neighbourhood has many seats and mansions: Stanmore Park, once the seat of Lord Castlereagh, with Stanmore Hall, the Warren House, and the Grove. From the great elevation of the common the ground floors of the houses are said to be on a level with the upper line of the tower of Harrow Church. Forbes, author of "Oriental Memoirs," was a resident in the village; and Dr. Parr, at one period of his life, kept a small school at Stanmore Hill. The living, which is a rect. in the dioc. of London, val. £440, was once held by Archbishop Boyle. The old church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, was built by Sir John Wolstanholme in 1632, under the direction of Archbishop Laud. The fabric, now an ivy-covered ruin, once contained monuments to the founder, his father, and his sons, to Mr. Dalton, and other worthies. The remains of Daniel Draper, the husband of Sterne's Eliza, and of Raphael West, son of B. West, President of the Royal Academy, lie in this churchyard. The new church was built in 1850, at a cost of £5,000, after designs by H. Clutton, is 105½ feet long, in the Pointed style, with a tower 76 feet high, and an E. window of stained glass to the memory of the late Queen Adelaide. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There are National schools for children of both sexes, and an infant school. In 1835 French and Spanish coins, in value about £4,000, were discovered by some workmen in a field belonging to the rector. They were claimed by three different parties,—the crown, the lord of the manor, and the rector. Whilst the dispute was settling the villagers were not idle, but with pick and spade laid bare the treasure, and helped themselves to the last pieces. The estate which was given to the Earl of Moreton by the Conqueror, his half brother, was wrested from a succeeding earl by Henry I.

STANMORE, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Gore, co. Middlesex, 1 mile S.E. of Great Stanmore, and half a mile N.W. of Edgware. At the time of the Domesday survey it was held by Roger de Rames, or Reymes, and came with Great Stanmore to Smithfield Priory. At the Dissolution it was given by the name of Canons to the Losses, whose old seat has been converted into the "Chandos Arms" inn. It afterwards became the property of the Lakes, and subsequently of Brydges, Duke of Chandos, whose building taste has been immortalised by Pope. The mansion of Canons, in this parish, which cost the Duke of Chandos £250,000, was taken down in 1747, was rebuilt by the Hallets, occupied by Kelly the owner of Eclipse, who is buried in the park, and now belongs to the Marquis of Abercorn. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of London, val. £405. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, was rebuilt in 1715, principally at the cost of the then Duke of Chandos, to whom it is also indebted for its interior decorations. The ceiling and walls were painted by Laguerre, and on either side of the altar are pictures of the Nativity and a dead Christ by Belluchi. On the N. side of the chancel is the family vault of Brydges, Duke of Chandos, with a monument to James, the first duke; and in the churchyard is the tomb of Coventry, author of "Pompey the Little," who figures in Madame D'Arblay's Memoirs. At the opening of the church, in 1720, Handel's "Esther," which is said to have been written especially for the occasion, was performed for the first time. The parochial charities produce about £111 per annum, of which £90 belong to Lake's school and almshouses, the latter being for seven poor persons.

STANNER PEAKS, a ridge of trap rocks in the co. of Radnor, celebrated for their wild flowers, and called the Devil's Garden.

STANNER POINT, a headland on the N. side and at the mouth of the river Ribble, co. Lancaster.

STANNEY, GREAT, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Higher Wirrall, co. Chester, 5 miles N. of Chester. It is situated on the Mersey and Chester canal, and formerly belonged to Stanlow Priory.

STANNEY, LITTLE, a tnshp. in the hund. of Higher Wirrall, co. Chester, 1 mile S.W. of Great Stanney, and 5½ miles N. of Chester.

STANNINGFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Thedwestry, co. Suffolk, 5 miles S.E. of Bury St. Edmund's, its post town. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £308. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. The register dates from 1563. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes. The Roman Catholics have a chapel. Mrs. Inchbald, the dramatic writer and novelist, was born in this parish in 1756. Sir T. R. Gage, Bart., is lord of the manor.

STANNINGHALL, a hmlt., formerly a par., in the hund. of Taverham, co. Norfolk, 6 miles N.E. of Norwich. It is in conjunction with Horstead. The living is a discharged rect., annexed to that of Frettenham, in the dioc. of Norwich. There is no church.

STANNINGLEY, a hmlt. partly in the par. of Leeds and partly in the tnshps. of Calverley and Pudsey, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.W. of Leeds, its post town. The Great Northern and Leeds, Bradford, and Halifax Junction railways have each a station here. It is a populous district, situated on the road from Bradford to Leeds, of which last it may be considered a suburb. The village consists chiefly of one long street, overlooking the vale of Airedale. The houses and fences are generally built of stone from the neighbouring quarries. The inhabitants are employed in the worsted and woollen mills, and in the iron works and stone quarries. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas, was erected in 1841, at a cost of £2,000.

STANNINGTON, a par. in the W. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 5 miles S.E. of Morpeth, its post town, and 2 W. of Netherton. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the river Blyth, at the mouth of which is the seaport of that name. The par. is divided into Blagdon, Bellasis, Clifton, Duddo, and Plessey. The manor formerly belonged to Roger de Merlai, the Greystokes, Somervilles, &c. The soil consists of clay, sand, and loam, with a subsoil of sandstone and clay. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the coal mines, flax mills, sail and floor-cloth manufactories. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £355, in the patron. of the Bishop of Chester. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice with a tower and one bell. The register dates from 1658. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum. There is an endowed Church of England school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. There is a reformatory school for boys, situated near Clifton, for the counties of Durham and Northumberland. Blagdon Hall is the principal residence. The Earl of Carlisle is lord of the manor.

STANNINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Ecclesfield, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Sheffield.

STANSFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Risbridge, co. Suffolk, 5½ miles E. of Clare, its post town. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Assington Green. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £508, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a tower and five bells. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum. The Independents have a chapel, with day and Sunday schools adjoining.

STANSFIELD, a tnshp. in the chplry. of Heptonstall, par. of Halifax, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York. It is an extensive and populous township, bounded on the N. and N.W. by the county of Lancaster, on the E. by the rivulet Coldenbrook, and on the S. by the river Calder. It comprises near 6,000 acres, chiefly the property of the Earl of Scarborough, who is lord of the manor, and in 1861 had a population of 8,174, many of whom are employed in the cotton, woollen, worsted, and silk manufactures, besides a considerable number in agriculture. There is no village of the name properly so called, but numerous scattered hamlets and detached houses, included in the ecclesiastical district of Crosstone, and the adjoining town of Todmorden, of which a considerable portion is within this township.

STANSHOPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Allstonefield, N. div. of Totmonslow hund., co. Stafford, 10 miles N.E. of Cheadle.

STANSTEAD, a par. in the hund. of Wrotham, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 2 miles N. of Wrotham, its post town, 6 N.E. of Sevenoaks, and 4 S. of Meopham railway station. The village is small, and wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Fairseat. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val.

£400, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower and two bells; it was restored in 1855. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a parochial school.

STANSTEAD, a par. in the hund. of Babergh, co. Suffolk, 6½ miles N.W. of Sudbury, its post town, and 10 S. of Bury St. Edmund's. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £247. The church is dedicated to St. James. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum. E. S. Bence, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STANSTEAD ABBOTS, a par. in the hund. of Braughin, co. Herts, 4 miles from Ware, its post town, and 2½ N.E. of Hoddesdon. It is situated betwixt the navigable rivers Lea and Stort, and is traversed by the Roman way Ermine Street. The village, which is still considerable, was a burgh at the time of Domesday survey, and belonged to Waltham Abbey, from which it afterwards came to the Baeshes, &c. In this parish is a portion of the Rye House, built by Andrew Ogard in the reign of Henry VI., and subsequently the scene of the supposed plot exposed by Titus Oates in the reign of Charles II. The portion now remaining consists of a gate-house of brick, with a stone doorway, now converted into a workhouse. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £134. The church, dedicated to St. James, was rebuilt in 1578 by Ralph Baesh, Esq., of whom it contains a brass. The parochial charities produce about £120, of which £77 go to E. Baesh's free grammar school and almshouses. There is a National school.

STANSTED MOUNTFITCHET, a par. in the hunds. of Uttlesford and Clavering, co. Essex, 2½ miles N.E. of Bishop Stortford, its post town. It is a station on the Cambridge section of the Great Eastern railway. The village, which is large, is situated on the river Stort, and on the Roman way to Chesterford. The par. contains the hmlt. of Bentfield End, and formerly had the baronial castle of Robert Gernon, surnamed Montfitchet, by whom the priory of Thremhall was founded. There are but slight traces of the castle left, consisting of the mound of the keep, a short distance from the church. The village chiefly consists of two streets, forming part of the roads to Newmarket and Takely. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £251. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is an ancient structure with a tower, which formerly belonged to Thremhall Priory. The interior contains a font and several monuments of great antiquity. It was rebuilt in 1692, with the exception of the tower, and a portion of the chancel was restored in 1861. There is a parochial school for both sexes. The Society of Friends and the Independents have chapels, and the latter have also a school. There is a literary institute of recent formation. W. F. Maitland, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STANSTEAD ST. MARGARET, a par. in the hund. of Hertford, co. Herts, half a mile from Stanstead Abbots, and 4 miles from Ware, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated between the New River and the river Lea. The Puckeridge hounds meet in this parish. The village consists of a few scattered houses. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Rochester. There was formerly a college or chantry for a master and four secular priests, founded in 1315 by Sir W. de Goldington, but dissolved in 1431.

STANSTY, a tnshp. in the par. of Wrexham, hund. of Bromfield, co. Denbigh, near Wrexham.

STANSWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Fawley, co. Hants, 5 miles S.E. of Southampton.

STANTHORNE, a tnshp. in the par. of Davenham, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 2 miles N. of Middlewich. The village is small, and situated near the river Dane. The land is chiefly in pasture. The principal residence is Stanthorne Hall, standing within a short distance of the site of the old manor-house.

STANTON, a chplry. in the par. of Youlgreave, hund. of High Peake, co. Derby, 3 miles N. of Winster. The village is situated near the rivers Derwent and Wye, and belongs to the Duke of Rutland. The Stanton harriers are kennelled here. On Stanton Moor are many Druidical remains, logan stones, ancient British camps, barrows, &c. The principal residence is Stanton Hall, the old seat of the Thornhills and Foljambes. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, annexed to that of Youlgreave. The church was built in the beginning of the present century. There is a village school.

STANTON, a par. in the lower div. of Kiftsgate hund., co. Gloucester, 3½ miles from Broadway, its post town, and 4½ N.E. of Winchcomb. The village, which is small, is situated on the Cotswolds. The inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. The living is a rect.,* with the cur. of Snowshill annexed, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £377. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is an ancient stone structure, with a spired tower containing six bells. T. Wynniatt, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STANTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Long Horsley, W. div. of Morpeth ward, co. Northumberland, 3½ miles S.W. of Long Horsley, and 5¾ N.W. of Morpeth. It is a small agricultural village situated on the river Pont. There are collieries and limestone quarries in the vicinity. Near the village is Ruffie Law, from which there are commanding prospects.

STANTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Stanton-upon-Hine Heath, Whitchurch div. of North Bradford hund., co. Salop, 6 miles S.E. of Wem.

STANTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Ellastone, S. div. of Totmonslow hund., co. Stafford, 3½ miles N.W. of Ashbourne, its post town. The village is small, and situated on a branch of the river Dove. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the stone quarries, and in agriculture. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Ellastone, in the dioc. of Lichfield. Archbishop Sheldon, founder of the Sheldonian Theatre, Oxford, was born here in 1598, and died in 1677.

STANTON ALL SAINTS, a par. in the hund. of Blackbourn, co. Suffolk, 2½ miles N.E. of Ixworth. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the road from London to Norwich. Petty sessions are held weekly on Monday. The living is a rect.,* with that of St. John Baptist annexed, in the dioc. of Ely, val. £983. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a square tower. There is a place of worship for Wesleyans, also National schools.

STANTON AND NEWHALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Stapenhill, hund. of Repton, co. Derby, 3 miles S.E. of Burton-upon Trent, its post town, and 6 N.W. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries; there are also earthenware and brick works. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £100, in the patron. of trustees. The church, dedicated to St. John, has a square tower. There is a National school for both sexes, also an infant school. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

STANTON BURY, a par. in the hund. of Newport, co. Bucks, 3 miles S.W. of Newport-Pagnel, its post town, and 2 from Wolverton. It is situated in a valley on the river Ouse, and on the Grand Junction canal near Watling Street. The inhabitants are engaged in agriculture. The living is a vic.,* with that of New Bradwell annexed, in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £84. The church is dedicated to St. Peter, and has a Norman arch between the nave and chancel.

STANTON-BY-BRIDGE, a par. in the hund. of Repton, co. Derby, 6½ miles S.E. of Derby, its post town, and the same distance E. of Willington railway station. The village is small, is situated near Swarkestone-bridge over the river Trent, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £345. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone structure, with a turret and three bells. There is a Church school. Sir R. Burdell is lord of the manor.

STANTON-BY-DALE, a par. in the hund. of Morleston, co. Derby, 9 miles N.E. of Derby, its post town, and 2 N. of Ilkeston. It is a station on the Erewash Valley railway. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated near the Erewash and Nutbrook canals. Coal is found here. The Donnington hounds meet in this parish. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the iron works. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £326, in the patron. of trustees. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a tower and four bells. It contains an altar-piece and several monuments. The parochial charities produce about £106 per annum, part of which is the endowment to Middlemore's 6 almshouses. In the vicinity is a stone cross bearing date 1632. The Earl of Stanhope is lord of the manor.

STANTON CHURCH. See CHURCH STANTON, co. Devon.

STANTON-DREW, a par. in the hund. of Keynsham, co. Somerset, 7 miles S. of Bristol, and 1½ mile S.W. of Pensford. The par., which is extensive, is situated under Dundry beacon, on the river Chew, near Wansdyke. It contains the hmlt. of Belton or Belluton, which signifies, according to some antiquaries, "Baal town," or "the Town of the Sun." Near the centre of the parish are extensive Druidical remains, consisting of circles of large stones, most of them of magnesian limestone, and a few of red sandstone. Copper mines were formerly worked here, but are now disused. A portion of the land is in pasture. The living is a vic., with the cur. of Pensford annexed, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £236, in the patron. of the archdeacon of Bath. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient stone edifice. The interior contains a font of great antiquity, and in the N. aisle are monuments of the Coates, Foster, and Lyde families. The register dates from 1651. The parochial charities produce about £156 per annum, of which £148 belong to Jones's schools. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. Stanton Court and Belluton House are the principal residences. P. E. Coates, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STANTON, FEN. See FEN STANTON, co. Hunts.

STANTON-FITZWARREN, a par. in the hund. of Highworth, co. Wilts, 2 miles S.W. of Highworth, its post town, and 5 N. of Swindon. The village, which is small, is situated near the ancient Ryknield Street, on the road to Cirencester. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. Stone is quarried. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £174. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, has a square tower, with a clock and three bells. The interior contains a font of great antiquity. There is a school for both sexes.

STANTON-HARCOURT, a par. in the hund. of Wootton, co. Oxford, 5 miles S.E. of Witney, its post town, and 5 W. of Oxford. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated near the river Thames and the Windrush. The par. includes the hmlts. of Sutton and West End. This place was granted by Adeliza, second wife of Henry I., to her kinswoman Milicent, wife of Richard de Camville, whose daughter Isabel married Robert de Harcourt, from whom the village derived the adjunct to its name. The manor continued for above six centuries in the Harcourt family, who entertained Elizabeth, Queen of Bohemia, here in the reign of Charles I., and in the tower of the old manor-house Pope finished his 5th Book of Homer, during his stay at Cockthorpe in 1718. The ruins are now converted into a farmhouse. In this parish are a number of large stones, called the Devil's Coits; on the spot where they stand the Saxons routed the Britons in 614. The living is a vic., with the cur. of South Leigh annexed, in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £136, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing five bells. The interior contains effigies of the Harcourts, from Richard II.'s time, and 3 brasses; the earliest 1460. There are epitaphs on Robert Huntingdon, by Congreve, and on Dr. Friend, by Pope. The parochial charities produce about £34 per annum, of which £19 go to the school. There is a Roman Catholic chapel.

STANTON-LACY, a par. in the lower div. of Munslow hund., co. Salop, 3 miles N.W. of Ludlow, its post town, and 1 mile from the Bromfield railway station. The village is situated on the river Corve, and on the road from Ludlow to Much Wenlock. The par., which is extensive, contains the tnshps. of Downton with Hopton, Upper and Lower Hayton, Rock-with-Henley, and Wootton, and the hmlts. of East and West Stanton. The Ludlow Union poorhouse is situated in this parish. The soil is sand and clay, upon a subsoil of limestone. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £485. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing six bells. The interior has been restored. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, principally supported by the vicar. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. Downton Hall is the principal residence. The Earl of Craven and Sir W. R. Boughton, Bart., are lords of the manor.

STANTON, LONG, a par. in the hund. of Munslow, co. Salop, 7½ miles S.W. of Much Wenlock, its post town, and 10 W. of Bridgnorth. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Corve, and on the road from Skipton to Holdgate. The inhabitants are agricultural. The par. includes the tnshps. of Brocton and Patton. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £134, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure, with a turret and three bells. The parochial charities produce about 12*s.* per annum. There is a National school for both sexes at Brocton. The Rev. Thrusby Pelham is lord of the manor.

STANTON, LONG, a par. in the hund. of Northstow, co. Cambridge, 5 miles N.W. of Cambridge. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £250, in the patron. of Magdalen College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Michael.

STANTON, LONG, a par. in the hund. of Northstow, co. Cambridge, 6 miles N.W. of Cambridge. The village is small. The bishops of Ely anciently had a palace here, at which Queen Elizabeth was entertained in 1564, when she visited the University of Cambridge. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £155, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum.

STANTON-ON-THE-WOLDS, a par. in the N. div. of Rushcliffe wap., co. Nottingham, 8 miles S.E. of Nottingham, its post town, and 7 S.W. of Bingham. The village, which is small, is situated near the old Fosse Way, and consists chiefly of scattered dwellings. The soil is a stiff clay and sand. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £100. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum.

STANTON PRIOR, a par. in the hund. of Keynsham, co. Somerset, 9 miles E. of Bristol, its post town, and 6 S.W. of Bath. The parish, which is of small extent, adjoins that of Stanton Drew. The manor formerly belonged to Bath Priory. On an eminence called Stanton Bury is a camp, extending over 30 acres, and 180 yards in length on one side. It is situated at a little distance from the Wansdyke, and commands extensive views. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £182. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient structure.

STANTON ST. BERNARD, a par. in the hund. of Swanborough, co. Wilts, 6 miles N.E. of Devizes, and 8 S.W. of Marlborough. Pewsey is its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the Kennet and Avon canal, and is chiefly agricultural. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £222. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a square tower and two bells. It has recently been rebuilt. The register dates from 1568. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum. There is a National school. The Wesleyans have a chapel. N. Stephens, the Nonconformist, was born here, and died in 1677. The Earl of Pembroke is lord of the manor.

STANTON ST. GABRIEL, a par. chplry. in the hund. of Whitchurch-Canonicorum, Bridport div. of co. Dorset, 4 miles S.W. of Bridport, its post town, and 5 E. of Lyme. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated on the shore of the English Channel. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Whitchurch-Canonicorum, in the dioc. of Sarum. The chapel was erected in 1841.

STANTON ST. JOHN, a par. in the hund. of Bullingdon, co. Oxford, 4½ miles N.E. of Oxford, its post town. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the Roman way to Bicester, and is chiefly agricultural. Stanton belonged to the family of St. John, in the reign of Edward III., and from whom it takes its name. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £287, in the patron. of New College, Oxford. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. John. The parochial charities produce about £91 per annum, of which £47 go to Lady Holford's school.

STANTON, ST. JOHN BAPTIST, a par. in the hund. of Blackbourn, co. Suffolk, 3 miles N.E. of Ixworth, its post town, and 9 miles from Bury St. Edmund's. The village, which is small, is chiefly agricultural. The living is a rect., annexed to that of Stanton All Saints, in the dioc. of Ely, joint val. £983. The church is dedicated to St. John. The parochial charities, belonging to this and the adjoining parish of All Saints, produce about £114 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, supported by the Rev. George Bidwell. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

STANTON ST. QUINTIN, or LOWER STANTON, a par. in the hund. of Malmesbury, co. Wilts, 4 miles N.W. of Chippenham, its post town and railway station, and 5 S.W. of Malmesbury. The village, which is small, is situated on Akeman Street, and is wholly agricultural. The Beaufort hounds meet in this parish. There are stone quarries. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £312. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is an ancient cruciform structure with a Norman tower, and was once collegiate. There is a free school for both sexes, chiefly supported by the Earl of Radnor and the Rev. C. G. Cotes.

STANTON-STONEY, a par. in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 4 miles N.E. of Hinckley. The village, which is considerable, is on the road from Leicester to Hinckley, near the ancient Fosse Way and the river Soar. The inhabitants are engaged in agriculture and in stocking-weaving. There are some quarries of stone. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £350. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum.

STANTON-UNDER-BARDON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Thornton, hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 8 miles N.W. of Leicester. It is situated near the ancient Via Devana, and includes the hmlt. of Horsepool. There is a Wesleyan chapel.

STANTON-UPON-ARROW, a par. in the hunds. of Wigmore and Stretford, co. Hereford, 9 miles W. of Leominster, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Kington. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on the river Arrow. The soil is of a mixed nature, and the land partly in hop-grounds. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £220, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, was rebuilt in 1854. There is a parochial free school for both sexes. Stanton Park is the principal residence. James King, Esq., M.P., is lord of the manor.

STANTON-UPON-HINE HEATH, a par. in the Whitchurch div. of North Bradford hund., co. Salop, 9 miles N.E. of Shrewsbury, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Wem. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the river Roden. The par. contains the tnshps. of Booley, Harcourt, High Hutton, and Moston. The soil consists of a sandy loam, with a subsoil of sandstone, which is quarried for building purposes. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure with a tower containing five bells and a clock. The parochial charities produce about £19 per annum, of which £5 go to Baddiley's free school. Sir V. Corbet, Bart., is lord of the manor.

STANTON, UPPER, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Abergavenny, co. Monmouth, 4 miles N.E. of Abergavenny.

STANWARDINE-IN-THE-WOOD and STANWARDINE-IN-THE-FIELDS, tnshps. in the par. of Baschurch, co. Salop, 5 miles S.W. of Wem.

STANWAY, a par. in the Colchester div. of Lexden hund., co. Essex, 4 miles S.W. of Colchester, its post town, and 1 mile E. of the Marks Tey railway station, on the Great Eastern railway. The village is considerable, chiefly agricultural, and is situated on the river Roman, and on the Roman road Stone Way, from which it derives its name. The manor formerly belonged to Harold II. The Lexden Union poorhouse, situated in this parish, was built in 1837. The parish is nearly 9 miles in circumference, and forms part of a fertile and cultivated district. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £723, in the patron. of Magdalen College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Ethelbyrht or Allbright, is an ancient edifice with a wooden turret and three bells. There is also the district church of All Saints, the living of which is a perpet. cur.* This latter has a tower and three bells, and was built in 1845. There is a National school. Stanway Hall is the principal residence. Near it are traces of the old parish church, which has been in a ruined state from the time of Cromwell. A large number of elephant and other fossil bones were found here in 1764, imbedded in a stratum of sea-sand and shells.

STANWAY, a par. in the upper div. of Tewkesbury hund., co. Gloucester, 4½ miles S.W. of Broadway, its post town, and 3½ N.E. of Winchcomb. The village, which is small, is situated on the high road from Tewkesbury to Stow, near the Cotswolds. The par. includes the hmlts. of Stanway Wood, Hornileazow, and Taddington. The Jackdaw slate quarry is situated on the summit of Stanway Hill. The parish derives its name from its being situated on the Roman road Stane Street. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £220. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a square tower containing four bells. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. Stanway House, the principal residence, is situated a short distance from the church. The Earl of Wemyss is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

STANWAY, a hmlt. in the par. of Leintwardine, hund. of Wigmore, co. Hereford, 7 miles S.W. of Ludlow, and 2 from the village of Leintwardine.

STANWAY, a tnshp. in the par. of Rushbury, co. Salop, 7 miles S.W. of Wenlock. It is situated on the river Corve, and is in conjunction with Wilderhope.

STANWELL, a par. in the hund. of Spelthorne, co. Middlesex, 3 miles N.E. of Staines, its post town, and 15 from London. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on the Roman way Stane Street. It contains part of Colnbrook, and was held by the Windsors from the Conquest till 1541, after which it came through the Knyvets and Falklands to Sir J. Gibbons, Bart., of Stanwell House. The union poorhouse for Staines is situated in this parish. The paper mills of Percy Ibotson are situated about 2 miles from Stanwell. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of London, val. £301, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It contains ten stalls, also effigies of T. Windsor, bearing date 1486, and traces of brasses. The living was once held by Ryves, the editor of the "Mercurius Rusticus," during the civil war. The parochial charities produce about £244 per annum, of which £24 go to Lord Knyvet's free school, founded in 1642. There is a National school. The Independents have a chapel at Poyle.

STANWICK, a par. in the hund. of Higham-Ferrers, co. Northampton, 2½ miles N.E. of Higham-Ferrers, its post town, and 7 N. of Wellingborough. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated near the Peterborough railway and the river Nene. Earl Fitzwilliam's hounds meet in this parish. The soil is chiefly clay, alternated with sand and lime. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £373, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient structure with a tower and clock. The parochial charities produce about £25 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans, Reformed Wesleyans, and the Baptists, have each a chapel. Archbishop Dolben and Richard Cumberland, the dramatist, were natives of this parish. The Manor House and the Hall are the principal residences.

STANWICK, ST. JOHN, a par. in the wap. of Gilling West, North Riding co. York, 7 miles W. of Darlington, its post town, and 3 S. of Pierce Bridge railway station. The village, which is large, is situated on the Clobeck stream, and on the Roman way from Catterick. The par. contains the hmlt. of Moor-Row, and the tnshps. of Aldbrough, Caldwell, East Layton, and Stanwick St. John, besides part of Stapleton. The soil is clay and loam, with a subsoil of clay. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £61. The church, dedicated to St. John, is an ancient structure with a tower and three bells. The interior contains effigies of the Smithsons, ancestors of the Duke of Northumberland, of Stanwick House. The register dates from 1693. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum. Stanwick Hall is situated in a wooded park. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor.

STANWIX, a par. in the wards of Cumberland and Eskdale, co. Cumberland, half a mile N. of Carlisle, of which it is a populous suburb. The village is situated on an eminence at the bridge over the river Eden. The par. includes the tnshps. of Cargo, Etterby, Houghton, Linstock, Rickerby, Stainton, and Tarraby. In the vicinity are traces of a Roman station, of which Severus's Wall formed the northern rampart, and near which many altars and inscriptions have been found. In a secluded spot near the Eden are the Hyssop Holme baths. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £264, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, was erected in 1841, since which period it was partly destroyed by fire, but was restored in 1843. There is also the district church of St. John's, Houghton, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £40. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, also a government reformatory for juvenile offenders, opened in 1854 by G. H. Head, Esq., by whom it is supported.

STAPELEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Wybunbury, hund. of Nantwich, co. Chester, 1½ mile S.E. of Nantwich. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. Stapeley House is the principal residence.

STAPELEY, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Odiham, co. Hants, 2 miles S.E. of Odiham, and 2½ S.W. of Hartford Bridge. It is in conjunction with Hillside and Rye.

STAPENHILL, a par. in the hund. of Repton, co. Derby, 1 mile S.E. of Burton-on-Trent, its railway station and post town, and 11 miles S.W. of Derby. The village, which is extensive, is situated on the river Trent. The par. includes the hmlts. of Cauldwell, Newhall, and Stanton. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the coal mines, which are extensively worked. The surface is hilly, and the soil a strong loam. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £373. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, was erected on the site of an older one in 1830, at the expense of the vicar. There is also the district church of St. John's, Newhall, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £100. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, also an infant school. The Wesleyans have a chapel. John and Samuel Hieron, divines, were born in this parish. The Marquis of Anglesea is lord of the manor.

STAPLE, a tythg. in the par. of Tisbury, co. Wilts, 3 miles S.E. of Hindon. It is joined with Chicksgrove.

STAPLE, a hund. in the rape of Hastings, co. Sussex, contains the pars. of Bodiam, Ewhurst, Northiam, and Seddlescomb, comprising an area of 12,420 acres.

STAPLEFIELD-COMMON, a hmlt. in the par. of Cuckfield, hund. of Buttinghill, rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, 5½ miles S. of Crawley, its post town, and 2½ N.W. of Cuckfield. It consists of a few scattered farm-dwellings. The living is a perpet. cur., annexed to the vic. of Cuckfield, in the dioc. of Chichester. The church is dedicated to St. Mark. The chancel has a stained window by Hardman. There are National and infant schools. The Independents have a chapel.

STAPLE-FITZPAINE, a par. in the hund. of Abdick, co. Somerset, 5½ miles S.E. of Taunton, its post town. The village is small and wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. with that of Bickenhall annexed, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £600. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure with a square tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £40 per annum, which go to Sir W. Portman's almshouses. Lord Portman is lord of the manor.

STAPLEFORD, a par. in the hund. of Thriplow, co. Cambridge, 4 miles S.E. of Cambridge, its post town, and 55 from London. The village is situated on the river Granta. The soil is gravelly. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture and the manufacture of straw-plait. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £131, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is an ancient edifice dedicated to St. Andrew. The living was once held by Bentham, the antiquary, who died here in 1794. The church contains a brass of W. Lee, bearing date 1617. The parochial charities produce about £27 per annum. Gog-Magog Hills is the principal residence.

STAPLEFORD, a par. in the hund. of Hertford, co. Herts, 3 miles N. of Hertford, its post town. The village is situated on the river Beane, and is wholly agricultural. A large watercourse, called the New Cut, was made some years ago to diminish the violence of the floods. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £280. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is an ancient structure with a wooden belfry. It was restored in 1851, when a new transept was added. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a National school.

STAPLEFORD, a par. in the hund. of Framland, co. Leicester, 4 miles S.E. of Melton-Mowbray, its post town. The village is situated on the Oakham and Melton-Mowbray canal and the river Wreake, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is a blue clay, and the land chiefly in pasture. The Lyston and Peterborough railway passes through the parish. The living is a vic. annexed to the rect. of Saxby, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, was rebuilt in 1783. It contains a brass bearing date 1490, also effigies, by Rysbrach, of the Sherard family, of Stapleford Hall. The parochial charities produce about £148 per annum, which go to Lord Harborough's six almshouses. The Hall is a short distance from the church. Stapleford was formerly a Roman station.

STAPLEFORD, a par. in the lower div. of Boothby-Graffo wap., parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 6 miles N.E. of Newark, its post town, and 10 S.W. of Lincoln. The village is situated in the vale of the Witham, near Stapleford Moor. The inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. It formerly belonged to the Disneys. The Burton hounds meet in this parish. The living is a vic., annexed to that of Carlton-le-Moorlands, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The churchyard contains the ruins of an ancient cross. Lord Middleton is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

STAPLEFORD, a par. in the S. div. of Broxtow wap., co. Nottingham, 6 miles S.W. of Nottingham, its post town, and 127 from London. It is a station on the Midland railway. The village, which is large, is situated on the river Erewash. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in framework knitting. The surface is partly hilly, and the soil chiefly a rich clay. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £120. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, is an ancient structure with a spired tower and three bells. The interior contains monuments of the Willoughbys and Warrens, of the Hall. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. The National school was erected and endowed by the late Lady Warren. There are chapels for the Wesleyan, Primitive, and New Connexion Methodists; also a library for artisans. Stapleford Hall is the principal residence. J. Jackson, Esq., is lord of the manor. An obelisk, apparently of Saxon origin, and a Druidical monument called the Hemlock Stone, are the only antiquities.

STAPLEFORD, a par. in the hund. of Branch, co. Wilts, 4¼ miles N.W. of Wilton, its post town, and 7¼ N.W. of Salisbury. The village is situated on the river Wiley, and is chiefly agricultural. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £105, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower and five bells, and has been recently restored. The register dates from 1637. Lord Ashburton and H. Seymour, Esq., are lords of the manor.

STAPLEFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Worfield, co. Salop, 4 miles N.E. of Bridgnorth. It is situated on a branch of the river Severn.

STAPLEFORD-ABBOT'S, a par. in the hund. of Ongar, co. Essex, 6 miles N. of Romford, its post town, and 6 S.E. of Epping. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated near the Ongar road and the river Roding. It was given to the Abbey of Bury St. Edmund's in 1010. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £483, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Mary, and has an old figure of St. Edward the Confessor in the E. window. The register dates from the 16th century. The parochial charities produce about £33 per annum, of which £25 go to Sir J. Fortescue's school. The principal residence is Albyns, erected by Inigo Jones.

STAPLEFORD BRUEN and STAPLEFORD FOULK, tnshps. in the par. of Tarvin, lower div. of Broxton hund., co. Chester, 5 miles N.W. of Tarporley.

STAPLEFORD-TAWNEY, a par. in the hund. of Ongar, co. Essex, 5½ miles S.E. of Epping, and 17 from London. Romford is its post town. The parish, which is of small extent, is wholly agricultural. Within its limits is Suttons, the seat of the Smijth family. The living is a rect., annexed to that of Mount Thoydon, in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £735. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a belfry turret and spire of wood. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum, besides Luther's school-house. There is a National school.

STAPLEGATE VILLE, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Westgate, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent. It forms the northern suburb of the city of Canterbury.

STAPLE-GORDON, an ancient par. of the co. of Dumfries, Scotland, now joined to Langholm.

STAPLEGROVE, a par. in the hund. of Taunton, co. Somerset, 1¼ mile N.W. of Taunton, its post town. The village is situated on the Great Western railway and the river Tone, and comprises a portion of the vale of Taunton-Dean. It formed a part of Taunton parish until 1554, from which period it has been a distinct parish. There are flax mills, a tannery, and a private lunatic asylum. The Great Western canal from Bridgwater to Tiverton passes along the southern boundary of the parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £200. The church is an ancient structure, with a tower containing five bells. Since its construction in the 15th century it has had two new aisles added, and in 1857 was thoroughly restored. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a National school, also a Sunday-school.

STAPLEHURST, a par. and post town in the hunds. of Cranbrook and Marden, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 9 miles S.E. of Maidstone, and 4 N.E. of Cranbrook. It is a station on the South-Eastern railway. The village, which is large, is chiefly agricultural. There are several houses of ancient date. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The soil consists of gravel and clay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £674, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure. The interior was restored in 1853, and contains a brass. The register dates from 1523. The parochial charities produce about £63 per annum, of which £35 go to Bathurst's school. There are chapels for the Independents and Baptists. A fair for cattle, corn, and hops is held on the 11th October.

STAPLE INN, an ex. par. place in the City of London Without, co. Middlesex.

STAPLE-NEXT-WINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Downhamford, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 2 miles S.E. of Wingham, its post town, and 4 W. of Sandwich. The parish is small. The land is principally in hop-grounds and market gardens. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Adisham, in the dioc. of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to St. James, has a square tower and four bells. The interior contains a font of great antiquity, also tombs of the Lynches, of Grove House. It was restored and re-seated in 1847. The Baptists have a chapel. A pleasure fair is held on the 25th July.

STAPLER'S HEATH, an open spot in the Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 1 mile E. of Newport.

STAPLES ISLANDS, in the hund. of Islandshire, co. Northumberland, formerly in Durham, 4 miles N.E. of Bambrough. They are situated beyond the Farn Islands, and comprise Crumstone, Brownsman, Knavestone, and Longstone, on which last is a lighthouse 75 feet high.

STAPLETON, a par. in the ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 9 miles S.E. of Longtown, and 8 N. of Brampton. The village is considerable, and is situated on the river Line, or Leven, over which is a bridge. The par., which is large, comprises the tnshps. of Belbank, Solport, Stapleton, and Trough. The subsoil contains coal and limestone. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £98. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1830. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. The Earl of Carlisle is lord of the manors of Stapleton, Belbank, and Trough. On the N. bank of the river are remains of Shank Castle.

STAPLETON, a par. in the hund. of Barton Regis, co. Gloucester, 2 miles N.E. of Bristol, of which it may be considered a suburb. The Midland and the Bristol and South Wales Union railways have stations here. This parish is situated at the north-western angle of the South Gloucester and Somerset coal-field, and is bounded on the N. by a range of hills 200 feet high, to which elevation the strata of the coal measures has been lifted up by a mass of millstone grit. It is traversed by the river Frome flowing through a glen, and contains the vils. of Stapleton and Fishponds. The hat manufacture formerly carried on has declined, but there is a flock manufactory, coal mines, and stone quarries. The palace of the Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol, the diocesan training institution for National schoolmistresses, and the Clifton union workhouse, &c., are in this parish. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £160. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. There is a chapel-of-ease at Fishponds, built by subscription in 1817. A portion of the township is comprised within the ecclesiastical district of Easton. The parochial charities produce about £69, of which £45 go to Mrs. Webb's free school and almshouses. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and the Baptists two. Hannah More was born here in 1744, and died in 1833. Heath House, Stoke Court, Stapleton Grove, and Stapleton House are the principal residences, besides several others.

STAPLETON, a par. in the Condover div. of Condover hund., co. Salop, 6 miles S.W. of Shrewsbury, its post town, and 1 mile from the Dorrington station on the Shrewsbury and Hereford line of railway. The village is situated on the road from Shrewsbury to Hereford, and on a branch of the river Severn. There is an embankment in the parish, supposed to have been formerly a Roman station. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £581. The church, dedicated to St. Julian, or St. John, is an ancient structure, re-seated in 1790. There is an infant school for both sexes. The Hon. H. Wentworth Powys is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

STAPLETON, a hmlt. in the par. of Barwell, hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 3½ miles N.E. of Hinckley, its post town, and 5 S. of Market Bosworth. The village is small. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in frame-work knitting. The living is a cur., annexed to the rect. of Barwell, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is an ancient structure with a spired tower. Mrs. Heaford is lady of the manor.

STAPLETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Presteigne, hund. of Wigmore, co. Hereford, 1 mile E. of Presteigne. It is joined to Frog-street.

STAPLETON, a hmlt. in the par. of Martock, co. Somerset, 4 miles S.E. of Ilchester.

STAPLETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Darrington, upper div. of Osgoldcross wap., West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Pontefract. The village is situated on the river Wente, and is wholly agricultural. The land is fertile and in a high state of cultivation. Stapleton Park is the principal residence. J. H. Barton, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

STAPLETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Barton and Croft, wap. of East Gilling, North Riding co. York, 2 miles S.W. of Darlington, and 3 N.E. of Barton. It is situated on the river Tees, and gives name to the Stapyltons of Myton. R. Bower, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

STAPLOE, a hund. in the co. of Cambridge, contains the pars. of Burwell, Chippenham, Fordham, Isleham, Kennett, Landwade, Snailwell, Soham, and Wicken, comprising an area of 39,570 acres.

STAR, a vil. in the pars. of Kennoway and Markinch, co. Fife, Scotland, 3 miles N.W. of Leven.

STARBECK, a hmlt. in the par. of Knaresborough, West Riding co. York, 2 miles from Harrogate, and 3 W. of Knaresborough. It is a station on the North-Eastern railway.

STARBOG, a ridge of sandstone hills in the co. of Tyrone, Ireland, extending between Ballygawley and Omagh.

STARBOTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Kettlewell, E. div. of Staincliffe wap., West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of Kettlewell. The village, which is small and irregularly built, is situated on the river Wharfe, and is chiefly agricultural. There are lead mines. Divine service is performed in the schoolroom by the vicar.

STARCROSS, a chplry. and small seaport in the pars. of Kenton and Dawlish, co. Devon, 2 miles N.W. of Exmouth, its post town, and 5 S. of Topsham. It is a station on the South Devon railway. The village, which is spacious, is situated on the road to Teignmouth at the mouth of the river Exe, or Topsham harbour, opposite Exmouth. The inhabitants are principally engaged in the coasting trade. The village is much visited as a watering place. A little to the N. of it is Powderham Castle, and on an adjoining eminence is Belvidere tower, erected by the Earl of Devon in 1773, and commanding an extensive view of the channel and surrounding country. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £210, in the patron. of the Deans and Chapters of Exeter and Sarum alternately. The church was rebuilt in 1828. A chapel at Cofton, founded in the 14th century, was restored by the Earl of Devon in 1839. A fair is held on Whit Wednesday.

STARLING, a vil. in the pars. of Bury and Radcliffe, co. Lancaster, near Bury.

STARMORE WITH WESTRILL, a tnshp. in the hund. of Guthlaxton, co. Leicester.

STARSTON, a par. in the hund. of Earsham, co. Norfolk, 1½ mile N.W. of Harleston, its post town, and 6 miles E. of Tivetshall railway station. It is a station on the Waveney Valley railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £624. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, has a square tower containing five bells. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a National school. The Duke of Norfolk is lord of the manor.

STARTFORTH, a par. in the wap. of West Gilling, North Riding co. York, 1 mile S.W. of Barnard Castle, its nearest railway station and post town, and 15 miles from Richmond. The village is situated on the river Tees, which separates here the cos. of York and Durham. In the vicinity is a thread manufactory, which gives employment to many of the inhabitants. The soil is of a loamy description, and the subsoil clayey. The par. includes the tnshps. of Eggleston Abbey and Boldron. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient structure with a turret and two bells. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a free school for both sexes supported by voluntary contributions. Startforth Hall and Lower Startforth Hall are the principal residences.

STARTLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Great Somerford, co. Wilts, 3 miles S. of Malmesbury.

STARTON, a vil. in the par. of Stoneleigh, co. Warwick, 4 miles S. of Coventry.

START POINT, a headland, with an intermitting light, in the English Channel, on the coast of co. Devon, at the end of Start Bay, about 8 miles S.W. of Dartmouth. Also a headland, with a revolving light, at the north-eastern corner of Sandy, Orkney Islands.

STATENBOROUGH, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Eastry, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, a quarter of a mile N.E. of Eastry.

STATFOLD, a par. in the S. div. of Offlow hund., co. Stafford, 3 miles N.E. of Tamworth, its post town. The church is only used as a chapel for interments. The living is annexed to the vic. of St. Mary Lichfield, and is a prebend in Lichfield Cathedral.

STATHE, a tythg. in the par. of Stoke St. Gregory, co. Somerset, 3 miles N.W. of Langport, on the river Parret.

STATHERN, a par. in the hund. of Framland, co. Leicester, 8¾ miles N.E. of Melton-Mowbray, its post town. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated near the Grantham canal. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in frame-work knitting. The greater part of the parish lies within the vale of Belvoir. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £566, in the patron. of St. Peter's College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Guthlac, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing four bells. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, erected in 1845 at the expense of the rector. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The Master and Fellows of Peter House College, Cambridge, are lords of the manor.

STAUGHTON, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Toseland, co. Huntingdon, 6 miles N.W. of St. Neot's, its post town, and 3 S.E. of Kimbolton. The par. is considerable, and divided into North and South side, comprising the hmlts. of Staughton Highway, Great Staughton Moor, East and West Perry, Dillington, and Agden Green. The soil is chiefly clay and gravel. There are an extensive brewery and malting houses. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £450, in the patron. of St. John's College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing a clock and five bells. The interior contains several monuments and effigies. The charities, realised from some land and cottages, are distributed yearly to the poor in bread. The parochial school is situated in the churchyard, and is endowed with land and cottage property realising about £20 per annum, which is for the education of 12 boys for the term of three years. James Duberley, Esq., is lord of the manor of Beechampstead.

STAUGHTON, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Stodden, co. Bedford, 3½ miles S.E. of Kimbolton, and 10 from Bedford. St. Neot's is its post town. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £200, in the patron. of Corpus Christi College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The Baptists have a place of worship.

STAUNTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Gainford, S.W. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 2 miles N.E. of Barnard Castle. There are several stone quarries.

STAUNTON, a par. in the hund. of St. Briavell's, co. Gloucester, 2 miles from Coleford, its post town, and 3 N.E. of Monmouth. The village, which is small, is situated to the S. of the river Wye, in Dean Forest. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The substratum contains iron ore, of which mines were formerly in operation. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £149. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a tower and five bells. The parochial charities produce about £32 per annum. There are a National school and an almshouse for four people, founded in 1686.

STAUNTON, a par. in the S. div. of Newark wap., co. Nottingham, 7 miles S.E. of Newark, its post town, and 5 N. of Bottesford railway station. The village, which is small, is situated in the vale of Belvoir, near the source of the river Don, and at the point of conjunction of the counties of Nottingham, Leicester, and Lincoln. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The par. contains the chplry. of Flawborough. The living is a rect.,* with the cur. of Flawborough annexed, in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £322. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a square tower and five bells. The interior contains monuments of the Stauntons. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. The principal residence is Staunton Hall. H. C. Staunton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STAUNTON, a par. in the lower div. of Pershore hund., co. Worcester, 9 miles from Hereford, its post town, 8 N.W. of Gloucester, and 7 S.W. of Tewkesbury. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated near the river Leadon. The Ledbury hounds meet in this parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £404. The church is dedicated to St. James. The parochial charities consist of a portion of Jarvis's bequest, which realises upwards of £1,068 per annum.

STAUNTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Dunster, co. Somerset, 1 mile S. of Minehead.

STAUNTON-HARROLD, a tnshp. in the par. of Breedon, hund. of West Goscote, co. Leicester, 3¼ miles N.E. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, its post town. The substratum is productive of coal, iron, and limestone. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, has a tower and eight bells. The interior contains tombs of the Shirleys. The church was erected by Sir R. Shirley, Bart., in 1653. The manor was given to Henry de Ferariis at the Conquest, and passed to the Shirleys in 1423. The principal residence is the Hall, partly designed by Inigo Jones.

STAUNTON-UPON-WYE, a par. in the hund. of Grimsworth, co. Hereford, 9 miles N.W. of Hereford, its post town, and 10 from Kington. The village is situated on the road from Hereford to Hay and Breen, near the river Wye, and is chiefly agricultural. The land is partly in common. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £340, in the patron. of Christ Church College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin, is an ancient structure, with a spired tower and six bells. The charities consist of the interest of £100,000, bequeathed in 1790 by G. Jarvis, Esq., for the schools, poor, &c., of the pars. of Staunton, Bredwardine, and Letton. This charity was revised in 1852 by Act of Parliament, which vested its management in 12 trustees, including, ex-officio, the Bishop of Hereford, and the three incumbents.

STAUNTON WHIT, a par. in the hund. of Petherton, co. Somerset, 3 miles N.W. of Chard, its post town, and 6 from Ilminster. There are quarries of chalk and blue lias. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £255. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure with a square embattled tower. The parochial charities produce about £21 per annum, which go to Somerhayes' school. There are vestiges of ancient encampments, near which Roman antiquities have been found.

STAUNTON WYVILE. See STONTON, co. Leicester.

STAVELEY, a par. in the hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 4½ miles N.E. of Chesterfield, its post town, and 10 S.E. of Sheffield. It is a station on the Midland railway. The village, which is considerable, stands on an eminence overlooking the canal and river Rother, and comprises the chplry. of Great Barlow and the hmlt. of Woodthorpe. The substratum is productive of coal and iron-stone. There is a brush manufactory and corn and bone mills. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £706. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure, with a square tower and eight bells, and contains monuments of the Frecheville family. There is also a district church at Barlow, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £95. The parochial charities produce about £80 per annum. There are National schools for both sexes, including a residence for the master, erected at the expense of the Duke of Devonshire, who is lord of the manor. There is a mechanics' institute. The Wesleyans have a place of worship.

STAVELEY, a par. in the lower div. of Claro wap., West Riding co. York, 4 miles from Boroughbridge, its post town, and 4 N.E. of Knaresborough railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on a branch of the river Ure. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £354. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was rebuilt in 1831, at a cost of £1,000. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, also a place of worship for Wesleyans.

STAVELEY, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Cartmel, hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 6 miles N. of Cartmel, and 9 N.E. of Ulverstone. Kendal is its post town. The village, which is small, is situated at the bottom of Windermere. The tnshp. contains the hmlts. of Ayside, Barber Green, Seatle, and part of Newby Bridge. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £108. The church was enlarged in 1844. The charities produce about £33 per annum. There are endowed schools for both sexes. The Earl of Burlington is lord of the manor.

STAVELY, NETHER and OVER, tnshps. in the ward and par. of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 5 miles N.W. of Kendal, its post town. It is a station on the Windermere railway. The village is situated in a hollow of the river Kent, near Stavely Fell. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in bobbin and woollen mills. Edward III. granted a charter for a market on Friday and a fair on St. Luke's day, but these have long been disused. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £120, in the patron. of the Vicar of Kendal. The parochial charities produce about £56 per annum. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor.

STAVERTON, a par. in the hund. of Haytor, co. Devon, 3½ miles N.W. of Totness, its post town, and 5 from Ashburton. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the river Dart. The par. contains the hmlts. of Sparkwell, Strechford, and Woolstone Green. The substratum abounds in blue and grey slate, which are extensively worked at the Penn Recca Slate Quarries. This slate is of a fine and durable quality, and many of the houses in Exeter have been roofed with it from James I.'s time. There are also quarries of freestone, limestone, and blue and grey marble. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture and in the quarries. A singular limestone cavern exists at Pridhamsleigh. This place is celebrated for its cider. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £366, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. George, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing six bells. In the interior are several stained windows, a carved screen, and a monument to the Worth family. There is also a district church at Landscove, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £75. The church, dedicated to St. Matthew, was erected in 1851, at an outlay of £3,000, defrayed by Miss Champernowne. The parochial charities produce about £66 per annum. There are National schools for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. The Dean and Chapter of Exeter are lords of the manor and principal landowners.

STAVERTON, a par. in the lower div. of Deerhurst hund., co. Gloucester, 4¾ miles N.W. of Cheltenham, its post town. The village is situated on the line of the Gloucester and Cheltenham railway. The inhabitants are wholly agricultural. The living is a vic.,* with the cur. of Boddington annexed, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £436. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure.

STAVERTON, a par. in the hund. of Fawsley, co. Northampton, 2½ miles S.W. of Daventry, its post town, and 8½ E. of Southam. The village, which is extensive, is situated on the high road from Southam to Daventry. The land is chiefly in pasture. The soil is of red sand, with strong clay and loam, upon a subsoil of rock. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £490, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a square embattled tower containing five bells. The chancel contains two stained windows, presented by the present vicar. The parochial charities consist in a fuel allotment, and the interest of £100, bequeathed in 1767 by Mr. W. T. Grosby. There is an endowed school for both sexes.

STAVERTON, a chplry. in the par. of Trowbridge, hund. of Melksham, co. Wilts, 2 miles N. of Trowbridge, its post town. It is situated on the Wilts and Berks canal and the river Avon. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in the cloth manufacture. The living is a perpet. cur., in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £100, in the patron. of the Rector of Trowbridge.

STAVORDALE PRIORY, an ext. par. place in the co. of Somerset, half a mile from Bruton. It was founded in the reign of Henry III. by Richard Savill for Augustine canons, and was made a cell to Taunton Abbey in 1533. On the Dissolution, the site was granted to the De Veres, and subsequently came to the earls of Ilchester.

STAWARD-LE-PEEL, a border castle, co. Northumberland, 3 miles S.W. of Haydon Bridge. The ruins are situated on the river Allen.

STAWELL, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. of Moorlinch, hund. of Whitley, co. Somerset, 4½ miles N.E. of Bridgwater, its post town, and 2 N.W. of Moorlinch. The village is wholly agricultural. The living is a cur., annexed to the vic. of Moorlinch, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells. The Independents have a chapel.

STAWLEY, a par. in the hund. of Milverton, co. Somerset, 6 miles N.W. of Wellington, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Wivelscombe. The village is situated on the river Tow, near the Bristol and Exeter railway. The inhabitants are wholly engaged in agriculture. The soil consists of clay and loam, with a subsoil of sandstone and limestone. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £150. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing three bells. The register dates from 1528. There is a Sunday-school.

STAXIGOE, a vil. in the par. of Wick, co. Caithness, Scotland, 2 miles N.E. of Wick. It is a tidal port, situated near Noss Head. The village is of great antiquity. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the fisheries.

STAXTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Willerby, wap. of Dickering, East Riding co. York, 6 miles S.W. of Scarborough, and half a mile E. of Willerby. It is a small agricultural village, situated near the railway and the river Derwent. There is a parochial school, also chapels for the Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists. Lord Londesborough is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

STAYLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Mottram, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 1 mile N.E. of Ashton. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the collieries and cotton mills. The Huddersfield canal passes through the tnshp., which includes a portion of the town of Staleybridge. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Chester, and in the patron. of trustees.

STAYLEY BRIDGE. See STALEYBRIDGE, co. Lancaster.

STAYNAL, a chplry. in the par. of Lancaster, co. Lancaster, 3 miles N.E. of Poulton-le-Fylde. It is joined to Stalmine.

STAYTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Averham, N. div. of Thurgarton wap., co. Nottingham, 3 miles E. of Southwell, 4 W. of Newark, and three-quarters of a mile S.W. of Averham. It is situated on the river Greet, a branch of the Trent, which flows about a mile from the village. The Master and Fellows of Trinity College are lords of the manor. There are traces of a grange, which once belonged to the abbots of Rufford.

STEAN, or STENE, a par. in the hund. of King's-Sutton, co. Northampton, 2½ miles N.W. of Brackley, its post town. The village is situated near the river Ouse, and is wholly agricultural. The road from Brackley to Banbury passes through the parish. The living is a rect. annexed to the vic. of Hinton-in-the-Hedges, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church is dedicated to St. Peter, and contains effigies, &c., of the Crewe family from 1619. The church was erected by T. Crewe, Esq., in 1620. Divine service commences on the first Sunday in April, and is performed but six times during the year. Earl Spencer is lord of the manor.

STEANBRIDGE, a tythg. in the par. of Stroud, hund. of Bisley, co. Gloucester, 2 miles from Stroud, but within the limits of that borough.

STEANBRIDGE, a tythg. in the par. of Bisley, co. Gloucester, 3 miles E. of Stroud, near the Sapperton tunnel of the Thames and Severn canal.

STEARSBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Brandsby, wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 6 miles N.E. of Easingwold.

STEBBING, a par. in the hund. of Hinckford, co. Essex, 13 miles N. of Chelmsford, its post town, and 3 N.E. of Great Dunmow. The village, which is considerable, is situated on an eminence near the river Chelmer and the line of the Great Eastern railway. It is a place of ancient date, and once belonged to the Peverell and Ferrers families, who had a castle, the site of which is now marked by two artificial mounds surrounded by a moat. On the banks of the river are two mills. The surface is elevated and the soil fertile. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £195. The church, dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin, has a spired tower and five bells. The interior contains a brass, date 1390. The parochial charities produce about £23 per annum. There are National and British schools for both sexes. The Earl of Essex and Colonel Bingham are lords of the manor. A cattle fair is held on the 10th July.

STEDE, a chplry. in the par. of Ribchester, co. Lancaster, 6 miles N.W. of Blackburn. It is situated in the valley of the Ribble, and has the ruins of a disused Norman chapel.

STEDHAM, a par. in the hund. of Easebourne, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 2 miles N.W. of Midhurst. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Rother, and by the Reform Act is partly included within the borough of Midhurst. It is mentioned in Domesday survey as Hamesford, and belonged to Earl Godwin; after the Norman conquest it came to the Montgomeries, and is now the property of Sir Charles Taylor, Bart. The living is a rect., with that of Heyshot united, in the dioc. of Chichester, joint val. £386. The church, dedicated to St. James, has a tower and five bells. It contains some ancient wall paintings. The register dates from 1659. The church was partly rebuilt and enlarged in 1850. In the churchyard is a yew tree, measuring 28 feet in diameter. There is a girls' school. Stedham Hall is the principal residence.

STEEL, a tnshp. in the par. of Prees, co. Salop, 5 miles N.E. of Wem, and 3 S. of Whitchurch. The village is considerable.

STEEL BANK, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Nether Hallam, West Riding co. York, 2 miles W. of Sheffield.

STEEP, a par. in the upper half div. of East Meon hund., co. Hants, 2 miles N. of Petersfield, its post town, and near the Petersfield station on the London and Portsmouth railway. The village is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of South Ambersham. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of East Meon, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church has a tower and five bells. The interior contains monuments of the Baker family. It was restored in 1840. There is a National school. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel. Ashford House is the principal residence.

STEEP-HOLM, an island in the par. of Uphill, hund. of Winterstoke, co. Somerset, 2 miles N.W. of Uphill. This rock, which is about a mile and a half in circumference, rises perpendicularly out of the Bristol Channel to the height of 400 feet above the sea. It is uninhabited, but swarms with rabbits and sea fowl. It is said to have been the spot to which Gildas retired whilst composing his history, and where Githa, the mother of Harold II., died.

STEEPING MAGNA, a par. in the Wold div. of Candleshoe wap., parts of Lindsey., co. Lincoln, 3 miles S.E. of Spilsby, its post town, and about 1 mile from the Firsby railway station. The village is situated on the river Steeping, which flows from the Wolds 15 miles S.E. to Boston Deeps, beyond Wainfleet. The par. includes the hmlt. of Monksthorpe, as also part of an ancient moated seat. The surface is flat, and the soil clayey. The living is a vic. annexed to the rect. of Firsby, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was partly rebuilt in 1748. The register dates from 1613. The charities consist of allotments and some poor's cottages. A school was erected at the expense of T. Watson, Esq., of Bitteswell, which is principally supported by the vicar. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and the Baptists one at Monksthorpe. Lord Willoughby d'Eresby is lord of the manor.

STEEPING PARVA, a par. in the E. div. of Bolingbroke soke, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3½ miles S.E. of Spilsby, its post town, and a short distance from the Little Steeping station on the Great Northern railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £181. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a square tower containing three bells. It was rebuilt with the old materials in 1639. The register dates from 1559. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum, of which £7 go to the free school. The Wesleyans have a chapel. W. Pinder, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STEEPLE, a par. in the hund. of Hasilor, co. Dorset, 5½ miles S.W. of Wareham, its post town, and 3½ S.W. of Corfe Castle. The village is situated on the sea-coast, and is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of West Creech, which once belonged to the Abbey of Bindon, and was a market town in Henry III.'s time. Creech Barrow is a hill of considerable height, supposed to be artificial. The living is a rect. with that of Tyneham annexed, in the dioc. of Sarum, joint val. £382. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure. It is the burial-place of the Lawrence family. The Grange is the principal residence.

STEEPLE, or STEEPLE-CUM-STANESGATE, a par. in the hund. of Dengie, co. Essex, 9 miles S.E. of Maldon, its post town, and 6 N. of Burnham. The village is situated near the river Blackwater, on which a quay has been constructed for barges of 70 tons. It is mentioned in Domesday survey as Ulfwinchurch, and was then a place of some importance. The par. contains Ramsey Island, and the hmlt. of Stangate, or Stanesgate, formerly surrounded by water. In 1176 a priory cell, subordinate to that of Lewes, existed here for the order of Cluniac monks. The surface is flat, and the soil heavy, with a subsoil of clay. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £195. The church is dedicated to St. Lawrence and All Saints. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents have a chapel, at which day and Sunday schools are held. The governors of St. Bartholomew's Hospital, London, are lords of the manor. There was formerly a church in the hamlet of Stanesgate, which went by its present name in Edward the Confessor's time.

STEEPLE-ASHTON, co. Wilts. See ASHTON STEEPLE. The like for other places with this distinguishing prefix.

STEEPLE-MORDEN, a par. in the hund. of Armingford, co. Cambridge, 5 miles N.W. of Royston, its post town, and 16 from Cambridge. The village is situated on the river Cam. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £200, in the patron. of New College, Oxford. The church is an ancient structure, containing two brasses of priests. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum, realised from town lands.

STEEPLETON-IWERNE, or STEEPLETON-PRESTON, a par. in the hund. of Pimperne, North Blanford div. of co. Dorset. See IWERNE, STEEPLETON.

STEETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bolton Percy, partly within the Ainsty and partly in the West Riding co. York, 3½ miles N.E. of Tadcaster, its post town, and 3 N.W. of Bolton Percy. It is situated on the line of the North Midland railway. The inhabitants are wholly agricultural. Steeton Hall, now a farmhouse, was formerly the seat of the Fairfax family, and where Lord Fairfax slept the night before the battle of Marston Moor.

STEETON WITH EASBURN, a tnshp. in the par. of Kildwick, E. div. of Staincliffe wap., West Riding co. York, 1 mile E. of Kildwick, its post town, and 3 miles N.W. of Keighley. It is a station on the Midland Extension railway. The village, which is considerable, is situated in a valley on the road from Keighley to Skipton. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in the worsted and bobbin mills. Stone is quarried. The township is bounded on the N. by the river Aire, which is well stocked with trout. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

STEIN, a vil. in the par. of Durinish, N.W. side of Skye Island, co. Inverness, Scotland, 5 miles N. of Dunvegan, and 15 N.W. of Portree. It is situated on Loch Bay. It was formerly the seat of an important herring fishery.

STEINSCHOLL, a quoad sacra par. in the pars. of Kilmuir and Smyort, co. Inverness, Scotland. It is situated in Skye Island, near the village of Stein. The living is in the presb. of Skye, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of about £120. There is also a Free church.

STELLA, a tnshp. in the par. of Ryton, W. div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 5 miles W. of Newcastle, its post town, and 1 mile W. of the Blaydon railway station on the Newcastle and Carlisle railway. It was made a separate district par. in 1845, and contains the tnshps. of Blaydon and Derwanthaugh. The village is situated on the river Tyne and the turnpike road from Newcastle to Hexham. The soil consists of clay. J. Cowen and Co.'s extensive firebrick and gas works are in this parish, also wharves, and a coal staith belonging to the London Lead Company. The English were routed here in 1640 by the Scots, who passed the Tyne under cover of several pieces of cannon which they had planted on the tower of Newburn Church. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is situated at Blaydon, and is dedicated to St. Cuthbert. The Roman Catholics have a chapel, which is dedicated to SS. Mary and Thomas Aquinas. In connexion with the chapel is a school for children of both sexes, and a cemetery adjoining. Stella Hall and Stella House are the principal residences. C. Towneley, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

STELLING, a par. in the hund. of Stouting, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 7 miles S.W. of Canterbury, its post town. The village is situated on an eminence near the line of the ancient Stane Street, and is wholly agricultural. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Upper Hardres, in the dioc. of Canterbury. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There is an endowed school for twenty boys and twelve girls of this parish and that of Upper Hardres. Fairs are held on Ascension Day and on 12th November.

STELLING, a tnshp. in the par. of Bywell St. Peter, E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 9 miles N.E. of Hexham, and 2½ N. of Stocksfield. It is situated near the river Tyne, and on the turnpike road from Hexham to Newcastle-on-Tyne. The manor formerly belonged to the priory of Hexham. Freestone is abundant. The Hall is the principal residence.

STELLING MINNIS, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Loningborough, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 1 mile S.E. of Stelling.

STEMBRIDGE, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Cowbridge, co. Glamorgan.

STENBURY, a tythg. in the par. of Godshill, Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 6 miles S.E. of Newport.

STENE. See STRAN, co. Northampton.

STENFIELD, a hmlt. in the par. of Hacconby, co. Lincoln, 8 miles N.W. of Bourne.

STENHOUSE, a hmlt. in the par. of Libberton, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 3 miles S.E. of Edinburgh.

STENHOUSEMUIR, a vil. in the par. of Larbert, co. Stirling, Scotland, 1 mile from Falkirk, and 8 miles S.E. of Stirling. The Falkirk Trysts are held here.

STENIGOT, a par. in the N. div. of Gartree wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 6 miles S.W. of Louth, its post town. The village is situated on the Wolds, near the river Bain, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £222. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. R. W. and R. G. Chatterton, Esqs., are lords of the manor and principal landowners.

STENNESS, an ancient par. in Pomona, Orkney Islands, coast of Scotland, now joined to Firth.

STENNESS, an island in the par. of Northmaven, Shetland Isles, coast of Scotland. It is situated on the N. side of Magnus Bay.

STENNIS WATER, a stream of the co. of Dumfries, Scotland, joins the Meggot Water a little above its confluence with the Esk.

STENSON, a hmlt. and tnshp. in the par. of Barrow-on-Trent, hunds. of Appletree and Morleston, co. Derby, 4 miles S.W. of Derby. It is situated on the Birmingham and Grand Trunk railway, and is in conjunction with Twyford.

STENTON, a par., co. Haddington, Scotland, consisting of two detached portions, and containing the vils. of Beilgrange and Pitcox. The northern, or inland, district extends in length about 3½ miles from N.E. to S.W., with an extreme breadth of 3 miles, and is bounded by the pars. of Prestonkirk, Dunbar, Spott, and Whittingham. The surface is undulating, and the soil fertile. The southern district lies among the Lammermuir hills, and is bounded by Berwickshire, Whittingham, and by the Lammermuirs. The hill of Spartledown, one of the highest of the Lammermuirs, is in this district. The parish is traversed by the road from Dunbar to Giffard, and is within easy access of the Linton and Dunbar station, on the North British railway. The village of Stenton is about 5½ miles W. of Dunbar, and 3½ S.E. of East Linton. The par. of Stenton is in the presb. of Dunbar, and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The stipend of the minister is £323. The parish church was erected in 1829. There are a parochial library and several schools. The principal seat is Beil House, situated near Presmennan Lake.

STENWAITES, or STENWITH, a hmlt. in the par. of Barrowby, wap. of Winnibriggs, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 2 miles W. of Grantham.

STEPASIDE, a tnshp. in the par. of Kilgobbin, bar. of Rathdown, co. Dublin, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Dublin.

STEPHEN'S, ST., a par. in the N. div. of East hund., co. Cornwall, 1 mile N.W. of Launceston, its post town, and 16 miles from Camelford. It includes the disfranchised borough of Newport, and is mentioned in Domesday Book as Lanson. It derives its present name from the collegiate church of St. Stephen, which Bishop Warlewast, of Exeter, converted into an Austin priory in 1126. The village is situated on the brow of a hill immediately above Newport. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £110, in the patron. of the inhabitants. The church is an ancient edifice with a tower. The parochial charities produce about £224, of which £193 go to Horwell's school. Fairs are held on 12th May, 31st July, and 25th September, all of which are for cattle.

STEPHEN'S, ST., a par. in the hund. of Cashio, co. Herts, 1 mile S.W. of St. Alban's, its post town, and 7 miles from Watford. The village is situated on the rivers Colne and Ver, near the Roman way Watling Street. The par. contains the hmlts. of Pack, Smallford, and Windridge. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £514. The church, dedicated to St. Stephen, occupies the site of one founded in the reign of Eldred by Ulsinus, sixth abbot of St. Alban's. There is also a district church at Frogmore, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £128, and a chapel-of-ease at the hmlt. of Parkstreet. There are National and other schools. Many Roman coins have been found here, and in the churchyard was dug up a lectern in brass, now placed in the chancel.

STEPHEN'S, ST. See HACKINGTON, co. Kent.

STEPHEN'S, ST., by SALTASH, a par. in the hund. of East, co. Cornwall, 1 mile S.W. of Saltash, its post town, and 9 miles from St. Germans. It contains the town and chplry. of Saltash-on-Hamoaze, and the remains of Trematon Castle, built before the Norman conquest, and subsequently the seat of the Valletorts. The principal gateway consists of three arches, supporting a square embattled tower, now appropriated as a museum for natural curiosities. The soil is shallow, on a substratum of slaty rock. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £139. The church is situated on a hill. It has a lich-gate, and contains tombs of the Bullers of Shillingham, and of the Bonds of Earth. There is also a district church at Saltash, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £100. The parochial charities produce about £79 per annum. Ince Castle is the principal residence.

STEPHEN'S, ST., IN BRANNEL, a par. in the hmlt. of Powder, co. Cornwall, 4 miles N.W. of St. Austle, its post town, and 12 from Bodmin. It is mentioned in Domesday survey as Bernel, and was held at that time by the Earl of Mortaigne, and was part of Caerhayes. It is situated in the midst of a mineral district, and is productive of granite, tin, copper, iron, antimony, and a fine white clay extensively used in the porcelain manufactures of Staffordshire. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £780. The church is an ancient Norman structure with a detached tower, situated on a hill. It contains the tomb and rhyming epitaph on Dr. Wolrige. There are National schools, and four almshouses endowed by James Buller in 1726.

STEPNEY, a par. and populous district of the metropolis, in the Tower div. of Ossulstone hund., and borough of the Tower Hamlets, co. Middlesex, 2½ miles E. of St. Paul's Cathedral. It is a junction station on the North London, the Blackwall, and Great Eastern railways; it lies chiefly between the Commercial-road and the Great Eastern railway, and includes the populous districts of Mile-End, New and Old Town, and part of Ratcliffe. The population of the parish in 1861 was 98,836, and of the ecclesiastical districts of the Holy Trinity and St. Philip respectively 10,478 and 14,805. Previously to 1669 it was much more extensive than at present, comprising, in addition to its present parochial limits, the hmlts. of Stratford-le-Bow, Limehouse, Shadwell, St. George's-in-the-East, Spitalfields, Bethnal Green, Wapping, Whitechapel, Poplar, and Blackwall, which from their increased importance have been successively separated from it, and formed into distinct parishes. In Domesday Book it is written Stebenhede, and in later documents Stebenhythe and Stebonheath. In 1299 it was the seat of a parliament summoned by Edward I. to meet at the mansion house of Henry Walleis, then lord mayor of London. In the 14th century the manor was held by the bishops of London, who had a palace called Bishop's Hall at Bethnal-Green, then a rural district, as described by Sir Thomas More in a letter to Dean Colet. It was subsequently alienated by Bishop Ridley to the crown, and given by Edward VI. to the Wentworths, from whom it came to the Manners and Colebrooke families. In the first year of Charles I.'s reign it was ravaged by the plague, which carried off 2,978 persons; and at the commencement of the parliamentary war was strongly fortified for the defence of the city. At this period the parish was a wide flat extending to Blackwall, as seen in the print of Hogarth's "Idle Apprentice." In 1665 the plague again broke out, and with such violence that it swept off 6,583 persons in one year, besides 116 sextons and gravediggers, belonging to the parish. In 1794 more than half the hamlet of Ratcliffe was consumed by a fire, which spread to the shipping in the river. The parish, situated on the northern bank of the Thames, is chiefly inhabited by persons connected with shipping, and contains extensive warehouses, especially in the Commercial-road, leading from Whitechapel to the East and West India Docks. It is well paved, lighted with gas, and supplied with water from the reservoir at Old Ford. On the banks of the Regent's canal, which traverses the parish, are numerous coal and timber wharves, and at its junction with the Thames is a dock capable of containing 100 vessels. The surface is almost level, rising gently from the river. It is generally considered healthy, resting on a gravel soil, but many cases of cholera occurred in 1849, and again in 1866. The greater part is now built over, but there are still some open spaces in the vicinity of Bow Common. The three hamlets are governed by different bodies:—Ratcliffe by trustees; Mile-End, Old and New Town, by a vestry constituted under Sir Benjamin Hall's Act, the rector and churchwardens being ex officio members. The custom of gavelkind prevails in the manor. There are several breweries, a large distillery, and numerous foundries and factories, chiefly in connection with the shipping interest. Here are situated the Whitechapel Union poor-house, the Commercial gas works, the East London cemetery, and the Baptist College, founded in 1810 on the site of the Marquis of Worcester's house, where Dr. Mead was born in 1673. In the Whitechapel-road are two theatres, the Effingham and Pavilion, the latter, built in 1858 from designs by Simmonds, is a spacious structure, with an entrance constructed of Portland stone, and containing the largest pit in London, capable of holding 2,000 persons. The living was once held by Archbishop Seagrave, Bishop Fox (the founder of Corpus Christi College, Oxford), Pace, and Dean Colet. It is a rect.* in the dioc. of London, val. £850, in the patron. of the Bishop of London. The parish church, dedicated to St. Dunstan, was built in the 14th century. It has a low broad tower, strengthened with buttresses and surmounted by a turret and dome. In the porch is a stone from "Carthage wall," and in the interior are many ancient monuments and tombs of eminent men, with several epitaphs, noticed in No. 518 of the Spectator. In addition to the parish church are the following district churches, viz. Holy Trinity, St. Thomas, St. Philip, All Saints', St. Peter's, and St. Paul's, Bow Common, the livings of which are all perpet. curs., varying in val. from £350 to £250. A new church is also about being built, the cost of which will be defrayed out of the proceeds of the sale of St. Benet's, Gracechurch-street, which is doomed to be demolished. Of the district churches the most noteworthy are St. Philip's, the first district Gothic church built in the E. of London, erected in 1829 at a cost of £7,000; and St. Paul's, Bow Common, built and endowed in 1858, at the expense of Mr. Cotton, of the Bank of England, from the designs of Mr. R. Hawkins. It is Decorated Gothic, with a spire of Bath stone and a painted E. window. There are 12 chapels belonging to the several dissenting denominations, also a synagogue and Jews' burial-ground. There are 40 National and other day schools, several of them endowed, as Bancroft's school in Mile End, Old Town, founded in 1729 for the education of 100 boys, who since 1803 have been boarded as well as clothed and instructed, with a library attached to the school; the Mile End, Old Town, and Ratcliffe charity schools, each with an income from endowment of £190; Stepney Meeting school; Wycliffe's chapel school, partially endowed. The charities altogether produce about £1,000 a year, including Coborn's bequest for seamen's widows; Curtis's for behoof of small debtors in prison, &c., besides numerous hospitals, or almshouses, as Deacon's City paupers' house, the German and Portuguese Jews' hospital, Drapers' hospital, Trinity almshouses, Gibson's or Coopers' almshouses, Drapers' almshouses; also, in Bow, almshouses belonging to the Skinners' and Vintners' companies. The London Hospital, situated in Whitechapel, and founded in 1740, is one of the most useful and extensive charities of the kind in the metropolis; the building was erected in 1752, from the designs of Mr. B. Mainwaring, and contains 35 wards with 439 beds. The amount of fixed income is £12,000, derived from funded property, voluntary donations, legacies, &c., and in 1861 the number of in and out patients relieved was 32,080. The Stepney Poor-law Union comprises the parishes of Limehouse, Ratcliffe, Shadwell, and Wapping, Mile-End Old Town having its own establishment. All children born at sea are supposed to belong to Stepney, according to the old rhyme—

"He who sails on the wide sea,
Is a parishioner of Stepney."

In consequence paupers born at sea have been sent here from all parts of the country, but the recent decisions of the superior courts refuse to establish this traditional law. See also articles LONDON, and the parishes enumerated above as once included in Stepney.

STEPNEY, a hmlt. in the Hunsley-Beacon div. of Harthill wap., East Riding co. York, 5 miles from Hull, of which it is a suburb. It is a station on the North-Eastern railway.

STEPNEY MARSH. See ISLE OF DOGS, co. Middlesex.

STEPPINGLEY, a par. in the hund. of Redbornestoke, co. Bedford, 2½ miles S.W. of Ampthill, its post town, and 10 S. of Bedford. It is a small agricultural village, bounded on the N. by the Flitt stream, flowing into the river Ouse. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £266, in the patron, of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, has a tower containing four bells. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. The Duke of Bedford is lord of the manor.

STERNDALE, EARL. See EARL STERNDALE, co. Derby.

STERNDALE, KING'S, a hmlt. in the par. of Bakewell, co. Derby, 3 miles S.E. of Buxton, on the river Wye.

STERNFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Plomesgate, co. Suffolk, 1 mile S. of Saxmundham, its post town. The village, which is small and irregularly built, is wholly agricultural, and the soil loamy. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £297. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, has a tower and four bells. The parochial charities produce about £61 per annum, realised from town estate. There is a school for both sexes.

STERT, a hmlt. in the par. of Camel, co. Somerset, 5 miles S.W. of Castle Cary.

STERT, or START, an islet in Bridgwater Bay, co. Somerset, 7½ miles N. of Bridgwater, at the mouth of the river Parret.

STERT, a chplry. in the par. of Urchfont, hund. of Swanborough, co. Wilts, 2 miles S.E. of Devizes, its post town. The village, which is wholly agricultural, is situated near the road from Salisbury to Devizes. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Urchfont, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church, dedicated to St. James, was erected in 1846. There is a National school.

STERTHILL, a hmlt. in the par. of West Camel, co. Somerset, 5 miles S.W. of Castle Cary.

STETCHWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Radfield, co. Cambridge, 3 miles S.W. of Newmarket, its post town, and 1½ mile E. of the Dullingham station on the Cambridge and Newmarket railway. The inhabitants of the village are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £174. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice, with a tower and five bells. It contains a monument to H. Gorges, Esq. The principal residence is Stetchworth House.

STEVENAGE, a par., post, and small market town in the hund. of Broadwater, co. Herts, 4 miles S.E. of Hitchin, and 12 N.W. of Hertford. It is a station on the Great Northern railway. It is situated on the great North road from London to Edinburgh, and is a polling and petty sessions town. In Domesday Book it is called Stevenach. It was a royal manor, and was granted by Edward the Confessor to Westminster Abbey, at the Dissolution by Henry VIII. to the Bishopric of Westminster, and on the suppression of that by Queen Mary to the see of London, to which the manor still belongs. The town principally consists of one long and spacious street extending N. and S. for nearly a mile, with several smaller ones branching off. It is well lighted with gas and amply supplied with water. A manor court is held annually at the Bury on the Wednesday in Easter week for the Bishop of London. Petty sessions for the division are held on alternate Thursdays at the National schoolroom. The trade is chiefly local, and straw-plaiting is extensively carried on. On the London road are six barrows or hills, from which the place is supposed to have derived its name. At Humly Wood, half a mile E. of the barrows, are the remains of an intrenched camp or fortification; and at Dane End, Dane's field, &c., battles are supposed to have been fought between the Danes and Saxons. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, gross val. £1,007. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is situated on a chalky eminence about half a mile from the town, and is approached by an avenue of trees. It is an ancient flint structure with an embattled and spired tower, and attached to the chancel are two small chapels. The interior contains two ancient piscinæ, also an E. window figuring the four Evangelists, the gift of G. Smyth, Esq., of this town. A new church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, has been erected at the S. end of the town at an outlay of £1,200. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. There is an endowed grammar school, to which, in 1558, the Rev. Thomas Alleyne bequeathed an annuity of £13 6*s.* 8*d.*; a separate endowment also belongs to it for English education of about £30. There are also National and infant schools. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a place of worship. Market day is on Saturday, but the market is now discontinued, except for the sale of straw plait. A pleasure fair is held 22nd of September.

STEVENSTON, a par. in the district of Cunninghame, co. Ayr, Scotland, containing a village of the same name, and nearly half of the town of Saltcoats. The parish is bounded by the Frith of Clyde, and by the parishes of Ardrossan, Kilwinning, and Irvine. It extends in length about 5 miles from W. to S.E., with an extreme breadth of 3 miles. Towards the sea the land is flat, and the soil light and sandy; and on this level ground the town of Saltcoats and the village of Stevenston are principally built. From E. to W. the greater part of the parish is divided by a winding and rocky acclivity, which was evidently the ancient sea cliff. To the N. of this boundary the soil is of deep loam or stiff clay; the state of cultivation is excellent; and the undulating surface is in many places wooded. Besides quarries of limestone and of superior grey sandstone, there is an extensive coal-field, which has been worked for nearly two centuries. It consists of twelve separate seams, which taken together measure 38 feet in thickness, and the lowest of which lies at a depth of more than 200 fathoms. The eastern portion of the field is worked under Messrs. Merry and Cuninghame, by whom the mining operations have been greatly extended, and furnaces erected for the smelting of iron ore. The western division is rented by Messrs Kenneth and Whitefield. The weaving of silk and other fine fabrics is still carried on, but not so extensively as formerly. A number of females are employed in muslin flowering. The parish is traversed by a branch of the S.W. railway, which has stations at Stevenston and Saltcoats. The village of Stevenston is about 6 miles N.W. of Irvine, and 1 mile N.E. of Saltcoats. The barony of Stevenston was gifted by Richard de Morville, High Constable of Scotland, to one Lockhart, and from his son Stephen the parish took its name. The only interesting remnant of antiquity is Kirilaw Castle, a ruined stronghold of the earls of Glencairn, which was sacked by the Montgomeries of Eglinton in 1488. The village, mentioned in the charter of the Loudoun family as far back as 1240, has a population of 2,600, and consists of one principal street, half a mile long, which is crossed by several smaller ones. The par. is in the presb. of Irvine and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The stipend of the minister averages £300. The parish church was erected in 1833. There are two Free churches, and one United Presbyterian church, and several schools. The principal seats are Kirilaw, Ardeer, Auchenharvie, Hayock's Lodge, Parkend, Mayville, and Hullerhirst. The population of the parish by the last census was 5,454.

STEVENTON, a par. in the hund. of Ock, co. Berks, 4½ miles S.W. of Abingdon, its post town. It is a station on the Great Western railway. The village, which is considerable, is situated on a branch of the river Thames, and near the Wilts and Berks canal. Here were formerly a castle of the Wakes, built in 1281, and a priory of Black canons, founded as a cell to Bec Abbey, in Normandy, in the reign of Henry I., and which upon the suppression of alien houses was given to Westminster Abbey. The land is divided between arable and pasture, with 100 acres of common. The soil is a rich loam. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £160, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster. The church, dedicated to St. James, contains a brass of Richard Do and wife, bearing date 1476. In the churchyard are remains of an ancient cross, which, though of great weight, sways to and fro at a touch. The parochial charities produce about £60 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Dean and Chapter of Westminster are lords of the manor.

STEVENTON, a par. in the hund. of Basingstoke, Kingclere div. of co. Hants, 5 miles N.E. of Andover, 3 S.E. of Overton, and 7 S.W. of Basingstoke. The village, which is small, is situated on the South-Western road. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £485. The church, an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has been restored. There is a free school supported by E. Knight, Esq., who is lord of the manor. The manor-house, an ancient building, is the principal residence.

STEVENTON, or STEVINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Willey, co. Bedford, 5 miles N.W. of Bedford, its post town. The village is situated near the river Ouse. The land is wholly arable. In the centre of the village stands an ancient cross. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £168. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice, with a tower and five bells. The interior contains a brass of T. Salle, bearing date 1422. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum, which go to Barringer's almshouses. There is a National school for both sexes. The Baptists have a place of worship. Near the church is a spring, which is called the Holy Well. Crewe Alston, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STEWARTFIELD, a vil. in the par. of Old Deer, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 3 miles S.W. of Mintlaw. It is situated on the western road from Ellon to Fraserburgh. Its original name was Crichie. In the village is an United Presbyterian church.

STEWARTON, a par., post and market town, in the district of Cunninghame, co. Ayr, Scotland. It extends nearly 10 miles in length from S.W. to N.E., with an extreme breadth of 4 miles, and is bounded by Renfrewshire, and by the pars. of Fenwick, Kilmaurs, Dreghorn, Irwin, Kilwenning, and Dunlop. The surface is undulating and slightly elevated at the N.E. end, but gradually declines towards the sea. It is watered by the Annock, Twinsey, Corshill, Eastburn, and Glazert Waters. The soil is mostly a strong clay. Extensive plantations have lately been made, and the whole of the land is enclosed. The prevailing rocks are trap in the north-eastern district, with carboniferous limestone and traces of coal in other parts, both of which are worked. The par. is traversed by the roads from Irvine to Glasgow, and from Kilmarnock to Paisley. The town of Stewarton is about 5 miles N.W. of Kilmarnock, and 2 S.E. of Dunlop. It is a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway, and is within access of the Crofthead station of the Glasgow and Neilston railway. It is situated near the centre of the parish, on the right bank of the river Annock, which is crossed by three bridges. At a little distance from the town are the foundations of a house said to have been a seat of the royal race of Stewarts, from which the place derives its name. Of late years it has risen to some importance, and is now uniform and well built. It has a savings-bank and two commercial banks, one a branch of the Ayrshire Banking Company, and the other of the Western Bank of Scotland. This place has long been distinguished for the production of Highland or tartan bonnets, which business furnishes employment to from 300 to 400 hands. The manufacture of carpets, which was considerable in the early part of the present century, has declined, but the forging of clockwork and silk and muslin weaving are still important branches of industry. There are besides several woollen mills engaged in carding and spinning for the carpet and bonnet trades. Justice of the peace courts are held on the first Thursday in each month, for the recovery of small debts, for the parishes of Stewarton, Dunlop, and Fenwick. This par. is in the presb. of Irvine and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The stipend of the minister is about £297. The parish church was erected in 1696, and enlarged in 1825. There are an United Presbyterian church, a Free church, a Congregational chapel, parochial and other schools. Market day is on Thursday, and fairs are held on the Thursday prior to the first Friday in January (old style), on the Monday prior to the first Thursday in May, and on the Wednesday prior to the last Thursday in October.

STEWARTON, a vil. in the par. of Kirkcolm, co. Wigton, Scotland, 5½ miles N. of Stranraer. It is situated on the W. side of Loch Ryan. The inhabitants are employed in weaving and agriculture.

STEWARTON, a vil. joined to Wishawton, in the par. of Cambusnethan, co. Lanark, Scotland.

STEWARTSTOWN, a small post and market town in the par. of Donaghenry, bar. of Dungannon, co. Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 25 miles E. of Omagh, and 104 from Dublin. It is situated on the road from Armagh to Coleraine, 3 miles from Lough Neagh. The town contains many well-built houses. Here are the market house, parish church, Roman Catholic chapel, Presbyterian and Wesleyan meeting-houses, National school, dispensary, and a police station. Petty sessions are held at intervals. Stewart's Hall, about 2 miles distant, is the seat of Earl Castlestewart. In this parish are the remains of a castle, built by Sir A. Stewart, to whom the place was granted by James I. Wednesday is market day. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday in each month (old style).

STEWKLEY, a par. in the hund. of Cottesloe, co. Bucks, 5½ miles N.W. of Leighton-Buzzard, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Winslow. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the North-Western railway, on the Chiltern hills. The par. includes the hmlts. of Stewkley Dean and Littlecote. A portion of the female inhabitants are engaged in straw-plaiting, the lace manufacture having become nearly extinct. Many fossils are found in the lime quarries. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £194, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a Norman structure, with a square pinnacled tower and five bells. The parochial charities produce about £26 per annum. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels.

STEWLEY, a tythg. in the par. of Isle of Abbots, co. Somerset, 5 miles S.W. of Langport.

STEWTON, a par. in the Wold div. of Louth-Eske hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2½ miles S.E. of Louth, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the East Lincolnshire railway, which passes through the parish. There are brick, tile, and drain works. The soil consists of loam and clay, with a subsoil of clay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £131. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. The register dates from 1711.

STEYNE, a hmlt. in the par. of Acton, co. Middlesex, 6 miles W. of St. Paul's.

STEYNING, a hund. in the rape of Bramber, co. Sussex, contains the pars. of Bramber, Buttolphs, Coombs, Steyning, Washington, and Wiston; comprising an area of 12,250 acres.

STEYNING, a par., post, and market town in the above hund., co. Sussex, 5 miles N. of Shoreham, and 50 S.W. of London. It is a station on the South Coast railway. The town is situated at the bridge over the river Adur, and is a petty sessions and polling place for West Sussex. It returned two members to parliament, until disfranchised by the Reform Act. The town, which contains about 1,500 inhabitants, chiefly consists of two good streets, and has of late years considerably improved. It is lighted with gas, and supplied with good water. There are two branch banks, a post-office savings-bank, two breweries, and an extensive parchment manufactory. The staple trade of the place is in agricultural produce. Here was formerly a priory, founded as a cell to the abbey of Fêcamp, in Normandy. The vicarage stands on the site of the priory. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £308. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is said to have been built about the 12th century. There are endowed grammar, National, and infant schools, and a place of worship for the Wesleyans. There are also a reading room and subscription library. The union poorhouse is situated at Shoreham. Highden and Western Park are the principal residences. Market day is held every alternate Monday, and a large cattle fair is held on the 11th October.

STEYNTON, a par. in the hund. of Roose, co. Pembroke, 6 miles from Haverfordwest, and 2 from Milford, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on Milford Haven, and near Pill Priory. Here are some ancient forts. The substratum is productive of lime and culm. The par. includes the vil. of Milford Haven. The living is a vic. annexed to the rect. of Johnstone, in the dioc. of St. David's. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure with a tower, which was garrisoned during the civil war. There is also a district church at Milford Haven, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £80. The parochial charities produce about £20, which go to Devonald's school. St. Botolph's and Castle Hill are the principal residences.

STIBBARD, a par. in the hund. of Gallow, co. Norfolk, 4 miles N.W. of Foulsham, and 4 S.E. of Fakenham railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the road from Fakenham to Wells, and near the river Wensam. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Colkirk, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, erected in 1858. The Wesleyans have a place of worship. E. Wodehouse, Esq., M.P., is lord of the manor.

STIBBINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Norman Cross, co. Huntingdon, 9 miles from Peterborough, the same distance from Oundle, and 1 mile E. of Wansford, its post town and railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the great north road, and on the navigable river Nen. The par. includes the hmlt. of Sibson, and part of the vil. of Wansford. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £431. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is of great antiquity, and of late years has been restored. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum. The Duke of Bedford is lord of the manor. There is a Wesleyan chapel.

STICHEL, an ancient par. in the district of Kelso, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, now joined to the par. of Hume, co. Berwick.

STICKFORD, a par. in the W. div. of Bolingbroke soke, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 6 miles N.W. of Eastville railway station, and the same distance S.W. of Spilsby. Boston is its post town. The village is situated on the Catchwater, and on the road from Spilsby to Boston. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £133, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Helen. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum, of which £8 go to the free school. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a place of worship. The Fen drains are navigable between this parish and Boston. T. Coltman, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STICKILLIN, a par. in the bar. of Ardee, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles E. of Ardee, its post town. The surface extends along the S. bank of the river Dee. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Armagh, val., with Ardee, £898, in the patron. of the primate. Stickillin House is in the vicinity. There are traces of an old burial-ground.

STICKLAND, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Decuman, co. Somerset, near Watchet.

STICKLEPATH, a vil. in the par. of Sampford Courtney, co. Devon, 4 miles N.E. of Okehampton.

STICKLEPATH, a hmlt. in the par. of Old Cleeve, co. Somerset, near Watchet.

STICKLINCH, a hmlt. in the par. of West Pennard, co. Somerset, 4 miles S.W. of Shepton Mallet.

STICKNEY, a par. in the W. div. of Bolingbroke soke, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 8½ miles N. of Boston, its post town, and 3 from New Bolingbroke. The village, which is considerable, occupies an elevated site near the E. and W. Fens on the Catchwater. The country is intersected with Fen drains, supplying facilities of communication with Boston. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £356. The church, dedicated to St. Luke, has a tower containing four bells, and has recently been restored. The parochial charities produce about £149 per annum, of which £105 go to Lovell's free school. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels.

STIFFKEY, a par. in the hund. of North Greenhoe, co. Norfolk, 3½ miles E. of Wells, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Walsingham. The village is situated in a deep valley on the banks of the Stiffkey river, which takes its rise near Swan Novers, and discharges itself into Blakeney harbour, about a mile and a half to the N.E. of this place. The parish is bounded on the N. by the German Ocean, and along the shore is a strip of salt marsh, against which the sea has thrown up a range of sand hills. The remains of the old hall, erected by Lord Keeper Bacon in 1604, have been converted into a farmhouse. On the summit of Warborough Hill is a circular camp. The living comprises the united rects. of St. John and St. Mary, with that of Morston annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church of St. John is an ancient structure with a square embattled tower. In the chancel is a monument to Nathaniel Bacon. The church of St. Mary is in ruins. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There are a school, and a chapel for the Independents.

STIFFORD, a par. in the hund. of Chafford, co. Essex, 2 miles N. of Grays, its post town, and 3 W. of Orsett. The village is small, but contains several well-built houses. The South Essex hounds meet in this parish, which takes its name from a ford over a stream that flows into the river Thames. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £450. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is of the 13th century, with a spired tower and three bells. The interior contains three brasses of priests, bearing date from 1370. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum.

STILDON WITH HOLLIN, a constablewick in the par. of Rock, co. Worcester, 7 miles S.W. of Stourport.

STILEWAY, a hmlt. in the par. of Meare, co. Somerset, 3 miles N.W. of Glastonbury.

STILLINGFLEET, a par. and tnshp. chiefly in the wap. of Ouse, East Riding co. York, but partly in the ainsty of York, 7 miles S.W. of York, its post town. The village, which is extensive, is situated near the river Ouse. The par. includes the tnshps. of Moreby, Stillingfleet, and Kelfield. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, val. £412, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, is an ancient structure, and has attached to it a chapel, in which is a cross-legged figure of a knight in armour, said to be one of the Moreby family. There is also a district church at Acaster Selby, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £40. The Wesleyans have a chapel. There are village schools.

STILLINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Redmarshall, S.W. div. of Stockton ward, co. Durham, 6 miles N.W. of Stockton. It is a station on the West Hartlepool section of the North-Eastern railway.

STILLINGTON, a par. in the wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 10 miles N. of York, its post town, 4 S.E. of Easingwold, and 6½ from Tollerton station on the North-Eastern railway. The village is situated on the Fosse, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is of a sandy and clayey nature, with a subsoil of the same. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £178, in the patron. of the prebend. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. The living was once held by Sterne, who resided at Sutton, in the neighbourhood. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a chapel, schools, and Sunday-school. Stillington Hall and Stillington Villa are the principal residences. Captain S. Croft is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

STILLORGAN, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Rathdown, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Dublin. It is a station on the Dublin, Wicklow, and Wexford railway. The surface is chiefly taken up by demesne lands and garden ground. It lies near Dublin Bay, and is crossed by the road from Dublin to Bray. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Kilmacud, £140, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church was enlarged in 1812, and again in 1833. There are three public schools, a dispensary, and a police station. Stillorgan Park, Stillorgan House, and Ridesdale, the seat of the Archbishop of Dublin, are the chief residences. The parish gives title of baron to the Allens, formerly of Stillorgan Park.

STILTON, a par. in the hund. of Norman-Cross, co. Huntingdon, 6 miles S.W. of Peterborough, its post town, and 8 S.E. of Oundle. The village is situated on the Roman way Ermine Street, and gives name to the celebrated Stilton cheese, which was originally made in Leicester by Mrs. Paulet, of Melton Mowbray, but was first sold here at the "Bell Inn" by Cooper Thornhill. It is chiefly made in the county of Leicestershire, though Stilton produces a small quantity. The land is chiefly in pasture, and a portion of it is fenny. In the vicinity are traces of a Roman encampment. Stilton prior to the formation of railways was of more importance than at present, being a great thoroughfare for coaches. It is a polling place for the county, and was once a market town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £400, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, or to St. James, is an ancient structure with a square tower. The parochial charities produce about £23 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, and a Wesleyan chapel. The Rev. W. Strong is lord of the manor.

STINCHAR WATER, a river of the co. of Ayr, Scotland, rises about 6 miles N.W. of Loch Doon, in Currick, and falls into the sea at Ballantrae.

STINCHCOMBE, a par. in the upper div. of Berkeley hund., co. Gloucester, 2 miles N.W. of Dursley, its post town, and 1 mile S.E. of Berkeley Road railway station. The village is situated near the Bristol and Gloucester railway. The soil is of a loamy description, with a subsoil of clay and lime. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £65, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Cyril, has been lately rebuilt. The parochial charities produce about £25 per annum. There is a National school, supported by the Rev. Sir George Provost, lord of the manor.

STINSFORD, a par. in the hund. of George, Dorchester div. of co. Dorset, 1½ mile N.E. of Dorchester, its post town. The village is situated near the river Frome. The par. includes the hmlts. of Higher and Lower Buckhampton, Kingston, Marlwood, and Upper Kingston. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £190. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has an ivy-covered tower. The interior contains some ancient tablets. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum. There is a parochial school at Rockhampton. Stinsford House and Kingston House are the principal residences. There are some circular sand-pits.

STIPERSTONES, a ridge of trap rocks in the co. of Salop, 6 miles from Church Stretton, 1,800 feet high, and containing lead and zinc.

STIRCHLEY, a par. in the Wellington div. of South Bradford hund., co. Salop, 3 miles S.W. of Shiffnal, its post town, and 2 from Madeley. It is a station on the Coalport branch of the London and North Western railway. The village is situated on the Shrewsbury canal. A portion of the inhabitants are employed in the collieries and iron works. The soil consists of light gravel. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £262. The church, dedicated to St. James, has been enlarged and restored at the expense of the Botfields. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes. R. H. Cheney, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STIRLING, an inland co. of Scotland, occupying the isthmus in the middle of Scotland between the rivers Forth and Clyde, and at nearly mid-distance between the German and Atlantic oceans. It lies between 55° 56′ and 56° 16′ N. lat., and between 3° 35′ and 4° 40′ W. long., on the mutual borders of the Highlands in the W. and the Lowlands in the E. The figure of the county is singular, and has been likened to a fish or eel. Its length from E. to W. is 36 miles, but following the curvature of its form from Linlithgow-bridge on the E.S.E. to Loch Lomond, near Inversnaid in the W., 45 miles; and its greatest breadth from N. to S. is 18 miles, but its average breadth does not exceed 10 miles, and in the N., where it tapers, the distance across is under 5 miles. On the northern side are two small detached portions, consisting of the parish of Alva and part of the parish of Logie. It comprises 462 square miles, or 295,875 acres, of which nearly two-thirds are under cultivation, besides 15 square miles of lake and 40,000 acres of carse land near the Forth. Its boundaries are for the most part distinctly marked by water-courses or lakes, the principal boundary line on the N. and E. being the Forth, which separates it from the counties of Perth and Clackmannan, the Avon and one of its tributaries on the S.E. separating it from Linlithgowshire, the Kelvin on the S. from Lanarkshire, and Loch Lomond on the W. from Dumbartonshire, besides for 5½ miles the lake of Loch Katrine, and numerous small streams, tributaries of the rivers above named. This county is one of the most important in Scotland. Lying in the direct passage from the northern to the southern parts of the island, it has been the scene of many memorable transactions, and there are few counties in which more monuments of antiquity are to be met with. In the earliest times it was the seat of the Damnii, and was subsequently incorporated in the Roman province Vespasiana. In the lower division of the county are still some slight traces of the wall of Antoninus, built for the purpose of protecting the Roman conquests on the S., and along the same line remains of Roman forts, weapons, and coins have occasionally been met with. After the overthrow of the Pictish sovereignty, Stirlingshire, with all the country S. of the Forth, was overrun by the Saxons, and formed part of the Strathclyde and Northumbrian kingdoms; and at a later date it passed quietly under the government of the Scottish sovereigns. In the 12th century it was much benefited by David I., who established religious houses, particularly that at Cambus-Kenneth. Stirling Castle commanded the most important pass betwixt the northern and southern districts of the kingdom, adding greatly to the importance of the county. In 1297 Wallace defeated the English near Stirling, and in the following year was himself routed at Falkirk. In 1314 Robert Bruce gained a decisive victory over Edward at Bannockburn, in which above 30,000 English perished. In 1488 James III. was defeated by his rebellious nobles at Sauchieburn, near Stirling, and afterwards murdered at Beaton's Mill. In 1645 the Duke of Montrose defeated the Covenanters under Baillie at Kilsyth, and in 1745 the Royalists were defeated by the Pretender near Falkirk. The surface in the western part, adjacent to Loch Lomond, is extremely mountainous, including Ben Lomond, which attains an elevation of 3,195 feet above sea-level, and constitutes the watershed between the streams which flow eastward to the German Ocean, and those which flow westward to the Atlantic. Immediately E. of this Highland district the land becomes flattish, or gently inclining towards the vale of the Endrick on the S. and the rivers Kelty and Forth on the N. In the centre of the co. the land is again elevated into a series of hills, which under various names, as Campsie Fells, Kilsyth, Fintry, and Gargunnock hills, run from near the north-eastern border towards the S.W. through the middle of the county—those of greatest altitude ranging from 1,300 to 1,500 feet in height. From one of these eminences, called Kilsyth Hill, there is obtained a view embracing an extent of near 12,000 square miles. In a line parallel with these hills run the Lennox, Stirling, and Ochills, forming the eastern screen of the large central plain, and having their sides and summits clothed with a green sward, which affords excellent pasturage for sheep. All E. of these hills, the country, comprising nearly one-third of the whole county, consists of carse land, in many parts flat, and in others presenting a succession of inclined planes gradually rising towards the S. from the vale of the Forth. In this quarter the country has experienced extensive improvements, and now comprises a rich and varied tract, exhibiting a constant alternation of fields in the highest state of tillage, meadows, plantations, pleasure grounds, gardens, and orchards. The Forth, which is the principal river, traverses a large part of the county; it takes its rise from a spring near the summit of Ben Lomond, and flows by a winding course of 20 miles, through the links of Stirling to the estuary called the Frith of Forth. In its course it receives the waters of the Avon, Carron, Pow, Bannockburn, Touch, Allan, Devon, and other small streams. The Carron, which is the largest of these tributaries, has its source near the centre of the county, and is navigable for vessels of large burden for about two miles above its junction with the Forth. The other rivers are the Finglen, or Kelvin, which runs to the Clyde, and the Blane and Carnock waters, tributaries of the Endrick, which last has a fall of 91 feet before it falls into Loch Lomond. Besides these waters, the county enjoys the advantage of the Forth and Clyde canal and the Union Navigation. The lakes, exclusive of Loch Lomond and Loch Katrine, which only touch the boundary, are lochs Airthrey, Arklet, Black, Coulter, Craig-End, and Ellrig.—Almost every variety of soil to be met with in Scotland occurs in Stirlingshire, but the lands are provincially classified into carse, dryfield, hill, moor, and moss. Of these the carse or alluvial lands are the most common and the most fertile, embracing thousands of acres on the banks of the Forth, and stretching from Buchlyvie to the eastern limits of the county. This soil is composed of argillaceous earth, interseamed with beds of shells, marl, and clay, having in some places a depth of more than 20 feet, and lying generally from 12 to 25 feet above sea-level at high water. The dryfield comprehends the lower or arable declivities of the hills, and the greater part of the valleys in the central and western districts, and is in general of a light and gravelly description, with some patches of rich loam interspersed. The hill division is chiefly a light sandy soil intermixed with till, and in places peat earth, and is wholly in pasture. The moorland comprises the heathy tracts now chiefly confined to the parish of Buchanan, on the borders of the Highlands, but formerly occupying about one-fourth of the county. The moss, which has also been largely reclaimed, prevails now chiefly in Slamannan, where it rests upon a fine clay, and affords good pasture for sheep. Agriculture is in a highly improved condition, but from the variety of soils the system pursued cannot be uniform, nor its produce equally abundant in different parts. On the fertile lands of the eastern district large crops of wheat, beans, barley, turnips, and potatoes are raised, and the culture of clover and artificial grasses has been generally adopted; but on the poor and thin soils of the Highlands in the W. bear and oats are chiefly grown. The ranges of moor in the upland districts are exclusively devoted to the feeding of numerous flocks of sheep and highland cattle, the former being of the Linton, Cheviot, and old black faced varieties. The size of the farms in the Lowlands varies from 25 to 300 acres, but in the Highlands often exceeds 4,000 acres. The greater part of the surface was anciently covered with forests and mosses, but the woods and plantations now comprise only about 23,000 acres, and the mosses have generally been drained and brought under tillage.—The geological formation of the underlying strata may be grouped into three classes: the metamorphic rocks in the Highland district of the W., comprising chiefly micaceous schist, chlorite, and mica slate; the carboniferous formation, including the coal measures of the S. and S.E., with the Old Red sandstone in the N.W.; and the igneous formation of the central district, comprising the trap and basaltic rocks which protrude through the superincumbent coal and limestone, and form the broad mass of the Lennox hills. Stirlingshire excels in the quantity and variety of its mineral productions, the most abundant of which are coal, ironstone, limestone, freestone, and sandstone, all occurring in the same districts comprised by the great coal-field which extends from Kintyre to Fifeshire. The principal coal pits are in the southern base of the Lennox hills, and in the vicinity of the Forth and Clyde canal, by means of which, and the Union canal, vast quantities of coal are exported to London, Edinburgh, and other places on the eastern coast. Veins of silver were discovered and wrought in the last century, but the working of them has long since been discontinued, also copper, lead, arsenic, and cobalt have been raised at different periods, but not to any considerable amount. A bed of slate, occurring between the seams of coal and the upper stratum of limestone, furnishes the Campsie chemical works with materials for the manufacture of alum and copperas, and at Ballagan some thin strata of alabaster and rich specimens of antimony have been found. The staple manufacture of this county is iron goods, both cast and malleable, the chief seat of which is at Carron, near Falkirk. Other manufactures are the making of carpenters' nails at St. Ninian's, paper at Denny, leather at Falkirk and St. Ninian's; cotton, woollen, tartan, and worsted goods at Stirling, St. Ninian's, Ballindalloch, Dunipace, Fintry, and Alva; calico printing and chemical works at Campsie, Denny, East Kilpatrick, and Strathblane, and carpets at Bannockburn; while at Lillyburn, Milton, and other towns are distilleries, tanneries, and breweries.—The old valued rent of the county was £9,042, and the new valuation for 1861 £302,087, exclusive of canals and railways. The assessment on lands and houses is at the rate of 2½*d.* in each £100 of real rental. The population in 1851 was 86,237, inhabiting 11,312 houses and in 1861 it had increased to 91,926, inhabiting 12,196 houses. The number of separate families in 1861 was 20,305, and the children from five to fifteen attending school 14,669. The county contains 22 complete parishes, and portions of 4 others. The burghs and chief towns are Stirling, the capital, a royal and parliamentary burgh, with a population in 1861 of 13,846; Falkirk, a parliamentary burgh, with a population of 9,029; Kilsyth, a burgh of barony, and six other towns with a population over 2,000, viz., Balfour, Drymen, and Lennoxtown, where small debt courts are held; and Alva, Bannockburn, and Denny, besides about 100 villages and hamlets. It returns one member to parliament for the county, the parliamentary constituency in 1860 being 1,639. Stirling and Falkirk are also specially represented, the former being joined with Culross, Queensferry, Dunfermline, and Inverskeething in returning one member; and the latter with Linlithgow, Lanark, Airdrie, and Hamilton in returning one member. The county is governed by a lord-lieutenant, vice-lieutenant, 21 deputy-lieutenants, a sheriff, and two substitutes. The commissary court is held at Stirling every Tuesday and Friday. The sheriff small debt courts twice a week, alternately at Stirling and Falkirk during session; also on fixed days at Drymen, Lennoxtown, and Balfron. The general quarter sessions are held at Stirling on the first Tuesdays in March, June, and August, and on the last Tuesday in October. Nineteen parishes are returned as assessed, and five as unassessed, for the poor. For ecclesiastical purposes it comprises, besides the 22 civil parishes, one quoad sacra parish and eight chapelries, belonging to the presbyteries of Stirling, Linlithgow, Dumbarton, Glasgow, and Dunblane, and in the synods of Perth, Glasgow, and Lothian. The number of clergy are 25, with average stipends of £240, and the number of Established churches 31, with 21 Free churches, 19 United Presbyterian churches, 2 Episcopalian chapels, and four Roman Catholic chapels, besides places of worship belonging to the Independents, Baptists, Wesleyans, and other dissenting congregations. There are about 106 public day schools, 70 private day schools, and 17 evening schools for adults, within the county.—The county is traversed by numerous good roads, and the North British, the Caledonian, and the Forth and Clyde railways unite here. The principal seats are Buchanan House, of the Duke of Montrose, who has large estates in this county, and has bestowed much attention to the rearing of plantations; Dunmore Park, of the Earl of Dunmore; Kerse House, of the Earl of Zetland; Airthrey, of Lord Abercrombie; Stenhouse, of Bruce, Bart.; Duntreath and Colzium, of Edmonstone, Bart.; Stirling Park, of Hay, Bart.; Touch-House, of Stewart, Bart.; besides mansions of the private gentry.—The antiquities are numerous, and some of those attributed to the Romans of high interest, as Antonine's wall, the great causeway from the W. of England to the Grampians, the two stations at Castle Cary and Roughcastle; the ruin resembling a great tun called Arthur's Oven, attributed to the Romanized Britons; Arthur's Lift cromlech, with the cairns near it; British strengths and tumuli at Dunipace; also the baronial castles of Almond, Airth, Baldernock, Dunmore, Duntreath, Inversnaid, Mugdock, Powfonts, and Stirling, which last is probably the most interesting, as the others are so demolished and transmuted as to convey but an inadequate impression of their original construction. The ecclesiastical antiquities are Cambus-Kenneth Abbey, Emmanuel nunnery at Muiravonside, the Dominican and Franciscan friaries of Stirling, and the chapel royal in Stirling Castle.

STIRLING, an ancient town and port, royal and parliamentary burgh, and the capital of the co. and par. of its name, situated mainly in the N. of Stirlingshire, but including the Abbey district, or Cambus-Kenneth, in Clackmannanshire, 28 miles N.E. of Glasgow, and 35 N.W. of Edinburgh. It is the junction station of the Scottish Central, Forth and Clyde Junction, and Stirling and Dunfermline section of the Edinburgh and Glasgow railways. This place, which is of high antiquity, is situated at the confluence of the Teith with the

Forth, covering the ridge of an isolated trap rock, which rises to an altitude of 220 feet above the Forth at its base, and 350 above sea-level, and presents a resemblance of form to the Acropolis of Athens, and to the Castle rock of Edinburgh. The par. includes, besides the royal burgh of Stirling, the vil. of Raploch and part of the vil. of Causewayhead; while the vil. of Abbey, which forms a suburb of Stirling, on the N. bank of the Forth, for civil purposes is considered as belonging to the par. of Logie, in Clackmannanshire. It appears to have been selected by Agricola for the site of a military station on account of its commanding the most important pass between the northern and southern divisions of the island, on the direct line of the great causeway which ran from the W. of England to the Grampians. After having continued for several centuries in the hands of the Scots, it subsequently became a seat of the Saxon kings of Northumbria, who are related to have rebuilt the castle, and to have constructed the stone bridge across the Forth about the middle of the 9th century, and on which, in 1571, Archibald Hamilton, of St. Andrew's, was executed. Besides the natural defence formed on two sides of the Forth, and on another by the precipitousness of the face of the hill, the town has on every side been artificially fortified. On the N.W. is the castle, originally a single tower; on the N. and N.E. are vestiges of a great ditch; on the E. ran a wall, passing a little E. of the present Athenæum; and on the S., where no protection is afforded by the river, runs a strong wall along the brink of the precipice. Towards the close of the 11th century it rose into consequence, and in the course of the succeeding century it attained the distinction of being one of the four principal fortresses in Scotland, and such it continued during the sanguinary and protracted contest which Edward I. of England commenced for the subjugation of Scotland. In the course of that struggle this castle and its vicinity formed the theatre of some of the most brilliant achievements of Sir William Wallace, of which one was the battle fought before Stirling on the 13th September, 1297, and in which the English army sustained a signal overthrow. In the following year the castle was captured by Sir W. Wallace, after the battle of Falkirk, and dismantled, but was speedily repaired by Edward II., who held it only a year. The castle first became a favourite residence of the Scottish kings in the reign of James I., whose son, James II., was born in it in 1430, and was brought up here under the government of Sir Thomas Livingstone. On the occasion of the assassination of the young Earl of Douglas by the king the town was burnt by his partisans. In the following reign it afforded a secure retreat to James III. from his turbulent nobles, and in it James IV. frequently resided during Lent, as it is said, to do penance for the part he had acted in his father's death. James V. was born and crowned in the castle, which then communicated with the town by the Windy Pass, or Ballangeich road. In his reign the new palace was built within the castle walls, and under the Regent Mary of Guise the French battery was added to the castle. Both Mary Queen of Scots and her son James VI. were crowned here. The latter monarch built the new chapel, in which his son Prince Henry was baptised, and whose room, with that of his tutor Buchanan, are still shown. The castle was visited by Charles I. whilst on his progress through Scotland, and by Charles II. in 1650, shortly before the battle of Worcester. In 1651 General Monk besieged the castle, and finally reduced it, when the national registers and old Scotch standard measures were carried off. By the Articles of Union with England this castle was declared to be one of the four fortresses of Scotland which were ever after to be kept in repair. Since that period it has experienced little change in external aspect, and is now used as barracks, and the chapel of James VI. as an armoury. It is commanded by a fort-major and subalterns, assisted by a barrack-master, who is likewise storekeeper. Stirling, as a royal burgh, is one of great antiquity, having received its first charter from Alexander I. It is governed by a provost, 4 baillies, a treasurer, dean of guild, and 14 councillors, with the stylo of high sheriff and sheriffs, having a cumulative jurisdiction with the sheriff of the county within the burgh jurisdiction.. This burgh, in connection with Culross, Queensferry, Inverkeithing, and Dunfermline, returns one member to parliament. The parliamentary constituency in 1861 was 599, and the municipal 487. The parliamentary bounds comprise, besides the par. of Stirling, parts of the adjoining pars. of Logie and St. Ninian's. The population of the royal burgh in 1851 was 9,361, while that of the parliamentary was 12,837, and in 1861, 13,846. The main part of the town, like the old town of Edinburgh, is built on the sloping ridge of a rock, the precipitous end of which, towards the W., is occupied by the castle, as above described. The approaches to the town from every side are unsurpassed by those of any other town in Scotland. The streets, though somewhat irregularly laid out, owing to the uneven character of the ground, are in general spacious and well built. Great improvements have of late years been effected both in the town and suburbs, especially since the reformed council came into office. The streets are well paved, lighted with gas, and the houses supplied with good water, brought from a distance of three miles. The expenses of the public works are defrayed out of a fund termed "the common good," without assessing any one; so that Stirling is one of the cheapest towns for residence in the three kingdoms. The suburbs comprise the vils. of Bellfield, Newhouse, Melville-place, and the Craigs, extending along the roads to St. Ninian's and Airth. The public buildings are the town-house, which stands in Broad-street, opposite the site of the old cross, with a lofty tower containing a set of musical chimes; the new county gaol, erected in 1848 at a cost of £10,000; the old gaol and county buildings, or custom house; new corn exchange, erected in 1839; a dispensary, savings-bank, poorhouse, erected in 1857; Athenæum, with a lofty spire; and the Drummond Agricultural Museum, built in 1840, and containing a collection of objects connected with rural economy; also two bridges —viz. the ancient one mentioned above, the S. arch of which was destroyed by General Blakeney in 1745 to cut off the retreat of the Highlanders, and the new bridge from Abbey Craig, built at a cost of £17,000. On account of the shallowness of the water in the Forth, which is only 5½ feet at neap, and 11 at spring, tides, very little foreign commerce is carried on, but steam vessels ply daily to Granton, and when the tide will permit to Edinburgh. A plan for deepening the river has been several times discussed at the town council, but not yet agreed upon. The harbour is a simple wharf, called Stirling shore, and the port is a creek to Alloa. Its revenue is about £500 a year, and the aggregate tonnage of vessels entering the port 2,000 tons, wholly employed in the coasting trade, or in the fisheries, which are productive. A considerable business is done in corn, malt, coals, wool, timber, bricks, tiles, lime, and agricultural produce. The manufactures are cotton goods, woollens, tartans, tartan-shawls, carpets, yarns, leather, ropes, candles, and soap; the manufacture of shalloons, largely carried on in the 16th and 17th centuries, is now almost extinct, as was that of tartans, until revived by the publication of the Waverley novels. The town contains six commercial banks, several hotels, subscription and free libraries, reading-rooms, school of arts, an agricultural association, horticultural, writers', and Caledonian societies, central medical association, Adamson's bursary, fishing and curling clubs. The register of sasines goes back to 1473, and the council records to 1597. Two weekly newspapers, the Stirling Journal and Observer, are published in the town, the former on Friday, and the latter on Thursday; also one monthly paper, the British Messenger. Stirling is the head-quarters of the county militia, and the seat of an excise collection. Being the county town, the justiciary and sheriffs' courts are held here, and are attended by a number of procurators, resident in the town. Sheriffs' county courts are held every Tuesday and Friday, sheriff small-debt courts every Friday, and justice of peace small-debt courts on the first Monday in each month. One of the principal attractions of Stirling is the walk carried under the S. wall of the town, in the face of the castle rock, and in many places cut out of the stone. Stirling gave title of earl and viscount to the Alexanders, and was the birthplace of Graham, the botanist, in 1786. It gives name to a presbytery and synod, both of the Established and Free churches. The parish is a collegiate charge, in three divisions, value respectively £350, £250, and £200. The edifice now occupied as the E. and W. parochial churches is a Gothic structure of hewn stone, with an arched roof supported by two rows of plain, massive pillars. It was originally built by James IV. in 1494, for the use of the convent of Franciscans, or Grey Friars, but at the time of the Reformation became the parish church, and so continued till 1656, when it was divided by a blank partition wall into the E. and W. churches; the former has a chapel built by Cardinal Beaton, in which the Regent Arran publicly renounced Popery in 1543, and in which Knox preached before James VI. The third parish church, called the North Kirk, was erected in 1842 in Murray-place, on ground formerly belonging to the Dominican monastery founded by Alexander II. An ancient chapel, dedicated to St. Ninian, stood near the South Port, and gave name to a copious spring, which furnished the main supply of water to the citizens previous to 1774. There are two Free churches, the N. and S., and two United Presbyterian churches, also several other places of worship belonging to various denominations. Stirling has been long celebrated for its schools and hospitals; some of the latter are foundations of long standing, and well endowed, as Cowane's hospital, founded in 1633; the Spittal hospital, founded in 1530 for decayed burgesses, and two mortifications; Allan's and Cunningham's, for maintaining and educating 50 boys. There are four burgh schools, one of which, the High School, built in 1854, is a first-class mathematical and classical academy, partially supported out of the burgh fund, and partly by appropriations from Allan's, Spittal's, and Cowane's bequests; also a school of arts, ragged school, five ladies' schools, and about fifteen other denominational and private schools. In and around Stirling are numerous ancient structures and antiquities, as the King's Knott, or Arthur's Round Table, where tournaments were held; the Ladies' Rock, where the ladies looked on; the Moat Hill, or Hurley-Hacket, where executions took place; the ruins of the Regent Marr's house, situated in Broad-street; and Argyle's Lodgings (built in 1637 by the first Earl of Stirling), in Castle Wynd-alley. The race-course, situated in the ancient park, is an oblong of 1 mile 3 furlongs and 180 yards in circuit. Market day is on Friday. Fairs are held on the first Fridays in February, March, April, August, and November; on the last Friday in March, the third Friday in September, and the second Friday in December; also a statute fair for hiring farm servants in October.

STIRTLOE, or STURTLOW, a hmlt. in the par. of Buckden, co. Hants, 4 miles S.W. of Huntingdon, near the river Ouse.

STIRTON WITH THORLBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Kildwick, E. div. of Staincliffe wap., West Riding co. York, 1 mile N.W. of Skipton. It is situated near the Leeds and Liverpool canal and the river Aire. The tnshp. includes the hmlt. of Holme Bridge.

STISTED, a par. in the hund. of Hinckford, co. Essex, 3 miles N.E. of Braintree, its post town, and 5 S. of Halstead. The village is situated on the river Blackwater. It was given in 1046 to Christ Church, Canterbury, by Godwin, Earl of Kent. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £466, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient Norman structure with a tower surmounted by a shingle spire, and containing six bells. The tower was rebuilt in 1844. The church has three stained windows. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum. There is a girls' school supported by the rector, and an infant school by Onley Savill Onley, Esq., who is lord of the manor. There is a chapel for the Independents.

STITCHCOMB, a tythg. in the par. of Mildenhall, co. Wilts, 3 miles E. of Marlborough, on the river Kennet.

STITCHEL, a vil. in the par. of the same name, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, about 3 miles N.W. of Kelso. It is situated on the road from Kelso to Greenlaw. Here are the parish church of Stitchel and Hume, also an United Presbyterian church.

STITCHEL WITH HUME, a par. in the cos. of Berwick and Roxburgh, Scotland. It extends in length between 5 and 6 miles from N. to S., with a breadth of from 3 to 4 miles. That portion of the united par. which formed the ancient parish of Hume is situated in Berwickshire, and was united in the last century to that of Stitchel in Roxburghshire, in order to augment the minister's stipend. The soil is principally clayey, and in some places wet and cold, but has been so much improved that it is now productive. The village is about 3 miles N.W. of Kelso. It is situated on the river Eden, which here forms a cascade called Newton Don, with a fall of 40 feet. The united par. is in the presb. of Kelso, and synod of Merse and Teviotdale. The stipend of the minister is £219. The parish church stands in the village of Stitchel; there is also an United Presbyterian church. A parochial school exists in each parish. The barony of Stitchel, and the barony of Hume each maintain their own poor. There is a deed of mortification of £100 by Captain Roger Handyside for the poor of the village of Hume.

STITHIANS, ST., a par. in the hund. of Kerrier, co. Cornwall, 4 miles S.E. of Redruth, and 9 S.W. of Truro. This parish includes a part of the vil. of Ponsnooth, and the Druid stones called the Nine Sisters. There are powder and paper mills. The surface is hilly, and the substratum principally granite and slate, with veins of tin. The land, which is principally in dairy farms, is fertile and well cultivated, though the soil is somewhat shallow. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. with Perran Arworthal £377. The church, dedicated to St. Stedian, is an ancient structure of granite, situated 390 feet above the sea-level. There is a chapel for Wesleyans, also a National school. In this parish are several ancient sculptured crosses.

STITTENHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Sheriff-Hutton, wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 7½ miles S.W. of New Malton, and 13 N.E. of York. The village consists of a few agricultural buildings. The Duke of Sutherland is lord of the manor, and sole landowner.

STIVICHALL, a par. in the city of Coventry, co. Warwick, 1½ mile S.W. of Coventry, its post town, and 4 miles from Kenilworth. The village is situated on a branch of the London and North-Western railway. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £90. The church, dedicated to St. James, was rebuilt in 1817, the expense being defrayed by the late A. R. Gregory, Esq., of Stivichall Hall.

STIXWOULD, a par. in the S. div. of Gartree wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 8 miles S.W. of Horncastle, its post town, and 6 N.W. of Tattershall. It is a station on the Great Northern railway. The village, which is small, is situated near the river Witham, and is chiefly agricultural. Stixwould had formerly a Cistercian nunnery, founded in the reign of Stephen by Countess Lucy, widow of John Tailbois, Earl of Chester; at the Dissolution its revenue was valued at £163 1*s.* 2*d., and the site granted to R. Dighton in 1540. In 1850 two stone coffins were discovered on Abbey Farm. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £105. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, was reconstructed out of the stone of the ancient monastery in 1831. The register dates from 1543. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. Near the tower of the church are to be seen the stone coffins mentioned above.

STOAK. See STOKE, co. Chester.

STOAT, a hmlt. in the par. of Tidenham, co. Gloucester, 4 miles N.E. of Chepstow.

STOBBS, a vil. in the pars. of Borthwick and Temple, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 6 miles S. of Dalkeith. It is a station on the North British railway. It is situated on the river South Esk. The chief part of the inhabitants are employed in the gunpowder mills, erected in 1794.

STOBHILL, a vil. in the tnshp. of Morpeth Castle, co. Northumberland, near Morpeth.

STOBHILL, a vil. in the par. of Newbattle and Temple, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 4 miles S. of Dalkeith. There is a Free Church preaching station.

STOBHILL-ENGINE, a vil. in the par. of Cockpen, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 8 miles S.E. of Edinburgh, in the valley of the South Esk.

STOBO, or STOB-HOW, a par. in the co. of Peebles, Scotland. The surface is chiefly hilly, some of the hills rising 1,600 feet above sea-level. The land adjacent to the Tweed and the Lyne is well cultivated, and some of it planted, but the hills are mostly covered with heath. There are extensive slate quarries, from which the dark blue slate is obtained which covers most of the houses of the new town of Edinburgh. There are two bridges over the Water of Lyne, which is the boundary on the E. between this parish and those of Newlands, Lyne, and Peebles. The village of Stobo is about 5 miles S.W. of Peebles, or 6½ by the Symington branch of the Caledonian railway, which has a station here. The village stands at the confluence of the rivers Lyne and Weston, near Stobo Hopes and Pyked Stane mountains. At Sheriff Muir, an uncultivated heath, is a large round cavity called the Pinkie's Hole, also several Druid stones. The principal seats are Stobo Castle and New Posso. This par. is in the presb. of Peebles, and synod of Lothian and Tweedale. The stipend of the minister is about £158. The parish church is of great antiquity.

STOBOROUGH, a lib. in the par. of Holy Trinity and borough of Wareham, co. Dorset, half a mile S. of Wareham.

STOCK, a par. in the hund. of Chelmsford, co. Essex, 2 miles N.E. of Billericay, and 3 S.E. of Ingatestone. It was formerly a hamlet of Buttsbury. The land, which is fertile, is chiefly arable. Fine clay for brick-making is found in abundance. The Essex Union hounds meet in this parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. with that of Ramsdon Bellhouse £658. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains the recumbent figure of a knight in armour. The Independents have a chapel. There is a National school, built in 1839. The parochial charities produce about £25 per annum, of which £14 belongs to Tweedy's almshouses.

STOCK, a tythg. in the par. of Calne, co. Wilts.

STOCK, a hmlt. in the par. of Bracewell, West Riding co. York.

STOCK AND BRADLEY, a chplry. in the par. of Fladbury, middle div. of Oswaldslow hund., co. Worcester, 6 miles S.E. of Droitwich, its post town, and 4 E. of the Droitwich railway station. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Fladbury, in the dioc. of Worcester. The church has a tower containing three bells. There is a clothing club.

STOCKBRIDGE, a par., post, and market town in the upper div. of Thorngate hund., having separate jurisdiction, but locally in co. Hants, 9 miles N. of Romsey, and 9 N.W. of Winchester. It is a station on the Andover and Southampton branch of the London and South-Western railway. It is situated on the river Test and the Andover and Redbridge canal, the former being celebrated for its trout fishing. It is a petty sessions town, and until disfranchised by the Reform bill returned two members to parliament. The town consists of one long street, forming part of the great western road, with the townhall standing nearly in the centre. There were formerly numerous small bridges over the branches of the Test, which intersect the main street, but these have recently been taken down except one, and the whole has been arched over. In this parish are the union poorhouse and a police station, also two extensive training establishments for race horses. The Houghton fishing club is held at the Grosvenor Arms, which is also used by the members of the Bibury racing club, removed hither from Gloucestershire. The preparation of parchment and glue afford employment to a few persons, but the chief business is in agricultural produce. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £198. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice, with a tower containing four bells. There is a parochial school. The Independents have a chapel. The race-stand is situated near Danebury-hill camp, under which is the course, recently formed in the adjoining parishes of Wallop and Longstock. Lord Clarendon is lord of the manor. Market day is on Thursday. A fair for the sale of lambs is held on 10th July. The races are in June.

STOCKBRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Bentley, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N. of Doncaster. It is situated on the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway.

STOCKBURY, a par. in the hund. of Eyhorne, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 4 miles S.E. of Rainham, 7 N.E. of Maidstone, and 5 S.W. of Sittingbourne. It contains the hmlts. of Yelsted, Hill Green, and Bozair. The land is partly in hop-grounds and woodland. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £243, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Rochester. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, contains the tomb of Dr. Thorpe, the editor of the "Registrum Roffense." A great part of the chancel and N. transept having been destroyed by fire in 1836, the whole has been rebuilt. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Dissenters have a chapel. A pleasure fair is held on the 2nd August.

STOCK-CROSS, an ecclesiastical district in the par. of Speen, co. Berks, near Newbury.

STOCKELD, a hmlt. and tnshp. in the par. of Spofforth, upper div. of Claro wap., West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Wetherby. Here is a singularly-formed rock, 65 feet in diameter, and 30 in height. Stockeld Park is the principal residence.

STOCKERSTON, a par. in the hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 2½ miles S.W. of Uppingham, its post town, and 5 N. of Medbourn Bridge railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Eye, which separates it from Rutlandshire. The land is divided betwixt pasture, wood, and arable. The soil is chiefly clay. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £215. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a square tower containing three bells. It has some stained windows. The Hall is the principal residence. J. Walker and G. Bellairs, Esqs., are lords of the manor.

STOCKETT, a tnshp. in the par. of Ellesmere, co. Salop, 3 miles S. of Ellesmere. It is joined with Kenwick.

STOCK-GAYLAND, or STOKE, a par. in the hund. of Brownshall, Sturminster div. of co. Dorset, 5 miles W. of Sturminster-Newton, its post town, and 4 S. of Stallbridge. The parish is bounded on the N. by the river Caundle, and is intersected in the S. by the Lidden. The land is chiefly in pasture. There was once a chantry at Watton Court. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £194. The church, situated in the Park, is an ancient structure, and contains the effigy of a Knight Templar. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There are day and Sunday schools, supported by the Rev. H. F. Yeatman, LL.B., who is lord of the manor. Stockton House is the principal residence.

STOCKHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Runcorn, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 3 miles N.E. of Frodsham.

STOCKHILL, a vil. in the par. of Ilkley, West Riding co. York, 7 miles N.W. of Otley. It is situated on the river Wharfe. It is in conjunction with the hamlet of Middleton to form a township.

STOCKHILL FORCE, a cascade formed by the Scandale Beck, near Ambleside, co. Westmoreland.

STOCKINGFORD, a chplry. in the par. of Nuneaton, co. Warwick, 2 miles W. of Nuneaton, its post town. It is a station on the Midland railway. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £120, in the patron. of the Vicar of Nuneaton. The church, dedicated to St. Paul, was erected in 1824.

STOCKING, PELHAM, a par. in the hund. of Edwinstree, co. Herts. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £163. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. Buntingford is the post town. N. Calvert, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STOCKLAND, a par. in the hund. of Whitchurch-Canonicorum, Bridport div. of co. Devon, 6 miles N.E. of Honiton, its post town, and 14 from Taunton. It is an extensive, but irregularly-built village, situated betwixt the Otter and Yark valleys. The par. includes the chplry. of Dalwood. The surface is hilly, the soil, consisting principally of clay, upon a subsoil of marl. Much of the land is in pasture, appropriated to dairy farming. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Dalwood annexed, in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £457, in the patron. of the freeholders. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower containing a clock and six bells. It has some painted windows. The parochial charities produce about £60 per annum, of which £10 go to the free school. There is a parochial school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. The Rev. H. Marker is lord of the manor. A pleasure fair is held on the first Wednesday following the 11th June.

STOCKLAND-BRISTOL, a par. in the hund. of Cannington, co. Somerset, 7 miles N.W. of Bridgwater, its post town, and 6½ from Nether Stowey. The village is situated near the Bristol Channel and the river Parret. The inhabitants are wholly agricultural. The soil consists of a red clay upon a subsoil of stone. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £161. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, is an ancient edifice, with a square tower containing four bells. The register dates from 1563. There is a church school. A new vicarage has been constructed, also a new road, and other improvements, at the expense of T. Daniel, Esq., who is lord of the manor.

STOCKLEDALEWATH-BOUND, a tnshp. in the par. of Castle Sowerby, co. Cumberland, 8 miles S.W. of Carlisle. In this township are traces of a Roman camp, 188 yards by 160, called Castle-Steads, also ruins of a Druidical temple.

STOCKLEIGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Brancepeth, N.W. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 5 miles S.W. of Durham, its post town.

STOCKLEIGH ENGLISH, a par. in the hund. of West Budleigh, co. Devon, 5 miles N.E. of Crediton, its post town. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Creedy. The soil consists of loam and clay upon a subsoil of clay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £160. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a tower and four bells. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. John Prestwood Bellew, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STOCKLEIGH POMEROY, a par. in the hund. of West Budleigh, co. Devon, 4 miles N.E. of Crediton, its post town, and 9 from Tiverton. The village, which is small, is situated on the road from Crediton to Tiverton. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £222, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an ancient Norman edifice, dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum.

STOCKLEY, a tythg. in the par. of Calne, co. Wilts, near Calne.

STOCKLEY. See STOCKLEIGH, co. Durham.

STOCKLINCH MAGDALEN, a par. in the hund. of Abdick, co. Somerset, 2½ miles N.E. of Ilminster, its post town, and 7 W. of Martoch railway station on the Yeovil branch of the Bristol and Exeter railway. The village is situated on the Chard canal, near the river Isle. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £140. The church is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum.

STOCKLINCH OTTERSAY, a par. in the hund. of Abdick, co. Somerset, 2½ miles N.E. of Ilminster, its post town. The village is inconsiderable. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £148. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower containing three bells. The register dates from 1574. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a mixed school for both sexes, also a Church Sunday-school. The Rev. C. J. Allen is lord of the manor.

STOCKPORT, a par., market, and manufacturing town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 7½ miles from Staleybridge, 37 N.E. of Chester, and 176 N.W. of London by road, or 182½ by the London and North-Western railway viâ Trent Valley. It has stations on the Manchester and Birmingham section of the London and North-Western, Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire, and Oldham, Ashton-under-Lyne and Guide Bridge Junction railways. The par., which is large, includes, besides the town of Stockport, the chplries. of Disley, Dukinfield, Hyde, Marple, Norbury, Romiley or Chadkirk, and Stanley, with the tnshps. of Bramall, Bredbury, Brinnington, Etchells, Offerton, Torkington, and Werneths. The town, which is of high antiquity, is situated on a steep rock of red sandstone, rising precipitously from the southern bend of the river Mersey, which is here formed by the junction of the rivers Thame and Goyt. A branch canal communicates with the Manchester and Ashton canal. It was anciently a post or "port" on the Roman way from Manchester to Derby. It was made a barony under the Earls of Chester, who rebuilt the castle, which was held by Geoffrey de Constantine in 1173 against Henry II. In the reign of Henry III. it was erected into a free borough by Robert de Stokeport, from whom it came to the Warrens. In the civil war of Charles I. it was garrisoned for the parliament, but was taken by the Royalists under Prince Rupert in 1644, and recovered by Lesly in 1645. In 1745 the town was occupied by the Highlanders under Prince Charles Stuart. No vestiges of the castle now remain, but an old building, the Castle Inn, occupies its site. The town consists of a number of streets irregularly laid out, rising in successive tiers of houses from the base to the summit of the hill, some of which are precipitous, especially those in the vicinity of the market-place, which occupies an extensive level on the summit of the hill. Many of the mills and factories in the town rise six or seven stories, and include Marsland's and Orrell's, one of the largest in the kingdom, being 300 feet in length by 200, and six stories high, containing 600 windows. There are about 100 firms in Stockport and Heaton Norris engaged in different branches of the cotton manufacture, and the capital sunk in a single mill often exceeds £100,000. There are also three cotton-printing establishments, two bleaching establishments, and several dye works. The principal public buildings are the court-house, used also as the town-hall; the market-house, a modern structure, situated in the market-place, containing a large hall, covered by a semicircular iron roof, with lights in the crown; the infirmary and dispensary, with a Doric front, was built by Lane in 1832 at a cost of £6,000; the barracks, a theatre, savings-bank, three commercial banks, mechanics' institution, reading rooms, police station, county lock-up, and union poor-house at Shaw-Heath. The streets are well paved and lighted. The greatest ornaments of the town, however, are its bridges over the Mersey and Thame, and the viaduct of the London and North-Western railway, which carries the Manchester and Birmingham branch over the valley of the Mersey, at an elevation of 110 feet above the bed of the river, and literally over the town. This work consists of 27 arches, some of them 63 feet span, built at a cost of £75,000. Scarcely less imposing is the bridge of 11 arches, constructed in 1826 at a cost of £40,000, to carry the Wellington-road across, not only the river Mersey, but its valley, at an elevation of 40 feet above the water, so as to avoid the ascent and descent caused by the uneven site of the town. Nine of the arches are on the Cheshire, and two on the Lancashire side of the Mersey. There are four other bridges in or near the town over the Mersey, one over the Thame, and one recently constructed over the Goyt. Considerable improvements have recently been effected in the formation of the Wellington-road, the widening of Cheapside-corner and Bridge-street, and the draining of Edgeley. The principal trade of the town, as noticed above, is connected with the cotton manufactures, including cotton spinning, calico and fustian weaving, besides which a considerable number of hands are employed in the manufacture of hats, thread, silk, woollens, dyeing, bleaching, calico printing, and in the making of brushes, spindles, shuttles, &c. There are extensive engine and machine factories, several iron and brass foundries, breweries, and flour mills in the town, and brick and tile works in the vicinity. The limits of the municipal and parliamentary boroughs, which are co-extensive, include, besides the old borough or tnshp. of Stockport, the hmlts. of Brinksway and Edgeley, with parts of the tnshp. of Brimmington, and the town of Heaton Norris, in Lancashire, on the opposite bank of the Mersey. The population of the borough in 1851 was 53,835, and in 1861, 54,681, inhabiting 11,255 houses. It returns two members to parliament by the Reform bill, and under the late Municipal Act it is divided into 7 wards, and governed by a mayor, who is also returning officer, 14 aldermen, and 42 councillors, with the style of "mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of the borough of Stockport." The municipal revenue is about £1,900. Stockport is a polling place for the county elections. The borough magistrates sit three days a week, viz., Monday, Wednesday, and Saturday, at the court-house; and petty sessions for the division are held fortnightly on Thursday. A county court is also held monthly. The poor-law guardians meet weekly on Monday. The Poor-law Union comprises 17 tnshps., 15 being in Cheshire and 2 in Lancashire. It is also the seat of a superintendent registry district. One weekly newspaper, the Stockport Advertiser, is published in the town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £2,500. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, which is the mother church, is a modern structure with a lofty square embattled tower surmounted by pinnacles, and containing a peal of eight bells. It was rebuilt in 1817, at a cost of £30,000, with the exception of the chancel, which is of the 14th century, and was restored by Ordish in 1848. The church contains an E. window with tracery, carved stone stalls, effigies of Richard de Vernon, who held the manor in the reign of Edward II., and tombs of the Leghs of Lyme, Davenport of Bramhall, and Ardernes of Harden Hall (now a bank). The living of St. Thomas's, now a perpet. cur., will become a separate rectory on the next avoidance of the rectory of Stockport. The church, situated on the E. side of the Wellington-road, is of Grecian architecture, with a tower surmounted by a cupola. It was built in 1825 at a cost of nearly £15,000. Besides these there are St. Peter's, erected in 1768 at the cost of the late W. Wright, Esq.; St. Paul's Postwood, a modern structure with a lofty spire; Christ Church, situated in Wellington-street North; Heaton Norris, a cruciform structure with a lofty spire, erected in 1846 at a cost of £6,000; also St. Mark's, St. Matthew's, and the several churches situated in the chplries. above named. The livings of these churches are perpet. curs., varying in val. from £220 to £80. There are three chapels for Independents, three for Wesleyans, two for New Connexion Methodists, and one each for Baptists, Association Methodists, Roman Catholics, Unitarians, and Society of Friends. The free grammar-school founded in 1487 by Sir Edmund Shaw has an income from endowment of £25, with two exhibitions of £50 each at Oxford or Cambridge, tenable for three years. The school-house, which was rebuilt in 1832, by T. Hardwick, is 60 feet by 30, and is the property of the Goldsmiths' Company of London, who have the appointment of the head-master. It is free to 50 boys, sons of inhabitants of Stockport, and at present has about 150 scholars. The Stockport Sunday-school, situated in Duke-street, has a front 140 feet long and four stories high. It contains library, lecture hall, and 84 class rooms. It has an income of £600, and is attended by near 6,000 children on Sundays. There are also four sets of National schools in connection with St. Mary's, St. Thomas's, St. Peter's, and Christ Church district; also British and Foreign, Sunday, infant, Wesleyan, and Roman Catholic schools in various parts of the town. The parochial charities produce about £300 per annum, including the endowment of Warren's almshouses. Lord Poynton is lord of the manor. Friday is market day for agricultural produce, chiefly corn, oatmeal, and cheese, but much business is also done on Saturday. Fairs are held on 4th and 25th March, 1st May, 20th and 25th October, for cattle; on 1st January and 4th July for general stock; and in October for pleasure.

STOCKPORT ETCHELLS, a tnshp. in the par. of Stockport, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 4½ miles S.W. of Stockport. The village is small. The Manchester Royal Lunatic Hospital, in this township, which adjoins the road from Wilmslow to Manchester, and occupies an area of 52 acres, was erected in 1848 at an outlay of £25,000. It is self-supporting, no free patients being admitted.

STOCKSFIELD-HALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Bywell St. Andrew, E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 5½ miles S.E. of Corbridge, and 9 S.E. of Hexham. It has a station on the York and Berwick railway. It is situated on the river Tyne, which is here crossed by a bridge of five arches constructed in 1836. The soil is rich and productive. W. B. Beaumont, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STOCKS WITH COPTIVINNEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Ellesmere, co. Salop, 1 mile N.E. of Ellesmere.

STOCKTON, a par. in the hund. of Clavering, co. Norfolk, 4½ miles S.E. of Loddon, and 3 N.W. of Beccles. Bungay is its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £275. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The register dates from 1536. The parochial charities produce about £65 per annum, realised from town estate. J. Kerrick, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

STOCKTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Malpas, hund. of Broxton, co. Chester, 2 miles S.W. of Malpas. It is situated on the river Elf. Lord Kenyon is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The Hall is now converted into a farmhouse.

STOCKTON, a par. in the Shiffnall div. of Brimstree hund., co. Salop, 5 miles S.W. of Shiffnall, its post town, and 5 N. of Bridgnorth. The village is situated on the turnpike road betwixt Shiffnall and Bridgnorth, near the river Severn, which bounds the parish on the W. The par. includes the hmlts. of Norton and Highford, and part of Apley Park. Eastward of the park is a natural terrace two miles in length, with a prospect of the Wrekin and Clee hills. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lichfield. The church, dedicated to St. Chad, is an ancient structure, with a square tower, containing a clock and six bells. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a day-school for both sexes, which is solely supported by T. C. Whitmore, Esq. Apley Park is the principal residence.

STOCKTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Chirbury, co. Salop, 10 miles N.W. of Bishop's Castle.

STOCKTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Longford, co. Salop, 2 miles S.E. of Newport.

STOCKTON, a par. in the hund. of Elstub, co. Wilts, 4 miles S.E. of Heytesbury, its post town, 2 N.W. of Wiley, and 8 S.E. of Warminster. The village is situated on the river Wiley, and is chiefly agricultural. Near the Ridgeway or Roman road to Sarum are earthworks, comprising an area of 62 acres, where many relics of Roman and British origin have been discovered. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £436, in the patron. of the Bishop of Winchester. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The parochial charities produce about £159 per annum, which go to Topp's almshouses. Stockton House is the principal residence. The South Wilts hounds meet at Stockton Wood. H. G. Biggs, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STOCKTON, a par. in the Southam div. of Knightlow hund., co. Warwick, 2 miles S.E. of Southam. Rugby is its post town. The village is situated near the Warwick and Napton canal. The substratum is productive of blue lias limestone. The surface is in general flat. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £338, in the patron. of New College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The parochial charities produce about £26 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes.

STOCKTON, a par. in the lower div. of Doddingtree hund., co. Worcester, 8 miles S.W. of Stourport, and 14 N.W. of Worcester. The village is situated near the river Teme, and is wholly agricultural. The great road from Worcester to Ludlow passes through the parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £254. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure, but was thoroughly restored in 1846. There is a parochial school.

STOCKTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Harewood, wap. of Upper Claro, West Riding co. York, 7 miles N. of Leeds, near the river Wharfe.

STOCKTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Warrington, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 1 mile S.E. of Warrington, and 16 E. of Liverpool.

STOCKTON, a ward in two divs., co. Durham: the N.E. contains the pars. of Billingham, Bishop's Middleham, Elwick Hall, Greatham, Grindon, Hartlepool, Sedgefield, Great Stainton, Stranton, and part of Hart, comprising an area of 59,550 acres; the S.W. div. contains the pars. of Bishopton, Craike, Low Dinsdale, Eaglescliffe, Elton, Harworth, Middleton St. George, Long Newton, Norton, Redmarshall, Stockton-upon-Tees, Haughton-le-Skerne, and Sockburn, comprising 46,310 acres. This ward gives title to a deanery and archdeaconry in the dioc. of Durham.

STOCKTON-ON-THE-FOREST, a par., partly in the lib. of St. Peter's, East Riding, and partly in the wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of York, its post town, and 1 mile S. of the Stockton railway station on the Market Weighton branch of the North-Eastern line of railway. The village is situated on the E. side of the ancient forest of Galtrees. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is sandy. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £157, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. There is an endowed village school at which a Sunday-school is held. Hazel Bush, Brockfield, and Stockton Hall, are the principal residences. J. Agar, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STOCKTON, SOUTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Thornaby, West Riding co. York. It is situated on the Darlington railway, opposite Stockton-on-Tees.

STOCKTON-UPON-TEES, a par., seaport, market town, and municipal borough, in the S.W. div. of Stockton ward, co. Durham, 10 miles S.W. of Hartlepool, 20 S.E. of Durham, and 36 from Newcastle-upon-Tyne. It has stations on the Stockton and Darlington, the Stockton, West Hartlepool Harbour, and Clarence, and the North-Eastern railways, besides several branch and junction lines for conveying the produce of the numerous collieries and mines in the vicinity. It is favourably situated for commerce on the left bank of the river Tees, about 4 miles from its mouth, above where the Hartburn Beck joins, and about 10 miles from the sea. The soil is a strong loam. The par., which formed a chplry. to Norton previous to 1711, contains besides the borough of Stockton, the tnshps. of East Hartburn and Preston, with the hmlts. of Rockhope and Wearhead. The town was at an early period a place of importance, and the residence of the bishops of Durham, who had a moated manor-house here, afterwards converted into a castle. It was visited by King John in 1214, by whom it is supposed to have been originally incorporated, and was ravaged by the Scots in 1325. In the civil war it was held for Charles I., but taken by the Scottish army in 1645, and two years afterwards the castle was ordered by parliament to be dismantled. The traces of the moat and embankment are all that now remain, the castle having been demolished in 1652, at which time the town consisted of 40 wooden houses. In 1808 the harbour was improved by the construction of a cutting to avoid the winding of the river, so that vessels of 300 tons can come up to the quays, and at spring tides vessels drawing 17 feet water. The way down the river winds past the floating light to the Scar rocks at the bar, which at high springs has 29 feet water, and at low water from 10 to 11 feet, being less obstructive than that of any other port between the Humber and the Forth, while outside the bar the water is 15 fathoms. It is now an improving free port, having Cleveland port and Middlesborough for subports. Its foreign trade is chiefly with Holland, British America, and the ports of the Baltic, and its coasting trade with London, Yarmouth, Hull, Leith, Sunderland, and Shields. The number of steam vessels belonging to the port is about 28, and of sailing vessels above 50 tons about 150. The trade of Stockton has much increased of late years. The chief imports are timber, deals, unwrought iron, masts, spars, hemp, flax, tallow, hides, oak-bark, linseed, wine, spirits, groceries, and colonial produce. The exports are coal, coke, manufactured iron, lead, linen, worsted yarn, and agricultural produce. The town is laid out with regularity, consisting principally of one broad street, nearly a mile in length from S. to N. At the southern extremity of the High-street a road from it crosses the Tees to the village of South Stockton in Yorkshire, by a bridge of five arches, the middle one being 72 feet span, erected in 1770. The houses are well built of brick, except a few of the older ones, which have been constructed out of the stones from the old castle. The principal public buildings are the town-hall and assembly rooms in the middle of the High-street, a quadrangular structure, surmounted with a clock tower and spire, erected in 1735; the borough hall, also situated in the High-street, erected in 1852 at a cost of £3,300; the market pillar 33 feet high, occupying the site of the old market cross, and surrounded by shambles; also a custom-house, subscription library in High-street, mechanics' institute in Dovecote-street, with a library of 2,000 volumes, theatre, newsrooms, dispensary founded in 1790, union poor-house, savings-bank, and three commercial branch banks. On the Yorkshire side of the Tees, adjoining the bridge, is the race-course, 1 mile 100 yards long. The streets are well paved and lighted, and the houses abundantly supplied with water by the Stockton, Middlesborough, and Yarm water company, incorporated by Act of Parliament in 1851. The manufactures carried on in Stockton and its neighbourhood, comprehend iron and brass foundries, steam-engine factories, seven rope and sail factories, a pottery, corn, yarn and worsted mills, besides shipbuilding yards, breweries, brick and tile kilns. The Tees salmon fishery has somewhat declined, but the river abounds with flounders, eels, and smelts. The population of the borough in 1851 was 1,867, of the town 9,808, and in 1861, 13,357, the boundaries of the borough having in 1852 been made co-extensive with the township. From various points in the vicinity of the town views are obtained of the Cleveland hills and the Roseberry Topping. The government of the borough is invested by the Extension and Improvement Act of 1852, in a mayor, 8 aldermen, and 24 councillors, who are constituted the local board of health for the four wards into which the borough was then divided. The corporation revenue is about £1,500, chiefly derived from rents, and from anchorage and plankage dues. It is a polling place for the southern division of the county. Petty sessions are held fortnightly by the county magistrates for the Stockton ward, and by the borough magistrates twice a week on Monday and Thursday at the townhall. A county court is also held monthly, and various courts by the seneschal of the Bishop of Durham, who is lord of the manor. Stockton Poor-law Union contains 42 parishes and townships; it is also the head of a superintendent registry district. The living is a vic.* in the archdeaconry and dioc. of Durham, val. £247, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas, is situated in the High-street, and was built in 1712, on the site of one originally founded in 1234. It is 150 feet in length by 67 in breadth, with a tower 80 feet high, through which is the entrance at the W. end. It has an E. window inserted in 1828. There is also the district church of Trinity, the living of which is a perpet cur.,* val. £300. Holy Trinity church, situated at the southern end of the town, is a Gothic structure, with a square tower surmounted by an octagonal spire, completed in 1837. There are chapels for Wesleyans, Primitive and Association Methodists, Scotch Presbyterians, Baptists, Independents, Society of Friends, Unitarians, and Roman Catholics, the last occupying a site in the Norton-road, with burial-ground adjoining. There are a subscription grammar school, National, British, infant, Wesleyan, and Roman Catholic schools, also an industrial school for girls, and a blue-coat school, rebuilt in 1819, and having an endowment of £250 per annum. The parochial charities, including the endowment of almshouses for 36 aged persons, amount to £270. Joseph Reed the dramatist; Crosby, Lord Mayor of London, whose obelisk may be seen at Southwark; and Ritson, the antiquary, were born here. A coin of Nero was found near the river bank when digging the foundations for a new quay. The market days are Wednesday and Saturday, the former for corn and general merchandise, and the latter for meat, vegetables, fruit, and provisions. A cattle market is also held every alternate Wednesday. Fairs are held on the Wednesday prior to the 13th May, 18th July, Thursday prior to 19th November for cheese, and 23rd November.

STOCKWELL, a chplry. and populous suburban district in the par. of Lambeth, co. Surrey, 3 miles S.W. of St. Paul's, and 1 mile from Clapham. It may be reckoned a suburb of London, and has already been mentioned under article LAMBETH [which see]. Stockwell came from the Riverses, Earls of Devon, through the crown to the Chutes and Thorneycrofts, who had a moated seat here. There is an extensive ale brewery in the vicinity. The ecclesiastical district of Stockwell contained in 1861 a population of 7,265. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £360, in the patron. of the incumbent of St. Mark's, Kennington. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a steeple 106 feet high. There is also Stockwell proprietary chapel, the living of which is in the patron. of trustees. The Independents have a chapel. There are National schools, built in 1818; also the Stockwell Proprietary Grammar School in Park-road, Clapham-road.

STOCKWITH, EAST, a tnshp. in the par. of Gainsborough, co. Lincoln, 3¾ miles N.W. of Gainsborough, its post town. The village is situated on the river Trent, over which is a ferry to West Stockwith. It is a subport to Hull. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £82, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. There is a Wesleyan school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel.

STOCKWITH, WEST, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Misterton, wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Lincoln, 4 miles N.W. of Gainsborough. It is situated opposite East Stockwith, at the conjunction of the Chesterfield canal and river Idle with the Trent. The tnshp. includes the hmlt. of Heckdike, and the basin of the Idle navigation. The village forms a long line of buildings on the western bank of the Trent. It was formerly a small hamlet, but has risen to the rank of a flourishing river port, under Hull, since the Idle was made navigable to Bawtry. The living is a cur.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £200. The church was built in 1722, pursuant to the will of William Huntington. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

STOCKWOOD, or STOKE, a par. in the lib. of Sutton Poyntz, Dorchester div. of co. Dorset, 8 miles S.W. of Sherborne, its post town, and 8½ S.E. of Yeovil. The parish, which is inconsiderable, is situated near Melbury Park, and is chiefly agricultural. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The surface is generally level, but surrounded with hills. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £160. The church is dedicated to St. Edwald.

STODDAY, a hmlt. in the par. of Lancaster, hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 2 miles S.W. of Lancaster. It is in conjunction with Ashton to form a township.

STODDEN, a hund. in the co. of Bedford, contains the town of Bedford, and the pars. of Bolnhurst, Clapham, Dean, Kysoe, Knotting, Milchbourne, Milton-Earnest, Oakley, Pertenhall, Riseley, Sheldon, Little Staughton, Tilbrook, and Yielding, comprising an area of 27,590 acres, exclusive of Bedford.

STODMARSH, a par. in the hund. of Downhamford, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 5 miles N.E. of Canterbury, its post town, and 3 N.W. of Wingham. The parish is situated near the river Stour. Part of the land is in hop-grounds and orchards. The living is a don., val. £218, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The register dates from 1560. A court leet is held every six years.

STODY, a par. in the hund. of Holt, co. Norfolk, 3 miles S.W. of Holt. Thetford is its post town. The village is situated in a dell, and is watered by a rivulet running into the Glaven. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Hunworth, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £342. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a cruciform structure with a circular tower; it has some stained windows and a mural monument to the late rector. The register dates from 1580.

STOFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Stogursey, co. Somerset, 6 miles N.W. of Bridgwater, near the bay.

STOFORD, a tythg. in the par. of South Newton, co. Wilts, 2 miles N.W. of Wilton, on the river Wiley.

STOFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Barwick, co. Somerset, 1 mile S. of Yeovil.

STOGUMBER, a par. and small market town in the hund. of Williton, co. Somerset, 13 miles N.W. of Taunton, its post town, and 1 mile W. of the Stogumber station on the West Somerset railway. The town, which has only 1,000 inhabitants, is situated under the Quantock hills. The par. includes the hmlts. of Capton, Halsway, Kingswood, Preston, Rexton, Vellow, and Vexford. The soil consists of loam and clay, with a subsoil of marl and stone rush. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £239, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Wells. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower and five bells. The parochial charities produce about £48 per annum, £15 of which go to the almshouses for poor widows. There is a National school for both sexes. The Baptists have a chapel. Sir Walter Trevelyan, Bart., and Langley St. Albyn, Esq., are lords of the manor. Market day is Saturday; but little business is now done. A cattle fair occurs on 6th May.

STOGURSEY, or STOKE-COURCY, a par. in the hund. of Cannington, co. Somerset, 7 miles from Nether Stowey, its post town, and 8½ W. of Bridgwater. The village is situated near the Bristol Channel, which bounds the parish on the N. The par. contains the hmlts. of Burton, Knighton, Shurton, Stoford, Week, and Fairfield. It returned members to parliament in the reign of Edward III. In the vicinity are traces of the De Courcys' castle, erected by Fulk de Brent in Henry III.'s time. Stoke Point, which is within easy distance, extends about 4 miles into the sea. The soil consists of red clay upon a subsoil of stone. The living is a vic., with the cur. of Lilstock annexed, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £389, in the patron. of Eton College. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has a tower with six bells; it formed part of a Benedictine priory, founded by Will de Falaise in Henry II.'s time, as a cell to the abbey of L'Onley, in Normandy. At the suppression it was valued at £58, and was given by Henry VI. to Eton College. The register dates from 1647. The parochial charities produce about £322 per annum, of which £208 go to almshouses, and Stodden's £84 for old maids above fifty years of age. A National school for both sexes was built in 1860 at the expense of Sir P. P. Acland, Bart., who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The Independents and Baptists have each a chapel. Fairs occur on 24th May, and 23rd September for cattle.

STOKE, a hund. in the co. of Bucks, contains Colnbrook and Slough, also the pars. of Denham, Datchet, Eton, Fulmer, Hedgerley, Horton, Iver, Langley-Marish, Stoke Poges, Upton, Wexham, and Wyrardisbury, comprising an area of 28,140 acres.

STOKE, a par. and tnshp. in the higher div. of Wirrall hund., co. Chester, 5 miles N.E. of Chester, its post town, and 3½ E. of Mollington. The village is situated on the Mersey canal. The par. includes the tnshp. of Little Stanney and Whitby. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £130. The church, dedicated to St. Laurence, is an ancient structure, and was restored in 1827. The parochial charities produce about £28 per annum.

STOKE, a tnshp. in the par. of Acton, hund. of Nantwich, co. Chester, 3 miles N.W. of Nantwich, near the Chester railway and the Grand Junction canal.

STOKE, a par. in the hund. of Hoo, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 8 miles N.E. of Rochester, its post town, and 13 E. of Gravesend. The village is situated on the river Medway. A large portion of the land is marshy. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £180. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, or to St. Peter, is an edifice of Edward I.'s time. It contains the brass of a priest bearing date 1415. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. The Baptists and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel.

STOKE, a tnshp. in the par. of Burford, hund. of Over, co. Salop, 3 miles N.W. of Tenbury.

STOKE, a tnshp. in the par. of Stone, co. Stafford, 1 mile S.E. of Stone, on the North Stafford railway and Grand Trunk canal, near the river Trent. It is in conjunction with Aston.

STOKE, a par. in the county of the city of Coventry, co. Warwick, 1 mile E. of Coventry, of which it is a suburb. The village is situated on the canal, near the river Sowe. A portion of the inhabitants are engaged in ribbon weaving. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Walsgrave, in the dioc. of Worcester. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Michael. It has been recently restored and enlarged, and has a stained E. window. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents have a chapel.

STOKE, a tnshp. in the par. of Hope, hund. of High Peake, co. Derby, 5 miles N.E. of Bakewell, and 1½ mile N.E. of Stoney-Middleton, on the river Derwent.

STOKE, a tythg. in the par. of Bourne St. Mary, co. Hants, 4 miles N.W. of Whitchurch.

STOKE-ABBAS, or STOKE ABBOTT, a par. in the hund. of Beaminster Forum, Bridport div. of co. Dorset, 2 miles W. of Beaminster, its post town, and 6 N. of Bridport. The village is situated near the river Bret. A large portion of the inhabitants are employed in flax-spinning and manufacture of tow. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £420, in the patron. of New College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin. The register dates from 1559. There is a National school for both sexes. The Dissenters have a chapel. The Beaminster Union poorhouse is situated in this parish.

STOKE-ALBANY, a par. in the hund. of Corby, co. Northampton, 5 miles N.E. of Market Harborough, its post town, and 8½ N. of Kettering. The village is situated on the road from Harborough to Rockingham. The soil is light, except in the northern part, on a substratum of limestone. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £216. The church, dedicated to St. Botolph, has a tower and five bells. The parochial charities produce about £19 per annum. There is a Sunday-school. The Baptists have a chapel. The trustees of the Hon. R. Watson are lords of the manor.

STOKE-ASH, a par. in the hund. of Hartismere, co. Suffolk, 3½ miles S.W. of Ash, its post town, 3 N.E. of Finningham railway station, and 4 S.W. of Eye. The village is situated on the road from London to Norwich, by way of Ipswich. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £363. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The register dates from 1550. There is a school for both sexes, chiefly supported by Lord Henniker and the Rev. S.W. Bull, M.A., the former is lord of the manor.

STOKE-BARDOLPH, a tnshp. in the par. of Gedling, S. div. of Thurgarton wap., co. Nottingham, 5 miles N.E. of Nottingham, its post town, and 2 S.E. of Gedling. It is a small and secluded village, situated at the ferry over the river Trent, and near the Carlton railway station. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. In the village is a small chapel, built on the site of an ancient one. The Earls of Chesterfield and Manvers are lords of the manor.

STOKE BISHOP. See BISHOP-STOKE, co. Southampton.

STOKE BISHOP, a tythg. in the par. of Westbury-upon-Trym, lower div. of Henbury hund., co. Gloucester, 2 miles N.W. of Bristol. It was once the seat of the Lippincotts. The village, which is considerable, may be reckoned a suburb of Bristol. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, in the patron. of trustees. The church is modern.

STOKE-BLISS, a par. partly in the hund. of Broxash, co. Hereford, and partly in the upper div. of Doddingtree hund., co. Worcester, 5 miles S.E. of Tenbury, its post town, and 6 N. of Bromyard. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated on the road from Tenbury to Bromyard. The par. includes the hmlt. of Little Kyre. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £374, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The parochial charities produce about £21 per annum.

STOKE-BRUERNE, a par. in the hund. of Cleley, co. Northampton, 4 miles N.E. of Towcester, its post town, and 1 mile from Roade railway station. The village is considerable and chiefly agricultural, is situated near the North-Western railway, on the Grand Junction canal, which here passes through a tunnel two miles long. The par. includes the hmlt. of Shuttlehanger. Lord Southampton's hounds meet in this parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £422, in the patron. of Brazenose College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower, with a clock and five bells. The interior contains two piscinæ, and a brass to R. Lightfoot, a former rector, bearing date 1625. The parochial charities produce about £42 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Duke of Grafton is lord of the manor.

STOKE-BY-CLARE, a par. in the hund. of Risbridge, co. Suffolk, 2½ miles S.W. of Clare. Sudbury is its post town. The village is situated on the N. bank of the navigable river Stour. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £77. The church, dedicated to St. Augustine, is an ancient structure, and once formed an old priory. It contains four brasses, bearing date from 1609. The register dates from 1538. The parochial charities produce about £84 per annum, of which £8 go to Brown's almshouses. There is a National school for both sexes, including infants. A modern house now stands on the site of Stoke College, which was once the seat of Elwes, the well-known miser, who died worth £800,000; and another member of the same family starved himself to death, though worth £100,000.

STOKE-BY-NAYLAND, a par. in the hund. of Babergh, co. Suffolk, 1½ mile N.E. of Nayland, and 5 miles E. of Bures railway station. Colchester is its post town. The village, which was formerly a market town, is situated near the river Stour. The par. contains the chlpry. of Leavenheath, and had a monastery endowed by the Saxon Earl of Algar, traces of which are still existing. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £278. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a tower and six bells. There is also a district church at Leavenheath, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £56. The parochial charities produce about £25 per annum, exclusive of some almshouses. £8 go towards Lady Windsor's hospital. There is a National school for both sexes. Tendring Hall is the principal residence.

STOKE CANON, a par. in the hund. of Wonford, co. Devon, 4 miles N. of Exeter, its post town. It is a station on the Great Western railway. The village is situated on the Bristol and Exeter road, and near the rivers Exe and Culm, on which latter there is a paper mill. The manor was given by King Athelstane to the canons of Exeter. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is gravel, but fertile. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £180, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated St. Mary Magdalene, has a tower, with a clock and four bells; it was rebuilt, with the exception of the tower, in 1836. The interior contains a font of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum. There is a school for both sexes. The Pynes, Poltimore, and Killerton, are residences near the village. The Dean and Chapter of Exeter are lords of the manor.

STOKE-CHARITY, a par. in the upper div. of Buddlesgate hund. co. Hants, 3 miles S.W. of Michel-dever, its post town, and 7 N. of Winchester. The village is situated near the South Western railway. The inhabitants are wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £389, in the patron. of Corpus Christi College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient, massive edifice, containing several singular monumental inscriptions. Sir William Heathcote is lord of the manor. There is a parochial school.

STOKE CHURCH. See CHURCH STOKE, co. Montgomery.

STOKE CLIMSLAND, a par. in the N. div. of East hund., co. Cornwall, 3 miles N. of Callington, its post town, and 16 N. of Plymouth. The village, which is large, is situated on the road from Launceston to Callington, near the river Taw, which here separates the cos. of Cornwall and Devon, and is bounded on the N. by the river Inney, which runs into the Tamar on the E. The manor was formerly held by Tavistock and Launceston abbeys. The par. includes the hmlts. of Brayshop, Bealsmill, Downgate, Luckett, Oldmill, and Venterdon, with the liberty of Cary Bullock, which belongs to the duchy. The surface is hilly and the soil light, upon a substratum of granite, schistose rock, and porphyry. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture and in the tin mines. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £621. The parochial charities produce about £25 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, in which a Sunday-school is held. The Wesleyans, Bible Christians, and Plymouth Brethren have each a chapel. Whiteford House is the principal residence. The Prince of Wales, as Duke of Cornwall, is lord of the manor. A cattle fair is held on 29th May.

STOKE-COURCY. See STOGURSEY, co. Somerset.

STOKE-D'ABERNON, a par. in the second div. of Elmbridge hund., co. Surrey, 2 miles S.E. of Cobham, its post town, and 4 S.W. of Esher railway station. The village is situated on the river Mole, and is wholly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Oxshot, and was formerly the seat of the D'Abernons, the Brays, and Vincents. The land is partly in common. There is a mineral well, called Jessop's, in the neighbourhood. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £418. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a spired tower and three bells. The interior contains six brasses, including Sir J. D. Aubernoun in chain mail, and bearing date 1277, the oldest in England; also another Sir John, single canopied, bearing date 1327. The register dates from 1619. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school. The Rev. F. P. Phillips is lord of the manor.

STOKE DAMEREL, a par. in Devonport borough, co. Devon, including Devonport town and dockyard, Morice Town, New Passage, Keyham Docks, Ford, Swilly, and the north-western suburbs of Plymouth. See DEVONPORT.

STOKE-DOYLE, a par. in the hund. of Navisford, co. Northampton, 2 miles S.W. of Oundle, its post town. The village is situated on the navigable river Nen, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £142. The church, dedicated to St. Rumbald, contains a monument to Sir E. Ward, by Rysbrach. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. G. Capron, Esq., of Southwick Hall, is lord of the manor.

STOKE DRY, a par. chiefly in the hund. of Wrangdike, co. Rutland, and partly in that of Gartree, co. Leicester, 3 miles S.W. of Uppingham, its post town, and 3 N. of Rockingham railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Eye. The land is chiefly in pasture. The par. includes the lib. of Holy Oakes. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £386. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure, with a tower; the interior contains monuments of the Digby family. The Marquis of Exeter is lord of the manor.

STOKE, EARL. See EARL STOKE, co. Wilts.

STOKE, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Winfrith, South Blandford div. of co. Dorset, 4 miles S.W. of Wareham, its post town, and 2 E. of Wool station, on the London and South-Western railway, which passes through the parish. It is situated on the road from Wareham to Dorchester, in the valley watered by the river Frome. The par. contains the tythg. of West Holme. In this parish are the remains of Bindon Abbey, founded in 1172 by Robert de Newburgh for monks of the Cistercian order. At the Dissolution its revenue was valued at £229 2*s.* 1*d.*, and the site granted to Sir Thomas Poynings. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £326. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1827, at an expense of £6,700. Near it are some remains of the old one. There are National and parochial schools.

STOKE, EAST, a par. in the northern div. of Thurgarton wap., and borough of Newark-upon-Trent, co. Nottingham, 3 miles S.E. of Fiskerton station on the Nottingham and Lincoln line, and 4 S.W. of Newark. It is situated on the southern bank of the river Trent, and on the old Roman Fosseway. The par. contains the chplry. of Elston, and the extra par. place of Park Leys. On Stoke field was fought, in 1487, the decisive battle between the forces of Henry VII. and the partisans of Lambert Simnel, in which action, it is said, cannon were for the first time used with success. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val., with the curs. of Syerston and Elston annexed, £275, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Oswald, is an ancient structure situated on a hill. There are also a chapel-of-ease at Elston and the district church of Coddington. Nearly facing the church is Stoke Hall, the seat of Sir Robert Howe Bromley, Bart., overlooking the vale of the Trent.

STOKE EDITH, a par. in the hund. of Radlow, co. Hereford, 8 miles W. of Ledbury, its post town, and 6¼ E. of Hereford. It is a station on the West Midland section of the Great Western railway. The village is situated near the river Frome, and is wholly agricultural. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The par. contains the chplry. of Westhide and par. of Stoke Park.

The living is a rect.,* with the cur. of West-Hide annexed, in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £470. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has an ivy-mantled tower, crowned with a spire. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There are schools supported by Lady Emily Foley. Stoke Edith Park is the principal residence.

STOKE FARTHING, a hmlt. in the par. of Broad Chalk, co. Wilts, 3 miles S.W. of Wilton, on a branch of the river Avon.

STOKE FERRY, a par., post, and small market town in the hund. of Clackclose, co. Norfolk, 7 miles S.E. of Downham Market, and 14 S.E. of Lynn. The village is situated on the river Stoke, or Wissey, which is navigable up to this place, and on the road from Lynn to Thetford. An extensive trade is done in corn, timber, malt, and coals. The substratum is very productive of lime. Brewing is carried on. The population of the parish in 1861 amounted to only 791. The market, originally granted by Henry III., was for a long period disused, but has been recently revived, principally for corn. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £100. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was restored in 1848. The charities consist of fuel allotments. There is a free school, endowed by the late James Bradfield, Esq. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. Market day is on Friday. A fair for cattle and horses is held on 6th December, and a statute fair for the hiring of servants on the Thursday prior to Old Michaelmas. J. B. S. Bradfield is lord of the manor.

STOKEFLEMING, a par. in the hund. of Coleridge, co. Devon, 2½ miles S.W. of Dartmouth, its post town, and 12 S.W. of Totness. The village is situated on Start Bay, and is chiefly agricultural. The soil is of a light nature, with a subsoil of sandstone and slate. A portion of the land is in pasture. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £649. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, contains a canopied brass of J. Corp, bearing date 1361. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, at which a Sunday-school is held. The Independents have a chapel. Sir H. P. Seale is lord of the manor.

STOKE-GABRIEL, a par. in the hund. of Haytor, co. Devon, 4 miles S.E. of Totness, its post town, and 6 W. of Brixham. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on the river Dart. The par. includes the hmlts. of Ash, Watton, and Portbridge, and once had a chantry at Watton Court. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £163. The church, dedicated to St. Gabriel, is an ancient edifice with a tower containing six bells; it was restored in 1855. The register dates from 1530. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There is also £10 for church repairs, realised from rent of the "Church House" inn. There is a National school for both sexes, supported by voluntary contributions. The Baptists have a chapel. Davis, who discovered the straits in North America, was born at Sandridge in 1585. J. G. J. Templar, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STOKE-GIFFORD, a par. in the upper div. of Henbury hund., co. Gloucester, 5 miles N.E. of Bristol, its post town, and 3½ N.W. of Mangotsfield railway station. The village, which is small, and chiefly agricultural, is situated on the road from Bristol to Gloucester. The soil is of a clayey nature, with a subsoil of brown limestone. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £60. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure with a tower and three bells. The parochial charities produce about £37 per annum. There is a village school for both sexes. The Duke of Beaufort is lord of the manor and owner of the soil.

STOKE-GOLDING, a chplry. in the par. of Hinckley, hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 3 miles N.W. of Hinckley, its post town, and 4 N. of Nuneaton. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the Ashby-de-la-Zouch canal. The chief portion of the inhabitants are employed in framework knitting. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Hinckley, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is a structure of the time of Edward I., with a tower and four bells. The interior has recently been restored, but the tower is in a bad condition. The parochial charities produce about £156, of which £106 go to Hodge's free grammar school, founded in 1768. N. Hurst, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STOKE GOLDINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Newport, co. Bucks, 4½ miles N.W. of Newport Pagnell, its post town, and 10 from Northampton. The village is situated on the road from Newport-Pagnell to Northampton, near the river Ouse. The inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Eakley Lanes. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Gayhurst, in the dioc. of Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is situated on an eminence. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents have a chapel.

STOKEHAM, a par. in the South Clay div. of Bassetlaw wap., co. Nottingham, 6 miles S.E. of East Retford, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Tuxford. The village, which is small, is wholly agricultural. The living is a cur., annexed to the vic. of East Drayton, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The Wesleyans have a chapel. Earl Manvers is lord of the manor.

STOKE HAMMOND, a par. in the hund. of Newport, co. Bucks, 4 miles N.W. of Leighton Buzzard, and 14 from Buckingham. The village, which is irregularly built, is situated on the North-Western railway, the Grand Junction Canal, and the river Ouzel. The inhabitants are chiefly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £280. The church is dedicated to St. Luke or to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum, which go to the free school. The Baptists and Wesleyans have each a chapel. B. Fountain, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STOKE HOLY CROSS, a par. in the hund. of Henstead, co. Norfolk, 5 miles S. of Norwich, its post town, and 2 E. of Swainsthorpe railway station. The village is situated near the Great Eastern railway. Petty sessions are held at the Rummer Inn every alternate Friday. There is a mustard and starch manufactory. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £210, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to the Holy Cross, has been restored and enlarged. The register dates from 1538. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum, realised from a fuel allotment. The Baptists have a chapel. There is a day and Sunday school, jointly supported by Mrs. Birkbeck and the vicar.

STOKEINTEIGNHEAD, a par. in the hund. of Wonford, co. Devon, 4 miles E. of Newton Bushel, and the same distance from North Abbott. Teignmouth is its post town. The village is situate in a valley on the coast near the mouth of the Teign. The par. contains the hmlts. of Gabwell, Rocombe, Maidencombe, and a small part of Ringmore. The subsoil consists of limestone, gravel, and clay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £467, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure, with a tower and four bells. The interior contains the brass of a priest, bearing date 1497; it was made collegiate by John de Sandford in the reign of Edward III. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. S. T. Kekewich, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STOKE-LACY, a par. in the hund. of Broxash, co. Hereford, 4 miles S.W. of Bromyard, its post town, and 12 N.E. of Ledbury. The village, which is small, is chiefly agricultural. The soil consists of strong clay, with a subsoil of limestone. A portion of the land is in hop-grounds. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £250. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, has a spired tower and four bells. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum, which go to Lilly's school. Earl Somers is lord of the manor.

STOKE-LANE, or STOKE ST. MICHAEL, a par. in the hund. of Whitstone, co. Somerset, 4 miles N.E. of Shepton-Mallet, its railway station and post town, and 8 W. of Frome. The village is situated about a mile N. of the turnpike road from Frome to Wells. A large portion of the land is in pasture, and 165 acres in woods and plantations. The soil is light, but shallow; that portion of it being on the N. side of the Mendip hills, rests upon a layer of red gravel, and in the other parts it has a substratum of limestone and freestone. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £120, in the patron. of the Vicar of Doulting. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a tower containing a clock and three bells. It was rebuilt in 1838. The register dates from 1644. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The village is considered a healthy spot, one-fourth of the persons dying within the last half century having exceeded 70 years. W. F. Knatchbull, Esq., M.P., is lord of the manor.

STOKE LIMPLEY WITH WINSLEY, a chplry. in the par. of Great Bradford, hund. of Bradford, co. Wilts, 3 miles S.W. of Bradford. The village is large. The chapel is dedicated to St. Mary.

STOKE-LYNE, a par. in the hund. of Ploughley, co. Oxford, 4 miles N.W. of Bicester, its post town, and 11 S.E. of Banbury. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The par. includes the hmlts. of Bainton and Fewcott. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £173. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure with a tower. Swift's house is the principal residence. S. H. Cole, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STOKE-MANDEVILLE, a par. in the hund. of Aylesbury, co. Bucks, 3 miles E. of Aylesbury, its post town, and 2 N.W. of Wendover. The par. includes the hmlt. of Prestwood. The living is a vic. with the cur. of Buckland annexed, in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £120, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln. The church, dedicated to St. Matthew, or to St. Mary, has a tower and five bells. The interior contains an effigy of a lady, which is of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum.

STOKENCHURCH, a par. in the hund. of Lewknor, co. Oxford, 6 miles N.E of Watlington, and 7 N.W. of High Wycombe. Tetsworth is its post town. The village, which is scattered, is situated near Beacon Hill, on one of the highest slopes of the Chiltern hills. A large portion of the inhabitants are engaged in rush chair making. The shock of an earthquake was felt here in 1250. The Portway, or Icknield Street, passed through the village, on the line of which urns and other Roman antiquities were discovered in 1738. The hellebore, wood-barley, and other rare plants grow wild in the woods. The soil is of a chalky nature. The land is partly in common. The par. includes the hmlts. of Beacon's Bottom and Water End. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £135. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient structure. The interior contains monuments of the Morley family, bearing date from 1401, also two brasses. It was restored by E. Lamb in 1847. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum. There is an endowed school for boys, also a Sunday-school for both sexes. The Primitive Methodists and Independents have chapels, and the latter has a Sunday-school. J. Brown, Esq., of Kingston, is lord of the manor.

STOKE NEWINGTON. See NEWINGTON, STOKE, co. Middlesex.

STOKE-NEXT-GUILFORD, a par. in the first div. of the hund. of Woking, co. Surrey, half a mile N. of Guilford, within which borough it is situated. The parish, which is intersected by the Wey canal, is bounded on the N. by Worplesdown and Woking, and on the E. by Merrow. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the road by Kingston to Portsmouth. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £597, in the patron. of trustees. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, is an ancient structure containing several monuments. There are three almshouses for six aged women, founded by H. and W. Parsons, also other charities producing about £100 per annum.

STOKENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Coleridge, co. Devon, 4½ miles S.E. of Kingsbridge, and 8 from Dartmouth, its post town. The village, which is large, is situated on Start Bay. The par. includes Chillingham, Beeston, and four other hmlts. The living is a vic., with the curs. of Chevelstone and Sherford annexed, in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £625, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Barnabas, contains an ancient wooden screen. The Independents have a chapel.

STOKE, NORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of South Stoke, co. Lincoln, 3 miles N.W. of Colsterworth. The village is small, but contains the seat and park of C. Turnor, Esq.

STOKE, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Langtree, co. Oxford, 3 miles S. of Wallingford, its post town, and 1½ mile from the Great Western railway station. The village, which is small, is situated on the river Thames. The par. includes the hmlt. of South Stoke, and is a meet for the Wormsley hounds. The living is a vic.,* with those of Newnham-Murren and Ipsden annexed, in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £568, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There is a chapel-of-ease at Ipsden, also a district church at Stoke Row, the living of which last is a perpet. cur.,* val. £90. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. Lady Huntingdon's connexion has a chapel.

STOKE, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Bath Forum, co. Somerset, 8½ miles E. of Bristol, its post town, and 4½ N.W. of Bath. The village is situated on the river Avon, under Lansdown Hill, from which the family of Petty take the title of marquis. The soil in the upper part rests upon oolite, and in the lower grounds, near the river, upon clay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £190. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is an ancient edifice with a tower and bell.

STOKE, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Poling, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 2 miles N.E. of Arundel railway station and its post town. The village, which is inconsiderable, is situated on the river Arun, which divides this parish from that of South Stoke. It is here that the oak canoe, 35 feet in length, was discovered in 1834, and which is now preserved in the British Museum. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £57. The church is a cruciform structure with a tower and bell. There are several ancient barrows on the downs.

STOKE ORCHARD, a tnshp. and hmlt. in the par. of Bishop's Cleeve, hund. of Cleeve, co. Gloucester, 6 miles N.W. of Cheltenham, its post town, and 1 mile N.W. of Cleeve railway station. The village, which is small, is situated near the Birmingham and Gloucester railway, and is chiefly agricultural. The land is divided betwixt pasture, meadow, and arable. The soil is chiefly of a clayey description. The chapel-of-ease is an ancient structure with a bell. There is a National school for both sexes. R. R. C. Rogers, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

STOKE-PERO, a par. in the hund. of Carhampton, co. Somerset, 8 miles W. of Minehead, its post town, and 3 S. of Porlock. The village is situated under Dunkerry Beacon, and on the road from West Luccombe to Exford. The Beacon, which is partly in this parish, is about 12 miles in circuit at the base, and rises 1,770 feet above sea-level, being the highest eminence in the western part of England. The soil is loamy with a subsoil of shillet or red gravel. The inhabitants are engaged in agriculture. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £92. The church has a tower and three bells. Sir S. D. Acland and W. Tamlyn, Esq., are lords of the manor.

STOKE-POGES, a par. in the hund. of Stoke, co. Bucks, 2 miles N. from Slough, its post town, and 3 N. of Windsor. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated near the Great Western railway. The par. includes Ditton and part of the town of Slough. The manor was once held by the Molins, Hastings, Sir E. Coke, the eminent lawyer, Lord Purbeck, the Gayers, Halseys, Lady Cobham, and William Penn, the founder of Pennsylvania. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £319. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is an ancient ivy-covered structure, containing brasses of the Molins or Mullons, bearing date 1425, and of E. Hampden, also monuments of the Grays, of whom was the poet Gray, who died at Cambridge in 1771, but lies buried in the churchyard of this parish, the scene of his "Elegy." There is a National school for both sexes, endowed with about £30 per annum, also a charity school supported by Miss Vyse. A monument to W. Penn has been erected in a field opposite the church. The principal residence is Stoke Park, rebuilt by Wyatt in 1789, near the ruin of the old one, in which Sir Edward Coke entertained Queen Elizabeth in 1601. The hall contains portraits of Charles I.'s children by Vandyke, also others by eminent masters. H. Labouchere is lord of the manor.

STOKE-PRIOR, a par. in the hund. of Wolphy, co. Hereford, 3 miles S.E. of Leominster, its post town, and near the Fordbridge railway station. It contains the hmlts. of Wicton and Risbury. The village, which is large, is situated betwixt the Leominster and Hereford and the Leominster and Worcester turnpike roads, and near the river Lug. The land is chiefly in pasture, orchards, and hop-grounds. The soil consists of a rich loam with a subsoil of clay. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Docklow, in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £132, in the patron. of the Vicar of Leominster. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice with a tower and three bells. There is a National school for both sexes. Adjoining this parish is an extensive piece of land designated Blackwardine, or Black-Caer-Dun, said to have been a British fortified town, where many Roman coins and other relics have been found. J. Arkwright, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

STOKE-PRIOR, a par. in the middle div. of Oswaldstow hund., co. Worcester, 2 miles S. of Bromsgrove, its post town, and 4 N.E. of Droitwich. It has stations on the Bristol and Birmingham and the Worcester and Wolverhampton railways. The village, which is large, contains brick and tile kilns, stone quarry, chemical works, a needle factory, alkali and salt works, and flour mills, also mines of rock salt, which are worked with great advantage. The Birmingham and Worcester canal passes through the parish. The living is a vic.,* with the cur. of St. Godwald's annexed, in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £310, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure with a tower and four bells. The interior has several stained windows. The register dates from 1513. The parochial charities produce about £29 per annum, of which £16 go to a Sunday-school. There is a National school for both sexes, including infants. The Dean and Chapter of Worcester are lords of the manor.

STOKE RIVERS, a par. in the hund. of Sherwill, co. Devon, 6 miles N.E. of Barnstaple, its post town. The village is situated on an acclivity, and is wholly agricultural. The subsoil consists of rubble. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £231. The church, dedicated to the Holy Ascension, or to St. Bartholomew, has a tower and five bells. It was rebuilt in 1831, with the exception of the tower. There is a free school for both sexes, which is endowed with £200 by A. Tamlyn, Esq. Sir A. Chichester, Bart., is lord of the manor. There is a circular encampment called Burah Castle, also the supposed site of one of the ancient British towns.

STOKE ROCHFORD, or STOKE, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Winnibriggs and Threo, co. Lincoln, 6 miles S. of Grantham, its post town, and 2 S.W. of Great Ponton railway station. The village is situated on the river Witham, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the tnshps. of Easton and North Stoke. It once belonged to the Rochfords, and has remains of a Roman villa. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £785, in the patron. of the prebendary of South Grantham. The church, dedicated to SS. Mary and Andrew, has a tower and five bells. It has three chancels, some stained windows, and monuments of the Cholmeley and Turnor families. It was restored in 1847. The parochial charities produce about £40 per annum. There is a school on the National principle, supported by Lady C. Turnor. Stoke Hall is the principal residence.

STOKE-RODNEY, a par. in the hund. of Winterstoke, co. Somerset. See RODNEY-STOKE.

STOKE ROW, an ecclesiastical district in the hund. of Moreton, co. Berks, 2 miles S. of Wallingford, within which borough it is included. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £90, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church is modern.

STOKE, ST. GREGORY, a par. in the hund. of North Curry, co. Somerset, 8 miles N.E. of Taunton, its post town, 5 N.W. of Langport, and 1¼ mile from Athelney Bridge railway station. The village is situated between the rivers Parret and Tone, near Athelney Island. The par. includes East Curry, Curryload, and Stathe. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £120, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Wells. The church, dedicated to St. Gregory, is an ancient edifice, with a tower and five bells. The register dates from 1561. There are National schools for both sexes, also a Sunday-school held at the vestry-room. The Bible Christians have a chapel. The Dean and Chapter of Wells are lords of the manor.

STOKE, ST. MARY, a par. in the hund. of Taunton, co. Somerset, 3 miles S.E. of Taunton, its post town, and 10 N. of Chard. The village is situated on the road from Taunton to Chard, and is chiefly agricultural. The soil is of a clayey nature. The par. includes the hmlt. of Stoke Hill. The living is a rect. and don. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £133. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice with a tower and four bells. The Independents have a chapel. R. Mattock, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STOKE, ST. MICHAEL, a par. in the hund. of Whitstone, co. Somerset. See STOKE-LANE.

STOKE, ST. MILBOROUGH, a par. in the lower div. of Munslow hund., co. Salop, 6½ miles N.E. of Ludlow, its post town, and 13 from Wenlock. It comprises the tnshps. of Clee Downton, Clee Stanton, and the chplry. of Heath. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The soil is of various qualities. The living is a vic. with the cur. of Heath annexed, in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £474. The church, dedicated to St. Milburgh, has a tower and four bells. It is situated in a dell, and is said to have been originally built by Milburgh, daughter of Merwald, King of Mercia, and has been recently restored. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum, which go to a school. There is a chapel-of-ease at Heath, also a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels.

STOKESAY, a par. in the lower div. of Munslow hund. co. Salop, 7 miles N.W. of Ludlow, and 22 S. of Shrewsbury. Newton is its post town. It is situated on the river Onny and the turnpike road between Shrewsbury and Hereford. It comprises the tnshps. of Aldon, Broom with Rowton, Newton, and Wettleton. In the vicinity are a Roman encampment called Norton's Canys, and the ruins of Stokesay Castle. The soil is of a clayey, limey, and gravelly nature, with a subsoil of blue clay. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £351. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, or St. Peter, is an ancient structure with a tower and six bells. It has been recently restored. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum. There is an endowed parochial school for both sexes. Earl Craven is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

STOKES BAY, a coast-guard station near Anglesea, co. Hants, 2 miles S.W. of Gosport. It is a station on the London and South-Western railway. Off the shore is the measured mile marked out by buoys for testing the speed of steam vessels.

STOKESBY, a par. in the hund. of East Flegg, co. Norfolk, 2 miles E. of Acle by the ferry across the Bure, and 19 from Norwich, its post town. The parish is bounded on the S. and W. by the navigable river Bure, and on the N. by the Monkfleet stream. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. It consists mainly of fertile marshland, comprising about 2,000 acres. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of Herringby, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £526. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, contains a brass of E. Clere, bearing date 1485. The register dates from 1558. The charities are from marsh allotments. There is a school for both sexes, erected at the expense of Mrs. Daniel. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

STOKESLEY, a par. and post and market town in the W. div. of Langbaurgh lib., North Riding co. York, 2 miles from Kirby, and 41 N.W. of York. It is a station on the North Yorkshire and Cleveland line of railway. It is situated in the centre of the level tract called Cleveland, and on the northern bank of the river Leven, under Wainstone Hill, which rises 1,300 feet, and is surrounded by other hills, forming a vast amphitheatre. It is a polling and petty sessions town on the road from Northallerton to Whitby. The par. includes the tnshps. of Great and Little Busby, Easby, and Newby, and the hmlts. of North and South Tanton. The town consists chiefly of one street extending from E. to W. about half a mile in length. It is well paved and lighted with gas, and the houses are built in a modern style. The new townhall was constructed in 1853, at the expense of the late Robert Hilyard, Esq., of whom it contains a portrait. It comprises rooms for the use of the magistrates and county court; also a savings-bank and dispensary. The population is much reduced, eighty houses being empty at the last census. The best of the artizans are mostly gone to Middlesborough. Petty sessions are held fortnightly. The Poor-law Union of Stokesley comprises 29 parishes or townships. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £1,220, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, partly rebuilt in 1717, with a tower and three bells. There is the Preston free grammar school for 27 boys of this parish. There are also a parish and infant schools. On the road towards Ayton is the cemetery. Market day is Saturday. Fairs are held on the Saturdays before Palm and Trinity Sundays, and statute fairs for the hiring of servants on the Saturdays before Martinmas and May Day.

STOKE, SOUTH. See STOKE ROCHFORD, co. Lincoln.

STOKE, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Dorchester, co. Oxford, 4 miles S.W. from Wallingford, its post town, and 16 from Oxford. The village is situated on the Great Western railway, at the ferry over the Thames. The par. includes the chplry. of Woodcot. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The surface is hilly. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Woodcot annexed, in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £147, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £33 per annum, of which £25 go to Higge's school.

STOKE, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Bath Forum, co. Somerset, 2½ miles S.W. of Bath. The village is situated on the river Avon and the Radford canal. The par. includes the chplries. of Monckton Combe and Combe Down. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. There are a brewery and malt house. The soil consists of a thin layer of loam, on a subsoil of stone, of which there are several quarries. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient edifice, with a tower and three bells. It was thoroughly restored and added to in 1845. There are also the district churches of Monckton Combe and Combe Down, the livings of which are perpet. curs. There are chapels for Roman Catholics and Wesleyans at Mitford. Mitford Castle is the principal residence.

STOKE, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Avisford, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 2½ miles N.E. of Arundel, its post town. The village is situated on the river Arún, which is here crossed by a foot suspension bridge. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. A great part of this parish is in Arundel Park. The par. includes the hmlt. of Offham, and a cut was made across a narrow neck of land near the church in 1840 for the purpose of shortening the navigation. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £211. The church has some stained glass windows. The register dates from 1553. On the downs are traces of ancient earthworks.

STOKE STONEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Wincanton, hund. of Norton Ferris, co. Somerset, 2 miles N. of Wincanton. It is situated near the river Cale.

STOKE-TALMAGE, a par. in the hund. of Pirton, co. Oxford, 2 miles S.W. from Tetsworth, its post town, and 6 S. of Thame. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £248. The church is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene. The Earl of Macclesfield is lord of the manor.

STOKE TRISTER, a par. in the hund. of Norton Ferris, co. Somerset, 2 miles E. of Wincanton, its post town, and 6 from Bruton. The village is chiefly agricultural, with the exception of a few persons employed in the manufacture of dowlas and ticking. The par. includes the hmlt. of Bayford. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Cucklington, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells. The church is of recent erection. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a mixed school for both sexes at Bayford.

STOKE-UNDER-HAMDON, a par. in the hund. of Tintinhull, co. Somerset, 5½ miles N.W. of Yeovil, and 2 S. of Martock railway station. The village, which is large, is situated on the river Parret. Many of the female inhabitants are engaged in glove making, but agriculture is the principal industry. In the vicinity are traces of the chantry, or college, founded in 1304 by Sir John Beauchamp, who had a castle here. On Hamdon Hill are extensive stone quarries. This par. comprehends the vils. of East and West Stoke. The soil consists of a light loam, with a subsoil of clay, producing grain and green crops in abundance. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £109. The church, dedicated to St. Denis, has a tower and five bells. The Wesleyans have a chapel, at which a Sunday-school is held. The Prince of Wales, as Duke of Cornwall, is lord of the manor. A fair for pedlery occurs on 23rd April.

STOKE-UPON-TERN, a par. in the Drayton div. of North Bradford hund., co. Salop, 10½ miles N.W. of Newton, its post town, and 5½ S.W. of Market Drayton. The village is situated on the river Tern, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the tnshp. of Eaton, Ollerton, and Westanswick. At a farm in the vicinity are the remains of the old seat of the Corbets. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £878. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient edifice with a tower and five bells. In the interior are tombs of the Corbets. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum.

STOKE-UPON-TRENT, a populous par., market town, and parliamentary borough, in the N. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford, 2 miles E. of Newcastle-under-Lyne, and 16 N.W. of Stafford. It is intersected by the Uttoxeter, Stoke, and Crewe section of the North Staffordshire railway, and has also short branch lines to Silverdale, Hanley, and Congleton. It is situated in the midst of "The Potteries," on the banks of the river Trent, and is traversed by the Trent and Mersey and Caldon canals, which here unite. It is a place of recent growth, having sprung up with the potteries established by Wedgwood, and was created a borough by the Reform Bill. The parish extends 7½ miles in length from N.W. to S.E., by over 3 in breadth at the widest part, and includes, beside the borough of Stoke, the newly-created municipal borough of Hanley, containing 31,953 inhabitants, and the tnshps. or libs. of Boothen, Botteslow, Bucknall, Edensor, Fenton Culvert, or Great Fenton, Fenton Vivian, or Little Fenton, Hartshill, Northwood, Lane End, Longton, Penkhull, Shelton, Trent Vale, and Wellington. Previous to 1807, it also included the market towns of Newcastle-under-Lyne, Burslem, Norton-on-the-Moors, and Whitmore. The town, which is built on a regular plan, contains some good houses, and numerous wharves and warehouses. The streets have their footpaths paved with brick, and are lighted with gas; and the houses are well supplied with water. The townhall and market-house was erected in 1834, the N. wing serving as the townhall and station of the county constabulary, and the centre being occupied by the meat market, below, and by the Stoke Athenæum, above, with a museum, library, and laboratory. Another conspicuous building is the railway station and hotel, built in the Tudor style, at a cost of £150,000. It is laid with Minton's tesselated pavement, and is the head office of the North Staffordshire Railway Company. There are also the union poor-house, a branch bank, gas and water works, and extensive factories for porcelain and pottery, including the firms of Minton and Alderman Copeland, once Spode. A large portion of the population are engaged in the several processes connected with the manufacture of china, earthenware, porcelain, statuary, and ornamental and encaustic tiles, for which this parish is famous; there are also a considerable number of engravers, makers of crates from the hazel-wood cut in the neighbourhood, workers in iron and steel, engineers, and coal and iron miners. The population of the parish in 1861 was 71,308; but of the parliamentary borough, which includes, besides the greater part of the parish, parts of Penkhull, Tunstall, Rushton Grange, Sneyd, and other adjoining hamlets, 101,207, having increased in the decennial period from 1851, by 17,180 inhabitants. The borough returns two members to parliament, the returning officer being chosen by the sheriff of the county. The town of Stoke, not being incorporated, is governed by commissioners, who elect annually a chief bailiff. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeaconry of Stafford. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £2,907. The church, dedicated to St. Peter ad Vincula, is a modern Gothic structure, with a tower 112 feet high, containing a peal of eight bells. It has tombs of Wedgwood, who died in 1795, at Etruria, and of Spode, of "The Mount," also a celebrated potter. In addition to the parish church, the Ecclesiastical Commissioners have within the last few years established the following district churches, viz., Fenton, Hartshill, Edensor, Penkhull, Trent Vale, Etruria, Northwood, Wellington, or St. Luke's, Hanley, and Hope, the livings of which are all perpet. curs.,* varying in val. from £220 to £100. Several of these churches have been noticed more fully under the head of the townships where they are situated. There are chapels for the Baptists, Independents, Wesleyans, New Connexion Methodists, and other Dissenting communions in various parts of the parish; also many National and other schools, including Lane End school, which has an endowment of £70 per annum, and Allen's school, with an endowment of £12. The parochial charities produce about £110 per annum. In the vicinity of the town are Trentham Hall, a seat of the Duke of Sutherland; Etruria, the seat of the Wedgwood family; Stoke House, of the Fentons, of which family was the poet Fenton, born here in 1683. Dr. Lightfoot, the Hebrew scholar, was also born here in 1602. Stoke Heath is a meet for the North Staffordshire hounds. The Stoke Poor-law Union consists mainly of the parish of Stoke, which also forms a superintendent registry district. It is divided between the Hanley and Newcastle county courts. Market day is on Saturday.

STOKE-WAKE, a par. in the hund of Whiteway, co. Dorset, 8½ miles W. of Blanford-Forum, its post town, and 12 S.E. of Sherborne. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £156. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has recently been restored. H. K. Seymer, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STOKE, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Bosham, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 3½ miles N.W. of Chichester, and 2 N.E. of Arundel railway station, its post town. The village is situated on the river Arun, at the spot where an oak canoe, 34½ feet in length, was discovered in 1834, now in the British Museum. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. In this parish is the valley of Kingsley Bottom, where is a grove of yew trees. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £170. The church, situated in Stoke Park, contains a monument to the Stoughton family.

STOKE WITH NEWTOWN, a tnshp. in the par. of Stokesay, co. Salop, 6 miles N.W. of Ludlow, on the river Onny.

STONAR, a par. in the hund. of Ringslow, or Isle of Thanet, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, three quarters of a mile N.E. of Sandwich. It is supposed to have been under water in the Roman period, but on the sea retiring from Ebbs-fleet it was left dry, and in the 11th century became the site of a town and port of considerable importance, but again declined, owing to the ravages of the Danes and the inundations of the sea, and is now only a small hamlet. Leland describes it as "some time a pretty town, but then" (in the reign of Henry VIII.) "having only the ruin of the church, which some people call Old Sandwich." The living is a rect. in the dioc of Canterbury, in the patron. of the Crown by lapse. The church has long been destroyed, and no restoration has lately been made. Near the site of the church are works for the production of bay-salt.

STONDON, LOWER, a hmlt. in the par. of Shitlington, hund. of Clifton, co. Beds, half a mile S.E. of Upper Stondon, and 3 miles S.E. of Shefford.

STONDON-MASSEY, a par. in the hund. of Ongar, co. Essex, 6 miles N.W. of Brentwood, its post town, and 3 S.E. of Ongar. The village, which is small and irregularly built, is situated near the river Roding, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £461. The church is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul. The parochial charities produce about £17 per annum. There is a National school.

STONDON, UPPER, a par. in the hund. of Clifton, co. Beds, 2½ miles S. of Shefford. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £125. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to All Saints.

STONE, a par. and market town in the S. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford, 6 miles S. of Stoke-upon-Trent, and 7 N.E. of Stafford. It is a station on the North Staffordshire railway, and a branch line goes to Norton-Bridge, where it joins the main line of the London and North-Western railway, 3 miles distant from the town of Eccleshall. The par. consists of 17,000 acres, and a population of nearly 10,000 souls, and contains the tnshps. of Stone, Walton, Darlaston, Meaford-Oulton, Tittensor, Beech Moddershall, Hilderstone, Fulford, Stallington, Normicott, Aston, Burstone and Stoke, and Little Aston. The land is chiefly arable and pasture, and the soil fertile. The town stands on the left bank of the river Trent, here crossed by a bridge, connecting it with the suburb of Walton, and at a short distance from the North Staffordshire section of the Grand Trunk canal, which runs parallel with the High-street through the entire length of the town. The principal street forms part of the great road from London to Liverpool, with lesser streets branching off from it. It is well built, paved, and lighted with gas. The only public institutions are the mechanics' institute, a savings-bank, and the union poor-house. The staple manufacture of the place is that of shoes, principally women's boots, and on the Scotch brook which here falls into the Trent are several corn and flour mills. There are also in the town and its vicinity an extensive brewery, malting establishments, tanneries and brickfields. In the neighbourhood are several noblemen's and gentlemen's seats. Stone is a polling place for the county elections and a petty sessions town. A county court is held every two months. It is also the head of a Poor-law Union. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £240, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church is dedicated to St. Michael, and was rebuilt in the middle of the last century on the site of the Abbey Church. It contains a marble monument to Earl St. Vincent, with a bust of the earl by Chantrey, and has over the altar "St. Michael binding Satan," painted by Sir William Beechy, R.A., and presented by Earl St. Vincent, who is buried in the churchyard. The register dates from 1568. There are schools in connection with the parish church, which have been rebuilt, through the perseverance of the rector, at a cost of £2,000; school chapels have also been erected in several of the townships. In addition to the parish church are the district churches of Christ Church with Tittensor, Aston with Burston, Fulford, Hilderstone, and Normicott, the livings of which are perpet. curs., varying in val. from £200 to £63; of these the only one situated in the town is Christ Church, erected in 1840. The Wesleyans and New Connexion Methodists and Independents have chapels. The Roman Catholics have a very spacious monastery in the town, with a church attached, and an extensive nunnery at Oulton, also a chapel at Aston. The grammar school, founded in 1558 by the Rev. Thomas Alleyn, is free to 6 boys, and to 24 others of the parish on payment of a small fee. A new school-house has recently been erected and the endowment increased to £100 per annum. There are a Bible society, Church Missionary society, Dorcas society, besides various clothing and benefit clubs. The charities produce about £200 per annum, including a rent-charge of £100 out of the Stone Park estate, bequeathed in 1771 by Lady K. Levison Gower for the relief of 10 poor widows. Market day is Tuesday for corn and provisions, and the cattle market every alternate Tuesday. Fairs are held on 5th August for cattle and sheep, on the third Tuesdays in April and October for cheese, bacon, &c., and on Shrove Tuesday, Whit Tuesday, and Tuesday before Michaelmas Day.

STONE, a par. in the hund. of Aylesbury, co. Bucks, 3 miles S.W. of Aylesbury, its post town, and 7 from Thame. The village is situated on the road from Aylesbury to Thame, and is separated from Waddesdon by the river Thame. The par. includes the hmlts. of Bishopstone, Littleworth, and Sedrup. The manufacture of lace, formerly carried on, has declined. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £289. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing a clock and five bells. In the interior are two brasses of the Gurneys, bearing date 1472. It has been thoroughly restored, and the chancel rebuilt, at the expense of the lord of the manor. J. Lee, LL.D., is lord of the manor.

STONE, a chplry. in the par. of Berkeley, upper div. of Berkeley hund., co. Gloucester, 2¾ miles S.W. of Berkeley, its post town, and 4 S.W. of Berkeley railway station. The village is situated on the high road from Gloucester to Bristol. The soil is of a clayey and loamy description. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £80, in the patron. of the Vicar of Berkeley. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a tower and five bells. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum. Earl Fitzhardinge is lord of the manor.

STONE, a par. in the hund. of Oxney, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 6½ miles N.E. of Rye, its post town, and 3 S.E. of Appledore railway station. The village is situated on the borders of Romney Marsh and the Royal Military canal. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £345, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice, with a tower and six bells. The interior contains two brasses, bearing date 1408. The parochial charities consist of a small bequest by R. Still, Esq., in 1556, and the interest of £1,000 invested in the Three per Cents., left by T. Greenland, Esq. The Dissenters have a chapel. A fair is held on Holy Thursday.

STONE, a par. in the lower div. of Halfshire hund., co. Worcester, 2 miles S.E. of Kidderminster, its post town, and the same distance N. of Hartlebury railway station. This place, which was formerly a chplry., in the par. of Chaddesley-Corbet, is situated near the Oxford and Wolverhampton railway. There is a worsted mill at Hoo, and the spinning of yarn is carried on in connection with the manufacture of Kidderminster. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £827, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a modern structure with a tower and six bells. The parochial charities produce about £232 per annum, of which £37 go to Hill's school.

STONE, a hund. in the co. of Somerset, contains the pars. of Ashington, Brimpton, Chilthorne, Domer, Limington, Lufton, Mudford, Preston, Plucknett, and Yeovil, comprising an area of 10,720 acres.

STONE, a tythg. in the par. of Chew Magna, co. Somerset, 6 miles S. of Bristol.

STONE, a hmlt. in the par. of Wimborne, co. Dorset, 1 mile W. of Wimborne.

STONE a hmlt. in the par. of St. Peter, Isle of Thanet, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, near Margate.

STONE, a hmlt. in the par. of Fawley, co. Hants, 8 miles S.E. of Southampton. It is situated near Stans Ore point. This place is supposed to be the Ad Lapidem of the Romans, where Ceadwall put the brothers of Arvandus to death in 687.

STONE, a hmlt. in the pars. of Firbeck and Maltby, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Tickhill.

STONE, a hmlt. in the par. of Fixby, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Huddersfield.

STONE ACTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Rushbury, co. Salop, 3 miles E. of Church Stretton.

STONEBECK DOWN and STONEBECK UPPER, tnshps. in the par. of Kirby Malzeard, West Riding co. York, 7 miles from Pateley Bridge. They are situated on the river Nidd, and are chiefly agricultural. The former tnshp. includes the vil. of Ramsgill, and the latter the chplry. of Middlesmoor. The soil is of a loamy and gravelly character, with a subsoil of gravel and rock. The land is principally devoted to pasture. The Wesleyans have a chapel at Bouthwaite. The Archbishop of York is lord of the manor.

STONE BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the hund. of Knightlow, co. Warwick, 7 miles N.W. of Coventry.

STONE BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Saltney, co. Flint, near Hawarden.

STONEBYRES, a cataract on the Clyde in three falls, co. Lanark, Scotland, 2 miles below Lanark.

STONECARTHY, a par. in the bars. of Kells, Knocktopher, and Shillelogher, co. Kilkenny, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Knocktopher. The land is generally fertile. The living is a vic. united with Kells.

STONECLOUGH, a station on the Manchester branch of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway.

STONE CROUCH, a hmlt. in the hund. of Cranbrook, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 4 miles S.W. of Cranbrook. There was formerly a cell for Austin canons at Combwell.

STONE EASTON, a par. in the hund. of Chewton, co. Somerset, 14 miles S.W. of Bath, its post town, and 7 N. of Shepton Mallet. The village is situated on the high road from Bristol to Wells. The soil is of a loamy nature, with a subsoil of limestone. A large portion of the land is devoted to pasture. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Chewton Mendip, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells. The church is an ancient edifice with a tower and five bells; the interior contains some marble tablets of the Hippesley family. The register dates from 1572. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes, entirely supported by J. Hippesley, Esq., who is lord of the manor. Stone Easton House is the principal residence.

STONEFERRY, a vil. in the par. of Sutton, middle div. of Holderness wap., East Riding co. York, 1 mile N.N.E. of Hull.

STONEFIELD, or STANFIELD, a hmlt. in the hund. of Pirehill, co. Stafford, 5 miles N.E. of Newcastle-under-Lyne, and 20 from Stafford. It is situated in the valley of the Trent, near the Grand Trunk Canal.

STONEFIELD, a hmlt. in the par. of Muckairn, co. Argyle, Scotland, 9 miles E. of Oban, under Cruachan Ben, near Loch Etive.

STONEFIELD, a vil. in the par. of Blantyre, co. Lanark, Scotland, 3 miles W. of Hamilton.

STONEFIELD, a demesne on the E. side of Loch Tarbert, co. Argyle, Scotland, 5 miles S.W. of Tarbert.

STONE-GATE, a ward in the par. of St. Margaret, borough of King's Lynn, co. Norfolk.

STONEGATE, a hmlt. in the par. of Ticehurst, hund. of Shoyswell, rape of Hastings, co. Sussex, 8 miles S.E. of Tonbridge Wells. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chichester. The church is modern.

STONEGRAVE, a par. and tnshp. in the wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 2 miles E. of Oswaldkirk, its post town, and 2 N.W. of Hovingham railway station, on the Molten and Thirsk line. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on the road between Malton and Helmerly. The par. includes the tnshps. of East and West Nefs, and East Newton. The soil is chiefly of a loamy character, with a gravelly and clayey subsoil. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £550, in the patron. of the Crown. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has a tower and three bells. In the interior are several monuments of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum, £6 going for repairs of the church. There are church schools for both sexes, also an infant school. W. Rutson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STONEHALL, a par. in the bar. of Corkaree, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles N. of Mullingar, its post town. The surface, which lies near Lough Dereveragh and Knockbody Hill, consists of a good soil, and is crossed by the road from Rathowen to Castletown-Deloin. There are bog and mountain. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Multifarnham, £250, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Taghmon. There is a small church, near which are the ruins of the old church. Mornington is the chief seat.

STONEHALL, a vil. in the bar. of Kenry, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Pallas-Kenry. Fairs are held on 14th May and 25th September.

STONEHAM ASPALL, a par. and post town in the hund. of Bosmere, co. Suffolk, 4½ miles N.E. of Needham Market railway station, and 11 from Ipswich. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £650. The church, dedicated to St. Lambert, is an ancient edifice, with a tower and a peal of ten bells. The interior contains effigies of the Wingfields, of Broughton Hall, and two brasses bearing date 1574; the chancel has a stained window. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £175 per annum, which go to Metcalf's school, poor, church, &c. There is a National school for both sexes, also a Sunday-school is held. Broughton Hall, once occupied by the Wingfield family, is now a farmhouse. Sir W. F. F. Middleton, Bart., is lord of the manor.

STONEHAM, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Mainsbridge, co. Hants, 4 miles N.E. of Southampton, its post town, and 1 mile S.W. of Bishopstoke railway station. The village is situated on the South-Western railway, near the river Itchen. The par. includes Middle Stoneham and four other hmlts. The Hursley hounds meet in this parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £536. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. The interior contains effigies of the Flemyngs from the reign of James I.; also a monument, by More, of Lord Hawke, who died at Western Grove. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum. J. B. W. Fleming, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

STONEHAM, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Mainsbridge, co. Hants, 3 miles N.E. of Southampton, its post town, and 2½ from the Bishopstoke railway station. The par., which is extensive, comprises the chplry. of Portswood and the tythgs. of Allington, Barton, Bittern, Eastley Pollack, and Shamblehurst. It is situated on the W. bank of the river Itchen, and was the Roman Ad Lapidem, on the way to Winchester. The principal residence is South Stoneham Park. At Wood Mills were Taylor's block-making works. It is the head of a new Poor-law Union embracing 9 parishes; but belongs to the Southampton New County Court district. A portion of it is within the borough of Southampton. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £500, in the patron. of the Rector of St. Mary's, Southampton. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice, with a tower and three bells. In addition to the parish church are the district churches of St. James, West End, Portswood, and Bittern, the livings of which are all perpet. curs., varying in val. from £270 to £100. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum.

STONEHAVEN, a burgh of barony, market and seaport town in the pars. of Dunnottar and Fetteresso, co. Kincardine, Scotland, 7 miles N.E. of Dumlithie, 15 S.S.W. of Aberdeen, and within half a mile of its station on the Aberdeen line of railway. It is situated on Stonehaven Bay, near Carron and Downy Points, and at the confluence of the rivers Carron and Cowie with the North Sea. It is strictly a burgh of barony under magistrates chosen by the superior and feuers, but enjoys most of the privileges of a royal burgh. It is a place of considerable importance, and is composed of an old and a new town, connected by a bridge forming a continuation of the road from the south to Aberdeen. The old town consists of two irregular streets, built on fens granted by the Earls Marischal, within whose estate it was situated; but the new town is laid out on a regular plan, having broad streets with a square in the centre. In this square stands a market-house, erected in 1827, and surmounted by a circular tower. It contains a spacious hall, with a news-room occupying the upper story, and shops underneath. Here also is the county gaol, and where the county courts are holden. The harbour is a natural basin sheltered on the S.E. by a lofty rock, which projects into the sea, and on the N.E. by a good quay. There are two fixed lights on the pier, 18 and 24 feet high, erected in 1839, and seen at a distance of 12 miles. The inside of the harbour has a depth of 16 feet of water. During the season the herring fishery is carried on, and a considerable coasting trade is done in coal, lime, and grain. The woollen manufacture is carried on by two firms, and there are a brewery and a distillery. The town contains gas-works, a water company, three branch banking houses, and several good inns. The sheriff's ordinary court is held every Wednesday in time of session, and a sheriff's small-debt court on the same day, having been removed here from Kincardine, in 1600, under an Act of Parliament. The parish churches of Dunnottar and Fetteresso are situated near the town, and there are also a Free church, an United Presbyterian and an Episcopal chapel; also a chapel, in which the Established Church has evening service, containing one of the finest organs in Scotland. There are two parochial schools, a Free Church school, Episcopalian school, Donaldson's free school, and several others. The Stonehaven Journal is published here every Thursday. At Fetteresso, Cowie, and Dunnottar are extramural cemeteries, and at the last-named place also a garden open to the public. The principal object of interest in the vicinity of Stonehaven is Dunnottar Castle, about 1½ mile S. of the town. This fortress, once of great strength, was built by the Earls Marischal during the contest between Bruce and Baliol, and is seated on a rock 150 feet above sea-level, and almost separated from the land by a deep chasm. The entrance is by a square tower of great strength, and the ruins form one of the most majestic piles in Scotland. It withstood a long siege by Cromwell, and was often used as a state prison, where several of the nonconforming Presbyterian clergy were confined. It was finally dismantled about the middle of last century, when its proprietor, James Earl Marischal, was attainted of high treason for aiding the Pretender. The scenery is very fine, and Stonehaven has become a fashionable watering place in summer. The air is very salubrious. Market day is Thursday. Fairs are held on the Thursday before Candlemas, Thursday before Lammas, second Thursday in October, Thursday before Christmas (all old style), and on two fixed days in May and November.

STONEHENGE, an assemblage of upright, horizontal, and prostrate stones, supposed to be the remains of a Druidical templo, on Salisbury Plain, co. Wilts, about 2 miles N.W. of Amesbury, and 9 N. of Salisbury. Its name is Saxon, and signifies "hanging stones." It consists of the remains of two ovals within two circles, the whole surrounded by a circular vallum, or bank of earth, 15 feet high and 1,010 round. The outer circle is 100 feet in diameter, and has 17 stones remaining of about 30, measuring 20 feet by 7, and 3 feet thick, with several top stones still remaining in situ. The second circle is 9 feet within the first, and has but 8 stones remaining, besides fragments of 12 others; inside this is the first oval, consisting of 10 stones, of which 8 still remain, measuring from 16 to 21 feet in height, with top stones across 16 feet long; inside this is the inner oval, consisting of about 20 smaller stones, the largest 7½ feet high, of which only 11 remain; and nearly in the centre is the altar-stone, consisting of a flat slab 15 feet long, and different in character from any of the other stones, being a grained calcareous sandstone, which strikes fire with steel, and contains some minute particles of silver mica. The outer stones, which weigh from 10 to 70 tons, are chiefly sandstone, of the kind found on the surface of the downs in the vicinity of Avebury and Marlborough; but the stones of the inner circle are of various kinds not found in the neighbourhood, as fine-grained greenstone, black horneblende, quartz, felspar, and chlorite. Scattered over the plain are about 300 tumuli, or barrows, some of which have been opened, and found to contain charred human bones, with fragments of pottery and British and Roman ornaments and weapons; while within the enclosure, at the foot of the altar, have been found, on excavation, horns of stags, oxen, and other animals, intermixed with burnt wood and fragments of Roman and coarse British pottery.

STONEHOUSE, a par. and post town in the hund. of Lower Whitstone, co. Gloucester, 3 miles W. of Stroud, and 9 from Gloucester. It is a station on the Great Western Union railway. It is situated on the Stroudwater canal, and comprehends the hmlts. of Ebley and Hawardsfield, and part of the chplry. of Cain's Cross. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the manufacture of woollen goods. The soil is fertile, on a substratum of oolite. The principal residence is Stonehouse Court. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £510, in the patron. of the Crown. The church, dedicated to St. Cyril, has a tower and six bells. It has a stained window, and has been rebuilt, with the exception of its tower. There is also a district church at Cain's Cross, the living of which is a perpet. cur. This latter was built in 1836. The parochial charities produce about £51 per annum, of which £47 go towards the support of the schools. There are National and British schools for both sexes. The Independents have a chapel. N. S. Marling, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner. Fairs for cattle and pleasure are held on 1st May and 11th October.

STONEHOUSE, a par. in the district of the Middle Ward, co. Lanark, Scotland. It contains the vil. of Sandford. It extends in length about 6 miles from N.E. to S.W., with an average breadth of 3 miles, and is bounded by the pars. of Hamilton, Dalserf, Lesmahago, Avondale, and Glassford. The surface is moderately even, and the land chiefly arable. The soil is fertile, being chiefly a light loam, with clay near the rivers. Its south-western boundary is traversed by the Kype stream, which here joins the river Avon; and the upper part of the north-eastern boundary is traversed by the Cander water, which also joins the river Avon. On the banks of the Avon, which flows through the centre of the parish, is a sulphureous spring, designated Kittymuire Well. The underlying rocks are principally of the carboniferous formation, with protuberances of trap. Coal, limestone, sandstone, and freestone abound, and are extensively worked. The parish is traversed by the new road from Edinburgh to Ayr, and is within easy access of the Lesmahago railway. The town is about 7 miles S.E. of Hamilton, 6¼ N.W. of Lanark, and 4 N.E. of Strath-Avon. It is situated on the river Avon and on the Edinburgh and Ayr road. It consists of one principal street, nearly a mile in length, with two others of modern date. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the linen manufacture. This par. is in the presb. of Hamilton and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The stipend of the minister is about £250. The parish church was rebuilt in 1772. There are a Free church and an United Presbyterian church. There are three non-parochial schools. In the vicinity are traces of Coat castle and Ringsdale castle. Fairs are held on the last Wednesday in May, on the third Wednesday of July, and on the last Wednesday in November.

STONEHOUSE, EAST, a par. in the borough of Devonport, co. Devon. The three towns of Stonehouse, Plymouth, and Devonport are connected by means of a bridge across Stonehouse creek, and form one extensive seaport and dockyard. See articles DEVONPORT and PLYMOUTH, of which Stonehouse may be considered a suburb. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £197, in the patron. of the Vicar of St. Andrew's, Plymouth. There is also the district church of St. Paul's.

STONE HOUSES, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Pentrobbin, co. Flint, 1 mile S.E. of Mold.

STONELANDS, a extensive par. place in the hund. of Bampton, co. Oxford, 2 miles S.E. of Burford.

STONELANDS, a demesne in the par. of Withyham, hund. of Hartfield, rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex. It formerly belonged to the Sackvilles, but now forms part of Buckhurst Park, the seat of Earl De la Warr.

STONELEIGH, a par. in the Kenilworth div. of Knightlow hund., co. Warwick, 2 miles E. of Kenilworth, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Warwick. It is situated on the river Avon where the Sow joins, near the Roman Fosseway. The par., which is extensive, includes Cryfield, Westwood, and six other hmlts. The manor was held in demesne by Edward the Confessor, and afterwards by William I. The village, which is now inconsiderable, was formerly a market town, and has a gate, crypt, &c., of the Cistercian Abbey, brought from Radmore, in 1154, by Henry II. At the Dissolution, the revenues were valued at £151, and the site given by Henry VIII. to C. Brandon, Duke of Suffolk; from him it passed to the Cavendyshes, and was finally bought by Sir Thomas Leigh, Lord Mayor of London in 1562. King Charles I. was entertained by Thomas, first Lord Leigh, August, 1642, when the citizens of Coventry refused to open their gates to him. The modern mansion was built by Edward, third Lord Leigh, 1720. It contains a collection of paintings and portraits, by Dutch masters. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £510. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure. The interior contains an old font, and effigies of Alice, Duchess Dudley, and her daughter Alicia, on altar tombs of marble. There is also a district church at Westwood, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val £120. The parochial charities are very considerable. There is a National school for both sexes. Stoneleigh gives name to a deanery in the archdeaconry of Coventry and dioc. of Worcester.

STONELEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Kimbolton, hund. of Leightonstone, co. Hunts, 9 miles S.W. of Huntingdon. It is situated near the river Kym, and has traces of an Austin friary, founded in 1181 by William de Mandeville. The principal seat is Stoneley Hall.

STONE-NEAR-DARTFORD, a par. in the hund. of Axton, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 2 miles N.E. of Dartford, its post town, and 1 mile S.E. of Green-hithe railway station. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on Watling Street, near the river Thames. It was given by Ethelred, in 995, to the Bishop of Rochester, who had a seat here. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £765, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower and two bells. The interior contains a brass of J. Lumbarde, a priest, bearing date 1408, and effigies of Willshyre, of Stone Castle, bearing date 1526. The parochial charities are considerable. There is a National school for both sexes. Stone Castle is of great antiquity, and belonged to Sir John de Northwood in the reign of Edward III.

STONE-NEXT-FAVERSHAM, a par. in the hund. of Faversham, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 2 miles N.W. of Faversham, its post town. The village is situated near Juddehill Camp, on Watling Street. The inhabitants are wholly agricultural. The living is a sinecure rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £220. The church, which is in ruins, was partly built of Roman bricks.

STONERAISE, a tnshp. in the par. of Westward, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 5 miles S.E. of Wigton. It is situated on the river Wampool, and is in conjunction with Brocklebank to form a township.

STONESBY, a par. in the hund. of Framland, co. Leicester, 6 miles N.E. of Melton Mowbray, its post town, and 5 N. of the Sexby railway station. The village is situated on a branch of the river Eye, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £90. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a tower and three bells. The interior contains a Norman font and several ancient tablets. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum. There is a National school. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The Duke of Rutland is lord of the manor.

STONESDALE, a hmlt. in the chplry of Muker, par. of Grinton, North Riding co. York, 55 miles N.W. of York, in the moorlands near Shunner Fell.

STONESFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Wootton, co. Oxford, 4 miles W. of Woodstock, its post town. The village is situated on the river Evenlode, near the Roman Akerman Street, and is the place where a Roman pavement, 35 feet by 20, was discovered in 1711. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the slate quarries. The substratum is slaty oolite, in which remains of mammalia and impressions of ferns, insects, and other fossils are frequently met with. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £139. The church, dedicated to St. James, has been partly re-erected. The parochial charities produce about £19 per annum. There are day and Sunday schools. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels. The Duke of Marlborough is lord of the manor.

STONE STREET, a hmlt. in the co. of Surrey, 5 miles S.W. of Dorking, on the line of the Roman Stane Street, which went from Southwark, through Dorking, to the South Downs.

STONETHWAITE, a spot at the head of Borrowdale, co. Cumberland, 7 miles S. of Keswick. It commands a view of Eagle Crag.

STONETON HOUSE, an ext. par. place in the par. of Chipping Warden, co. Northampton, 8 miles S.W. of Daventry.

STONEYFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Colyton Rawleigh, co. Devon, 2 miles W. of Sidmouth.

STONEYHALL, a hmlt. in the par. of Inveresk, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, near Musselburgh. Witches were formerly burnt here. The principal residence is Stoneyhall House, once the seat of Sir W. Sharp, son of the archbishop, and subsequently of Colonel Charteris.

STONEY HOUGHTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Pleasley, co. Derby, 8 miles N.E. of Alfreton.

STONEYKELD, a hmlt. in the par. of Bowes, wap. of Gilling, North Riding co. York, 5 miles S.W. of Barnard Castle, on God's Bridge, on the river Greta.

STONEYKIRK, or STEPHENKIRK, a par. in the co. of Wigton, Scotland. It contains a vil. of its own name, and that of Sandhead. It extends in length nearly 10 miles, with an extreme breadth of 7 miles at the northern end. It is bounded on the N. by Portpatrick and Insch, on the N.E. by Luce Bay, on the S. by Kirkmaiden, and on the W. by the Irish Channel. The surface is generally of a moorish and pastoral character, with a considerable tract of barren sand along the Bay of Luce. The soil in the other parts is light and dry, and favourable to an early harvest. The W. coast is chiefly of a bold and rocky nature, extending about 6½ miles in length, but towards the S. it becomes softer in outline, and is indented by the creeks of Port Float, Ardwell Bay, and Port Gill, affording shelter to the small fishing craft, and Port Float. Some vessels of the Spanish Armada were wrecked at the latter point, and close by is Money Point, where many dollars were afterwards found. There is also a cave with a singular echo, called the Goodwife's cave. In this parish are three artificial mounds, the largest of which, situated near Balgreggan House, is 460 feet in circumference and 60 in height. The parish is traversed by the road from Stranraer to Kirkmaiden. The village of Stoneykirk i about 5½ miles S.E. of Stranraer, 6 S.E. of Portpatrick, and 23 W. of Wigton. It is situated between Luce Bay and the Irish Sea. The principal seats are Balgreggan House and Ardwell House. In the grounds of the latter are Druidical and Pictish remains. This par. is in the presb. of Stranraer and synod of Galloway. The stipend of the minister is about £250. The parish church was erected in 1827. There are a Free church and several non-parochial schools.

STONEY MIDDLETON. See MIDDLETON STONEY, co. Derby, and the like for other places with this prefix.

STONEY STRATTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Westbury, co. Salop, 7 miles S.W. of Shrewsbury.

STONEY STRATTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Evercreech, co. Somerset, 3 miles N.W. of Bruton.

STONEY THORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Long Itchington, co. Warwick, 1 mile W. of Southam, on the river Ichene, near the ancient Fosse Way.

STONHAM, EARL, a par. in the hund. of Bosmere, co. Suffolk, 3 miles N.E. of Needham Market, and 5 E. of Stowmarket. It was once a market town, and is still a very considerable place, forming part of the Duke of Norfolk's liberty, for which he appoints a coroner. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £659, in the patron. of Pembroke College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The interior is beautifully carved. The parochial charities produce about £120 per annum. The Baptists have a chapel. There are National schools. Messrs. Jackson and Sparke are lords of the manor.

STONHAM, LITTLE, a par. as above, 12 miles from Ipswich. In the vicinity is an extensive brewery and malting establishment. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £420. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has been recently restored. The register dates from the 14th century. The parochial charities produce about £87 per annum, of which £1 is the constable's "pightle." There is a village school for both sexes. The Baptists have a chapel. Sir W. Middleton is lord of the manor.

STONNAL, LOWER and OVER, hmlts. in the par. of Lynn Shenstone, co. Stafford, 4 miles S. of Lichfield. In this township is an ancient camp, surrounded by a fosse and double trench, called Castle Old Fort.

STONOR PARK, the seat of Lord Camoys, co. Oxford, 4 miles N.W. of Henley-on-Thames.

STONTON WYVILLE, a par. in the hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 5 miles N.E. of Market Harborough, its post town. The village is on a branch of the river Welland. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £220. The church is dedicated to St. Denis. Bishop Wyvile was born here in 1329, and died in 1375

STONY-DELPH WITH ALMINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Tamworth, co. Warwick, 3 miles S.E. of Tamworth.

STONYFORD, a post-office vil. in the pars. of Ennisnag and Church Jerpoint, bars. of Shillelogher and Knocktopher, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 8 miles S. of Kilkenny, and 77 from Dublin. There is a police station. Petty sessions are held at intervals. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, a dispensary, and a fever hospital.

STONYFORD, a feeder of the Boyne, rises about 3 miles W. of Athboy, co. Westmeath, Ireland.

STONYHURST. See MITTON, co. Lancaster.

STOODLEIGH, a par. in the hund. of Witheridge, co. Devon, 5¾ miles N.W. of Tiverton, its post town, and 4½ S.W. of Bampton. The par. includes Hightleigh and Stoodleigh Beacon on Warbrightsleigh Hill, said to have been put up by Edward II. The soil is light but shallow, on clay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £341. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret. The parochial charities produce about £24 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes, entirely supported by T. Daniel, Esq., who is lord of the manor. A revel occurs on St. Margaret's day.

STOODLEY, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Langfield, par. of Halifax, West Riding co. York, 9 miles W. of Halifax.

STOPHAM, a par. in the hund. of Rotherbridge, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 4 miles S.E. of Petworth, its post town, and 1 mile S.W. of the Pulborough railway station. The village is near the Arun and Wye canal and the river Rother, which is here crossed by a bridge of seven arches, built in the reign of Edward II. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £150. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The pavement is almost entirely composed of large slabs of Sussex marble, inlaid with brass figures and memorials of the Barttelots and Stophams. The register dates from 1544. There is a parochial school for both sexes, entirely supported by G. Barttelot, Esq., of Stopham House, who is lord of the manor.

STOPSLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Luton, hund. of Flitt, co. Bedford, 2 miles N.E. of Luton, its post town.

STORE, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Assynt, co. Sutherland, Scotland, 30 miles N.W. of Dornock. It is situated on the western coast of Sutherland, and includes a number of islands. It extends in length about 10 miles, with an extreme breadth of 8 miles. Its surface presents an assemblage of lofty mountains, barren rocks, extensive heaths, lakes, mosses, and rivers. Limestone and moss abound, and peat is used for fuel. The rearing of cattle and fishing afford employment to the principal part of the inhabitants. Several roads and bridges have recently been formed; but the country is in many parts almost impenetrable. There are numerous cairns and Druidical temples scattered throughout the district. The church was erected in 1828 by grant from the parliamentary commissioners. There is a Free church.

STOREHOUSE, a vil. in the par. of Llantrisaint, co. Glamorgan, near Llantrisaint.

STORETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bebington, lower div. of Wirrall hund., co. Chester, 3 miles S.W. of Birkenhead, and 5 N. of Great Neston. It is situated on a creek of the river Mersey, near the Chester railway.

STORITHS, a tnshp. in the par. of Skipton, West Riding co. York, 6 miles E. of Skipton. It is situated on the river Wharfe, and is joined with Hazlewood.

STORKHILL-WITH-SANDHOLME, a tnshp. in the par. of St. John Beverley, borough of Beverley, East Riding co. York, 1½ mile N.E. of Beverley.

STORMONT, a district in the co. of Perth, Scotland. It contains the pars. of Blairgowrie, Caputh, Cluny, Dunkeld, Kinloch, Lethendy, and part of Bendochy, with Stormont Loch and ten other lochs. It extends in length about 14 miles from E. to W., with a mean breadth of 7 miles. It gives title of viscount to the Earl of Mansfield.

STORMORE, an ext. par. lib. in the hund. of Guthlaxton, co. Leicester.

STORNOWAY, a par., post town, seaport, and burgh of barony in the island of Lewes, Western Islands, co. Ross and Cromarty, Scotland. It contains a post town of its own name, the quoad sacra par. of Knock, and the vil. of Back. The par. extends in length about 19 miles, and is from 7 to 10 broad, comprising an area of about 160 square miles. It lies in the north-eastern part of Lewes Island, and is bounded by the Minch Channel, and by the pars. of Lochs, Uig, and Barvas. The surface is generally flat, the highest ground being a round hill about 700 feet in height, which serves as a landmark to vessels steering across the Minch. The predominant rocks are gneiss and granite. The shore is in some places sandy, but more frequently bold shelving rocks or precipitous cliffs, worn into caves and fissures, and indented by numerous bays and sea-lochs. Until very recently the only cultivated portion was a narrow belt of land along the shore, the rest being barren moorland and moss; but immense improvements have been effected by the present proprietor, Sir James Matheson, M.P. for Ross-shire. The surface is watered by a number of small freshwater lakes, and by several streams, the largest of which has a course of only 10 miles. Stornoway, which is considered the capital of the Outer Hebrides, is situated on the head of a bay called Loch Stornoway, and has a convenient quay and docks. The town is built round the bay, and the houses are well built. The principal public buildings are the town-house, custom-house, prison, erected in 1845, a branch of the National Bank, savings-bank, assembly rooms, two hotels, Masonic lodge, and a lighthouse and beacon on Arnish Point, at the S. side of the entrance of Loch Stornoway. A little to the W. of the town stands Stornoway Castle, erected by Sir James Matheson, on the site of Seaforth Lodge, the seat of the former proprietors of Lewes. Two steamers ply regularly between Stornoway and Glasgow, and there is a mail packet twice a week, viâ Poolewe to Dingwall. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the coasting trade, and in the herring, cod, and ling fishery; there are besides, saw, carding, and corn mills, two rope walks, and an extensive distillery. Seals are taken on the coast. Stornoway was first erected into a burgh of barony by James VI., with the design of promoting the civilisation of the Western Isles, but continued an insignificant fishing village till of late years. It is now governed by two bailies, a treasurer, and six councillors. A sheriff's court sits every Thursday, and justice of peace, commissary, and baron baillie courts are held as occasion requires. The par. is in the presb. of Lewes and synod of Glenelg, in the patron. of the Crown. The minister has a stipend of £159. The parish church was erected in 1794, and repaired in 1831. There is also at Knock, in the district of Eye, a church founded by the government as a quoad sacra parish church. There are three Free churches in the parish, situated respectively at Stornoway, Knock, and Back, also an Episcopalian chapel. The parochial school is an efficient establishment, conducted on the plan of the Glasgow normal seminaries; there are also two schools for girls, having a department for Ayrshire needlework, the materials of which are supplied by Glasgow houses, who pay the pupils for their work. The charities include a dispensary, sailors' home, and several friendly societies. There are horticultural, literary, and farmers' societies. The antiquities consist of an old castle of the Macleod's, once occupied by Cromwell, but now in ruins, a large cairn on Gress-moor, and the remains of ancient chapels at Gress and Eye, formerly considered as sanctuaries. An annual fair is held on the second Wednesday in July for cattle.

STORR, a mountain in the northern div. of the Isle of Skye, co. Inverness, Scotland, 6 miles N. of Portree. It attains an elevation of 2,100 feet above sea-level.

STORRINGTON, a par., post and market town in the hund. of West Easwith, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 4 miles S.E. of Pulborough railway station, and 9 N.E. of Arundel. The village is situated on the road from Petworth to Brighton, and is lighted with gas from works constructed in 1861. A court leet for the hundred is held every third year. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £600, in the patron. of the Duke of Norfolk. The church is dedicated to St.

Mary. The parochial charities produce about £69 per annum, of which £30 goes to Downer's school. Fryern House and Parham House are the principal residences. In 1826 a British urn containing burnt bones was discovered in a barrow on the Downs. The market for corn is held every alternate Tuesday. Fairs occur on the 13th May and 11th November.

STORRS, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Undermilbeck, co. Westmoreland, 7 miles W. of Kendal. Storrs Hall, on the E. side of Windermere, is the principal residence.

STORRS, a hmlt. in the par. of Ecclesfield, West Riding co. York, 4 miles W. of Sheffield.

STORRS, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Oxspring, par. of Penistone, West Riding co. York, 1 mile E. of Penistone.

STORT, a stream of co. Herts, rises near Meesdon, and flowing along the Essex border by Bishop's Stortford, joins the Lea at Broxbourn.

STORTFORD, BISHOP'S, See BISHOP'S STORTFORD, co. Herts.

STORTHWAITE, a tnshp. in the par. of Thornton, Holme-Bacon div. of Harthill wap., East Riding co. York, 3½ miles W. of Thornton.

STORTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Scawby, E. div. of Manley hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln.

STOTFIELD, a vil. in the par. of Drainie, co. Moray, Scotland, 4 miles N. of Elgin. It is situated on the coast, near Stotfield Point.

STOTFOLD, a par. in the hund. of Clifton, co. Bedford, 3 miles N.W. of Baldock, its post town, and 6 S.E. of Biggleswade. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £242, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce above £200 per annum, besides seven almshouses. There are an endowed school and a National school. The Wesleyans and Baptists have chapels. The Rev. J. Alington, M.A., and the Masters and Fellows of Trinity College, Cambridge, are lords of the manor.

STOTFOLD, an ext. par. place in the S. div. of Strafforth wap., West Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Doncaster.

STOTFOLD, HIGH, a hmlt. in the ward of Stockton, co. Durham, 5 miles N. of Stockton-upon-Tees. It is a meet for the Durham hounds.

STOTTESDEN, a hund. in co. Salop, contains the divs. of Chelmarsh and Cleobury, comprising an area of 88,790 acres.

STOTTESDEN, a par. principally in the Cleobury div. of Stottesden hund., co. Salop, but partly in that of Wolphy, co. Hereford, 5 miles N. of Cleobury Mortimer, its post town, and 8 S.W. of Bridgnorth. The village is on the river Rea. The par. contains Farlow, Oreton, Bardley, Chorley, and 14 other tnshps. The soil is of various qualities. There are stone quarries and extensive lime works in the township of Oreton. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £670. The church is an ancient structure. It was built by Robert de Belesme, Earl of Shrewsbury, who presented it to the abbey of that place. There is a district church at Farlow, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £130. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. The Duke of Cleveland is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

STOUGHTON, a chplry. in the par. of Thurnby, hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 3½ miles S.E. of Leicester, its post town. The land is chiefly in pasture. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Thurnby, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains monuments of the Beaumont and Farnham families. In the churchyard is an ancient cross. The parochial charities produce about £36 per annum, realised from church lands. Stoughton Grange is the principal residence. G. A. L. Keck, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STOUGHTON, a par. in the hund. of Westbourne, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 9 miles N.W. of Chichester. Emsworth is its post town. It is an extensive parish, bounded on the W. by co. Hants, and on the S. by the range of Lofty downs called Bowhill, and comprehending the hmlts. of Walderton, Northwood, and East Marden. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £260, in the patron. of the Bishop of London. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There is also a district church at Stanstead, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £210. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum, the bequest of H. Smith. The principal residence is Stanstead House. It contains carvings by Grinlin Gibbons and a suit of Arras tapestry, representing the battle of Namur, the largest of six sets wrought at Arras for the Duke of Marlborough and his generals.

STOULTON, or STOUGHTON, a par. in the lower div. of Oswaldslow hund., co. Worcester, 5 miles S.E. of Worcester, its post town, 3½ N.W. of Pershore, and 1 mile N.E. of Wadborough railway station. The village is situated on the Birmingham and Gloucester railway. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £100. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas, has tombs of the Vincents and others. It was restored in 1848. Derham, author of "Physico and Astro Theology," was born here in 1656. There is a free school for both sexes. A few small charities are distributed in clothing to the poor. Wolverton Hall is the principal residence. Lord Somers is lord of the manor.

STOUPE, or STOWBOROUGH, a hmlt. in the par. of Fylingdales, lib. of Whitby Strand, North Riding co. York, 9 miles N.W. of Scarborough, and 4 S.E. of Whitby. It is situated near the coast, on a cliff 893 feet in height. There are extensive alum works in the vicinity.

STOUR, several rivers of this name, in England: one rises near Hythe in Kent, and after a course of 40 miles, in which it receives the waters of the lesser Stour, falls into the sea at Pegwell Bay, 3 miles S.W. of Ramsgate; another rises at Stour-Head, near Stourton, in Somersetshire, and after a course of 56 miles through parts of Wilts, Dorset, and Hants, joins the Avon near Christchurch; a third stream rises a few miles above Steeple Bumstead, in Essex, and after a course of 49 miles along the Suffolk border, joins the Orwell at Harwich; and a fourth, usually spelled Stoure, rises under the Clent hills, near Halesowen, in Worcestershire, and after a course of 30 miles, joins the Severn at Stourport.

STOURBRIDGE, a post and market town in the par. of Old Swinford, lower div. of Halfshire hund., co. Worcester, 20 miles N.E. of Worcester, and 124 from London. It is a station on the West Midland branch of the Great Western railway, where the Stourbridge and Birmingham branch turns off, and is on the South Staffordshire branch canal and the river Stour, which here separates the counties of Worcester and Stafford. It is a polling place for E. Worcestershire, and a petty sessions town. The manufacture of glass was established here in 1557 by Henzole, a Lorraine refugee. There are coal, ironstone, and fire-clay in the neighbourhood, the mines of which appear to have been worked as early as the reign of Edward III. Iron bars, hoops, agricultural instruments, crucibles, nails, fire-bricks, and glass are made. There are two banks, a school of art, new corn market, assembly-rooms, and subscription library. The justices sit on Friday. The town is divided into two ecclesiastical districts. The old town church is dedicated to St. Thomas, and is in the patron. of the bishop. A new church was erected on the other side of the town in 1860, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist. There are National schools, a King Edward VI. free grammar school, founded by letters patent in 1553; and chapels and schools for the Independents, Wesleyans, Presbyterians, and Roman Catholics. A new church, dedicated to St. James, schools, and parsonage have been recently erected at Wollaston through the liberality of W. O. Foster, Esq., M.P., who has endowed the church, and maintains the schools in great efficiency. The Poor-law Union of Stourbridge comprises 14 parishes or places. The town is divided into three wards, governed by 27 commissioners. Market day is Friday. Fairs are held on the Monday before the 29th March and 8th September; the former used to continue for seven days as a horse fair, the latter is for horses, cattle, and sheep.

STOURBRIDGE, a chplry. in the par. of St. Andrew the Less, or Barnwell, hund. of Flendish, co. Cambridge, 1 mile N. E. of Cambridge. There are remains of the hospital of St. Mary Magdalen for lepers, the chapel of which has been converted into a barn. It is chiefly noted for the fair which commences on the 18th September, and lasts till the 7th October, the opening of which is proclaimed by the vice-chancellor, doctors, and proctors of the University of Cambridge, and by the mayor and aldermen; the staple commodities exposed for sale are leather, timber, cheese, hops, wool, and cattle, and on the 25th horses.

STOUR-HEAD, the seat of the Hoare family, in the par. of Stourton, co. Somerset, 3 miles N.W. of Mere, and 10 from Frome. It is situated on the Wilts border, near the source of the river Stour, which rises in six wells or "fountains proper," which figure in the arms of Lord Stourton, whose family formerly possessed the castle, on the site of which the modern mansion of the Hoares has been erected. In the grounds are King Alfred's tower, 160 feet high, the pump of Peter the Great, statues of Flora and Hercules by Rysbrach, besides a gallery of paintings by Rembrandt, Poussin, Carlo Dolci, Claude, Gainsborough, and other masters.

STOURHOLM, one of the Shetland group of islands, coast of Scotland, 2 miles W. of Yell, in Yell Sound.

STOURMOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Bleangate, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 4 miles N. of Wingham, its post town, and 1 mile from Grove Ferry railway station. The village is situated on the navigable river Stour. Hops are grown. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £399, in the patron. of the Bishop of Worcester. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The register dates from 1538. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum. The Rev. J. Hilton, M.A., is lord of the manor.

STOURPAINE, a par. in the hund. of Pimperne, North Blanford div. of co. Dorset, 3 miles N.W. of Blanford-Forum, its post town. The village is on the Stour. The par. includes the hmlts. of Lacerton, formerly a distinct parish, and the tythg. of Ashe. On an eminence called Hod Hill are the remains of a double-ditched camp, which extends over several acres, and in which many Roman coins have been found. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £130, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. The register dates from 1631. There is a National school.

STOURPORT, a district par., post, market town, and inland port, of considerable trade, in the lower div. of Halfshire hund., and borough of Bewdley, co. Worcester, 4 miles S.W. of Kidderminster. It is a station on the Severn Valley branch of the Great Western railway, and is situated near the confluence of the Stoure with the Severn, and at the junction of the Staffordshire and Worcestershire canal. The Severn is here crossed by an iron bridge of one span of 150 feet. It is a polling place for the western division of the county, and a petty sessions town. The magistrates sit every fortnight. The town is well built, paved, and lighted with gas. There is a market house, savings bank, police station, young men's literary institute, and a subscription library. There are worsted and carpet manufactories, malting houses, and vinegar works, an iron foundry, a factory for hollow ware, and one of the largest tanneries in the county. There are good wharves and basins for the convenience of the barge traffic, and boat-building is carried on extensively. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £150. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. There are two National schools for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels. Market days are Wednesday and Saturday. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday in April, July, and October, all being toll free.

STOURTON, a par. partly in the hund. of Mere, co. Wilts, and partly in that of Norton Ferris, co. Somerset, 2 miles N.W. of Mere, its post town, and 10 from Frome. The village is on the road from Bath to Poole, and near the river Stour. The par. includes the hmlt. of Gasper. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £520. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has tombs of the Stourtons and Hoares, including that of Sir Richard, the antiquary. The parochial charities produce about £68 per annum. Near Penn, or Penzlewood, in that part of the parish within the co. of Somerset, are several thousands of pits or hollows, scattered over a surface of nearly 700 acres, forming a wide boggy tract, and supposed to be the site of a British town.

STOURTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Whichford, Brailes div. of Kington hund., co. Warwick, 3 miles S.E. of Shipston, on the river Stour.

STOURTON. See STURTON, co. Lincoln.

STOURTON. See STORETON, co. Chester.

STOURTON CASTLE, a seat in co. Stafford, 3 miles W. of Stourbridge. It is on the banks of the Stour, near the old seat of the Hamptons, where Cardinal Pole was born in 1500, and which was taken by the Roundheads in 1644.

STOURTON-CAUNDLE, a par. in the hund. of Brownshall, Sturminster div. co. Dorset. See CAUNDLE STOURTON.

STOUTING, a hund. in the lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, contains the pars. of Elmstead, Monks Horton, Stanford, Stelling, and Stouting, comprising an area of 8,100 acres.

STOUTING, a par. in the above hund., 6 miles N.W. of Hythe, its post town, and 3½ from Westenhanger railway station. The village is situated on Stane Street and the river Stour. The land is partly in common and hop-grounds. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £252. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The register dates from 1538. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel. Some urns and Roman coins have been discovered.

STOUTS, a hmlt. in the par. of Old Cleeve, co. Somerset, near Watchet.

STOUTS HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Dursley, hund. of Upper Berkeley, co. Gloucester, 1 mile E. of Dursley, under the Cotswold hills. Rudder, the county historian, was born here.

STOVEN, a par. in the hund. of Blything, co. Suffolk, 2½ miles N.W. of Wangford, its post town, and 5½ N.W. of Southwold. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £69. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, has traces of Norman architecture. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum, realised from town estates. The Earl of Stradbroke is lord of the manor.

STOVER'S LODGE, a seat of the Duke of Somerset, co. Devon, 2 miles N.W. of Newton-Abbot. Sir H. Seale's hounds meet here.

STOW, a par. partly in the district of East Edinburghshire, co. Edinburgh, and partly in the shire of Selkirk, Scotland. It contains a vil. of its own name, and the hmlts. of Fountainhall, Kylochyett, Caitha, Crosslee, and Clovenfords. The surface is hilly, and intersected by numerous streams, which fall into the Gala and the Tweed. The rocks are graywacke and clay slate. In this parish are numerous ancient camps and square towers on parallelograms, the ruins of which are still to be seen. The principal seats are Torwoodlee, Bowland, Symington, Crookston, Burnhouse, Torquhan, and Pirn. The parish is traversed by the road from Edinburgh to Jedburgh, and by the Edinburgh and Harwick railway, which has stations at Fountainhall, Stow, and Bowland-Bridge. The vil. of Stow is about 7 miles N. of Galashiels, and 24 S.E. of Edinburgh. It anciently went by the name of Wedale, i.e. "the Vale of Woe," and belonged to the bishops of St. Andrew's, who had a regal jurisdiction over the whole district of Wedale. The church had the privilege of sanctuary, and "the Black Priest of Wedale" was one of the three persons who enjoyed the privilege of the law of clan Macduff. In the village is a building of recent erection used as a public reading-room, library, and music hall. The par. is in the presb. of Lauder and synod of Mern and Teviotdale, and in the patron. of the Crown. The stipend of the minister is about £276. The parish church is an ancient edifice, formerly dedicated to the Virgin Mary. There are Free and United Presbyterian churches for Stow and Heriot, also a parochial and three other schools, and two public libraries. On the settling of the Border Laws in 1249, it was stipulated that the presbytery of Wedale should swear for the King of Scotland and the Bishop of St. Andrew's, who had a palace at the Stow of Wedale.

STOW, a div. in the hund. of Purslow, co. Salop.

STOW, a district and hund., co. Suffolk, contains the pars. of Buxhall, Combs, Creeting St. Peter, Great and Little Finborough, Harleston, Haughley, Old Newton, Onehouse, Shelland, Stow Upland, Stowmarket, and Wetherden, comprising an area of 22,010 acres. It gives name to a deanery in the dioc. of Norwich.

STOW, a par. in the S. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford, 8 miles N.W. of Rugeley, its post town, 7 E. of Stafford, and 1½ mile from the Weston railway station on the North Staffordshire line. The par. includes the hmlts. of Amerton, Drointon, Grindley, Haywood, Hixon, and Chartley Holme. Chartley Moss, comprehending about 100 acres, is prolific in cranberries. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £85. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, contains a monument with effigies of Walter Devereux, first Viscount Hereford, and his two wives. The parochial charities produce about £26 per annum. There is an endowed school. The Independents have a chapel. Earl Ferrers is lord of the manor.

STOW, a hmlt. in the par. of Threckingham, wap. of Avelan, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 1 mile N.E. of Folkingham.

STOW BARDOLPH, a par. in the hund. of Clackclose, co. Norfolk, 2 miles N.E. of Downham Market, its post town, and 9 S. of Lynn. It is a station on the Lynn and Ely branch of the Great Eastern railway. The village is on the road to Lynn, and near Stour Bridge over the river Ouse. The living is a vic. with the rect. of Wimbotsham annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £400. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, has a large mortuary chapel on the N. side. The parochial charities produce about £169 per annum. The Baptists and Primitive Methodists have chapels. The principal residence is Stow Hall. Sir T. Hare is lord of the manor.

STOW-BEDON, a par. in the hund. of Wayland, co. Norfolk, 6 miles W. of Attleborough, its post town, and 5 N. of Harling Road railway station. The old mansion of Stow-Bedon Hall is now a farmhouse. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £335. The church is dedicated to St. Botolph. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. At the enclosure of the parish 30 acres were allotted to the poor for fuel.

STOW BROW, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Fylingdales, North Riding co. York, 5 miles S.E. of Whitby.

STOWE, a par. in the hund. of Purslow, co. Salop, 1½ mile N.E. of Knighton, its post town, and 15 miles from Ludlow. The village is situated on the river Teme, near Stowe Hill. The par. comprises the tnshps. of Weston and Lurkenhope. The soil is of a gravelly nature, with a subsoil of loamy clay. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £188. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The Earl of Powis is lord of the manor.

STOWE, a par. in the wap. of Well, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 8 miles S.E. of Gainsborough, its post town, and 2 from Marton railway station. It was originally the Roman Sidnaceaster, on Ermine Street, and was made the seat of a Saxon bishopric about 678. It had also a college founded by Bishop Eadnorth for secular priests, but which afterwards was made a Benedictine abbey, and finally removed in the reign of William Rufus to the then desolate Abbey of Eynsham, in Oxfordshire. The village is situated on the middle road from Lincoln to Gainsborough. The par. contains the hmlts. of Bransby, Normanby, and Sturton. Courts-leet and baron are held annually. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £300, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains a carved pulpit, old font, and tombs of the Burghs of Stow Park. The transept is in an advanced state of decay, but the chancel was restored in 1852. The register dates from 1563. The parochial charities produce about £43 per annum, of which £5 go to Lady Warwick's school. The Wesleyans have a chapel. A fair for the sale of cattle and foals occurs on 10th October.

STOWE, a par. in the hund. of Buckingham, co. Bucks, 2½ miles N.W. of Buckingham, its post town. The par. includes the hmlts. of Boycott, Datford, and Lamport.

STOWE, in the above par., the residence of the late Duke of Buckingham, was sold in 1848, with its furniture, MSS., &c., to pay off a mortgage of a million and a half, the rent-roll being £61,000. Lord Ashburnham is the present proprietor. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £95. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

STOWE, a par. in the wap. of Ness, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 3 miles W. of Market Deeping, its post town, and 6 N.E. of Stamford. There is no village. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Barholm, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church has long been removed. A school held from time immemorial in the court house of the lord of the manor is endowed with £12 per annum, under a bequest of E. Burgh.

STOWE-CUM-QUY, a par. in the hund. of Staine, co. Cambridge, 5 miles N.E. of Cambridge, its post town. The village is situated near the ancient Fleam Dyke. An Enclosure Act was obtained in 1839, when 4 acres were appropriated for the purpose of recreation. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £52, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum. There is a village school supported by voluntary contributions. The Wesleyans have a chapel. Dr. Jeremy Collier was born here in 1650, and died in 1726.

STOWELL, a par. in the hund. of Horethorne, co. Somerset, 4½ miles S.W. of Wincanton, its post town, and 1 mile from Temple Combe station on the Salisbury and Yeovil railway. The soil consists of stone brash, with a subsoil of clay and limestone. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £193. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, was rebuilt in 1834. The register dates from 1745. There is a Sunday-school. The Rev. T. Marriott Dorrington is lord of the manor.

STOWELL, a par. in the hund. of Bradley, co. Gloucester, 2 miles S.W. of Northleach, its post town, and 9 E. from Cirencester. The village is on the river Coln and the ancient Fosse Way. The manor came from the Wentworths and Chedworths to Lord Stowell, to whom it gave title of baron. The soil consists of stone brash. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Hampnett, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has but one transept left. The representatives of Lord Eldon are lords of the manor and principal landowners.

STOWELL, a tythg. in the par. of Wilcott, hund. of Elstub, co. Wilts, 6 miles S.S.W. of Marlborough. The principal residence is Stowell Lodge, formerly the seat of Admiral Sir G. Montague, Bart.

STOWELL, WEST, a tythg. in the par. of Overton, co. Wilts, 5 miles S.W. of Marlborough, on the river Kennet.

STOWE-NINE-CHURCHES, a par. in the hund. of Fawsley, co. Northampton, 2½ miles S.E. of Weedon, its post town, and 6 N.W. of Towcester. The village is on the river Nen, and close to the line of the ancient Watling Street, the North-Western railway, and the Grand Junction canal. The Pytchley hounds meet in this parish. It was for some time in the possession of Sir John Danvers, one of those who signed the warrant for the execution of Charles I. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £705. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, contains effigies of Lady Danvers, by Stone, and a monument of Dr. Turner, President of Corpus Christi, Oxon. The parochial charities produce about £24 per annum. There is an infant school.

STOWER, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Redlane, co. Dorset, 2 miles S. of Gillingham, its post town, and 4 W. of Shaftesbury, on the high road from the latter town to Sherborne. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Gillingham, in the dioc. of Salisbury. The church was rebuilt in 1841. It stands on the site of the old one, and is dedicated to St. Mary. The register commences in 1653. There is a National school. Henry Fielding, the novelist, resided for some time in the parish.

STOWER PROVOST, a par. and lib. in the Sturminster div. co. Dorset, 5 miles S.W. of Shaftesbury, its post town, and 9 S.E. of Wincanton. The village is considerable. Here was formerly a cell to the nunnery of St. Leger de Pratellis, or Preaux, in Normandy, founded in the reign of King John, and given at the suppression to King's College, Cambridge. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of Todbere, in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £655, in the patron. of King's College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum, which go towards the support of the National school.

STOWERTON, co. Warwick. See STOURTON.

STOWER, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Red Lane, co. Dorset, 4 miles S.W. of Gillingham, its post town, and 5 W. of Shaftesbury. The village is on the river Stour, and the high road from Shaftesbury to Sherborne and Yeovil. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Gillingham, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church is an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Mary.

STOWEY, a par. in the hund. of Chew, co. Somerset, 3 miles S.W. of Pensford, its post town, and 1½ mile W. of Clutton. The principal seats are Stowey Mead, belonging to Lord Mount-Sandford, and Stowey House. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £183, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £35 per annum. There are schools for both sexes, also a Sunday-school. Sir E. Strachey, Bart., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

STOWEY. See CATHANGER-CUM-STOWEY, co. Somerset.

STOWEY, NETHER, a par. and post town in the hund. of Williton, co. Somerset, 9 miles W. of Bridgwater. The village, which was formerly a market town, is situated on a rivulet which runs into the river Parret. It consists of three streets, diverging obliquely from the market-place, and is well built. There are stone quarries. The soil is loam upon a subsoil of stone. The manufacture of silk has declined. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £334, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Windsor. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents have a chapel. The poets Coleridge, Southey, and Wordsworth were once residents here. Lord Taunton and Sir P. P. F. P. Acland are lords of the manor and principal landowners.

STOWEY, OVER, a par. in the hund. of Cannington, co. Somerset, 1 mile S. of Nether Stowey, its post town, and 8 miles N.W. of Bridgwater. The soil consists of red clay, with a subsoil of limestone and graywacke. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the silk trade. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £153, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene. The register dates from 1645. The parochial charities produce about £27 per annum, of which £5 goes to Rich's Sunday-school. There is a National school for both sexes. Lord Taunton, of Quantock Lodge, is lord of the manor.

STOWFORD, a par. in the hund. of Lifton, co. Devon, 7 miles E. of Launceston, its post town, and 9 from Okehampton. On the N. side of the road to Exeter are traces of a circular encampment supposed to be Saxon. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £241. The church is of great antiquity, and contains tombs. The parochial charities produce about £44 per annum. There is a National school. Dr. John Prideaux, a learned divine and one of the deprived bishops, was born here in 1578.

STOWFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Colyton Rawleigh, co. Devon, 2 miles W. of Sidmouth.

STOWFORD, a hmlt. in the district par. of Ivybridge, co. Devon, 3 miles N.W. of Modbury. It is situated under West Beacon Hill, which rises 1,130 feet above sea-level.

STOW HEATH, an unenclosed common between Bilston and Wolverhampton, co. Stafford. It abounds in coal and ironstone, which are worked.

STOWICK, a tythg. in the par. of Henbury and lower div. of Henbury hund., co. Gloucester, 4 miles N.W. of Bristol.

STOWLANGTOFT, a par. in the hund. of Blackbourn, co. Suffolk, 2½ miles S.E. of Ixworth, its post town, and 2 N. of the Thurston railway station. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £307. The church, dedicated to St. George, was built in 1370, and contains several carved stalls and monuments of the D'Ewes family. The church stands on the site of an ancient camp, near which Roman coins were found in 1764. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. Stow Hall is the principal residence, and was once the seat of Sir S. D'Ewes, Bart., the antiquary, and the Rawlinsons. H. Wilson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STOW, LONG. See LONGSTOW, co. Cambridge.

STOW, LONG, a par. in the hund. of Leightonstone, co. Huntingdon, 2½ miles N.E. of Kimbolton, and 10 S.W. of Bugden. The par. includes the hmlt. of Little Catworth. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £70, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Botolph. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There is a chapel for Dissenters. The Duke of Manchester, J. Read, Esq., and others, are lords of the manor.

STOW-MARIES, a par. in the hund. of Dengie, co. Essex, 7 miles S.W. of Maldon, its post town. The village is on the river Crouch. The soil is clay and loam. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £439. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The register dates from 1560. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum.

STOWMARKET, a par., post, and market town in the hund. of Stow, co. Suffolk, 12½ miles N.W. of Ipswich, and 14 S.E. of Bury. It is a station on the Great Eastern railway. It stands nearly in the centre of the county, at the confluence of the three rivulets that form the river Gipping, which stream was made navigable in 1793 with fifteen locks, and is occasionally called the Stowmarket canal. It is mentioned in Domesday Survey as Thorna, or Thorne market, at which time it had two churches, which were given by Henry II. to Osyth Abbey. Stowmarket is a polling and petty sessions town. It stands on the road from Ipswich to Bury and Cambridge, and consists of several streets paved and lighted with gas. Petty sessions are held at the court-house every alternate Monday, where also county courts are held monthly, and a court baron annually. The town has two banks, a corn exchange, a mechanics' institute, assembly rooms, new county court, gasworks, and union poorhouse. The malt trade is carried on to a considerable extent, and a large business is done in coals, slate, and timber. There are also breweries, iron foundries, a patent sawmill, and several small factories for making ropes, twine, and sacking. At Pleshwood is a Roman camp. Near the town are extensive nursery gardens and hop plantations. The living is a vic., to which is annexed Stow Upland, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £380. The church is dedicated to SS. Peter and Mary. The church was rebuilt about 1300 by the Abbot of St. Osyth, in Essex, enlarged in 1838, and restored at a cost of about £2,500 in 1865.. It contains the Tyrell chapel, separated from the rest of the building by a carved screen, and the grave of Dr. Young, tutor of the poet Milton, whose room, and the mulberry trees planted by him, are still to be seen at the vicarage. There is also the district church of Trinity, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £100. The parochial charities produce about £303 per annum. There are National and infant schools for both sexes, and a British school. The Independents, Baptists, Primitive Methodists, and Plymouth Brethren have chapels. On the S.E. side of the town a cemetery has recently been made. The union poorhouse is situated at Onehouse. Market day is Thursday. Fairs are held on 10th July and 12th August, the former for pleasure and the latter for the sale of lambs.

STOW-ON-THE-WOLD, a par., post, and market town in the upper div. of Slaughter hund., co. Gloucester, 9 miles N.E. of Northleach, and 3 W. of Addlestrop. It is a station on the Bourton branch of the Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton section of the Great Western railway. It is intersected by the ancient Fosse Way, and is a polling and petty sessions town, comprising the hmlts. of Donnington and Mangersbury. A charter for a market was procured in the reign of Edward III. by the Abbot of Evesham, then lord of the manor. Its government is invested in two constables, which are appointed at a court leet held by the lord of the manor annually. The houses in general are of stone, but low, irregularly built, and of ancient appearance. The petty sessions are held at the "Unicorn" hotel on alternate Thursdays, and the board of guardians meet fortnightly at the union poorhouse. The Poor-law Union comprises 25 parishes in Gloucestershire and 2 in Worcestershire. It is also the head of new County Court and superintendent registry districts. There are a bank, savings-bank, reading-room, police station, &c. Brewing and malting are carried on to some extent. The cloth trade, which once flourished here, has been long abolished. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeaconry and dioc. of Gloucester. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £525. The church, dedicated to St. Edward, contains effigies to D. Keyt, and tombs of the Chamberlaines of Mangersbury, who held the manor. It was erected in the 14th century by Ethalmere, who also founded a hospital. The parochial charities produce about £189 per annum. There are a grammar, National, and infant schools. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Baptists have chapels. Mangersbury House is the principal residence. Market day is Thursday, chiefly for corn. Cattle fairs are held on 12th May and 24th October, also two statute fairs for the hiring of servants on the Thursday prior to the 11th October and the Thursday following.

STOW UPLAND, a par. in the hund. of Stow, co. Suffolk, 1 mile from Stowmarket, its post town and railway station, and 13 miles from Ipswich. The soil is heavy, but productive. There are chemical manure works. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Stowmarket, in the dioc. of Norwich. The Wesleyans and Independents have chapels. There is a Sunday-school. Upland Hall is the principal residence. Lord Ashburnham is lord of the manor.

STOW, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Blackbourn, co. Suffolk, 5 miles N.W. of Bury St. Edmund's, its post town, and 10 from Thetford. The par. includes Chimney Mills. The living is a rect. with that of Wordwell, in the dioc. of Ely, val. £302. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. The Rev. E. R. Benyon, M.A., of Culford Hall, is lord of the manor.

STOW-WOOD, a par. in the hund. of Bullingdon, co. Oxford, 4 miles N.E. of Oxford, its post town. There is no church.

STRABANE, a bar. in co. Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing the pars. of Ardstraw, Bodony, Camus, Donaghedy, Leckpatrick, Urney, and parts of Cappagh, Upper Cumber, and Termonmaquirk.

STRABANE, a post and market town in the pars. of Leckpatrick, Urney, and Camus-juxta-Morne, bar. of Strabane, co. Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 18 miles N.N.W. of Omagh, and 129 from Dublin. It is a station on the Irish North-Western railway. This town is situated on the river Mourne, which here joins the Finn and Strabane canal, and at Lifford assumes the name of the Foyle river. It consists of ten principal streets and several smaller ones. It is lighted with gas, and has recently been much improved. The river is crossed by a bridge, which has been enlarged since its erection. The church of Camus parish is now a commodious building, in the Grecian style. There are also a Roman Catholic chapel, two Methodist meeting-houses, and several good public schools. Other charitable institutions are a dispensary, fever hospital, and poorhouse. Here is also the Derry and Raphoe Deaf and Dumb School, supported by voluntary contributions. It has a chief police station, and general and petty sessions are held. There are two branch banks and a savings-bank. Strabane was formerly a parliamentary borough, under charter of James I., returning two members before the Union. It was granted to the Earl of Abercorn in 1611, who founded the castle, and to whose family the town gives title of baron and viscount. The linen trade formerly flourished, but has now given place to an extensive general traffic. The government is vested in a body of commissioners. Milltown and Hollyhill are the neighbouring seats. Tuesday is market day. Fairs are held on the first Thursday in each month, the 12th May and November (old style). The Strabane Poor-law Union lies within the counties of Tyrone and Donegal, and contains 24 electoral divisions. The poorhouse has room for 960 persons. Strabane gives name to a presbytery, comprising Ardstraw, Ballyhennon, Clady, Donemana, Douglass, Glenelly, Newton Stewart, Strabane, and Urney.

STRABEAGA, a bay on the coast of co. Donegal, Ireland, between Malin and Dunaff heads. It has a narrow harbour with a bar at the entrance.

STRABOE, a par. in the bar. of Maryborough, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster Ireland, 2 miles N.N.E. of Maryborough. Mountmellick is its post town. The surface is intersected by the river Trihogue, a tributary of the Barrow. There is some bog, and limestone is worked. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. with Maryborough, £485, in the patron. of the bishop. Ruins of the church are remaining. On the site of Castle Morett are the ruins of an ancient mansion.

STRABOE, a par. in the bar. of Rathvilly, co. Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N.N.W. of Tullow. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Leighlin. The church has long been demolished. There are ruins of a castle and traces of a Danish rath.

STRACHAN, a par. in the co. of Kincardine, Scotland. It extends in length about 13 miles from N.E. to S.W., with an extreme breadth of 9 miles, and is bounded by the cos. of Forfar and Aberdeen, also by the pars. of Banchory-Ternan, Durris, Glenbervie, Fordoun, and Fettercairn. It lies amongst the Grampians, and is of a mountainous character, the highest point being reached by Mount Battock, which rises 3,459 feet above sea-level. The northern part of the parish contains the whole of the arable land, which is of a fertile character, and watered by the river Dee and its tributaries, the Avon or Aven, Feugh, and Dye. The prevailing rocks are granite and clay slate. In the vicinity are three artificial mounds, also two stone cairns measuring about 300 feet in diameter and 30 in height. The village of Strachan is about 15 miles W. of Stonehaven, and 94 from Edinburgh. It is traversed by the road from Brechin to Inverness, and is within easy access of the Deeside railway at Banchory. This par. is in the presb. of Kincardine O'Neil and synod of Aberdeen. The minister has a stipend of about £158. The parish church was erected in 1802, and was enlarged and restored in 1837. There are a Free church, parochial school and library, and three other schools. The fairs, formerly held in May and November, have been abolished.

STRACHUR AND STRACHLACHLAN, an united par. in the district of Cowal, co. Argyle, Scotland. Strachur forms its north-western district, and Strachlachlan its south-western. It is bounded along its N.W. side by Loch Fyne. The surface is hilly. Limestone is extensively worked. The village is about 5 miles S. of Inverary. It is situated at the ferry on Loch Fyne, near Loch Eck, into which the river Cur flows, and is traversed by the shortest line of communication between Inverary and Glasgow. It derives great facilities from the above-mentioned ferry to Inverary, and from its coach traffic to the Glasgow steamers at Lochgoilhead. A small trade is carried on from the bay of Strachur, and many boats belonging to the parish are engaged in the Loch Fyne fisheries. The par. is in the presb. of Dunoon and synod of Argyle. The stipend of the minister is about £170. The parish churches of Strachur and Strachlachlan are situated 6 miles apart from each other: the former was erected in 1789, and the latter in 1792. In Strachur are a Free church, parochial and two other schools, and a circulating library. The principal seats are Strachur Park, Castle Lachlan, Strachurmore, Glenshellis, Balliemore, and Glenbrantir. Standing stones and other antiquities are to be seen in the vicinity.

STRADBALLY, a bar. in Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing the pars. of Curraclone, Kilkenny, Moyanna, Stradbally, Timogue, and parts of Ballyadams, Dysartenos, Tossy, Kilteale, and Tullomoy.

STRADBALLY, a par., post, and market town in the bar. of Stradbally, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles E.S.E. of Maryborough, and 50 from Dublin. The surface consists of a good soil, and is crossed by the river Straid and the Grand canal. The town is situated on the river Straid, which is here crossed by a three-arched bridge, and contains a chief police station, bridewell, court-house, and dispensary. Petty and general sessions are held here. O'More's Castle formerly stood here, on the site of Stradbally House. The O'Mores founded a monastery here in the 12th century, which was granted to the Crosby family at the latter end of the 16th century. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. with others, £190. The church was built in 1764. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, a National and several private schools. Brockly Park and Ballykilcavin are the principal residences: the former was a seat of the Earls of Roden. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on 6th May, 10th July, 21st August, 14th September, and 21st November.

STRADBALLY, a par. in the bar. of Corkaguiney, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Castle Gregory. Dingle is its post town. It is situated on Brandon Bay, in the vicinity of Brandon Mountain, and includes a proportion of bog. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with Kilflyn, £271. The church has long been in ruins. The principal seat in the vicinity is Stradbally House.

STRADBALLY, a par. in the bar. of Dunkellin, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles S.S.E. of Oranmore, which is its post town. The surface, which lies on Galway Bay, is rocky and bare. The par. includes the vil. of Claran-Bridge within its limits. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Kilmacduagh, val. with Kilcolgan, £275, in the patron. of the bishop. The church has long been in ruins. The Roman Catholic chapel and a monastery near the village were founded by T. N. Redington, Esq., of Kilcornan House. The castle of Norah Burke is near the village.

STRADBALLY, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of Decies-without-Drum, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles S.S.W. of Kilmacthomas. It lies along the sea-shore, and comprises a considerable proportion of waste land. The road from Waterford to Cork passes through it, upon which stands the village. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. with two others, £499. The church was erected in 1786. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, and two or three good schools. Woodhouse, the chief seat, was formerly a residence of the Geraldine family. The village is situated near the river Tay's embouchure at Stradbally Cove. It is a good bathing resort, and contains a police station. Petty sessions are held at intervals. There are ruins of an abbey, of a house of the Knights Templars, and of the old church.

STRADBALLY. See CASTLECONNELL, co. Limerick.

STRADBROKE, a par. in the hund. of Hoxne, co. Suffolk, 6 miles S. of Harleston, and 6 E. of Eye. Wickham Market is its post town. It is situated on a branch of the river Waveney, and on the road from Woodbridge to Norwich. It is a polling and petty sessions town, and formerly had a market. The Union poorhouse stands in this parish. Petty sessions are held, and there is a police station. The soil is heavy. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £712, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has a stained E. window, and on a shield over the N. porch is a monogram of John de la Pole, Duke of Suffolk, by whom the church was built. The register dates from 1538. The parochial charities produce about £126. There is an endowed school for both sexes. The Baptists have a chapel. Sir E. C. Kerrison, Bart., M.P., is lord of the manor of Stradbroke; and T. G. Corbett, Esq., of Elmsham Hall, Lincolnshire, is lord of the manor of Shelton Hall with Wilby. A market for corn is held every Monday; a cattle fair on the third Monday in June; and a statute fair for the hiring of servants on the 2nd October.

STRADDLE, a vil. in the par. of Vowchurch, co. Hereford, 7 miles S.W. of Hereford.

STRADE, or STRAID, a stream of Queen's County, Ireland, rises under the Dysart mountains, and joins the Barrow above Athy.

STRADISHALL, a par. in the hund. of Risbridge, co. Suffolk, 11 miles from Newmarket, its post town, and 5 N.W. of Clare. The soil is a mixture of clay and loam. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £325. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret. South Place is the principal residence. H. R. Homfray, Esq., is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

STRADONE, a small post and market town in the par. of Larah, in the bar. of Upper Loughtee, co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Cavan, and 65 from Dublin. It is situated on the road from Virginia to Ballyhaise, and has a police station and a dispensary. Stradone House is the principal seat. Fairs are held on 7th February, 28th March, 10th May, 24th June, 16th August, 10th October, and 18th December.

STRADSETT, a par. in the hund. of Clackclose, co. Norfolk, 4 miles N.E. of Downham Market, its post town. The village is on the road from Bury St. Edmund's to Lynn, and near the line of the Great Eastern railway. The soil is fertile. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £108. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is situated in the park, and has a stained E. window containing the Adoration of the Magi, surmounted by the arms of the see of Ely, those of the East Angles, and of Bury and of Burnand Dereham abbeys. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a school for both sexes, recently erected at the expense of W. Bagge, Esq., who is lord of the manor.

STRAFFAN, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of North Salt, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Celbridge, and 13 from Dublin. It is a station on the Great Southern and Western and on the Dublin and Cork railways. It is situated on the river Liffey, near the course of the Grand canal. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, and in the patron. of the archbishop. Here are a Roman Catholic chapel and a Sunday-school. Straffan House and Lodge are neighbouring seats.

STRAFFORTH AND TICKHILL, a wap. in the West Riding co. York, in two divisions, North and South.

STRAGGLETHORPE, a par. in the wap. of Loveden, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 8 miles S.E. of Newark, its post town, and 6 from Hougham railway station. The village is on the river Brant. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Beckingham, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church is dedicated to St. Michael.

Stragglethorpe Hall is now a farmhouse. Sir G. Welby is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

STRAGGLETHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Cotgrave, S. div. of Bingham wap., co. Nottingham, 3 miles S.W. of Bingham. It is situated near the Grantham canal.

STRAID, or STRAID ABBEY. See TEMPLEMORE, co. Mayo, Ireland.

STRAID, a vil. in the bar. of Lower Belfast, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Carrickfergus. Fairs are held on 4th September and 23rd October.

STRAIDKELLY, a vil. in the par. of Tickmacrevan, in the bar. of Lower Glenarm, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 1 mile N.W. of Glenarm. It is situated on the hill of Clooney.

STRAITON, a vil. in the par. of Libberton, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 4 miles S. of Edinburgh.

STRAITON, a par. in the district of Carrick, co. Ayr, Scotland. It contains a vil. of its own name and that of Patna. It extends in length about 20 miles from N. to S., with an extreme breadth of 8 miles, and is bounded by Kircudbrightshire, and by the parishes of Dalrymple and Dalmellington. The surface is rocky and wild, interspersed with a number of small lakes, among which are Finlass, Braden, and Lochriccar. The greatest altitude attained is about 1,150 feet above sea-level. It is watered by the rivers Doon and Girvan, and by several small streams falling into the lakes. The parish is traversed by the road from Girvan to New Cumnock, and by that from Ayr to Kircudbright, and is within easy access of the stations at Dalmellington and Patna, on the Dalmellington railway. The village of Straiton is about 4 miles S.E. of Kirkmichael, and 14½ S.E. of Ayr. It is situated on the rivers Girvan and Doon, near Loch Doon. This par. is in the presb. of Ayr and synod of Glasgow and Ayr, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of about £244. The parish church, which is of great antiquity, was restored in the years 1787 and 1813. There are a Free church for Straiton and Crosshill, a parochial and two other schools, and a parochial library at Straiton. At Patna are an United Presbyterian church, a chapel-of-ease, and a parochial school. The principal seats are Blairquhan Castle, Berberth House, and a shooting lodge of the Marquis of Ailsa.

STRALOCH LANDS, a vil. in the par. of New Machar, cos. Aberdeen and Banff, Scotland, 10 miles N.W. of Aberdeen.

STRAMSHALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Uttoxeter, co. Stafford, 1½ mile N.W. of Uttoxeter. Here was anciently a nunnery, founded by St. Mudwenna in the 9th century.

STRANAKILEY, a sandbank off Ayre Point, Isle of Man, about 1½ mile long.

STRANCALLY, an ancient seat of the Desmonds, in the co. of Waterford, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Tallow.

STRAND-GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Great Brentford, hund. of Elthorne, co. Middlesex, 1 mile E. of Brentford, 2½ miles from Ealing, and is situated on the Thames. Joe Miller, the comedian, died here in 1738.

STRANDS, a hmlt. in Wast Dale, co. Cumberland, 7 miles N.E. of Ravenglass. It is situated among the hills at the river Irt's head, near the bottom of the lake called Wast Water.

STRANDTOWN, a vil. in the bar. of Castlereagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles E. of Belfast. It is situated on Lough Strandtown.

STRANGFORD, a small port and post town in the par. of Ballyculter, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 6 miles E.N.E. of Downpatrick, and 102 from Dublin. It is situated on the W. side of the entrance to Strangford Lough, facing Portaferry. It is a coastguard station and a sub-port to Newry. It contains a chapel-of-ease, a Roman Catholic chapel, Wesleyan chapel, police station, and a custom-house. There is a considerable coasting trade carried on. Strangford House is the seat of Lord de Ros. The Smythe family take the title of viscount from this town. Remains of four castles, founded by the De Courceys, are seen in the vicinity. Fairs are held on 12th August and 8th November.

STRANGFORD, a sea loch on the coast of co. Down, Ireland. It is connected with the sea by a narrow passage about three-quarters of a mile broad, and 6 miles long, defended at the entrance by the headlands called Killard and Ballyquintin. The loch is near 16 miles long and 3 broad, and contains numerous small islands and rocks.

STRANOCUM, a vil. in the par. of Ballymoney, in the bar. of Upper Dunluce, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Ballymoney. It is situated on the river Bush. Stranocum House is the principal residence. Fairs are held on 20th April and 29th December.

STRANORLAR, a par., post, and market town in the bar. of Raphoe, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 11 miles S. of Letterkenny, and 143 from Dublin. It is a station on the Irish North-Western railway. The par. comprises the vil. of Ballybophey. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Raphoe, val. £430, in the patron of the crown. There are an old church, a Roman Catholic chapel, and Presbyterian and Wesleyan meeting-houses. A parochial and one or two private schools are situated in the town. Drumboe Castle is the seat of Sir E. Hayes, Bart. The town is situated on the river Finn, and contains a market-house, court-house, and dispensary. Petty sessions are held at intervals. Stranorlar Poor-law Union lies within the county of Donegal, and contains 11 electoral divisions. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on 29th March, 11th June, 6th July, 12th August, 10th October, and 9th and 10th December.

STRANRAER, a par., seaport, post and market town, and a royal and parliamentary burgh in the co. of Wigton, Scotland, 6 miles N.E. of Port-Patrick, and 9 N.W. of Glenluce. It is a station on the Castle Douglas and Port-Patrick branch of the Caledonian railway. It was constituted a separate parish in 1617 out of portions of Inch and Leswalt, and comprises only 40 acres, including the quoad sacra par. of Sheuchan. It was first chartered by James VI., and was enrolled among the royal burghs in the reign of Charles II. The town is advantageously situated for trade at the head of Loch Ryan, and is considered the capital of West Wigtonshire. The parish aad royal burgh are co-extensive, but the town and parliamentary burgh include besides parts of the parishes of Inch and Leswalt. The bay and harbour afford excellent anchorage, and there is a pier of considerable length, affording facilities for lading. The port has a custom-house establishment, and has Dromore, Portnessock, and Port-Patrick for sub-ports. The town has three principal streets running nearly parallel with the margin of Loch Ryan, and crossed at right angles by seven smaller streets. An old edifice, originally a castle of the Kennedys of Chapel, stands near the centre of the town, and is now used as a police station. The other public buildings are a spacious town-hall, erected in 1855, a custom-house, county gaol, mechanics' institute, news-rooms, two libraries, a dispensary, and offices of the British Linen Company, the Union Bank of Scotland, and the Edinburgh and Glasgow Bank. A good export trade is carried on in shoes, leather, cattle, grain, cheese, and agricultural produce, chiefly to Glasgow, Belfast, and Liverpool, to which towns steam vessels ply regularly. There are also some few persons employed in weaving for houses in Glasgow, besides tanyards, several nail factories, and boatbuilding yards. The bay affords a plentiful supply of fine oysters, the right of dredging for which belongs by ancient charter to General Sir A. Wallace, who annually lets it; there is also a good supply of white fish, and herrings are occasionally taken in large quantities. In the neighbourhood are extensive nursery gardens and many gentlemen's seats, including Culhorn and Castle Kennedy, belonging to the Earl of Stair; Lochnaw Castle, of Sir Andrew Agnew, Bart.; Corsewell House, of Moore, Esq.; Loch Ryan House, of General Sir Alexander Wallace. As a royal burgh, Stranraer is governed by a provost, 2 bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and 13 councillors, and has a revenue of £360. As a representative burgh it joins with Whithorn, Wigton, and New Galloway in returning one member to parliament. The municipal constituency in 1856 was 409, and the parliamentary 500. The population of the parish and royal burgh in 1861 was 3,980, but of the parliamentary burgh 6,273, including 1,009 in the parish of Inch and 1,284 in Leswalt. One weekly newspaper, the Galloway Advertiser, is published in the town every Thursday. A justice of the peace small-debt court is held on the first Monday of every month, a burgh court weekly on Saturday, and a sheriff circuit small-debt court ten times in the year. The par. is the seat of a presb. in the synod of Galloway and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of about £160. There are two parish churches, two Free churches, three United Presbyterian churches, a Reformed Presbyterian church, a United Original Secession, and a Roman Catholic chapel. The principal school, called the Academy, was founded in 1842, and occupies a large building, containing class and lecture rooms; there are six other schools. Market day is Friday. Fairs are held on the Monday before the first Wednesday in January, the third Friday in April, the first and third Fridays in May, the Thursday in June before Keltonhill fair, the third Fridays in July, August, and September, the second Monday in October, and the third Friday in November.

STRANTON, a par. and seaport town in the N.E. div. of Stockton ward, co. Durham, 10 miles from Stockton-upon-Tees, and 2 S.W. of Hartlepool. The town stands at a short distance to the S. of Hartlepool harbour on the road from Stockton to Hartlepool. The par. includes the tnshps. of Brierton, Stranton, and Seaton Carew. There are some coal mines and quarries of limestone. Within the last quarter of a century the town has rapidly increased, and there are now several foundries, shipbuilding yards, docks, and other works connected with maritime stations. The Stockton and Hartlepool railway approaches close to the sea-coast at New Stranton in this parish, and is carried along the verge of the sea by an embankment of puddled clay. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £280. The church is dedicated to All Saints. There is also a district church at Seaton Carew, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £150. The parochial charities consist of Fulthorpe's bequest for a school.

STRATA-FLORIDA, or YSTRAD FFLUR, a tnshp. in the par. of Caron-ys-Clawdd, hund. of Penarth, co. Cardigan, 5 miles N.E. of Tregaron, its post town, and 16 from Aberystwith. It is a station on the Manchester and Milford railway. The village is near the Sarn Helen Way and the head of the river Teivi. In the neighbourhood is the Saxon gateway, &c., of a Cistercian abbey, founded by Rhys-ab-Gruffydd in 1164, which was destroyed by fire, but rebuilt in 1294. Its revenue at the Dissolution was valued at £118, and it had several hospitia attached to it. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £80. The church was built out of the ruins of the above-mentioned priory.

STRATFIELD MORTIMER. See MORTIMER-STRATFIELD, co. Berks.

STRATFIELDSAYE, a par. partly in the hund. of Reading, co. Berks, but chiefly in the lower half div. of Holdshott hund., co. Hants, 8 miles N.E. of Basingstoke, its post town, and 2 S.E. of Mortimer-Stratfield railway station. It is situated on the river Loddon, and contains the tithg. of Beechhill. Stratfieldsaye was the seat of the Sayes till Richard II.'s time, and afterwards of the D'Abridgecourts and Pitts, but was bought by parliament of Lord Rivers in 1815, and presented by the government to the Duke of Wellington. The Bramshill hounds meet in this parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £669. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £43 per annum, of which £22 go to Pitt's school. There is also an infant school, supported by the Duke of Wellington. A Benedictine priory, in honour of St. Leonard, was founded here in 1170 by Nicholas de Stoteville, as a cell to the Abbey of Valemont in Normandy, and at the suppression was granted to Eton College.

STRATFIELD-TURGIS, a par. in the lower half of Holdshott hund., co. Hants, 8 miles N. of Winchfield, its post town, 5 N.W. from Hartford-Bridge, and 5 from the Mortimer railway station. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £204. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a free school, and the children of this parish have the privilege of frequenting the endowed National and infant schools belonging to the par. of Strathfieldsaye. The Duke of Wellington is lord of the manor.

STRATFORD, a div. in the hund. of Barlichway, co. Warwick, contains the pars. of Aston Cantlow, Bidford, Billesley, Binton, Exhall, Hasselor, Salford Priors, Old Strafford, Temple Grafton, Wixford, and parts of Arrow and Welford, comprising an area of 29,230 acres.

STRATFORD, or STRATFORD LANGTHORNE, a ward and post town in the par. of West Ham, hund. of Beacontree, co. Essex, 4 miles N.E. of London. It is a junction station on the North London and Great Eastern railways, where the Cambridge and Woolwich lines branch off. The town is situated on the road to Harwich, and on the banks of the river Lea, which is navigable to the Thames. The Roman way to Colchester is said to have here crossed the river by a ford, hence the name of the place, "Strat-ford." There are a brick gateway, arch, and other remains of a mitred Cistercian abbey, founded by William de Montfitchet in 1135, and which was moved to Burghsted, near Billericay, but was subsequently restored, and continued till the Dissolution, when its revenue was valued at £574, and the site given to Sir P. Meautis by Henry VIII., who confined in it the Countess of Salisbury. The moat enclosed an area of 10 acres. On the banks of the river are chemical and dye works, flour mills, a porter brewery, distilleries, and the Great Eastern railway locomotive works. This place is connected with Stratford-le-Bow by a bridge that crosses the river Lea, and which was originally built by Queen Maud, wife of Henry I., but was rebuilt in 1834. Stratford is divided for ecclesiastical purposes into the three perpetual curacies of St. John, population 7,000, val. £310, patron. of the Vicar of West Ham; Christ Church, population 4,000, val. £200, patron. of trustees; and St. Paul's, population 9,000, val. £300, patron. of trustees. There are National and British schools for both sexes, and industrial schools in connection with Whitechapel Union. The Wesleyans, Baptists, Independents, and Roman Catholics have chapels.

STRATFORD, FENNY, a chplry., tnshp., and post town in the pars. of Bletchley and Simpson, hund. of Newport Pagnell, co. Bucks, 13 miles E. of Buckingham, and 45 N.W. of London by road, or 47½ by the London and North-Western railway, which has a station about three quarters of a mile from the town. It is near the site of the Roman station Magiovinium, on Watling Street, at the ford on the Ouzel or Lofield. The modern town comprises two streets, and stands on an eminence surrounded by fens, now partially drained. The Grand Junction canal crosses the high road at the bottom of the town. The market, which never flourished since the devastation caused by the plague in 1665, is now obsolete. A considerable business is carried on in brick and tile making, and in coals, slate, and timber, also lace making. The population of the tnshp. in 1861 was 1,199. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £65. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, and situated in Bletchley, was rebuilt in 1724 through the exertions of Browne Willis, the antiquary, and was enlarged in 1823 by voluntary subscriptions. The Wesleyans and Baptists have chapels. There are National schools for both sexes. Philip D. P. Duncombe, Esq., is lord of the manor. Fairs are held on 19th April, 18th July, 11th October, and 28th November for cattle, toys, and earthenware.

STRATFORD-LE-BOW. See Bow, co. Middlesex.

STRATFORD, OLD, a hmlt. in the pars. of Cosgrove, Furtho, and Potterspury, hund. of Cleley, co. Northampton, a quarter of a mile N.W. of Stony-Stratford. At a place called Chapel Close were formerly a chapel and hermitage.

STRATFORD, OLD, a par. in the hund. of Bârlichway, co. Warwick. It includes, besides the market town of Stratford-on-Avon, the village of Old Stratford and the hmlts. of Bishopton, Bushwood, Drayton, Dodwell, Luddington, and Shottery, besides parts of Wilncott. For living and other particulars see STRATFORD-ON-AVON.

STRATFORD-ON-AVON, a borough in the par. of Old Stratford, Stratford div. of Barlichway hund., co. Warwick, 8 miles S.W. of Warwick, and 94 from London by road. It is a station on the junction line of the Great Western with the West Midland railways, and there is a goods line from the termination of the canal to near Morton-in-the-Marsh, in Gloucestershire, and is favourably situated for trade on the right bank of the Avon, which here becomes navigable, and at the junction of the Stratford-on-Avon canal. The Roman Fosse Way passed in the vicinity, whence a branch road to Alcester struck across the river by the town. In the 7th century it was the site of a monastery, and was presented by Æthelard the Saxon to the bishops of Worcester, who, after the Norman Conquest, obtained several charters from the earlier Plantagenet kings, conferring on the town the privilege of a weekly market and five annual fairs. In the reign of Edward VI. the then Bishop of Worcester exchanged the manor away to the Dudleys.—Shakspeare was born here in 1564, and died in 1616. In the reign of Elizabeth the town was twice much ravaged by fire. During the civil war of Charles I. the town was taken from the Royalists by Lord Brooke in 1642, but was recovered by Queen Henrietta Maria in the following year, when she was received at New Place by Shakspeare's daughter Susannah, then Mrs. Hall. In the reign of Charles II. the manor was granted to the Sackvilles, and New Place having reverted to the Cloptons, was by them rebuilt; but in 1756, the property having been purchased by one Francis Gastrell, a clergyman, he cut down the famous mulberry-tree planted by Shakspeare, under which Sir Hugh Clopton in 1742 had entertained Garrick, Delany, and Macklin, and in 1759 razed the house. In 1769 a festival termed "the Jubilee" was celebrated at Stratford in honour of Shakspeare, under the direction of Garrick; and in 1864, being the tricentenary anniversary of the poet's birth, another jubilee was held. The London road crosses the Avon by a stone bridge 1,128 feet long, built on pointed arches in the reign of Henry VII., at the sole charge of Sir Hugh Clopton, Lord Mayor of London, and recently widened. A little below it is the railroad bridge, and at the S. end of the town is a wooden bridge for foot-passengers only. The streets are irregularly laid out, but in general clean, well paved, and lighted with gas. The houses are of various dates, including specimens of domestic architecture of the 16th and 17th centuries. The public buildings are the townhall, erected in 1768, with the statue of Shakspeare, presented by Garrick, in a niche on the northern front, and in the principal hall, which is 60 feet by 30, are portraits of Shakspeare by Benjamin Wilson and one of Garrick by Gainsborough; and the guildhall, which anciently belonged to the guild of the Holy Cross, founded in 1269 by Robert de Stratford, but was forfeited to the crown on the Dissolution, and given to the town by Edward VI., has an oak roof; the lower part is used for the business of the corporation, and the upper part is occupied by the grammar school. Adjoining the hall are the residence of the vicar, who also officiates as chaplain, and the ancient chapel of the guild, still used as a chapel-of-ease, having been founded by Sir Hugh Clopton in the reign of Henry VII. Next in point of interest are the Shakspeare Rooms, built within the precincts of Shakspeare's garden, where the county court is held, and theatrical performances take place. There are also a market-house, erected in 1821 on the site of the old market cross, a public library and reading-rooms, a savings-bank, two branch banks, a dispensary and infirmary containing 16 beds, and Shakspeare's House in Henley-street, bought in 1849 by the Shakspeare Club. Among the other noteworthy objects in Stratford and its vicinity is a curious old half-timber house in the High-street; and the old thatched cottage of the Hathaways, in the adjoining parish of Shottery, about 1 mile to the W. of the town of Stratford, is yet shown as the place where Anne Hathaway lived before she married Shakspeare. A few miles higher up the Avon is Charlecote House, the seat of the Lucys; and about 3 miles S.W. of the town is the hamlet of Luddington, where are the ruins of a chapel. The Spa, a mineral spring, is in the township of Bishopton, about 2¼ miles from the town.—Malting is carried on and tarpaulins are made. The town was first chartered by Edward VI., and under the Municipal Corporation Act is governed by a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 town councillors, assisted by a chamberlain, with the style of "mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of the borough of Stratford-on-Avon." The municipal revenue is about £2,100. The sanitary arrangements are under a local board of health. Stratford is a polling-place for the southern division of the county of Warwick, and seat of a Poor-law Union embracing 36 parishes and townships. Petty sessions are held for the borough at the townhall, and by the county magistrates at the new county petty sessions house. It is also the seat of a new County Court and superintendent registry. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of St. James the Great annexed, in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £239. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, old and once collegiate, is situated at the south-eastern corner of the town, close to the bank of the Avon. There are several carved stalls, a piscina, two carved stone pulpits, and tombs, including that of the great poet, whose remains are buried in the chancel on the N. side, and are covered with a slab bearing the well-known lines. The monument against the wall is surmounted by a half-length bust of Shakspeare, by G. Johnson, originally coloured. Here also are the tombs of his wife Anne Hathaway, of his daughter Susannah, and of his friend John Combe, with an effigy; also several monuments of the Cloptons, which were originally in Becket's Chapel, afterwards Combe's House, and which was taken down in 1800. The other churches are Holy Trinity, once the chapel of the "Holie Crosse," and which has, under the plaster, 11 curious frescoes of the legend of the Cross; the church of St. James the Great, erected in 1855 at the N. end of the town; and the district church of Bishopton, about 2 miles W. of the town, recently rebuilt in place of the old chapel of St. Peter. The benefice of St. Peter's is a perpet. cur., val. £25, in the patron. of the vicar. The Roman Catholics have a chapel recently erected, and there are chapels for Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, Independents, and Baptists. The free grammar school, at which Shakspeare is supposed to have been educated, was founded in 1482 by Thomas Jolliffe or Jolyfe, a native of the town, was refounded by Edward VI., and was remodelled by order of the Court of Chancery in 1843, when a second master was appointed; the school is now attended by about 50 boys, being free to children of residents in the borough. There are spacious National schools erected in 1846, also British and Sunday schools. The town charities produce about £900 per annum, of which £700 is the endowment of the grammar school and almshouses for 24 poor men and women, and are managed by 12 trustees. Archbishop John de Stratford, who died in 1348, his brother Bishop Robert, and his nephew Bishop Ralph, were born here. Market day is on Friday, chiefly for corn and cattle. Fairs are held on fixed days in each month, except August and November, for horses, cattle, and cheese, and statute fairs on the day after Old Michaelmas and the second Friday after 12th October.

STRATFORD ST. ANDREW, a par. in the hund. of Plomesgate, co. Suffolk, 3½ miles S.W. of Saxmundham, its post town, and 6 from Framlingham. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £137. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. Ranulph de Glanville, the famous justiciary of England in the reign of Henry II., was born here.

STRATFORD ST. ANTHONY. See STRATFORD TONY, co. Wilts.

STRATFORD ST. MARY, a par. in the hund. of Samford, co. Suffolk, 6 miles S.E. of Hadleigh, 5 N.W. of Manningtree, and 7 N.E. of Colchester, its post town. The village is considerable, and situated on the river Stour, here crossed by a bridge, and near the Roman station Ansam, on the way to Caistor. The Essex and Suffolk hounds meet in this parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £296, in the patron. of the duchy of Lancaster. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tomb of E. Mors, bearing date 1430. The parochial charities produce about £27 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, also a parochial library. The principal residence is Stratford Hall. A fair is held on the 22nd June.

STRATFORD, STONY, a post and market town in the hund. of Newport, co. Bucks, 6 miles S.W. of Newport-Pagnell, 8 N.E. of Buckingham, and 2 miles from the Wolverton station on the London and North-Western railway. It is situated near the Buckingham and Grand Junction canal, at the bridge over the river Ouse. The Roman road Watling Street passed through Stony Stratford in a direct line through the county from Dunstable, and consequently Camden supposes it to have been the Lactodorum of the Itinerary. One of the crosses of Eleanor, Queen of Edward I., was erected here, but was demolished in the great civil war; and at the Old Cock Inn Richard III., when Duke of Gloucester, seized Edward V., with Lord R. Grey, Sir T. Vaughan, and others. The government is vested in the county magistrates, who sit every alternate Friday at the Cock Inn. The town was much damaged by fire in 1736, and again in 1742, at which latter period the church of St. Mary Magdalene was consumed, with the exception of the tower. It consists principally of one long street, which is macadamised and well lighted with gas. There are also two back streets and a good market square. It contains two banks, and a new bridge over the Ouse, erected in place of the ancient one of five arches, supposed to have been built by the Romans. Lace is made. The town comprises the united pars. of St. Giles and St. Mary Magdalene, commonly called West and East side. The living of the two parishes having been united, form a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £140, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Giles. It was formerly a chantry, and was considered a chapel to the mother church of Calverton. The original structure was erected in 1451, but was rebuilt in 1776, with the exception of its tower. Only the tower of St. Mary Magdalene is now remaining, it having been burnt in 1742. The parochial charities produce about £450, of which £245 are realised from town estate. There are National and British and Foreign schools. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Baptists have chapels. W. S. Lowndes, Esq., and the trustees of the late Dr. Radcliffe, are lords of the manor. Market day is Friday, for corn. Fairs are held on 2nd August, Friday after 10th October, and 12th November.

STRATFORD TONY, or STRATFORD ST. ANTHONY, a par. in the hund. of Cowden, co. Wilts, 4 miles S.W. of Salisbury, its post town. The village is situated on a branch of the river Avon, and about a mile W. of the road from Salisbury to Dorchester, near the line of the ancient Icknield Street. It formerly belonged to the Wests. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £393, in the patron. of Corpus Christi College, Oxford. The church is old, and dedicated to St. Mary. There is a parochial school. John Bampton, founder of the Bampton Lectures, was once rector of this parish.

STRATFORD-UNDER-THE-CASTLE, a par. in the hund. of Underditch, co. Wilts, 2 miles N.W. of Salisbury, its post town, and 99 from London. The village is situated on the ancient Icknield Street and the river Avon. The par. comprises Old Sarum, or Sorbiodunum. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £80, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, contains a tablet to Frances Nisbet, widow of Lord Nelson. The register dates from 1654. There is a National school for both sexes. Near the church was the tree where the great Earl of Chatham, whose father had a seat here, was first elected to parliament.

STRATFORD-UPON-SLANEY, a post-office vil. in the bar. of Upper Talbotstown, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 27 miles W. of Wicklow, and 54 from Dublin. It is situated near the river Slaney, on an acclivity rising from the bank of that stream. It contains the parish church, a Roman Catholic chapel, Presbyterian meeting-house, dispensary, and fever hospital. The town was founded by the Earl of Aldborough in 1790. Tuesday and Saturday are market days.

STRATFORD, WATER, a par. in the hund. and co. of Buckingham, 3½ miles N.W. of Buckingham. The village is situated on the river Ouse. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £400. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is an ancient structure, partly Norman.

STRATH, or STRATH-SWORDALE, a par. in the Inverness Islands, Scotland, containing the vils. of Broadford and Kyleakin. This parish is straggling, and on the Sound, which separates Skye from the mainland, comprises the islands of Scalpa, Pabba or Pabay, and Longa, with part of the S.E. district of the inland of Skye. It extends in length about 20 miles from S.E. to N.W., with an extreme breadth of 5 miles, and is bounded partly on the E. by the par. of Sleat, and on the other sides by the sea. The hills in the N. are cone-shaped and bare, and several of them exhibit volcanic appearances. The low grounds lie principally towards the centre of the parish. The soil is clay, black loam, and reclaimed moss. Blue limestone and marl are quarried, and large quantities of kelp are manufactured. There are traces of iron-ore and manganese. The coast is indented by many deep bays and sea-lochs, which afford safe anchorage to vessels of any burden. The principal lochs are Sligachan and Ainort to the N., and Eishort, Slapin, and Scavig, with the spar cave of Staithaird, to the S. In this parish are the ruins of three chapels and seven hill forts, also a rocking-stone. The air is moist and foggy, and more rain falls here than in any other part of Skye. The par. is in the presb. of Skye and synod of Glenelg, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is about £271. The parish church was erected at Bradford in 1841. There is a Free church preaching station, and the Baptists have a chapel. There are a sub-parochial and four other schools. In that district of the parish called Strath-Aird are numerous caves, in one of which the Pretender lodged for some nights in 1746, and another is remarkable for the stalactites and petrifactions which it contains. Two trysts, or fairs for cattle, are held annually on the last week of the months of May and July.

STRATH, a valley or river basin, as Strathairdle, Strathallan, Strathaven, Strathclyde, &c.

STRATHAVEN, or AVONDALE, and anciently EVANDALE, a par. and burgh of barony in the middle ward, co. Lanark, Scotland, 10 miles W. of Lanark, 16 S.E. of Glasgow, and 7¼ S.W. of Hamilton. The parish and barony of Avondale is about 12 miles in length, and from 5 to 6 in breadth. The hilly part is black moorland covered with heath and coarse grass, except where recently reclaimed, but the vale of the Avon is in general good soil. The Duke of Hamilton is chief heritor and superior of all the lands in the parish except a small portion of "Temple Land," held by Lord Torphichen. The town is near the river Avon, on the road from Glasgow to Muirkirk, and is the terminus of the Glasgow and Hamilton branch of the Caledonian railway. It was erected into a burgh of barony in 1450, under the Hamiltons of Strathaven Castle, which is now in ruins. It had formerly an extensive commonalty, and is still celebrated for its horses and calves. The streets in the old part of the town are narrow and irregular, but the modern part is well built, and contains branches of the Bank of Scotland, the Union bank, and the Western bank, also a savings-bank, general post-office, &c. Cotton weaving is carried on. It has no public funds, and is governed by a bailie appointed by the Duke of Hamilton. The par. is in the presb. of Hamilton and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The church was removed from its ancient site in the churchyard in 1772, and rebuilt where it now stands. Besides the National church there are two relief chapels, an United Associate Synod meeting-house, and a chapel for the Independents. There are a free school and several others. Market day is on Thursday. Fairs are held on the first Thursdays in January, March, and November, and for cattle on the first Thursday in April, and on a Thursday in October.

STRATHBEG, a sea-loch on the coast of Aberdeen, Scotland, near Rattray.

STRATHBLANE, a par. in the co. of Stirling, Scotland. It extends in length about 5 miles from N.W. to S.E., with an extreme breadth of about 4 miles. The country is watered by six small lakes, covering from 8 to 60 acres each, and abounding with pike, perch, and trout. The hills which rise on the N., adjoining the boundary with Killearn and Campsie, constitute part of that range anciently known as the Lennox hills, and at the hill of Earl's Seat attain an elevation of 1,400 feet above sea-level. The low grounds are fertile. In this parish are some basalt pillars 30 feet in height, and from 2 to 3 feet in diameter. The soil in the upper part of the valley is sandy, but in the lower part clay and loam. The prevailing rocks are Old Red sandstone, but at one point on the river bank no fewer than 192 alternate strata of earth and limestone have been counted. The air is mild and healthy. The par. is traversed by the great road from Glasgow, and is within easy access of the terminus of the Campsie branch of the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway. The village of Strathblane is about 3 miles S.W. of Fintry, and 4 N. of Milngavie. It is on the river Blane, which signifies "the warm river," and has a fall at Ballagan Spout of 70 feet. Many of its inhabitants are employed in the cotton mills and in the bleach and print works. In the vicinity are the ruins of Mugdock Castle, which has an echo repeating six syllables. This par. is in the presb. of Dumbarton and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The stipend of the minister is about £231. There are a parochial library and a girls' school. The castle and estate of Duntreath, formerly one of the greater baronies, and in right whereof the proprietors sat in the Scottish parliament without election or patent, still constitutes about a third part of the parish, and belongs to the illustrious family of Edmonstone.

STRATHBOGIE, a district in the co. of Aberdeen, Scotland. It comprises the pars. of Dumblane, Forgue, Huntley, and parts of Cairney, Gartley, and Glass. It is watered by the river Bogie. It gives name to the presbytery of Strathbogie, containing a dozen parishes in the synod of Moray. The Free Church also has a presb. of Strathbogie, consisting of ten congregations.

STRATHBUNGO, a vil. in the par. of Govan, co. Renfrew, Scotland, 1½ mile S. of Glasgow. It is situated on the road thence to Pollockshaws. It is principally inhabited by weavers, miners, and other artificers. There is a small chapel.

STRATHCONAN, a district in the S. part of co. Ross, Scotland. It is situated under Scuir Vuillin, and is celebrated for its honey. It is 15 miles in length by 13 in breadth, and is watered by the rivers Conan and Meig. The district is densely wooded, and is a resort of sportsmen. In 1745 it was forfeited to the crown by the Mackenzies.

STRATHDEARN, a district in cos. Nairn and Inverness, Scotland. It extends from the head of the river Findhorn in Badenoch, through Nairn to the borders of Elgin. Fairs are held on the Friday after the 19th May, on the Friday in August before Campbelton, on the Friday in August after the Moor of Ord, and on the Friday in October after Beauly fairs.

STRATH-DIGHTY, or STRATHMARTINE, an ancient par. in the district of Dundee, co. Forfar, Scotland, now joined to Mains. It gives the title of baron to the Earl of Strathmore.

STRATHDON, anciently INVERNOCHTIE, a par. in the district of Alford, co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It contains a detached part of the adjoining parish of Tarland. This parish, which occupies the head of the valley through which the river Don flows, is 16 miles in length, with a breadth of 9 miles, and is bounded by Banffshire, and by the pars. of Glenbucket, Migvie, Logie, Coldstone, Glenmuick, and Braemar. The detached portion of the parish of Tarland consists of a hilly valley extending southward. The parish was formerly named Inver-Nochtie from the situation of the church, which stands at the confluence of the Nochtie with the Don. The rivulet Kindy also falls into the Don a little above the kirk of Towie. The prevailing rocks are granite, slate, and limestone, the latter being extensively worked. The village of Strathdon is about 9 miles N.W. of Ballatir, and is situated near the confluence of the river Don and Nochtie. The old castle of Curgarff, on the great road from Edinburgh to Fort Gore, was a hunting seat of the earls of Marr, and was garrisoned by the government in 1746. This par. is in the presb. of Alford and synod of Aberdeen, and in the patron. of the crown. The parish church was erected in 1757, and is situated near the Doun of Invernochtie. The Society for the Promotion of Christian Knowledge have established several schools in this district. The principal seats are Newe, Candacraig, Invernan, Auchornach, Glenkindy, Edinglassie, Bellabeg, and Skellater.

STRATHERRICK, a district in co. Inverness, Scotland. The strath is open, extending along the S.W. side of Loch Ness, but is separated from that lake by a narrow range of hills. The upper table lands are intersected by the rivers Foyers and Farigag.

STRATHFILLAN, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Glenorchy, co. Argyle, and partly in that of Killin, co. Perth, Scotland, near Tyndrum. It is situated in the vale of the Tay, and contains the hmlt. of Clifton. A fair is held on the 3rd July.

STRATHGLASS, a district in co. Inverness, Scotland, comprising the basins of the rivers Glass and Beauly. At Erchless Castle, the seat of The Chisholm, the Pretender, Charles Stuart, lay hid in 1746.

STRATHKINNESS, a vil. in the par. of St. Andrew's, co. Fife, Scotland, 3 miles W. of St. Andrew's. It is situated on the road from Leuchars to Largo. There is a Free church.

STRATHLACHLAN, an ancient par. now joined with Strachur, co. Argyle, Scotland.

STRATHMARTINE, See STRATH-DIGHTY.

STRATHMIGLO, a par. and town in the district of Cupar, co. Fife, Scotland. It extends in length 5½ miles from N. to S., with an extreme breadth of 4 miles, and is bounded by the cos. of Kinross and Perth, and by the pars. of Auchtermuchty and Falkland. The greatest altitude is attained on the southern border at Mid-Lomond Hill, which rises 1,700 feet above sea-level. The land for the most part is well cultivated. The soil in the N. is a rich friable loam on trap rock, and in the S. light and sandy, upon Old Red sandstone, which is quarried to some extent. The parish is traversed by the Fife and Kinross railway, which has a station here. The town is situated on the river Eden or Miglo, about 3 miles N.W. of Falkland, and 8 N.E. of Kinross. It was a burgh of barony under the Scotts of Balweary, and afterwards under the Balfours of Burleigh, the site of whose old castle is near the town. It principally consists of two streets, with several lanes diverging from them. The townhall is an ancient structure with a square steeple, surmounted by a spire 80 feet in height, a sundial, now much defaced, and the arms of the house of Burleigh. Within the present century a village has been formed on the opposite side of the Miglo, called the Fens of Wester-Cash, adjoining the Town Green. Bleaching and linen-weaving are the principal industries. It is lighted with gas, and is a station of the county police. This par. is in the presb. of Cupar and synod of Fife. The stipend of the minister is about £269. There are also a Free church and a Reformed Presbyterian church, and at Edenshead an United Presbyterian church. There are a parochial and four other schools. A fair is held on the last Friday in June.

STRATHMORE, or the GREAT VALLEY, extends through the cos. of Perth and Forfar, Scotland, from Methven to Brechin.

STRATHMORE, the vale of the river More, co. Sutherland, Scotland; also the district round Loch More, in the par. of Halkirk, co. Caithness, Scotland.

STRATHPEFFER, a fertile valley under Ben Wyvis, cos. Ross and Cromarty, Scotland. It was here that the fray between the clans Mackenzie and Macdonald took place in 1478.

STRATHY, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Farr, co. Sutherland, Scotland, 7 miles N.E. of Farr. It is a populous but rural village, situated on the bank of the Strathy Water, which flows from Strathy Loch 10 miles N. to Strathy Bay. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in the fisheries and others in the limestone and sandstone quarries. The quoad sacra par. of Strathy comprises the eastern portion of the par. of Farr. The living is in the presb. of Tongue and synod of Sutherland and Caithness, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is about £120. The church was erected in 1826 by a grant from the parliamentary commissioners. There is also a Free church.

STRATHYRE, a vil. in the par. of Balquhidder, co. Perth, Scotland, 5 miles S. of Lochearnhead, and the same distance N.W. of Callander, betwixt Loch Voil and Lubnaig.

STRATTON, a hund. in the co. of Cornwall, contains the pars. of Jacobstow, Kilkhampton, Launcells, Marham Church, Moorwinstow, Poughill, Stratton, North Tamerton, Week St. Mary, Whitstone, and parts of Boyton and Bridgerule, comprising an area of 5,502 acres.

STRATTON, a par., post, and market town in the above hund., co. Cornwall, 18 miles N.W. of Launceston, and 223 from London. It is situated near the Bride canal, on the coast, and contains the vil. and seaport of Bride. It is a petty sessions town and a polling place for the E. div. of the county. Courts baron are held once a year. The Poor-law Union embraces 11 parishes or places, for which a union poorhouse was erected in 1856. This parish is productive of dunstone, and there are cliffs 400 feet in height. About half a mile to the W. of the town are the remains of Binkhammy Castle, surrounded by a deep fosse. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £201. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is old, and contains effigies of Ranulph de Blanchminster, and a brass of Sir J. Arundell, of Efford. The parochial charities produce about £115 per annum. There are National and infant schools. The Wesleyans and Wesleyan Association Methodists have chapels. Market day is Tuesday. Fairs are held on 19th May, 8th November, and 11th December.

STRATTON, a par. in the hund. of George, Dorchester div. of co. Dorset, 3½ miles N.W. of Dorchester, its post town. The village is on the river Frome and near the Roman way to Ilchester. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Wrackleford and Grimstone, at which latter place is a railway station, about one mile N.W. of the village. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Charminster, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The register dates from 1561. Wrackleford House is the principal residence.

STRATTON, a par. in the hund. of Crowthorne, co. Gloucester, 1½ mile N.W. of Cirencester, its post town. The village is situated on the line of the ancient Ermine Street, and on the high road between Cirencester and Gloucester. Brewing and malt making are carried on to some extent. The soil consists of stone brash, with a subsoil of limestone rock. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £388, in the patron. of New College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is old, and has a low slated tower rising from between the nave and chancel. There is a parochial school for both sexes.

STRATTON, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Biggleswade, co. Bedford, 1 mile S.E. of Biggleswade, on the Roman way to Sandy. It is joined to Hulme.

STRATTON-AUDLEY, a par. chiefly in the hund. of Ploughley, Oxford, but partly in the hund. and co. of Bucks, 3 miles N.E. of Bicester, its post town, and 7 S.W. of Buckingham. Lace is made here. The soil consists of marl with a subsoil of limestone. Mr. Drake's hounds meet in this parish. The living is a perpet cur.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £128, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church is dedicated to SS. Mary and Eadburga. There are monuments to the Borlase and Warren families, and the remains of a stone cross in the churchyard. There is a free school for poor children above five years of age. The Hon. W. Vernon is lord of the manor.

STRATTON, EAST, a par. in the lower half of Mitcheldever hund., co. Hants, 3 miles S.E. of Andover, its post town and railway station, and 8 N.E. of Winchester. The village is situated on the road from Basingstoke to Winchester, a little to the E. of the London and South-Western railway. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Micheldever, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Katherine, or All Saints, has been recently restored, and has stained glass windows representing the Evangelists. There is a school maintained by Sir Francis Baring, who is lord of the manor, and in whose park the church is situated. The principal residence is Stratton Park, the seat of Sir F. Baring, Bart., and in which is a collection of paintings.

STRATTON HALL, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Colneis, co. Suffolk.

STRATTON, LONG, or STRATTON ST. MARY, a par. and market town in the hund. of Depwade, co. Norfolk, 10 miles S.W. of Norwich, and 2 from the Forncett railway station. The town, which is only a considerable village, is situated on the road from Norwich to London by way of Ipswich, and consists of one long street irregularly built. It has for many centuries been the place for holding petty sessions for the hunds. of Depwade and Henstead, but those for the former district only are now held here on every alternate Tuesday. The Roman road leading to the station Ad Taum or Tasburg passes through the parish, and several Roman urns were found here in 1773. There was anciently a hermitage with an oratory attached to it. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £345, in the patron. of Caius College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is called in old records "Stratton cum Turri," and was built about 1330. It contains monuments to the Burgh, Burrough, and Reve families. The register dates from 1547. The Independents have a chapel. There is a National school. Market day is Tuesday, for corn and seeds. Fairs are held on Whit-Tuesday, and on the 12th October, and a statute fair on the 25th of September.

STRATTON-ON-THE-FOSSE, a par. in the hund. of Kilmersdon, co. Somerset, 6 miles N.E. of Shepton-Mallet, and 9 from Frome. Bath is its post town. The village is on the old Fosse Way or Roman road, now part of the turnpike road leading from Bath to Shepton-Mallet. The soil is red earth, clay, and limestone; the substratum is productive of marl, coal, and ironstone. The land is principally in pasture, and the Bath market is supplied with butter from the dairy farms in this neighbourhood. On the eastern side of the road is the Roman Catholic college of Downside. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells. The church is dedicated to St. Vigor. The register dates from the middle of the last century. There is a National school for both sexes. The manor belongs to the Duchy of Cornwall.

STRATTON OVER, a tythg. in the par. of South Petherton, co. Somerset, 1 mile S. of South Petherton.

STRATTON ST. MARGARET, a par. in the hund.

of Highworth, co. Wilts, 2½ miles N. of Swindon, its post town, and 3½ S. of Highworth. The village is large, and is situated on the ancient Ryknield Street, and on the Wilts and Berks canal. The par. comprises the hmlt. of Upper Stratton with Kingsdown, also Highworth union poorhouse. There was formerly an alien priory here, founded in 1066, which at the Dissolution was given by Henry VI. to King's College, Cambridge. The line of the Great Western railway passes through the parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £216, in the patron. of the Bishop of Salisbury and Merton College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret. The parochial charities produce about £22 per annum, of which £3 go to a school. There is a National school for both sexes, also a public library and reading rooms. The Independents and General and Particular Baptists have chapels, with Sunday-schools adjoining. Kingsdon House is the principal residence. A. Goddard, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STRATTON ST. MARY, a par. in the hund. of Depwade, co. Norfolk. See STRATTON, LONG.

STRATTON ST. MICHAEL, a par. in the hund. of Depwade, co. Norfolk, 9 miles from Norwich, its post town. The village is situated on the road from London to Norwich, and forms a part of what is usually called the town of Long Stratton. The living is a rect. annexed to that of St. Peter's, val. £388, in the patron. of New College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels.

STRATTON STRAWLESS, a par. in the hund. of South-Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 7½ miles N. of Norwich, its post town, and 4½ S.E. of Aylsham. The village is on the road from Aylsham to Norwich. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £288. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, contains some monuments of great antiquity, also some specimens of stained glass. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum. The principal residence is Stratton Hall. The manor has been held by the Marsham family since the reign of Edward I.

STRATTON, UPPER, a tythg. in the par. of Stratton St. Margaret, hund. of Highworth, co. Wilts, 4 miles S.W. of Highworth.

STRATTON, WEST, a tythg. in the par. of Mitcheldever, co. Hants, 1 mile W. of Stratton, East, and 6½ miles N.W. of New Alresford.

STRAWBERRY HILL, a seat of Earl Waldegrave on the Thames, co. Middlesex, 2 miles N. W. of Kingston. It was rebuilt by Horace Walpole, whose collection of pictures, statues, bronzes, &c., was dispersed by auction in 1848.

STREAM, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Decuman, co. Somerset, near Watchet.

STREAMSTOWN, a vil. in the bar. of Ballinahinch, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles N.N.W. of Clifden. It is a station on the Midland Great Western railway. It stands on Streamstown Bay, and within a short distance is Omey Island. Streamstown House is the principal residence. Copper ore and marble are procured in the vicinity.

STREAMSTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Ardnorcher, bar. of Moycashel, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Ballymore. There is a police station. Streamstown House and Cottage are the principal seats of the neighbourhood.

STREATHAM, a par. and suburb of the metropolis in the E. div. of Brixton hund., co. Surrey, 6 miles S.W. of St. Paul's. There are two stations—viz., at Streatham and Streatham Common, on the Crystal Palace and West End, Croydon and Brighton railways. This parish, which derives its name from its situation on the line of the great Roman road Stane Street, extends for nearly three miles along the Brighton road. The population in 1861 was 8,027. The par. includes the hmlts. of Upper Tooting, Balham, and Knight's Hill, and the ecclesiastical districts of Christ Church, Emmanuel, and St. Mary; also the mansion of Streatham Park, formerly the seat of Mrs. Thrale, now pulled down. There is a mineral spring on the common. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £1,200. The church is dedicated to St. Leonard. The interior contains the brass of a priest bearing date 1513, also monuments to Mr. Thrale and Mrs. Piozzi's mother, with epitaphs by Dr. Johnson. The register dates from 1538. In addition to the parish church are the following district churches—viz., Christ Church, Emmanuel Church, Balham Hill (St. Mary's), and Upper Tooting (Trinity), the livings of which are all perpet. curs. The parochial charities produce about £192, of which £100 is Livesay's charity for the poor. There are National schools for both sexes, and on Brixton Hill stands the Royal Asylum of the St. Ann's Society's Schools. The Independents and Wesleyans have chapels. Hill House and Park Hill are the principal residences. Mr. Hudson is lord of the manor.

STREATHAM WITH STAINTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Gainford, S.W. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 2½ miles N.E. of Barnard Castle. There are extensive stone quarries. At Streatham Whin is a meet for the Bedale hounds. Streatham Castle was originally built in the 13th century by Sir J. Trayne, but was rebuilt by J. Bowes in the 16th century. There is a National school for both sexes, in which Divine service is performed. Streatham gave title of baron to the Bowes, earls of Strathmore.

STREATLEY, a par. in the hund. of Flitt, co. Bedford, 5 miles N.W. of Luton, its post town, and 6 N.E. of Dunstable railway station. The village is on the road from Bedford to London. The par. includes the hmlt. of Sharpenhoe. The soil consists of chalk and clay, and the land is chiefly arable. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Sundon, in the dioc. of Ely. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is old, and has an oak roof and old font. There is a Free school. J. Smith, Esq., of Stevenage, is lord of the manor.

STREATLEY, a par. in the hund. of Moreton, co. Berks, 10 miles N.W. of Reading, its post town, and 6 S.W. of Wallingford. The village is on the river Thames, near the Great Western railway and the ancient Icknield Street. The soil consists of chalk and loam. The river flows here in two streams, and is crossed by a double bridge to the village of Goring, in Oxfordshire, at which place is a station on the Great Western railway. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £250, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary or St. John the Baptist. The parochial charities produce about £28 per annum. There are endowed and parochial schools. J. S. Bowles, Esq., is lord of the manor. Here was formerly a Dominican convent.

STREDALFEDEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Welshpool, co. Montgomery, near Welshpool.

STREET, a hund. in the lathe of Shepway, co. Kent. It is situated on the Roman way Stone Street, and contains the par. of Sellinge, and parts of Hurst, Donnington, and Lympne, and comprises an area of 4,710 acres.

STREET. See COURT AT STREET, co. Kent.

STREET, a hund. in the rape of Lewes, co. Sussex. It is situated on the Roman way over the Downs, and contains the pars. of Chailey, Ditchling, St. John-under-the-Castle, Plumpton, Street, Westmeston, and Wivelsfield, comprising an area of 21,200 acres.

STREET, a par. in the above hund., rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, 4 miles from Burgess Hill railway station, and 6 N.W. of Lewes. The village is on the road from Lewes to Ditchling. The land is partly in common. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £172. The church was restored in 1852. The register dates from 1561. There is a National school. H. C. Lane, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

STREET, a par. in the bars. of Ardagh, co. Longford, and Moygoish, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.N.E. of Rathowen, its post town.

The surface consists of good land, with a large extent of bog. It is intersected by the river Inny, and is adjacent to Lough Dereveragh. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ardagh, val. £148. The church is very old. Here are a parochial and two private day schools. The seat called Coolumber occupies the site of an ancient castle, and there are remains of an old church and of Clonmore Monastery, founded in the 13th century. At Kinnard are traces of a nunnery and of a rath. Marble and paving stone are obtained.

STREET, a par. in the hund. of Whitley, co. Somerset, 1½ mile S.W. of Glastonbury railway station. Bath is its post town. The village, which is large, is on the Great Western road from Bath to Exeter. There are shoe and rug factories, and a tanyard. The soil is clay, with a subsoil of blue lias, which is extensively quarried. Numerous fossils are found in the lias. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Walton annexed, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £675. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. The register dates from 1599. There are National, British, Lancastrian, and Sunday schools. The Independents, Wesleyans, Baptists, and Friends have chapels. Sir A. A. Hood, Bart., is lord of the manor and principal landowner. A cattle fair is held on the Monday week after St. Andrew's Day.

STREET, a tythg. in the par. of Winsham, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.E. of Chard. It is joined with Leigh to form a township.

STREET, a hmlt. in the par. of Shepton Mallet, hund. of Whitstone, co. Somerset, 2 miles S. of Shepton Mallet, on the river Brue and the ancient Fosse Way.

STREET, a tythg. in the par. of Christchurch, co. Hants, near Christchurch.

STREET, a vil. in the par. of Kingsland, co. Hereford, 2 miles N.E. of Pembridge, on the Roman way to Staunton.

STREET, an ecclesiastical district in the par. of Blackanton, co. Devon, 3 miles S.W. of Dartmouth, on Start Bay.

STREET FIELDS, or STREET ASHTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Monks Kirby, co. Warwick, 5 miles N.W. of Rugby, on the Fosse Way, near Street Ashton Lodge.

STREETHALL, a par. in the hund. of Uttlesford, co. Essex, 4 miles N.W. of Saffron Walden, its post town, and 3 S.W. of the great Chesterford railway station. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £155. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, contains two brasses, bearing date from 1480. The register dates from 1813, the earlier ones having been lost. There is a village school. Archdeacon Raymond is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

STREETHAY, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Michael, Lichfield, N. div. of Offlow hund., co. Stafford, 2 miles N.E. of Lichfield, near the ancient Icknield Street.

STREET HOUSE, a hmlt. in the par. of Oxnam, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, under the Cheviot hills, on the Roman road called the Catrail.

STREET HOUSES, a hmlt. in the par. of Loft House, North Riding co. York, 7 miles N.E. of Guisborough.

STREETLAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Danby-Wiske, North Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Northallerton, near the river Wiske.

STREETTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirksandale, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Doncaster.

STREEVE, a mountain ridge, co. Londonderry, Ireland, near Dungiven. It attains an elevation of 1,280 feet.

STREFLYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanykil, co. Merioneth, near Bala.

STRELITZ, or STRILITZ, a vil. in the par. of Cargill, co. Perth, Scotland, 4 miles S.W. of Cupar Angus. It is situated on a small tributary of the Isla, and was named in compliment to Queen Charlotte, who was Duchess of Mecklenburgh-Strelitz. It was constructed for discharged soldiers in 1763.

STRELLINGTON, a tythg. in the par of Boxgrove, hund. of Box, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 2 miles N.E. of Chichester.

STRELLY, a par. in the S. div. of Broxtow wap., co. Nottingham, 5 miles N.W. of Nottingham, its post town, and 2 E. of Ilkeston railway station. In the vicinity is Strelly Park colliery, which is connected with the Nottingham canal by a tramway. Strelly gave name to the Strelleys, or Struleys, whose old seat still exists. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £90. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains a carved screen, an old font, and effigies of the Strelleys, also a brass of Robert Strelley, bearing date 1487. Strelley Hall is the principal residence. J. S. Edge Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

STRENSALL, a par. in the wap. of Bulmer, and within the lib. of St. Peter's, North Riding co. York, 5½ miles N.E. of York, its post town. It is a station on the North-Eastern railway. The village is situated on the Scarborough railway and the river Foss. The soil consists of sand and vegetable mould. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Haxby annexed, in the dioc. of York, val. £250, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1802. The parochial charities produce about £50 per annum. There are National schools for both sexes, also a Church Sunday-school. The Wesleyans have a chapel. Leonard Thompson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STRENSHAM, a par. in the upper div. of Pershore hund., co. Worcester, 6 miles N. of Tewkesbury, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Pershore. The village is on the river Avon, near the Birmingham and Gloucester railway, and between the hills of Malvern and Bredon. It is famous for the siege it sustained against the parliamentary forces during the civil war, and for the signal bravery displayed by the then lord of the manor, Sir William Russell. The soil is fertile, consisting of light earth, loam, and marl, upon a subsoil of blue lias and gravel. Various fossils and minerals are met with. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, has monuments and tombs of the Russells of Strensham Hall. The parochial charities produce about £65, of which £54 belong to Russell's school and almshouses. There are National schools for both sexes, supported by J.A. Taylor, Esq., who is lord of the manor. Samuel Butler, poet and author of "Hudibras," was born here in 1612. Strensham Court is the principal residence.

STRETE RALEIGH, a tythg. in the par. of Whimple, co. Devon, 3 miles N.W. of Ottery St. Mary.

STRETFORD, a hund. in co. Hereford, contains the pars. of Almeley, Birley, Dilwyn, Eardisland, Kingsland, King's Pion, Kinnersley, Lyonshall, Monkland, Pembridge, Shobdon, Stretford, Weobley, and parts of Aymestry, Letton, and Stanton-on-Arrow, comprising an area of 47,480 acres.

STRETFORD, a par. in the above hund., co. Hereford, 4½ miles S.W. of Leominster, its post town, and 3 N.E. of Weobley. The village is situated on a branch of the river Lug and the Roman way Watling Street. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £94. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has some stained windows, and tombs and effigies. There is also a mysterious chamber, the use of which is unknown. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. A. H. Wall, Esq., is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

STRETFORD, a chplry. and tnshp. in the par. of Manchester, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 3½ miles S.W. of Manchester, its post town. It is a station on the Manchester, South Junction, and Altrincham railway. The village is situated on the Bridgwater canal, near the river Mersey, where the Roman way to Chester crossed. There is a large paper mill and a mart for pigs for supply of the Manchester market. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is modern. The parochial charities, about £100 per annum, go to Hinde's school. Henshaw's blind asylum and a deaf and dumb school are in this township. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have chapels.

STRETFORD WITH HENNOR, a tnshp. in the par. of Leominster, co. Hereford, 2 miles S.E. of Leominster, on a branch of the river Lug.

STRETHAM, a par. in the hund. of South Witchford, Isle of Ely, co. Cambridge, 4 miles S.W. of Ely, its post town, and 12 from Cambridge. It is a station on the Ely, Haddenham, and Sutton branch of the Great Eastern railway. The village is near the rivers Ouse and Cam. The par. includes Stretham Fen and Thetford. The land is partly in common. The soil consists of clay and loam. In 1844 a large portion of the village was destroyed by fire. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Thetford annexed, in the dioc. of Ely, val. £756, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. James, has coats of arms carved in the roof, also an old font, and a brass to Joan Swan, bearing date 1487. The parochial charities produce about £142 per annum. There is a free school, supported by the Rev. H. Baber. The Baptists and Wesleyans have chapels. There is also a chapel, dedicated to St. George, situated in the hamlet of Thetford. Mrs. Marsh and Mrs. Colonel Wilson are ladies of the manor. In the high road near the church is a stone cross.

STRETTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Great Budworth, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 4 miles S.E. of Warrington, its post town. The village is on the Roman way to Kinderton. The soil is clay, with a subsoil of sand. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £100. The church was built in 1827. There is a school for both sexes. T. Lyon, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STRETTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Tilston, higher div. of Broxton hund., co. Chester, 1½ mile N.W. of Tilston, and 4½ miles N.W. of Malpas. The township is small, and wholly agricultural. J. H. Leche, Esq., is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

STRETTON, a tnshp. in the par. of North Wingfield, hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 3½ miles N.W. of Alfreton. It is a station on the Midland Counties railway. It is situated on the Roman way to Temple Brough.

STRETTON, a par. in the hund. of Alstoe, co. Rutland, 8 miles N.W. of Stamford, its post town, and 8 N.E. of Oakham. The village is situated on Horne Lane, or Ermine Street. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £300. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. Sir G. Heathcote is lord of the manor.

STRETTON, a chplry. in the par. of Penkridge, W. div. of Cuttlestone hund., co. Stafford, 2 miles S.W. of Penkridge, its post town, 8 N.W. of Wolverhampton, and 2 N. of Brewood. The village is near the river Penk, the Stafford and Worcester canal, the Grand Junction railway, and the ancient Watling Street. The Albrighton hounds meet in this parish. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £86. The church, dedicated to St. John, has been recently rebuilt. It was formerly a chapel-of-ease to Penkridge. There is a parochial school, which is supported by Mrs. Henry Monckton, who is lady of the manor. Stretton Hall is the principal residence.

STRETTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Burton-upon-Trent, N. div. of Offlow hund., co. Stafford, 2 miles N. of Burton, its post town. The village is near the Midland Counties railway, on the Grand Trunk canal, and the Via Devana. The tnshp. is bounded on the N. by the river Dove, and on the E. by the Trent. At a short distance from the village are extensive iron works. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Holy Trinity, in the dioc. of Lichfield. There is a National school for both sexes.

STRETTON. See STURTON, co. Notts.

STRETTON-BASKERVILLE, a par. in the Kirby div. of Knightlow hund., co. Warwick, 3 miles S.E. of Nuneaton, and 5 from Rugby. It is a station on the London and North-Western railway. The village is on Watling Street and the Ashby-de-la-Zouch canal. The living is a sinecure rect. in the dioc. of Worcester. The church is in ruins. There is a National school.

STRETTON CHURCH. See CHURCH STRETTON, co Salop.

STRETTON-EN-LE-FIELDS, a par. in the hund. of Repton, co. Derby, 5 miles S.W. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, its post town, and 9 N.E. of Tamworth. The village is on the road from Atherstone to Burton-upon-Trent, the river Mease, and the Upper Saltway. The par. includes the hmlt. of Oakthorpe. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £450. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, contains several ancient monuments. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a school supported by Lady Cave, also one at No Man's Heath under the direction of the rector. Sir Browne Cave, Bart., who resides at Stretton Hall, is lord of the manor.

STRETTON-GRANDSOME, a par. in the hund. of Radlow, co. Hereford, 8 miles N.W. of Ledbury, its post town. The village is on the river Frome and the Ledbury and Hereford canal. There is a camp near the Roman way to Kenchester. Hops are grown. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Ashperton annexed, in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £479. The church is dedicated to St. Lawrence. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum, of which £10 go to Lady Langley's school.

STRETTON MAGNA, a chplry. in the par. of Glenn Magna, hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 5 miles S.E. of Leicester, its post town, and 10 N.W. of Market Harborough. It is situated on the Via Devana. The land is chiefly in pasture. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Glenn Magna, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. It had a chantry founded by Bishop Eyrick, or de Stretton, and has monuments of the Hewetts, who resided at Stretton Hall, the principal residence.

STRETTON-ON-THE-FOSS, a par. in the Brailes div. of Kington hund., co. Warwick, 4 miles from Moreton, its post town, and 3 W. of Shipston. The par. includes the hmlts. of Longford and Lower Ditchford, which latter had once a friary. There is a salt spring in the neighbourhood. The surface is hilly, and the soil chiefly a stiff clay. The living is a rect.* with that of Ditchford annexed, in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £288. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, was rebuilt in 1841. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum. There are day and Sunday schools.

STRETTON PARVA, a chplry. in the par. of King's Norton, hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 6 miles S.E. of Leicester, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Wigton railway station. The soil consists of stiff clay and gravel. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Norton King's, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church is old.

STRETTON SUGWAS, a par. in the hund. of Grimsworth, co. Hereford, 4 miles N.W. of Hereford, its post town. The village is on the turnpike road leading from Hereford to Hay and Kington, and on the Roman way to Kenchester. It is celebrated for its cider and perry. Bishop Cantilupe formerly resided at Sugwas Pool, in this parish, but the palace has long been converted into a farmhouse. The chapel in connection with it was taken down in 1792. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £184. The church is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene. Stretton Court is the principal residence.

STRETTON-UNDER-FOSS, a hmlt. in the par. of Monks-Kirby, Kirby div. of Knightlow hund., co. Warwick, 6 miles N.W. of Rugby, its post town, and half a mile from the Stretton station, on the Trent Valley railway. The village is near the Fosse Way and the Oxford canal. The Independents have a chapel. There is an infant school. Newbold Hall is the principal residence. C. Ramsden, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STRETTON-UPON-DUNSMORE, a par. in the Rugby div. of Knightlow hund., co. Warwick, 2½ miles S. of Brandon railway station, and 6 S.E. of Coventry, its post town. The village is on the Roman Fosse Way and Dunsmore Heath. At Knightlow Hill, near the boundary of the parish, is an ancient stone called Knightlow Cross, one of the oldest memorials of feudal tenure existing. The par. includes the tnshp. of Princethorpe with St. Mary's priory. The county asylum, established by Judge Dallas in 1817, for juvenile offenders between fourteen and sixteen years of age, is in this parish. The village is about half a mile to the S.W. of the road from London to Holyhead. Many of the women and children are employed in preparing silk for the ribbon-weavers of Coventry. Large quantities of lime are burnt, and plaster-of-paris is prepared from gypsum, of which a considerable stratum is found in this parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £438. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities produce about £309 per annum, of which sum £52 goes to Herbert's school. There are some traces of Brandon Castle, which was taken and dismantled by the barons under Simon de Montfort, Earl of Leicester, but rebuilt by Theobald de Verdune, who had the privilege of court-leet and gallows, with assize of bread and beer.

STREVEN, a loch on the W. side of the Firth of Clyde, co. Argyle, Scotland.

STRICHEN, a par. in the district of Buchan, co. Aberdeen, Scotland. This par., which was formed out of the pars. of Ratho and Fraserburgh in 1627, comprises the vils. of Mormond, Strichen, and New Leeds. It extends in length about 6½ miles from E. to W., with an extreme breadth of 3¾ miles. The surface is hilly, its greatest altitude being at Mormond Hill. On the side of one of the hills is cut the figure of a horse. The parish is traversed by the road from Peterhead to Banff, and by that from Fraserburgh to Aberdeen. The village of Strichen is about 5 miles N. of Deer, and 9 S. of Fraserburgh. It is situated on the river Ugie, near Mormond Hill, and has a station on the Formartine and Buchan section of the Great North of Scotland railway. The inhabitants are principally employed in the manufacture of linen. This par. is in the presb. of Deer, and synod of Aberdeen. The stipend of the minister is about £158. The parish church was erected in 1799. There are a Free church, Episcopalian chapel, and a Roman Catholic chapel, also a parochial and other schools. Strichen House is the principal seat. Fairs occur on the first Tuesday in January, Tuesday after the 4th March, Wednesday after 19th May, Wednesday after the 12th July, and the Wednesdays after the 19th of August and November.

STRICKATHROW, a par. in the district and co. of Forfar, Scotland. It extends in length 6¾ miles from S.E. to N.W., with an extreme breadth of about 2 miles, including the ancient par. of Dunlappie on the N.W. The central district, forming part of Strathmore, is watered by Cruick Water, and the north eastern district by West Water, both which streams join the North Esk near the village, about 3 miles N. of Brechin. The prevailing rocks are limestone, red sandstone, and hard conglomerate. The parish is traversed by the W. road from Dundee to Aberdeen, and is within easy access of the Dubton and Craigo stations, on the Aberdeen railway. At Blackdykes are traces of a Roman camp. This par. is in the presb. of Brechin, and synod of Angus and Mearns. The stipend of the minister is about £170. The parish church was erected in 1799, and was restored in 1849. The churchyard is said to have been the scene of the surrender of the crown of Scotland by John Baliol to Edward I. in 1296: in the same cemetery are three stones, which, according to tradition, mark the graves of three Danish chiefs. There are a parochial school and a library. The principal seats are Newtonmill, Auchenreoch, and Strickathrow House.

STRICKLAND, GREAT, a tnshp. in the par. of Morland, co. Westmoreland, 3 miles N.W. of Morland, 5 N. of Shap, and 2½ S.E. of Clifton railway station. The village is situated near the Carlisle railway and the river Leathe. The soil is a rich red loam, with a clayey subsoil. The hall was the seat of the Stricklands of Sizergh till the reign of Henry VI., when it came to the Fallowfields and others. There are two schools—one built in 1790, and another erected in 1848, the latter with master's residence adjoining, the gift of Mrs. Sarah Plumber, who has since endowed it with an annuity of £30. A Sunday-school is held in the schoolroom. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor. Bishop De Strickland was born here in 1396.

STRICKLAND-KETTLE, a tnshp. in the par. and ward of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 2 miles N.W. of Kendal. This tnshp., with that of Strickland-Roger, constitutes the chplry. of Burneside, and is bounded on the E. by the river Kent. The chapel of Burneside is situated in this township.

STRICKLAND, LITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Morland, W. ward, co. Westmoreland, 3½ miles N.E. of Shap railway station, and 3 S.W. of Morland. The soil consists of a rich loam, though in the upper parts it is of a light sandy character. The subsoil is limestone. The common was enclosed in 1811. The inhabitants attend Thrimby chapel-of-ease, which stands central of the village, and near to which is the grammar school for both sexes, endowed with an annuity of £10. The manor formerly belonged to the Crackenthorp family. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor.

STRICKLAND-ROGER, a tnshp. in the par. and ward of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 3 miles N.E. of Kendal, and near the Burneside railway station. The township is bounded on the W. by the river Kent, and on the E. by the Sprint. There are a bobbin mill and a woollen manufactory, and at Cowan Head are large paper mills. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor. At a place called Hundhow was formerly a chapel called Chapel-en-le-Wood.

STRICKLAND WINTERBORNE, a par. in the hund. of Pimperne, North Blanford div. of co. Dorset, 3¾ miles W. of Blanford, its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £367. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels.

STRIGUIL, or SKIGIL, a ruined castle or stronghold in Went Wood, co. Monmouth, 5 miles S.E. of Usk. It was built by Richard de Clare, surnamed Strongbow, and now belongs to the Duke of Beaufort.

STRINES, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Marple, par. of Stockport, co. Chester, 13½ miles from Manchester by the Manchester, Stockport, and New Mills railway. It is situated near Disley and Lyme Park, and contains extensive print works.

STRINGSTON, a par. in the hund. of Cannington, co. Somerset, 10 miles W. of Bridgwater, its post town. In the vicinity is Douxborough Camp, or Danes-Burrow Castle, with a double embankment and wide ditch. The soil consists principally of stony brash, with a subsoil of limestone. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Kilve, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells. In the churchyard is an ancient stone cross. Sir H. Oglander, Bart., is lord of the manor.

STRITT WITH GATTIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Ratlinghope, co. Salop, 4 miles N.W. of Church Stretton, on the river Onny.

STRIXTON, a par. in the hund. of Higham-Ferrers, co. Northampton, 4 miles S.E. of Wellingborough, its post town. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Bozeat, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist.

STROKESTOWN, a post and market town in the par. of Bumlin, in the bar. and co. of Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 12 miles N.E. of Roscommon, and 94 from Dublin. It is situated on the road from Dublin to Ballina, and consists of two main streets crossing each other. It contains the parish church, a Roman Catholic chapel, dispensary, bridewell, sessions-house, police office, and union poorhouse. The town is a possession of Lord Hartland, formerly of Strokestown House, near the town. A brisk general trade is carried on, and there are two good inns in the town. Tuesday is market day. Fairs are held on the first Tuesdays in May, June, October, and November.

STROMA, an island in the par. of Cannisbay, co. Caithness, Scotland, 2 miles N. of Cannisbay. It is situated opposite Gill's Bay, and extends about 2½ miles in length by 1½ mile in breadth. Its surface is level, and the land good, but subject to sea-spray in storms. The coast is rocky, and on the cliffs are the ruins of a castle and chapel. In 1856 an iron beacon was constructed on the island, 45 feet in height, with a cross and cage.

STROMAY, an island in Harris Sound, Western Islands, coast of Scotland, N. side of the island of North Uist.

STROMNESS, a par., seaport, market town, and burgh of barony, in the S.W. of Pomona, mainland of Orkney, co. Orkney and Shetland. It is a sub-port to Kirkwall, and contains a post town of its own name. The parish, which is about 5½ miles in length by 3½ in breadth, lies opposite Graemsay Island. The coast, in general rocky, rises on the Atlantic side precipitously into cliffs sometimes 500 feet above the sea. During the storm of 1783 Riddock shoal, near Graemsay, was formed by great stones piled up by the force of the waves. The geological formation of this part of the island belongs to the Old Red sandstone, and abounds with fossils. Limestone and roofing slate are extensively quarried; and there are traces of lead and iron ore, and stromnite, a variety of strontium, was found here by Dr. Traill. The land in the southern part of the parish is generally fertile, being disposed in meadow and arable, but the rest is chiefly moss and unimprovable upland, occupying a considerable portion of the northern and western districts. The soil of the cultivated land is a black vegetable mould, alternated with sand and clay. The town of Stromness is 14 miles S.W. of Kirkwall, and 29 N.E. of Thurso. It has risen within the last century from being a fishing village, composed of a few scattered huts, to a comparatively populous town of 2,000 inhabitants. Previous to 1743 it formed a dependence of Kirkwall, but in that year obtained a decision from the House of Lords which virtually had the effect of rendering all the villages in Scotland independent of the royal burghs by which they had been formerly cessed. In 1817 it was constituted a burgh of barony by royal charter. It owes its rapid increase to its harbour and convenient position, which causes it to be frequented by vessels trading to the northern parts of Europe and America, and until lately by the vessels engaged in the whale fishery. About 1,500 men are engaged in the local fisheries of herrings, ling, haddock, and sillocks, 150 in the Greenland whale fisheries, and many in ship and boat building, while others are employed by the Hudson's Bay Company, who have a resident agent here. There is a patent slip capable of carrying vessels of 600 tons. The principal buildings are extensive warehouses at the N. end of the town, a bridge, library, and branches of the National Bank of Scotland, and of the Commercial Bank, and two large inns. The government is vested in two bailies and nine councillors. The par. is the seat of the presb. of Cairston, in the synod of Orkney. The minister has a stipend of £160. The parish church was built in 1814. There are also a Free and an United Presbyterian church. At Brackness Point is a house built by Bishop Graham, the last Bishop of Orkney, in 1633, and about half a mile from it are the ruins of the old church and a monastery. The principal residence is Cairston House, the seat of Pollexfen, the chief heritor, but there are upwards of 70 others. A market is held on the last Wednesday in every month, and an annual fair on the first Tuesday in September, which lasts for a week.

STROMNESS VOE, a loch on the N. side of Scalloway Bay, Shetland Isles, coast of Scotland.

STRONE, a vil. in the par. of Kilmun, co. Argyle, Scotland, 3 mile E. of Dalmally. It is situated on the N. side of Holy Loch. The village is modern, consisting chiefly of villas, and is much resorted to by Glasgow citizens for its bathing. It has a pier, at which steamers call several times a day.

STRONFERNAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Kenmore, co. Perth, Scotland.

STRONSAY AND EDAY, an united par. in the North Isles of Orkney, Scotland. It is separated from the mainland by Stronsay Frith, and comprises the vils. of Ladykirk, St. Nicholas, and St. Peter's, with Holm of Midgarth, and Papa-Stronsay Islands. See EDAY.

STRONTIAN, a quoad sacra par. in the N. div. of co. Argyle, Scotland. It extends in length 25 miles, with an extreme breadth of 10 miles, comprising parts of the pars. of Ardnamurchan and Morven. The village of Strontian is about 21 miles N.E. of Tobermoray, and 19 N.W. of Oban. It is situated at the head of Loch Sunart, and gives name to the metal "strontium," or strontites, first discovered here by Dr. Hope in 1792. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the lead mines, and some in the manufacture of straw plait. Galena, spar, talc, and other minerals are found in the gneiss and granite rocks. The living is in the presb. of Mull and synod of Argyle, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is about £120. The church was erected in 1827 by grant from the parliamentary commissioners. There is also a Free church. The principal seat is Strontian House, the residence of Sir James M. Riddell, Bart., who is sole landowner. Fairs are held on the Thursday before the last Wednesday in May, Friday after the third Thursday in June, 12th August or Wednesday after, and on the Thursday before the last Wednesday in October (old style).

STROOD, or STROOD EXTRA and INFRA, a par. partly in the city of Rochester, and partly in the hund. of Shamwell, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 6 miles from Gravesend, and half a mile N.W. of Rochester, its post town. It is a station on the North Kent line of railway. It is situated on the river Medway, opposite Rochester, of which it is a suburb, and to which it is joined by the bridge at its eastern extremity. The village consists of one irregularly built street. Of Strood Temple, which was given by Henry II. to the Knights Templars, and by the Countess of Pembroke to the abbey at Denny, there are some remains on Temple Farm. At the Dissolution the site was given to the Cobhams, when the revenue was estimated at £52 6*s.* 10*d.* Many of the inhabitants are employed in the fisheries on the Medway, and in the shrimp and oyster fisheries. There are some extensive brick kilns. The North Aylesford union poorhouse is situated in this parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £290, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, was rebuilt, with the exception of the tower, in 1812. In the interior are a stone seat and a brass of T. Glover and his three wives, bearing date 1444. The parochial charities produce about £53 per annum. There is a place of worship for Independents. In the vicinity is a stable and other remains of Bishop Gilbert de Glanville's hospital for infirm and indigent travellers, founded in Richard I.'s time. About 2 miles from Strood on the London road is Gadshill, celebrated by Shakspeare as the scene of Falstaff's valorous exploits.

STROOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Herne, hund. of Bleangate, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 5 miles N.N.E. of Canterbury.

STROUD, or STROUDWATER, a par., post and market town, and parliamentary borough in the hund. of Bisley; co. Gloucester, 9½ miles S.E. of Gloucester, and 14 from Cheltenham. It has a station on the Great Western Union railway. It is a petty sessions and polling town, situated on the Slade or Stroud canal, a short distance from its confluence with the river Frome. It stands on a declivity, sheltered by the Cotswolds, at a point where the vales of Avening, Rodborough, Chalford, and Painswick meet. The town consists principally of one long street extending up the side of the hill, with another diverging from it at the base, besides several smaller streets and newly-formed roads connecting it with the neighbouring towns. The streets are well paved, drained, and lighted with gas. It contains two banks, court-house, casualty hospital, union workhouse, and gas works. The county court is held monthly, and petty sessions for the hundred weekly. It formed part of Bisley up to Edward II.'s time, and was created a parliamentary borough by the Reform Bill, with power to return two members. The bounds include twelve adjoining villages and parishes. It has long been the centre of the woollen manufacture in Gloucestershire, and the dyeing of scarlet is carried on to some considerable extent. There are also several breweries, several iron foundries, and silk mills, and dye works within a short distance of the town, and at Lightpill Mills is an extensive pin manufactory. Tusks of the mammoth, and other fossils of a fine description, have been discovered in the lias hills which surround the town. The population of the parish in 1861 was 9,090, but that of the borough 35,517. The Stroudwater canal was formed in 1775, and flows 8 miles W., with a fall of 802 feet to the Severn at Framilode, passing close along the Slade or Stroud river, and is joined to the Thames by a canal which goes E. to Lechlade. The benefice is a perpet. cur.* with the cur. of Holy Trinity annexed, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £132, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, has been enlarged at different periods; it has a tower at its western end surmounted by a steeple. There is a church and an ecclesiastical parish at Whiteshill, which is a perpet. cur.;* the church was erected in 1839. There are National schools for both sexes, also British schools, and a charity school, designated the Red School, which clothes, educates, and apprentices four boys. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have chapels. At Woodchester are a recently-built Roman Catholic chapel and monastery; in Woodchester churchyard is a tesselated pavement. In 1855 an extra-mural cemetery was formed on rising ground at a short distance from the Union workhouse. Canton, who first made artificial magnets, and White, the Arabic scholar, both weavers, were born in this parish. Lyppiat Park was formerly the seat of the Throgmortons and the Delbins. Market day is on Friday. Fairs are held on 10th May and 21st and 22nd August for cattle, sheep, and pigs.

STROUD, a tythg. in the par. of Cumnor, hund. of Hormer, co. Berks, 3 miles S.W. of Oxford.

STROUD-END, a tythg. in the par. of Painswick, hund. of Bisley, co. Gloucester, near Stroud.

STROUD GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Hornsey, co. Middlesex, 4 miles N. of St. Paul's.

STROUD GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Staines, hund. of Spelthorne, co. Surrey, 2 miles S.W. of Staines, near the confluence of the Colne with the Thames.

STROUD GREEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Croydon, co. Surrey, 2 miles N.E. of Croydon.

STROWAN, two ancient pars. in co. Perth, Scotland, the one is now joined to Monivaird, and the other to Blair Atholl.

STROWAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Edzell, co. Forfar, Scotland, 5 miles N. of Brechin.

STROXTON, a par. in the wap. of Winnibrigs, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 4 miles S.W. of Grantham, its post town. In the vicinity are three springs, which are the means of supplying the Grantham water-works. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £306. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains a piscina of great antiquity, also a monument to Sir G. E. Welby. Sir G. E. Welby, Bart., is lord of the manor. There is a school for both sexes, on the National system.

STRUAN, a hmlt. in the Isle of Skye, co. Inverness, Scotland, 5 miles from Blair Atholl by the Perth, Forres, and Inverness section of the Highland railway, on which it is a station. It is situated near Lochs Struan and Bracadale, whence Macleod's Maidens are visited. There is a post office.

STRUBBY, a par. in the Wold div. of Calceworth hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles N. of Alford, its post town, and the like distance from Claythorpe railway station. The par. includes the hmlt. of Woodthorpe. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £150, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Oswald, was rebuilt, with the exception of the chancel, in 1857. It contains tombs of the Ballot family. The register dates from 1547. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel. Strubby is included in the manor of Bilsby.

STRUGSHILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Sutterton, co. Lincoln, 4 miles S.E. of Swineshead.

STRULE, a section of the river Mourne, co. Tyrone, Ireland.

STRUMPSHAW, a par. in the hund. of Blofield, co. Norfolk, 8½ miles E. of Norwich, 1½ mile S.E. of Blofield, and 1¾ N. of Buckingham Ferry railway station. The village is situated on an eminence near the northern bank of the navigable river Yare. There is a prospect over the marshes from the windmill, which stands on the highest ground in the county. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of Bradeston, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £520. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, contains several marble tablets to the Atkins, Barnes, and Springall families, and some stained windows. The register dates from 1580. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum.

STRUTHERS, a seat of the Earl of Glasgow, co. Fife, Scotland, 3 miles S.W. of Cupar.

STRUVE POINT, a headland at the entrance of Lough Foyle, co. Donegal, Ireland.

STUARTFIELD, a vil. in the par. of Old Deer, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 3 miles from Deer.

STUART-TOWN, a vil. in the par. of Pettie, co. Inverness, Scotland, 7 miles N.E. of Inverness, on Loch Beauly, near Culloden Moor.

STUBBIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Rawmarsh, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N. of Rotherham.

STUBBIN, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Nether Hoyland, par. of Wath-upon-Dearn, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.W. of Rotherham.

STUBBINGTON, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Crofton, par. of Titchfield, co. Hants, 3 miles S.W. of Fareham.

STUBBINS, a hmlt. in the ecclesiastical district of Ramsbottom, co. Lancaster, 4½ miles from Bury by the Manchester, Bury, and Bacup branch of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway, on which it is a station.

STUBBS, a tnshp. in the par. of Adwick-le-Street, N. div. of Strafforth wap., West Riding co. York, 7 miles N.W. of Doncaster. It is joined with Hamphall to form a township. The principal residence is Stubbs Hall.

STUBBY-LANE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Draycott, par. of Hanbury, co. Stafford, 4 miles S.E. of Uttoxeter.

STUBHAMPTON, a tythg. in the par. of Tarrant-Gunville, co. Dorset, 4 miles S.E. of Uttoxeter.

STUBLACH, a tnshp. in the par. of Middlewich, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 4 miles N.E. of Middlewich.

STUBTON, a par. in the wap. of Loveden, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 6½ miles S.E. of Newark, its post town, and 1 mile from Claypole station, on the Great Northern railway. The soil is principally clay and loam. The lower grounds are watered by several streams, tributary to the river Witham. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £295. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, was rebuilt about 1800. The parochial charities produce about £58 per annum. The principal residence is Stubton Hall. G. Nevill, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STUBWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Rocester, co. Stafford, 4 miles N.E. of Uttoxeter.

STUDDOW, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Burton-Constable, North Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Leyburn.

STUDFIELD, a hmlt. in the par. of Horton-in-Ribblesdale, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N. of Settle.

STUDHAM, a par. partly in the hund. of Dacorum, co. Herts, but chiefly in that of Manshead, co. Beds, 3½ miles S.W. of Market-Street, its post town, and 6 S.W. of Luton. The par. includes the hmlts. of Humbershoe, Studham, and part of Market-Street. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £150. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains a round stone font of curious workmanship. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum.

STUDLAND, a par. in the hund. of Rowbarrow, co. Dorset, 3 miles N. of Swanage, its post town, and 5 E. of Corfe Castle. It is a coastguard station on the cliffs of Studland Bay, and comprises the island of Brownsea and several smaller islands. The parish is bounded on the N.E. by Studland Bay, on the S.E. by Sandwich Bay, and on the N. by Poole Harbour. The bay, though an open roadstead, affords sheltered anchorage from the western winds in about six fathoms. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. On Studland Common is the Anglestone, 20 feet in height, and 80 in circumference, with several barrows near it. On Brownsea Island, which is about 3 miles in circumference, and near its eastern extremity, is a castle built in the reign of Elizabeth by the inhabitants of Poole for the defence of that port, and adjoining it is a platform for ordnance. There is also a quay, where vessels can lie for taking in or discharging their cargoes. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £175. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, was built about the time of the Conquest. There is also a district church at Branksea, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £60. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum.

STUDLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Beckley, hunds. of Ashendon and Bullingdon, co. Oxford, formerly in Bucks, 6½ miles N.E. of Oxford, and 7 N.W. of Thame. It is joined with Horton to form a township. Here was formerly a Benedictine nunnery, founded by Bernard de St. Valery in 1184, and valued at the Dissolution at £102.

STUDLEY, a par. in the Alcester div. of Barlichway hund., co. Warwick, 4 miles N.W. of Alcester, and 6 S.W. of Henley-in-Arden. The village is on the river Arrow, and on the road from Birmingham to Alcester. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the needle and fish-hook manufactories. The par. includes the hmlt. of Mapleborough, with the ruins of an Austin priory founded by Peter Corbezon or De Studley, in Stephen's time, as a cell to Wicton or Wick. There are brick kilns, and malting is carried on. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £103. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a Norman arch at the northern end. There is a chapel-of-ease in the village. The parochial charities produce about £57 per annum. There are a free school and an infant school, also a Sunday-school. The Wesleyans, Baptists, and Roman Catholics have chapels. Studley Castle is the principal residence.

STUDLEY, a tythg. in the par. of Bremhill, co. Wilts, 2 miles W. of Calne, on the Wilts and Berks canal.

STUDLEY, a tythg. in the par. of Calne, co. Wilts, near the above.

STUDLEY, a tythg. in the par. of Chippenham, co. Wilts. It is joined with Stanley.

STUDLEY-ROGER, a tnshp. in the par. of Ripon, lower div. of Claro wap., West Riding co. York, 1½ mile S.W. of Ripon.

STUDLEY-ROYAL, a tnshp. in the par. of Ripon, lower div. of Claro wap., West Riding co. York, 2½ miles W. of Ripon. The principal residence is Studley Hall, containing portraits of Bacon, Lady Jane Grey, Peter the Great, and others. The park and grounds contain the Fountain Abbey, rotunda, banqueting room, &c., which during the summer months are open to the public. It is the property of Earl de Grey and Ripon.

STUKELEY, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Hurstingstone, co. Huntingdon, 2½ miles N.W. of Huntingdon. The village is on the Great Northern road, and near the ancient Ermine Street. This parish, under the name Stivecle, was given by David, Earl of Huntingdon, to the Camoys, from whom it came to the Stones, &c. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £124, in the patron. of Trinity Hall, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, has monuments. The parochial charities comprise about £16 per annum, the rent of eight acres of land, and Spittal's almshouse. Broughton, author of the "Monasticon Britanicum," was born here in the reign of James I. L. Torkington, Esq., is lord of the manor. The county gaol is in this parish.

STUKELEY, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Hurstingstone, co. Huntingdon, 3 miles N. of Huntingdon. The village is situated on the Great North road, between two hills. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £252. The church is dedicated to St. Martin. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum. There are two free schools, supported by the Rev. J. H. Barber. Lady Olivia Barnard Sparrow is lady of the manor.

STUMP CROSS, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Morley, and par. of Batley, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Leeds, and 3½ N.W. of Dewsbury.

STUMPERLEY, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Upper Hallam, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S.W. of Sheffield.

STUNTNEY, a chplry. in the par. of Holy Trinity, city of Ely, hund. and isle of Ely, co. Cambridge, 1½ mile S.E. of Ely, its post town. The village is situated about half a mile from the river Ouse. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £150, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. Cromwell lived at the rectory in 1637.

STURBRIDGE. See STOURBRIDGE, co. Cambridge.

STURGATE, a hmlt. in the par. of Springthorpe, hund. of Corringham, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles E. of Gainsborough.

STURMERE, a par. in the hund. of Hinckford, co. Essex, 1½ mile S.E. of Haverhill, its post town, and 9 miles N.W. of Castle Hedingham. It is a station on the Cambridge and Bury branch of the Great Eastern railway. The village is situated near the river Stour, and takes its name from a lake or mere which covered about 20 acres. The par. formerly included the adjoining pars. of Haverhill and Kedington. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £240. The church is built of flint and rubble, with a tower and three bells. Sturmere Hall is the principal residence. Numerous Roman coins of the Lower Empire have been found, with several skeletons of gigantic size.

STURMINSTER, a div., co. Dorset, contains the hunds. of Brownshall, Redlane, Sturminster-Newton-Castle, and Stower Provost lib., comprising an area of 41,904 acres.

STURMINSTER-MARSHALL, a par. in the hund. of Cogdean, co. Dorset, 4½ miles W. of Wimborne Minster, its post town, and 7 N.W. of Poole. The village, which is considerable, is situated at the eight-arched bridge over the river Stour. The par. comprises the tythg. of Coombe Almer. It was a market town under the Earls of Pembroke, Earls Marshal. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £303, in the patron. of Eton College. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has recently been restored, and at the W. end of the N. aisle is a space partitioned off, in which the royal peculiar court of Sturminster-Marshall is held. In addition to the parish church are the district churches of Lytchett Minster, Hamworthy, and Corfe Mullen, the livings of which are perpet. curs. and a vic., varying in val. from £386 to £295. The parochial charities produce about £40 per annum, which go to Mackrell's endowed church school for both sexes. The Independents have a chapel. Sir W. Year, G. Churchill, Esq., and H. W. Pickard, Esq., are lords of the manor.

STURMINSTER-NEWTON-CASTLE, a hund. in the Sturminster div. co. Dorset, contains the pars. of Hinton St. Mary, Marnhull, Margaret Marsh, Okeford-Fitzpaine, and Sturminster-Newton-Castle, comprising an area of 12,430 acres.

STURMINSTER-NEWTON-CASTLE, a par., post, and market town in the above hund., Sturminster div. co. Dorset, 5 miles S.E. of Stalbridge, and 8 S.W. of Shaftesbury. It is a station on the Somerset and Dorset railway. It is situated at the six-arched bridge over the river Stour, and comprises the tnshps. of Sturminster and Newton, occupying opposite sides of the river. The par. includes the hmlts. of Newton and Bagbere. It is a petty sessions town, and a court leet takes place annually, at which the constable for the hundred and tythingmen are appointed. It is supposed to be the Anicetis of Ravennas, and was given by Alfred the Great to his son, Ethelwald; and in 968 Edgar granted the manor of Sturre to Glastonbury Abbey. At the Dissolution the manor was presented by Henry VIII. to Queen Catherine Parr, and was given by Queen Elizabeth to the Hattons. It was formerly the seat of an extensive woollen trade, which is now extinct, the only manufactures being white baize and swan skins. In the vicinity are traces of an old castle and of a D-shaped camp. The streets, in general narrow and indifferently built, have been much improved of late years. There are two banks, a union poorhouse; and a large oblong market-house, with warerooms above and shambles below. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £712. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has been much enlarged and nearly rebuilt, with the exception of the tower, which is part of the old building. There are schools for both sexes, including infants. The Primitive Methodists and Wesleyans have chapels, and the latter a Sunday-school. A literary and scientific institution was established in 1850. The Blackmoor Vale harriers hunt here. Lord Rivers is lord of the manor. The market is held every alternate Thursday. Fairs are held on 12th May and 24th October.

STURRY, a par. in the hund. of Bleangate, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 2½ miles N.E. of Canterbury, its post town, and 57 S.E. of London. It is a station on the Ramsgate branch of the London and South-Eastern railway. The village, which is large and well-built, is situated at the bridge over the river Stour, which is navigable for barges to Fordwick. The manor was given by Ethelbert to St. Augustine's Abbey. Hops are grown. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £255, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. The parochial charities produce about £40 per annum. Sturry Court is the principal residence; it was formerly the seat of the Strangfords. A fair is held on Whit Monday.

STURSTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Ashborne, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 2 miles E. of Ashborne, on a branch of the river Dove.

STURSTON, a par. in the hund. of Grimshoe, co. Norfolk, 8 miles N.N.E. of Thetford, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Walton. The village is on the river Wissey. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £28. The church is in ruins, but the churchyard is still used for burials. Lord Walsingham is lord of the manor.

STURTHILL, a tythg. in the par. of Burton Bradstock, lib. of Frampton, Bridport div. of co. Dorset.

STURTHILL BROAD, a tythg. in the par. of Shipton George, co. Dorset, 3 miles E. of Bridport.

STURTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Scawby, E. div. of Manley wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2½ miles S.W. of Glanford Brigg.

STURTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Stow, wap. of Well, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 8 miles N.W. of Lincoln, on Ermine Street.

STURTON, or STRETTON, a par. in the North Clay div. of Bassetlaw wap., co. Nottingham, 6 miles N.E. of East Retford, its post town, and 5½ S. of Gainsborough. It is a station on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway. The village, which is considerable, is situated on Ermine Street, near the river Trent. The par. includes the hmlt. of Fenton. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £241, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of York. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, contains tombs of the Thornhaughs. The parochial charities produce about £17 per annum. There are a National school and chapel for the Wesleyans. G. S. Foljambe, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STURTON GRANGE, a tnshp. in the par. of Warkworth, E. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 4 miles S.E. of Alnwick, and 2½ N.W. of Warkworth.

STURTON GRANGE, a tnshp. in the par. of Aberford, lower div. of Skyrack wap., West Riding co. York, 3 miles S. of Aberford, 7 E. of Leeds, and 1 mile from the Garforth and Micklefield stations on the Leeds and Selby railway. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the lime quarries and coal pits. F. C. T. Gascoyne, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

STURTON-MAGNA, or GREAT STURTON, a par. in the N. div. of Gartree wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 6 miles N.W. of Horncastle, its post town, and 8 N. of Southry railway station. The village is at the foot of the Wolds, near the river Bain. Sturton is said to have been a Roman station. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £116. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The enclosure of this parish took place in 1776.

STUSTON, or STURSTON, a par. in the hund. of Hartismere, co. Suffolk, 1½ mile S.E. of Diss railway station, and 2½ miles N. of Eye. Scole is its post town. The village is situated near the river Waveney, on the road from London to Norwich by Bury St. Edmund's. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £209. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains a monument to John Castleton and family, and one to Mr. and Mrs. Clarke. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. Sir E. C. Kerrison, Bart., is lord of the manors of Boylands and Facons.

STUTCHBURY, or STUTSBURY, a par. in the hund. of King's-Sutton, co. Northampton, 5 miles N.W. of Brackley, its post town. The parish is situated on the river Tove. There is no village. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £5. The church is in ruins.

STUTTON, a par. in the hund. of Sampford, co. Suffolk, 7½ miles S.W. of Ipswich, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Manningtree. The village is situated on the river Stour, which is navigable for vessels of considerable burden, and here divides this county from Essex. At a farm in the vicinity are the ruins of Stutton Hall. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £550. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, contains the brass of a priest bearing date 1413, and several monuments, some of which are of the Jermy family. The register dates from 1645. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. There is a school for both sexes, erected in 1838. Stretton House, Crow Hall, and Alton Hall are the principal residences.

STUTTON-WITH-HAZLEWOOD, a tnshp. in the par. of Tadcaster, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S.W. of Tadcaster. It is a station on the York and Harrogate branch of the North-Eastern railway. There is a meet for the Bramham Moor hunt at Stutton Hill. In the vicinity are some lime quarries. The hamlet of Stutton is situated in the vale of the Cock rivulet. Hazlewood Hall, the seat of the Vavasours, is extra-parochial. Near the hall is a Roman Catholic chapel.

STYCHE WITH WOODLANDS, a tnshp. in the par. of Moreton Sea, co. Salop, 2 miles N.W. of Market Drayton.

STYDD, a tnshp. in the par. of Shirley, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 4½ miles S.W. of Ashborne.

STYFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Bywell St. Andrew, E. div. of Tyndale ward, co. Northumberland, 6 miles E. of Hexham, and 3 W. of Stocksfield railway station. It is situated on the Newcastle railway and the river Tyne. The principal residence is Styford Hall. William Grey, Esq., is lord of the manor.

STYRRUP, a tnshp. in the pars. of Blyth and Harworth, Hatfield div. of Bassetlaw wap., co. Nottingham, 2 miles N.W. of Blyth, and 3 S.W. of Bawtry. It includes the hmlts. of Oldcoats and Norney. The Wesleyans have two chapels.

SUBAYRON, a deanery in the archdeaconry of Cardigan, and dioc. of St. David's, comprising the hunds. of Moddyn and Troedyraur, co. Cardigan.

SUBBERTHWAITE, a tnshp. in the par. of Ulverstone, hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 8 miles N. of Ulverstone. It includes a vast tract of waste land, interspersed with rocks and woodland. There is a slate quarry. The Duke of Buccleuch is lord of the manor.

SUBDEANRY, a par. in the city of Chichester, co. Sussex. See CHICHESTER.

SUBULTER, a par. in the bar. of Duhallow, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2½ miles E. of Kanturk. Mallow is its post town. The land is mostly under cultivation, and the soil generally good. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £47, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a school supported by private charity. A battle took place here in 1647 between Lord Inchiquin's and Lord Taafe's forces, when the Irish were defeated with a loss of 4,000 men.

SUCK, a feeder of the Shannon, rises in Lough O'Flyn, on the borders of Roscommon and Mayo.

SUCKEN CHAPEL. See CHAPEL SUCKEN, co. Cumberland.

SUCKLEY, a par. in the upper div. of Doddingtree hund., co. Worcester, 10 miles W. of Worcester, its post town, 7 S.W. of Martley, and 5 S.E. of Bromyard. The village is on Cradley Brook. The par. contains the hmlts. of Alfrick and Lulsey, each of which has a chapel-of-ease. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The living is a rect.* with the curs. of Alfrick and Lulsley annexed, in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £634, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, has some oak seats of great antiquity, also several old monuments. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The parochial charities produce about £84 per annum, of which £11 go to Palmer's free school. Earl Somers is lord of the manor.

SUDBOROUGH, a par. in the hund. of Huxloe, co. Northampton, 3 miles N.W. of Thrapston, its post town. The village is on a branch of the river Nen. In the village are an extensive brewery and brickyard. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £357, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains two brasses, and monuments of the Wasts, one bearing date 1415. The parochial charities produce about £27 per annum, of which £11 go to the Sunday-school. The Duke of Cleveland is lord of the manor.

SUDBOURNE, or SUDBORNE, a par. in the hund. of Plomesgate, co. Suffolk, 1½ mile N.E. of Orford, its post town. The village is near the river Alde, and Orfordness, on the coast of the North Sea. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, with the cur. of Orford annexed, val. £577, in the patron. of the crown. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The register dates from 1621. The parochial charities produce about £250, of which £167 go towards church expenses. The principal residence is Sudbourne Hall, a seat of the Marquis of Hereford; it was rebuilt by Wyatt.

SUDBROOKE, a par. in the hund. of Lawress, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5 miles N.E. of Lincoln, its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £155, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Edward, was rebuilt by R. Ellison. The school at Scothern is free for the children of this parish.

SUDBROOKE, a hmlt. in the par. of Ancaster, wap. of Loveden, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 6 miles N.E. of Grantham, on the river Sleaford, near Ermine Street.

SUDBROOKE, a hmlt., formerly a par., in the upper div. of Caldicott hund., co. Monmouth, 5 miles S.W. of Chepstow. The living is a discharged rect. annexed to that of Portskewit. The church has long been in ruins.

SUDBURY, a par. in the hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 13 miles from Derby, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Uttoxeter. It is a station on the North Staffordshire railway. The village is on the river Dove, near Sudbury Coppice. Sudbury was held by the Montgomeries till Henry VIII.'s time, and is now the property of Lord Vernon. It is a petty sessions town. The Hoar Cross Hounds meet in the vicinity. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £747. The church is dedicated to All Saints. There are free and National schools for both sexes. The parochial charities produce about £27 per annum. The principal residence is Sudbury Hall, situated in a richly-wooded park, through which is a carriage drive two miles long. The Hall was rebuilt about 1620, and was the residence of the late Dowager Queen Adelaide. If contains portraits of Thomas Cromwell, Strafford, and others. Lord Vernon is lord of the manor.

SUDBURY, a hmlt. in the par. of Harrow-on-the-Hill, co. Middlesex, 10 miles N.W. of St. Paul's. It is a station on the North-Western railway. It was formerly a seat of the archbishops of Canterbury.

SUDBURY, a par., market town, and municipal borough, chiefly in the hund. of Babergh, co. Suffolk, but including the par. of Ballingdon-cum-Brundon, co. Essex, 20 miles S.W. of Ipswich, and 7 S.E. of Clare. It is a station on the Marks Tay branch of the Great Eastern railway. It is situated at the bridge over the river Stour, which is navigable hence to Manningtree, and here divides the counties of Suffolk and Essex. It is a place of great antiquity, and was the Saxon Sudberie, or South Burgh. At the period of the Norman survey it had a market and mint, and was settled by Edward III. with a colony of Flemings, who introduced the manufacture of woollen cloth, and that branch of trade continued to flourish for some time. There are manufactories of bunting, and seven extensive manufactories for silk, velvet, satin, plush, and other rich fabrics. It was first chartered by Queen Elizabeth, and returned two members to parliament till 1843, when it was disfranchised for bribery. Under the Municipal Act of 1835 the town council consists of a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors. The corporation revenue produces about £850 per annum. The population of the borough in 1851 was 5,225, and in 1861, 6,879. The houses are in general well built, and of late years the town has been considerably improved. The streets are paved and lighted under an Act obtained in 1825. It contains a new townhall and borough gaol, erected by the corporation on Market Hill; a corn exchange, a savings-bank, two branch banks, union poor-house, and literary institution, with museum and library attached. Quarter and petty sessions are held in the townhall, in which assemblies also take place. Sudbury is the head of a Poor-law Union, embracing 18 parishes in Essex and 24 in Suffolk. It is also the seat of New County Court and superintendent registry districts. The Reform bounds include the old borough, containing the pars. of All Saints, St. Gregory, and St. Peter, with the extra-parochial district of St. Bartholomew's, and the par. of Ballingdon, in Essex. It is also the capital of the archdeaconry and deanery to which it gives name in the diocese of Norwich. The livings are, All Saints, a vic.* with that of Ballingdon-cum-Brundon annexed, val. £140, in the patron. of Simeon's trustees; and the perpet cur. of St. Gregory, with that of St. Peter annexed, joint val. £160. The churches are of considerable antiquity. St. Gregory's, the most ancient, was collegiate until Henry VIII. sold its possessions to Sir T. Paston. It contains a font, and a head, supposed to be that of Symon de Theobald or De Sudbury, Archbishop of Canterbury, a native of this town, who was beheaded by the mob in Wat Tyler's rebellion, 1381, and was buried here. A gateway belonging to the college is still remaining, and that of an Austin friary. St. Bartholomew's was the site of a Benedictine priory. The site latterly became the property of Sir J. Marriott, by whose order the priory buildings were taken down in 1779. The charities produce about £350 per annum, including Carter's bequest of £100 for coats and gowns to 100 poor persons, and St. Leonard's hospital, originally founded for lepers in the reign of John, but now let in three tenements, and the rent of which, together with that of 5 acres of land, are applied towards the support of the poor. The Duke of Grafton, of Euston, takes the title of baron from this place. Gainsborough, the artist, and Enfield, compiler of the "Speaker," were natives. Market days are Thursday and Saturday, the former for corn and sheep, and the latter for pigs, &c. Fairs are held on the 12th May and 10th July, chiefly for earthenware.

SUDDY, an ancient par. now joined to Knockbain, co. Ross, Scotland.

SUDELEY-MANOR, a par. in the lower div. of Kiftsgate hund., co. Gloucester, 1 mile S.E. of Winchcombe, its post town. The village is situated on the river Isborne, under the Cotswolds. The soil consists of stone brash, with a subsoil of clay. Sudeley gives title of baron to the Tracys of Toddington. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £45. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, which was much damaged during the civil war, but has recently been restored. The interior contains the remains of Queen Catherine Parr, who died in 1548. The principal residence is Sudeley Castle, which has been partly restored at the expense of J. and T. Dent, Esqrs. It contains works from Walpole's collection at Strawberry Hill. J. Dent, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

SUDELEY-TENEMENTS, a hmlt. in the par. of Winchcombe, lower div. of Kiftsgate hund., co. Gloucester.

SUENO'S MONUMENT, or the STANDING STONE, co. Elgin, Scotland, near Forres, an ancient monument carved with runes; it is a slab of hard granite, 25 feet high and 4 broad at the foot, upon a base of four steps.

SUFFIELD, a par. in the hund. of North Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 3¼ miles N.W. of North Walsham, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Aylsham. The village is situated on the river Bure. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £255. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is an ancient edifice with a tower and five bells. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £28 per annum. There is a school for about 20 poor girls, erected at the expense of a former Lord Suffield, and which was endowed by the late Lady Suffield.

SUFFIELD-CUM-EVERLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Hackness, lib. of Whitby Strand, North Riding co. York, 5 miles N.W. of Scarborough. It is joined with Everley and Silpho.

SUFFOLK, a maritime county on the E. coast of England, is bounded N. by Norfolk, E. by the German Ocean, S. by Essex, and W. by Cambridge. It lies between 51° 56′ and 52° 37′ N. lat., 0° 23′ and 1° 46′ E. long. Its greatest length from Southtown, a suburb of Great Yarmouth, on the N.E., to the south-western border, is 68 miles, and the extreme breadth 52 miles. The area is 1,481 square miles, or 947,681 acres, of which about 820,000 acres are arable land, meadow, and pasture. The population in 1801 was 214,404; in 1851, 337,215; and in 1861, 337,070. In the earliest times of which we have any record, it was inhabited by the Iceni, a British tribe, and subsequently formed part of the Roman province of Flavia Cæsariensis. It was afterwards occupied by the Angles, and formed part of the kingdom of East Anglia. In 654, Penda, king of Mercia, attacked the East Anglians, and in a battle fought near Blytheburgh, slew their king. The Danes early commenced their ravages along this coast, and in 871 defeated and took prisoner Edmund, king of East Anglia, whom they put to death for refusing to renounce Christianity. His body was removed from Hoxne to Bury, which received in consequence the name of Bury St. Edmund's, and a monastery was erected to his honour. In the division of the kingdom under Alfred the county was included within the Danelagh, and at the time of the Norman conquest was held by Gurth, brother of Harold II.—The surface of this county is generally flat, or gently undulating, there being no eminence in the whole county worthy of notice. The highest ground lies towards the W., through which, some miles to the W. of Bury, and thence to Thetford, runs a chalk dyke, which crosses this part of England in a north-easterly direction. This ridge separates the watershed of the N. from that of the S. of the county, the streams on the upper side flowing into the Little Ouse and Waveney, while those on the lower side fall into the Stour and Orwell, or directly into the German Ocean. The north-western districts bordering on Cambridgeshire partake of its marshy, fenny nature, and in some places the land is secured from overflow of the rivers by large embankments along their course. The coast line, 52 miles in length, is for the most part regular, and convex to the sea. The bays are generally shallow, and the headlands have little prominence. The principal harbours are formed by the estuaries of the Orwell and Stour on the S.E., and of the other rivers which flow into the German Ocean. The shore is in most places low and sandy, and occasionally marshy; but low cliffs, composed of alternations of clay, sand, and gravel, are found on both sides of the estuary of the Deben, and at some other points. These are being slowly undermined by the sea, while at some places the reverse occurs, and accessions of land are being formed by the accumulation of marine deposits. Lowestoft, Southwold, and Felixstow are much resorted to as watering-places.—The rivers of the county are not very important. The Waveney rises at Sopham, a swampy tract, and forms the boundary with Norfolk, falling into the German Ocean at Yarmouth. It is navigable to Bungay, and communicates with the sea at Lowestoft, by means of a canal cut through Lake Lothing. The Little Ouse has its source within a few yards of the Waveney, and is a border river for some distance before joining the Great Ouse in Norfolk. It is navigable as far as Thetford. The Blythe, rising near Laxfield hills on the N.E. of the county, passes near Halesworth, and is navigable thence to Southwold, where it falls into the sea. The Alde, which rises at Framlingham, is only navigable from Aldborough, where it widens considerably, and flows nearly parallel to the coast, about half a mile inland, for 7 miles, reaching the sea below Orford. The Deben rises near Aspal, and flows past Debenham to the sea about 4 miles N. of Landguard fort and the efflux of the Orwell and Stour. It is navigable to Woodbridge, 8 miles from its mouth. The Orwell, which is the most central river in the county, rises near Felsham, where it is called the Gipping, and afterwards the Stowmarket canal. At Ipswich it assumes the name of Orwell, and is navigable thence to the sea. The Stour rises in the S.W. corner, and flows into the Harwich estuary along with the Orwell; it is navigable for barges to Sudbury. The Lark, a tributary of the Great Ouse, rises in the S.W., and flows past Bury, to which point it was made navigable in 1700. The only other inland navigation in the county is by the Stowmarket canal, 16 miles long, on the Gipping river, and the Lowestoft and Norwich navigation, by which vessels of 200 tons can pass to Beccles, 15 miles distant from Lowestoft, and communicating by canal with Norwich.—The Great Eastern railway enters from Essex by crossing the Stour near Stratford, and runs N. past Ipswich, Claydon, Needham Market, Stowmarket, and Haughley. A branch line from above Stowmarket runs to Cambridge, passing Bury St. Edmund's, and the East Suffolk line, connects Ipswich and Yarmouth, with branches to Lowestoft, Framlingham, and Aldborough. The principal road from London crosses the Stour at Stratford, and at Ipswich branches off to Lowestoft, Yarmouth, and Norwich. Another road to Norwich enters the county at Sudbury, and runs due N. to Thetford, passing Bury, from which a road communicates with Newmarket. Other roads are numerous and well laid off, and are kept in excellent order.—The geological formation of the county presents little variety. The south-eastern corner is occupied by crag and London clay, the crag in some places resting on a substratum of London clay, and in others on chalk. It is referred by Lyell to the older Pliocene period, and is generally formed of thin layers of quartzose, sand, and powdered shells. Upwards of 400 different species of fossil testacea are found in the crag, which is divided into the red and the coralline, some species being common to both, and some peculiar to each. The remains of monsters of an early geological period have been found all along the coast. The south-western corner consists principally of chalk formation, which does not in any place rise into hills. Along the border of Cambridge it sinks under the fens which prevail there, and towards its eastern edge it is covered by diluvial beds, occupying the central parts.—The soil is various, and is divided into three districts. The land lying along the coast, and for some distance inwards, is generally sandy loam and sand, covered in some places with heath, on which large quantities of sheep are fed. Marshy tracts are also found where cattle are reared. At Bardsley and other places the coprolites deposited by extinct animals are burned for manure. In the centre and S.W. a rich sandy loam is found on a retentive marl-clay bottom, generally interspersed with light, easy soil. Drainage is there extensively practised, and most improved systems of husbandry are adopted. The land is fertile, the average yield on heavy grounds being 32 bushels of wheat, 44 bushels of barley, or 36 bushels of beans. The four-course system is most followed. Farms are for the most part of 100 to 300 acres in extent, and held from year to year. There are many large farmers who hold under short leases. In the N.W. district, towards Newmarket, the soil is comparatively poor, being partly of sand, on the substratum of chalk, and partly of peat, or open heath, upon which sheep are grazed. Considerable tracts have here been lately reclaimed. Of the entire county it is estimated that about 46,000 acres consist of a rich loam, 80,000 acres of marshes and fens, 450,000 acres of heavy loam and clay, and 250,000 acres of sandy tracts. Tillage husbandry is generally adopted, and is carefully and skilfully conducted. The climate is one of the driest in England, but being exposed from the N. and E., the frost in winter is often very severe, and in spring a hard north-easterly wind generally prevails, which renders vegetation late. The crops most grown are, wheat, barley, oats, beans, peas, turnips, carrots, cabbage, and potatoes. Hops and hemp are cultivated to a small extent. The pasture lands and meadows are rich, and cattle of various breeds are grazed during winter in the valleys of the Waveney and other rivers, and sold in spring, but much of these pastures has been ploughed up, and is now tilled, and the number of dairy farms is consequently reduced. Large quantities of butter, however, are still made for the London market, the yearly supply being estimated at 50,000 firkins. Cheese of an inferior quality is made. Sheep, chiefly of the Norfolk and South Down breeds, are fed in large numbers. The stock is estimated at 500,000, yielding about 9,000 wool packs. Suffolk is famous for its breed of horses. The pigs are small, white, and straight-eared, and of a hardy and fruitful nature. They fatten well, and are made into excellent hams and bacon. Geese and turkeys are as extensively reared in some places as in Norfolk, and poultry of all kinds is abundant. Large numbers of pigeons are bred in the open fields in the W. Rabbit warrens were formerly numerous in the N.W. district, but their number is considerably reduced. The rivers and streams supply trout in large numbers, and Lowestoft and other ports share in the herring fishery for which Yarmouth is celebrated. Manufactures, particularly of woollens, were formerly much carried on, having been established in the reign of Edward III. by some Flemings whom Queen Philippa induced to settle here, but are now much discontinued. They principally consist of the combing and spinning of wool, and the manufacture of mixed woollen and silk fabrics at Sudbury, Gainsford, and other places. Stays are made at Ipswich; hemp drablets and fustians at Haverhill; sacking at Stowmarket; malt at Woodbridge and Stowmarket; and velvets, straw-plait, gloves, bricks, and tiles, at various places. There are extensive manufactories of agricultural implements at Ipswich, Leiston, and Peasenhall, near Saxmundham.—Suffolk belongs chiefly to the diocese of Norwich, in which it constitutes two archdeaconries, Suffolk and Sudbury, besides the deaneries of Fordham, Clare, and Thingoe, now subject to the diocese of Ely. It comprises 21 hundreds, containing 438 whole parishes, parts of 4 others, and 11 extra-parochial places. The county is further divided for electoral purposes into East and West Suffolk. It returns nine members to parliament, two for the eastern division, constituency 6,769 in 1865; two for the western, constituency 4,269; two each for Bury St. Edmund's and Ipswich, constituencies respectively 711 and 1,985; and one for Eye, constituency 331. Bury is the place of election for the E. division, and Ipswich for the western. The civil government is entrusted to a lord lieutenant and custos rotulorum, high sheriff, and about 213 deputy lieutenants and magistrates. It is in the Home military district, and in the Norfolk circuit. The spring assizes are held at Ipswich, and those in summer at Bury St. Edmund's. Quarter sessions for the Gueldable division are held at Beccles and Ipswich, and those for the franchises of St. Ethelred and St. Edmund at Woodbridge and Bury respectively. There are county gaols and houses of correction at Bury and Ipswich, and houses of correction and borough prisons at other places. The county lunatic asylum is at Melton Woodbridge, and the general hospital, established in 1825, at Bury.—The county contains 18 market towns, and upwards of 560 smaller towns and villages, besides numerous seats of the nobility and gentry. Traces of camps are observable at Stow Langtoft, Ixworth, and at Haughley, near Stowmarket. A tesselated pavement was dug up at Packenham, near Ixworth; and coins and foundations have been discovered at Bury, Blythburgh, Dunwich, Ixworth, and other places. In the neighbourhood of Hoxne, near Eye, where Edmund the Martyr was shot by the Danes, several arrow-heads and curious flint weapons were found. There are traces of abbeys at Bury, where the abbey church and gate are yet standing, and at Leiston, where portions of the abbey walls are used for the out-offices of a farm; of friaries at Eye and Ipswich, of churches at Blythburgh, Dunwich, Framlingham, Lavenham, Melford, Southwold, and elsewhere; and of castles at Bungay, Clare, Framlingham, Freston, Orford, and Wingfield. The title of earl of Suffolk was conferred in 1603 on the Howards, of Charlton Park in Wiltshire, and is still enjoyed by their descendants. Ipswich was the birth-place of Cardinal Wolsey; Sudbury, of Gainsborough; Framlingham, of the great Earl of Surrey; Honington, of Bloomfield the poet; Aldborough, of Crabbe; and Ashfield, of Thurlow.

SUFTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Mordiford, co. Hereford, 4 miles S.E. of Hereford, near the river Wye.

SUGDEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Roddington, co. Salop, 6 miles N.E. of Shrewsbury.

SUGLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Horsley, co. Gloucester, 3 miles S.W. of Minchinhampton.

SUGLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Newburn, W. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 4 miles W. of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and half a mile from Blaydon railway station. It is situated on the river Tyne, adjoining the village of Lemington. The extensive factory termed the Tyne Iron Works affords employment to the greater part of the inhabitants. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Newburn, in the dioc. of Durham. The church is dedicated to St. Saviour. It is situated in Sugley Field, and was built in 1836. There is a school for both sexes.

SUGNALL, MAGNA, a tnshp. in the par. of Eccleshall, N. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford, 2½ miles N.W. of Eccleshall.

SUGNALL, PARVA, a tnshp. in the par. of Eccleshall, N. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford, 3 miles N.W. of Eccleshall.

SUIR, a river of cos. Tipperary, Waterford, and Kilkenny, Ireland, joins the Barrow at Waterford Harbour.

SULBY, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Rothwell, co. Northampton, 10 miles W. of Rothwell, and 6 S.W. of Harborough. It is situated on the river Avon, and had a Premonstratensian abbey, founded by Robert de Quercet, Bishop of Lincoln, in 1155, and its revenue at the Dissolution was estimated at £305 8*s.* 5*d.*, when the site was given to the Hattons. Sulby Hall has a gallery of paintings by Flemish masters.

SULBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirk-Lezayre, Isle of Man, 4 miles W. of Ramsey. It takes its name from a trout stream which, rising under Snafell, forms a cascade near the village, in a glen.

SULEHAY WALK AND LODGE, an ext. par. place in the par. of Yarwell, co. Northampton, 5 miles N.E. of Oundle. It was formerly comprised in Kingscliffe forest.

SULGRAVE, a par. in the hund. of Chipping-Warden, co. Northampton, 7¾ miles N.E. of Banbury, its post town, and 8 N.W. of Brackley. The parish, which is extensive, is situated at the head of the river Tove. In the vicinity are Castlehill Camp, and Burrough Hill, an artificial mount commanding a view over nine counties. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £231. The church, dedicated to St. James, has a tower and five bells. The parochial charities produce about £64 per annum. There are an endowed and an infant school. The Hon. Colonel H. Hutchinson is lord of the manor.

SULHAM, a par. in the hund. of Theale, co. Berks, 5½ miles N.W. of Reading, its post town, and 2 from Pangbourne railway station. The village is situated on a narrow slip of land extending from the bank of the river Thames to the Kennet. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £159. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has been recently rebuilt. The windows are all of stained glass. There are several marble slabs of the Wilder family. The churchyard is planted with shrubs and evergreens. There is a charity school for both sexes. The principal residence is Sulham House. F. Wilder, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SULHAMPSTEAD-ABBOTS, a par. in the hund. of Reading, co. Berks, 6 miles S.W. of Reading, its post town. The village is situated near a branch of the Great Western railway, and is intersected by the Avon and Kennet navigation. The par. includes the hmlt. of Graizeley. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Sulhampstead-Banister, in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £600, in the patron. of Queen's College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Mary or St. Bartholomew. The parochial charities produce about £25, of which £17 go to a Sunday-school. Sulhampstead House is the principal residence.

SULHAMPSTEAD-BANISTER, a par. in the hund. of Theale, co. Berks, half a mile N.W. of Sulhampstead-Abbots, and 6½ miles S.W. of Reading, its post town. The village is situated on the river Kennet. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Sulhampstead-Abbots, in the dioc. of Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. There is a National school for both sexes.

SULISKER, an uninhabited islet, one of the Hebrides, or Western Islands, Scotland.

SULLANE, a stream of co. Cork, Ireland, rises under the Derrynasaggart mountains, and joins the river Lee.

SULLINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Easwrith, rape of Bramber, co. Sussex, 1 mile S.E. of Storrington, and 5 miles N.W. of Steyning railway station. Hurstpierpoint is its post town. In the southern portion of the parish is a ridge of chalk hills forming part of the South Downs. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £296. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is of ancient date. Sangate Lodge is the principal residence. Sepulchral urns, spear-heads, and short swords, supposed to be Roman, have been found near the barrows on the warren.

SULLY, a par. in the hund. of Dinas Powis, co. Glamorgan, 5 miles S.W. of Cardiff, its post town, and 12 from Cowbridge. The village, which is a sub-port to Cardiff, is situated at the ferry on the Bristol Channel, near Sully Island. Sully was given by Fitzhammon to Sir Robert de Sully, who had a castle here. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £250. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist.

SUMBURGH, a promontory, the most southerly point of the Shetland Islands, Scotland. It is marked by a lighthouse 300 feet above sea-level, put up in 1821.

SUMMERBRIDGE, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Hartwith and par. of Kirkby Malzeard, West Riding co. York, 3 miles W. of Ripley, near the river Nidd.

SUMMERCOTES, a hmlt. in the par. of Alfreton, co. Derby, 2 miles S. of Alfreton, near the Erewash canal.

SUMMERFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Astbury, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 1½ mile N.W. of Congleton.

SUMMERHILL, a small post town in the par. of Laracor, bar. of Lower Moyfenrath, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles S.S.E. of Trim, and 23 from Dublin. It is on the road from Dublin to Trim, and contains a chief police station, and a Presbyterian meeting-house. Summerhill House is now a ruin. Dangan was the seat of the Wellesley family. Petty sessions are held occasionally. Fairs are held on the 30th April, 9th June, 22nd September, and 25th November.

SUMMERHOUSE, a tnshp. in the par. of Gainford, S.W. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 6½ miles N.W. of Darlington.

SUMMER ISLANDS, a group of islets in the cos. of Ross and Cromarty, Scotland. They consist of about 30 in number, and are situated from a quarter of a mile to 7½ miles from the coast, and extend upwards of 7 miles from N. to S. They are all uninhabited, with the exception of Tanera-More, which extends about 2 miles in length by about 1 mile in breadth. Its surface is irregular and rocky, with an altitude of from 400 to 500 feet above sea-level. The other islets are less elevated, but they are all rocky and barren. Some of the larger ones afford good winter pasturage.

SUMMERLEE, a vil. in the par. of Old Monkland, co. Lanark, Scotland, 7 miles E. of Glasgow. Its inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the iron works.

SUMMER'S COVE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Kinsale, co. Cork, Ireland, on the eastern side of Kinsale Harbour.

SUMMER SEAT, a vil. in the tnshp. of Elton, par. of Bury, co. Lancaster, 1 mile N.W. of Bury. It is a station on the East Lancashire and Yorkshire railway.

SUMMERS-TOWN, formerly a hmlt. in the par. of St. Giles, city and co. of Oxford, 2 miles N. of Oxford. It is situated on the river Cherwell, and was made a district parish in 1838, when the church was built.

SUMMERVILLE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Gaultiere, co. Waterford, Ireland. It is a coastguard and fishing station on Tramore Bay. In the vicinity is Summerville Lodge, the seat of Earl Fortescue.

SUNART, a district in the N. div. co. Argyle, Scotland. It extends in length 12 miles, with a breadth of about 6 miles, and is bounded on the N. by Loch Shiel, on the E. by Ardgour, on the S. by Loch Sunart, and on the W. by Ardnamurchan.

SUNBEGIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Orton, co. Westmoreland, 3 miles E. of Orton, on Sunbegin Tarn, famous for its red trout.

SUNBURY, a par. and post town in the hund. of Spelthorne, co. Middlesex, 3 miles from Hampton Court railway station, and 4 W. of Kingston. It is a station on the Thames Valley branch of the London and South-Western railway. It is situated on the banks of the Thames, and near the third lock from London. There are many seats in the neighbourhood. The village is lighted with gas, from works of recent formation. It is a police station of the V division. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as Suneberie, and gave title of viscount to the Montagues. The par. contains the hmlts. of Charlton and Upper Halliford. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of London, val. £336, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower containing a clock and six bells. It has been recently restored. The parochial charities produce about £146 per annum, of which £9 go to a free school. There are National schools for both sexes, also infant schools. The Independents have a chapel. The principal residence is Kempton Park, formerly a royal seat called Chenestone.

SUNDERLAND, a par., seaport, market town, municipal, and parliamentary borough, partly in the eastern div. of Chester ward, but chiefly in the northern div. of Easington ward, co. Durham, 13 miles N.E. of Durham, 12 S.E. of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and 268 N.N.W. of London by road, or 302 by the Great Northern, and

York, Newcastle, and Berwick railways. It has three stations on the North-Eastern railway, and branch lines to the Brandling Junction and Seaham Harbour railways. It is situated on both banks, but chiefly on the right, of the river Wear, at its confluence with the German Ocean. The town and borough comprise, besides the par. of Sunderland, the pars. of Bishopwearmouth and Monkwearmouth, places of importance in the Anglo-Saxon times, and which have already been treated under their separate heads. The parish of Sunderland remained part of Bishopwearmouth till 1719, when it was constituted a distinct parish, and now forms the core of the new borough created by the Reform Act in 1832. The whole of the parish of Sunderland which occupies the point of land at the S. side of the mouth of the Wear is built over, with the exception of about 70 acres, forming the town-moor or common. It is a bonding port and coastguard station, having an extensive trade, chiefly connected with the shipping of coal, which commenced towards the close of the reign of Elizabeth. The main street forms a continuation of the High-street of Bishopwearmouth, and is a broad thoroughfare nearly a mile in length. The other streets are heterogeneous, those in the newer part of the town being well built, whilst those in the older part are densely-populated, narrow alleys. Most of the streets are paved and lighted with gas, and the houses are abundantly supplied with water from the recently-constructed works at Hamilton Hill and Fulwell. The principal public buildings are the Exchange, in the High-street, erected in 1812; the Custom-house, also in the High-street, erected in 1837; the Lyceum Hall, recently erected, with a hall 90 feet by 48 feet, and capable of accommodating 1,800 persons; assembly-rooms, in Upper Sans-street; the Registry Buildings, in the High-street; the Sailors' Home, fronting the town-moor, erected in 1856 at a cost of £4,000; the Central Hall, in John-street, where the county court is held; the post office, in Bridge-street; the mayor's, corporation, and police offices, in West Wear-street; the Theatre Royal, in Bedford-street, opened in 1855; the Lyceum Theatre, in Lambton-street, opened in 1856; the General Market, entered through an arcade in High-street; the barracks, at the end of High-street; the Athenæum, in Monkwearmouth, containing a large hall, lecture theatre, museum, library, and other apartments; also a mechanics' institute, public baths and wash-houses, in the Hendon-road, erected in 1850 at a cost of £3,000; other baths and wash-houses in Halgarth-square and Moorgate-street; the union workhouse, on the road to Hylton; the Sunderland infirmary, eye infirmary, lying-in-hospital, a savings-bank, situated in Wearmouth, three commercial banks, gas and waterworks, and a cast-iron bridge of a single arch, 236 feet span and 100 feet above low water; it was constructed in 1796 by Wilson, but was strengthened and widened in 1858, under the direction of Robert Stephenson; its height above the water is sufficient to allow of ships passing under it by only lowering their top-gallant masts. Above the bridge, on both sides of the river, are extensive staiths for shipping coals, about 35 shipbuilding yards, and spacious docks and quays, the whole extending for nearly five miles from the sea to Hylton. The N. dock covers about ten acres, and was opened in 1837; the S. dock can accommodate above 300 vessels at one time, and was opened in 1850, but the works in connection with it were not completed till 1856, when the whole cost was estimated at over £700,000. These works comprise the great dock, covering 32 acres, part of which was gained from the sea by carrying out groynes or sea-walls for 500 feet into the water; a half-tide basin, covering 18½ acres, and two smaller basins of 4 acres. The depth of water in the great dock is from 20 to 24 feet, and the depth on the bar from 10 to 18 feet water, so that vessels of 300 tons can easily come up. The tidal harbours below cover 20 acres, being formed by a N. pier 1,890 feet, and a S. pier 1,850 feet long, with lighthouses 73 and 32 feet high, which are visible for 13 and 10 miles respectively. In 1841 the N. lighthouse, which is built of stone, was removed bodily from its former place, about 500 yards, under the direction of Murray, the engineer. At the pier is a self-registering tide gauge, by Messrs. Meek and Watson, showing the height of water by day or night; and on the S. pier are the offices of the Wear Commissioners, who have the conservation of the river, for giving information respecting the ingress and egress of vessels, and directing signals. Shipbuilding is carried on to an extent probably greater than at any other port of the empire, between 300 and 400 vessels, of an aggregate of 100,000 tons, being built annually. The largest yards are at Deptford, where many gunboats were built for the Admiralty during the late war with Russia, and where the Holmsdale clipper frigate was built by Messrs. Briggs for the China trade. The coal trade gives employment to a great number of keelmen, who bring the coal down to the staiths in keels or barges to be reshipped, the superior quality being from the Hetton and Lambton mines, but a very serviceable coal is obtained from the Messrs. Pemberton and Co.'s pit, on the Sunderland side of the river, which last is the deepest mine in the world, being 380 fathoms below the surface. There are numerous potteries, rope walks, nail factories, anchor and chain cable works, forges, iron and brass foundries, flint glass works, glass bottle works, at Ayre's Quay, steam saw mills, paper mills, chemical works, tanneries, breweries, and lime kilns, extending for several miles along both banks of the river. Adjoining the town are several populous districts or suburbs, as Deptford, about one mile W. of Sunderland, famous for shipbuilding; Bildon Hill, on the S.W., containing the People's Park, purchased in 1852 for £2,000, where is to be erected the monument to General Sir Henry Havelock, who was born at Ford Hall, in this parish; also Monkwearmouth Pans, Monkwearmouth Shore, Southwick, Roker, Tulwell, and Hylton, on the N. side of the river Wear, nearly opposite to Sunderland. The population of the municipal borough of Sunderland in 1851 was 63,855, and in 1861, 78,211; that of the parliamentary borough, which includes several adjoining townships, was, in 1851, 67,394, and in 1861, 85,797, of which number the parish of Sunderland contained 17,107. It returns two members to parliament, the constituency being about 1,700. In 1634 it received a charter of incorporation from Bishop Morton, of Durham, and under the Municipal Act of 1835, is divided into 7 wards, governed by a mayor, 14 aldermen, and 42 councillors, with the style of "mayor, aldermen, and commonalty of the borough of Sunderland." The municipal revenue is about £5,000, and the revenue of the docks above £40,000. Two weekly newspapers—the Sunderland Herald and Times—are published in the town. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of St. John's annexed, in the dioc. of Durham, val. £370, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church of Sunderland, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, has a tower containing an illuminated clock, sun dial, and peal of eight bells. St. John's Church, or chapel-of-ease to Holy Trinity, was erected in 1769. There are, besides, the parish churches of Monkwearmouth and Bishopswearmouth, as well as several district churches, but these have already been described under their respective parishes. There are in the borough above 30 chapels for the several sects of Protestant Dissenters, besides Scotch and English Presbyterians, Society of Friends, Unitarians, Jews, and Roman Catholics. The Roman Catholic chapel, erected in 1835, was enlarged by the addition of two side chapels in 1852. It contains several painted windows and a stone carving over the high altar. Attached to St. Bede's convent, in Green-street, is also a chapel, erected in 1857. The schools are numerous and well attended, including several endowed schools, parochial, National, British and Foreign, infant, Roman Catholic, industrial, ragged, reformatory, and Sunday-schools in connection with the several churches and chapels; but of these the parochial, or Gray's schools, situated on the town-moor, are the most conspicuous, having been rebuilt in 1857, for the instruction of 300 boys and 260 girls. The local charities produce about £200 per annum, besides several sets of almshouses, the Seamen's Hall, founded in 1750, the Aged Seamen's Asylum, an infirmary, dispensary, and a variety of benevolent institutions. The principal residences in the neighbourhood are Low Barns, of the Pemberton family, and Ettrick Hall. The Duke of Marlborough takes from this place the title of earl. The Sunderland Poor-law Union comprises the municipal borough, together with the townships of Ford, Tulwell, Hylton, Ryhope, and Tunstall. It is also the seat of new County Court and superintendent registry districts. Market day is on Saturday for corn, meat, and provisions of all kinds. Fairs are held in the middle of May and October.

SUNDERLAND, a tnshp. in the par. of Isall, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 6 miles N.E. of Cockermouth, and 1½ mile N.E. of Isall.

SUNDERLAND, a chplry. in the par. of Lancaster, co. Lancaster, 3 miles S.W. of Lancaster. It is situated near Sunderland Point, and has a harbour in the Lune with 12 feet of water, opposite the Glasson basin. It is joined with Overton.

SUNDERLAND BRIDGE, a tnshp. in the pars. of St. Oswald and St. Andrew-Auckland, S.E. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 3 miles S.W. of Durham, between the river Wear and Croxdale Water, over the former of which is a bridge on the Great North road. There are saline and sulphur springs at Butterby.

SUNDERLAND, NORTH, a tnshp. in the par. and ward of Bambrough, co. Northumberland, 8 miles S.E. of Belford, its post town, and 3 S. of Bambrough Castle. It is an extensive village, situated on the E. coast of the North Sea, and has a small port subject to Berwick. The chplry. includes the tnshps. of North Sunderland, Fleetham, Tuggall, Swinhoe, and Elford. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the neighbouring quarries and collieries, and in the burning of lime at the kilns. A lock-up was erected in 1852. The soil is clay and sand, with a subsoil of clay and rock. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. Paul, was built by Lord Crewe's trustees in 1833. There is a National school for both sexes, at which a Sunday-school is also held. The Presbyterians have two chapels. A feast is held on 12th August.

SUNDERLANDWICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Hutton-Cranswick, Bainton-Beacon div. of Harthill wap., East Riding co. York, 2 miles S.W. of Great Driffield, on a branch of the river Hull.

SUNDON, a par. in the hund. of Flitt, co. Bedford, 4 miles from Dunstable, its post town, and 5 N.W. of Luton. The village is situated near the ancient Icknield Street, under the chalk hills. The living is a vic.,* annexed to that of Streatley, in the dioc. of Ely, val. £162. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

SUNDRIDGE, a par. in the hund. of Codsheath, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 4 miles N.W. of Sevenoaks, its post town, and 2½ E. of Westerham. It is situated on the river Darent, under the Weald, and contains the chplry of Idehill. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as Sondresse, and came to the Fremingham and De Lisles, or Isleys, of Sundridge Place, now a farm. On the bank of the Darent is a paper mill. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The Sevenoaks union poorhouse is in the parish. Sundridge gives title of baron to the Duke of Argyle. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £615, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church contains several monuments, and three brasses bearing date from 1429. The register dates from 1562. There is also a district church at Idehill, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £132. The parochial charities produce about £67 per annum, of which £10 go to a school, and £44 are distributed amongst poor cottagers. There are two National schools for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a chapel. Lord Amherst is lord of the manor.

SUNK-ISLAND, an ext. par. place in the S. div. of Holderness wap., East Riding co. York, 5 miles N. of Ottringham, its post town. This island, which has been gradually recovered from the Humber, first appeared above water in 1630, when it was two miles from the opposite shore, and comprised only 800 acres, but now contains above 6,400 acres, and is connected with the shore by a bridge. The soil consists of warp, with a sandy subsoil. Above 4,000 acres are arable, and the remainder meadow and pasture, all in a high state of cultivation. It has a small harbour called Stone Creek. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £250, in the patron. of the Lord Chancellor. The church was erected in 1800, and stands near the centre of the island. There is a school for both sexes, endowed by the crown with an annuity of £25. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

SUNNINGDALE, an ecclesiastical district in the par. of Old Windsor, co. Surrey, 3 miles S.E. of Windsor. It is a station on the Staines and Reading branch of the London and South-Western railway. The village is situated near the Thames, on the Roman way from Staines. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £75, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity.

SUNNINGHILL, a par. in the hund. of Cookham, co. Berks, 6 miles from Windsor, the same from Egham, and 8 N.W. of Chertsey. It is a station on the Staines and Reading branch of the London and South-Western railway. The village is large and scattered, and is situated on the Bath and Reading roads, near Windsor Forest. It had formerly a Benedictine nunnery at Bromhall, founded in the reign of John, and which was given to St. John's College, Cambridge, in 1522. It is the place to which Richard II.'s queen, Isabella, retired. In this parish is Ascot Heath racecourse. At the Wells, also in this parish, is a chalybeate spring, formerly in great repute. A railway has been recently formed from Wokingham to Staines, which passes through this parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £328, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, was rebuilt in 1828. In the churchyard is a yew-tree supposed to have been planted before the Norman conquest. The parochial charities produce about £9. There are a National school for both sexes, and a Sunday-school endowed with an annuity of £40. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The principal residences are Sunninghill Park, Silwood Park, and Titnest.

SUNNINGWELL, a par. in the hund. of Hormer, co. Berks, 3 miles N. of Abingdon, its post town. The village is situated near the Thames. The par. includes the tnshps. of Bayworth and Kennington. The soil consists of clay, sand, and limestone. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £318. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, has monuments to Bishop Jewell and others. There is also a district church at Kennington. The parochial charities produce about £56 per annum, of which £38 go to Schutz school. Sir George Bowyer, Bart., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

SUNNY BANK, a hmlt. in the chplry of Longwood and par. of Huddersfield, West Riding co. York, 2 miles W. of Huddersfield.

SURBITON, a hmlt. in the par. of Kingston-on-Thames, co. Surrey, half a mile S. of Kingston. It is a station on the London and South-Western railway. The village is situated on the Thames, near Surbiton Hill, and contains several villa residences. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £70. The church is dedicated to St. Peter.

SURFLEET, a par. in the wap. of Kirton, parts of Holland, co. Lincoln, 4 miles N. of Spalding. It is a station on the Great Northern railway. The parish is intersected by the Grand Sluice, which conveys the waters of the fen to Boston, and by a branch of the river Welland. The par. includes Risegate, and a heronry at Cressy Hall. The living is a perpet cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £65. The church is dedicated to St. Lawrence. The parochial charities produce about £130 per annum, of which £38 go to Lady Frazer's school, and £82 in the produce of poor's land.

SURLINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Henstead, co. Norfolk, 5 miles S.E. of Norwich, its post town, and 1½ mile from Postwick. The village is situated at the ferry on the navigable river Yare. The living is a vic.* with the perpet. cur. of St. Saviour's annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £120, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was thoroughly restored in 1840. The register dates from Elizabeth's time. There are also the ruins of a more ancient church, dedicated to St. Saviour. The parochial charities produce about £63 per annum. There is an endowed parochial school.

SURNANT, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanwnog, co. Montgomery, 5 miles W. of Newtown.

SURRENDELL, or SURRENDRAL, a tythg. in the par. of Hullavington, hund. of Chippenham, co. Wilts, 5½ miles S.W. of Malmesbury, near the ancient Ackman Street.

SURREY, a metropolitan and inland county of England, but having communication with the sea by means of the river Thames, which separates it from Middlesex on the N. On the other sides it is bounded by Kent on the E., Sussex on the S., Hampshire on the W., and Berkshire on the N.W. It lies between 51° 4′ and 51° 30′ N. lat., and between 0° 3′ and 0° 51′ W. long. Its figure is nearly oblong, being 39 miles from E. to W. from the Kentish border, near Westerham, to the Hampshire border, near Farnham, and its breadth 26 miles from N. to S., from the bank of the Thames, at Blackfriars-bridge, London, to the Sussex border, near Crawley. It comprises an area of 758 square miles, or 485,120 acres, of which about 400,000 are arable, meadow, market gardens, and orchards, and the remainder heath, moorland, and unimprovable waste. Its population in 1851 was 683,082, and in 1861, 830,685, of whom about 400,000 are in the metropolitan boroughs of Southwark and Lambeth. Its county towns are Croydon, Guildford, and Kingston. Its circuit is about 146 miles, of which the Thames traces 45, and is navigable throughout for small craft, and up to London-bridge for seaborne vessels, where it forms the Pool or Harbour of London, the most important port in the world. This river first touches the county at Egham, near its northwestern extremity, whence it flows S.E. by Chertsey, and receiving the tributary waters of the Wey, takes an irregular north-easterly direction to Kew, passing by the town of Kingston and the village of Thames Ditton, to the village of Petersham and Richmond. From Kew it pursues an easterly course, by Mortlake, Barnes, Putney, Wandsworth, and Battersea, then, forming Chelsea Reach, it pours its stream through the arches of the numerous bridges which connect London and Westminster with the boroughs of Southwark and Lambeth and the southern suburbs of the metropolis. Those of its tributaries which belong to Surrey are the Bourne Brook, with its head streams from Bagshot and Virginia Water; the Wey, from Hampshire, which becomes navigable at Guildford for 18 miles; the Mole, from Sussex, which, during seasons of drought, in the neighbourhood of Dorking, leaves its channel dry, and for several miles pursues a subterraneous course; the Wandle, a trout stream, and remarkable for the number of water mills along its banks; the Hogg's-Mill and the Putney Brook, besides several small streams not belonging to the Thames basin; these fall into the Arun and Medway.—At the time of the Roman invasion Surrey was inhabited by the Belgic tribes, Bibroci and Remi, and subsequently was included in the Roman province of Britannia Prima. Though no station is mentioned by Antonine as being within its boundaries, there are traces of several Roman roads, including Ermine Street, which went from St. George's Fields, at London, to Croydon and Godstone; Stane Street, which went by Streatham; and other roads leading to Cæsar's camps, as they are called, at Walton-on-Thames and Farnham. Upon the settlement of the Saxons in England this county was peopled by the same tribes as Middlesex, and the names of many of the villages and hamlets are the same in both counties. It then became part of the Suth-Seaxna-rice, founded by Ella in 478. In the 9th century it was much ravaged by the Danes, who were eventually defeated by Alfred at Farnham in 894. After the Norman conquest this principality was granted to William de Warren, as Earl of Surrey. At this period a large part of the county, comprising the whole of the Weald and other extensive districts, was still covered with wood, which induced Henry II. to annex it as a royal demesne to the Forest of Windsor. The whole of the county, with the exception of Guildford Park, and the bailiwick of 14 parishes round Windsor, was disafforested during the reign of Henry III. Several attempts were made to extend Windsor Forest again into the county by the Edwards, and even so late as the time of Charles I. The royal palace at Shene, now Richmond, was a favourite residence of many of the early kings, and Ann of Bohemia, queen of Richard II., Edward III., Henry VII., and Queen Elizabeth, all died here. In the civil war of Charles I. the shire was devoted to the parliamentary cause, and formed one of the associated counties, though Farnham Castle, and a few other strong positions were held by the royalists till after the battle of Edge Hill.—A range of chalk hills, called the Hog's Back, runs from E. to W. across the county past Seale, Guildford, Dorking, Banstead Downs, and Botley Hill, near Croydon, where an elevation of 880 feet above sea-level is obtained. To the S. of this range is another line of hills, composed chiefly of upper and lower green sandstone, some of which are even more lofty than those of the chalk formation, attaining an elevation of 923 feet at Hind Head Common, where occurs the hollow called the Devil's Punch-bowl, and 993 feet at Leith Hill, the highest point in the county. S. of this range stretches the plain known as the Weald, 30 miles in length by 4 in breadth, and joining the Wealds of Sussex and Kent, which anciently formed one vast forest. The northern part of the county, from the Thames to the chalk ridge above mentioned, is entirely composed of the London and plastic clays, but along the banks of the river, these are often overlaid by rich alluvial soil, thrown down at a comparatively recent geological period by the waters of the Thames, which once formed a broad estuary with extensive marshes on either bank.—The soil is various in different parts of the county, according to the character of the underlying strata, and the elevation of the land above the sea, but may be classed into plastic and alluvial clays, calcareous earth, barren sandy heaths, and rich vegetable loam. The loamy soils excel in the production of barley, peas, and root crops, and are largely appropriated for market gardens and orchards, which frequently produce five successive crops during the year. On these lands vast quantities of carrots, parsnips, asparagus, cabbages, and all sorts of esculent vegetables are grown for the London markets; also peppermint, lavender, roses, poppies, liquorice, camomile, wormwood, and other aromatic drugs, chiefly in the neighbourhood of Mitcham and Tooting. On the clay lands wheat and beans are extensively grown, and on the calcareous soils near the Downs, red and white clover and sanfoin for hay, intermixed with barley, also above 1,200 acres of hop plantations, chiefly in the vicinity of Farnham, esteemed some of the most productive in England. In the Weald geese are reared. A good deal of coppice wood and timber is planted, consisting of ash, chesnut, alder, willow, and osier, and on Box Hill are some of the finest box trees in England. Along the western border of the county, and near its centre, are many tracts of barren common and moorland extending over more than 100 square miles, especially at Bagshot, Bisley, Chobham, Clandon, Epsom, Esher, Farnham, Frensham, Ockham, Pirbright, Thursley, Wimbledon, and Woking. Some of the wells are from 200 to 300 feet deep, owing to the porous nature of the soil, and mineral springs are met with at Cobham, Dorking, Dulwich, Epsom, Godstone, Kingston, Streatham, and Stoke. Iron occurs in the Wealden clay, and in the green sandstone, which was formerly smelted while timber was abundant, but is now neglected, owing to the expense of fuel; brick earth is dug between Red Hill and Horley; fire-clay at Merstham, Godstone, Nonsuch, and other places; fuller's earth at Bletchingley, Croydon, Reigate, and Sutton; and chalk and limestone at various points along the Hog's Back.—The chief seats of industry are in the neighbourhood of the metropolis, and along the rivers Wandle and Mole, which turn upwards of 100 mills, chiefly employed in the manufacture of paper, snuff, oil, flour, sheet iron, copper, and in calico bleaching and printing. Woollen goods and hosiery are made at Godalming and Wandsworth, coarse linens at Farnham, gunpowder at Malden and Ewell, leather, hats, parchment, &c., at Bermondsey, pottery at Battersea and Waterloo, stoneware at Mortlake, and extensive paper mills belonging to Mr. McMurray at Wandsworth; also silk, glass, iron, bricks, cement, &c., employ many hands.—The county is intersected by several main lines of road leading from the metropolis to the S.E., S., and S.W. coasts. The canals are the Grand Surrey, the Wey and Arun, and the Basingstoke, the Croydon having been converted into the railway. Several main lines of railway traverse the county, as the London, Brighton, and South Coast, with a branch to Epsom and Wimbledon; the London and South-Eastern; the London and South-Western, with branches to Richmond, Leatherhead, Windsor, Chertsey, Guildford, Godalming, and Farnham; the London, Chatham, and Dover; the West London Extension; the Wimbledon and Croydon; and the West End of London and Crystal Palace.—The county comprehends, besides the metropolitan boroughs of Southwark and Lambeth, which each return two members to Parliament, the parliamentary boroughs of Guildford and Reigate, the former returning two members and the latter one, the now disfranchised boroughs of Haslemere, Bletchingley, and Gatton; the market towns of Chertsey, Croydon, Dorking, Epsom, Farnham, Godalming, and Kingston-on-Thames; the suburban districts, or towns, of Battersea, Bermondsey, Brixton, Camberwell, Clapham, Dulwich, Kennington, Newington, Norwood, Peckham, Putney, Rotherhithe, Streatham, Tooting, Walworth, and Wandsworth; and the remoter but extensive villages of Barnes, Beddington, Carshalton, Egham, Esher, Ewell, Kew, Leatherhead, Merton, Mitcham, Mortlake, Richmond, Walton-on-Thames, and Wimbledon, besides 450 smaller villages and hamlets. By the Reform Act the county was divided into eastern and western Surrey, each returning two members, so that there are now 11 members returned for the whole county instead of 14, as before the passing of that Act. East Surrey, of which Croydon is the capital, includes the boroughs of Lambeth and Southwark, the hunds. of Brixton, Kingston, Reigate, Tunbridge, and Wallington. West Surrey, of which Guildford is the capital, consists of the hundreds of Blackheath, Copthorne, Effingham, Elmbridge, Farnham, Godalming, Godley, Woking, and Wotton. The whole county is governed by a lord lieutenant and custos rotulorum, assisted by a high sheriff, 90 deputy-lieutenants, and about 410 magistrates. It is included in the Home circuit, except the boroughs of Lambeth and Southwark, with a district of 10 miles round St. Paul's cathedral, which are under the Central Criminal Court. The Spring assizes are held at Kingston, and the Summer assizes alternately at Croydon and Guildford; the sessions at Guildford, Kingston, Newington, and Reigate. There are five county prisons, including the Queen's Bench in Southwark, Horsemonger-lane gaol at Newington, the Kingston and Croydon gaols, and one recently erected on Wandsworth Common; also the county lunatic asylum at Garrett, near Wandsworth. The county constitutes the archdeaconry of Surrey, in the diocese of Winchester and province of Canterbury, but a small portion is included within the diocese of London. There are 21 poor-law unions, and 199 parishes, of which 143 are ancient, besides ecclesiastical districts, and several extra-parochial places. There were before the Reformation about 30 religious houses of all kinds, but of these only a few traces are now remaining, the principal being the church of St. Mary Overy, in Southwark, the ruins of Waverley Abbey, near Farnham, covering above three acres, and the remains of the church of Newark Priory. The other ancient camps, castles, and churches are described under the places or parishes where they are situated.

SUSSEX, a southern maritime county of England, bounded on the S. by the English Channel, on the E. by Kent, on the W. by Hampshire, and on the N. by Surrey. It is of an oblong form in the direction of the sea-shore, being about 75 miles in length from E. to W., and 27 miles in extreme breadth from N. to S., from Tunbridge Wells to Beachey Head, but its average breadth does not exceed 20 miles. Its circuit is about 185 miles, including 85 miles of coast-line, part of which towards the W. is much indented by inlets of the sea. The area of the county is 1,466 square miles, or about 938,251 acres, of which about 425,000 are in the Weald, 150,000 woodland in other parts, 100,000 downs, 30,000 rich marsh pasture, and 70,000 sandy waste. It lies directly S. of the meridian of Greenwich, between 0° 40′ E. and 0° 58′ W. long., and between 50° 43′ and 51° 9′ N. lat. In its physical features, and in its early history it closely resembles Surrey, except that, being a maritime county, it was selected by the Romans for the site of several stations, as Regnum, now Chichester; Mutuantonis, probably Lewes; and Anderida, either Pevensey, Eastbourne, or Seaford, besides several smaller and intermediate stations, of which the principal were Ad Decimum, believed to be Bignor; Portus Adurni, probably Aldrington; Mida, now Midhurst; and Anderesio, now Amberley. There are besides traces of numerous camps and forts situated on the line of the two main roads, Stane Street and Ermine Street, which entered the county from Surrey, another road following the line of the coast and the downs from Pevensey to Porchester. It was reduced by Flavius Vespasianus in A.D. 47, and annexed to the Roman province Britannia Prima. In the middle of the 5th century it was conquered and planted by the Saxons, who, however, were not strong enough to take Anderida till 491, when, being joined by reinforcements from the Continent, they founded the Suth-Seaxna-rice, or kingdom of the South Saxons, and made Regnum, which they named Chichester, from Cissa, a son of Ella, their capital. Sussex afterwards succumbed to the power of the West Saxons, and for nearly two centuries was under the rule of military governors, or eorls, till Egbert assumed the sovereignty of England. In the 9th and 10th centuries it suffered much from the ravages of the Danes and Northmen; and in the reign of Edward the Confessor was ravaged by Earl Godwin. William the Conqueror is said to have landed at the mouth of the little river Asten, in Pevensey Bay, on the 28th of September, 1066, and sixteen days afterwards fought the decisive battle of Hastings at a spot about nine miles distant, then called Epiton, or Hetheland, but since Battle, where he afterwards built Battle Abbey in commemoration of his victory. The vast estates of the Godwin family, having been confiscated upon the death of Harold, were distributed by the conqueror amongst his followers—to William d'Eu he gave the rape of Hastings, with its five hundreds; to William de Warenne, the rape of Lewes, with its twelve hundreds; the Earl of Mortaigne, Pevensey, with its nineteen hundreds; to William de Braose, Bramber, with its eleven hundreds; and to Roger de Montgomery, the rapes of Arundel and Chichester, the former comprising five hundreds, and the latter eight hundreds. The proprietors of these estates either occupied the old Saxon castle within the rape, or built a new feudal stronghold. Chichester alone had no castle, as it formed part of the honour of Arundel, and with the earldom of Surrey has descended in succession from its original proprietor, through the Plantagenets and the Fitzalans, to its present possessor, the Duke of Norfolk. In the reign of Henry III. the battle of Lewes was fought at a spot near Plumton Plain, still called Mount Harry. During the middle ages, till the reign of Henry VIII., the whole of the Sussex coast was exposed to the descents of the French and Spaniards, who on several occasions burnt Seaford, Rye, Winchelsea, and Brighthelmstone or Brighton, then only a small fishing village. In the civil war of Charles I. the inhabitants generally sided with the parliament, and the castles of Amberley, Arundel, and Bodiham, and the city of Chichester being garrisoned for the king, were besieged and taken by the parliamentary forces.—The inhabitants of the inland parts are principally engaged in agriculture, and are mostly of Saxon descent, being remarkable for their flaxen hair, blue eyes, and English features. Owing chiefly to the mildness of the climate, several large towns have sprung up on the sea-coast, to which all classes repair for health and relaxation, as Brighton, Bognor, Eastbourne, Hastings, Hove, St. Leonard's, and Worthing. These watering places at present constitute the wealth of the county. The harbours are small, and have little depth of water; the principal are Chichester, Havent, Pagham, and Shoreham, with the ports of Rye, Winchelsea, and Hastings, belonging to the ancient Cinque Ports, besides Brighton, Bognor, Cuckmere, Littlehampton, or Arundel Harbour, Newhaven, Seaford, where is the last martello tower, numbered 74, and Worthing. Other points of interest along the coast are Romney Marsh, Fairlight Down, where the chalk cliff rises 599 feet, and contains fossil bones of saurians intermixed with plants and fresh-water shells; Langley Point, where the Wealden clay ends; Beachey Head, with its lighthouse, 565 feet above the sea, off which the combined English and Dutch fleets sustained a defeat in 1690; the Park shoals outside Pagham Harbour; Selsey Bill, with the Mixon, Boulder, and other shoals in front, and the Owers lighthouse outside; and Thomey Island, near Chichester harbour.—The most characteristic feature in the surface of Sussex is the broad ridge of chalk hills called the South Downs, which traverses the county in a direction nearly E. by S. for about 26 miles, and at various points attains a considerable elevation, as at Chanctonbury Ring, near Wistow, which is 814 feet above sea-level; the Devil's Dyke, 685 feet, commanding a prospect over the Weald; Firle Beacon, 820 feet, being the loftiest summit, and Beachey Head, 564 feet, where the ridge ends in a precipitous cliff. To the N. of this range another ridge of hills rises, composed principally of greensand, the loftiest peak being Ditchelling Beacon, 858 feet above the sea. Beyond there is a third range of hills, called the Forest Ridge, the principal summits of which are at Crowborough, 804 feet, Brightling, 646 feet, and Fairlight Down, near Hastings, 600 feet. The surface of the Downs is undulating, and covered with a short and delicate turf, largely intermixed with thyme and occasionally overgrown with patches of furze or whitethorn, but entirely denuded of wood. This district is somewhat bleak, and is chiefly occupied by sheep-walks. The maritime district lying between the Downs and the sea occupies the south-western corner of the county, extending from Brighton westward to Emsworth, about 35 miles. This district, which belongs to the Isle of Wight formation, is fertile, and its temperature mild. On the N. side of the Downs is an elevated, but comparatively level tract, occupying the whole centre of the county, and denominated the Weald of Sussex, from its having originally formed part of the great forest called by the Britons Coit Andred, and by the Saxons Andredes-Weald, which included the wealds of Surrey and Kent. This district comprises about 420,000 acres, and is now generally under cultivation, the woods having been gradually cleared. Adjoining the Weald are the forests of St. Leonard's and Ashdown, together covering about 28,000 acres, and situated in the north-eastern division of the county, called the Forest Ridge. Along the eastern border, towards Kent, are extensive hop-plantations, occupying nearly 10,000 acres. In the S.E. near Pevensey, are extensive salt marshes, forming a continuation of the low grounds of Romney Marsh, in Kent, and along the banks of all the rivers are water-meadows, much esteemed for fattening cattle. The principal minerals are Sussex marble, quarried at Petworth, fuller's-earth at Tillington, red ochre at Graffham and Chidham, besides freestone, limestone, chalk, flint, firestone, marl, and brick and tile earth. Iron was formerly smelted from the greensand and Wealden ironstones.—The rivers are only considerable streams flowing down from the northern border of the shire, or from Surrey. The principal are the Arun, which, receiving the tributary waters of the Western Rother and Western Arun, becomes navigable for vessels at Arundel Bridge; the Glynd, which becomes navigable for barges at Lindfield, and falls into the sea at Newhaven, where it forms a small harbour; the Rother, anciently called Limene, which, receiving the waters of many tributary streams, becomes navigable above Newenden, and finally expands into the estuary of Rye; the Adur, which is navigable from Shoreham harbour to Shermanbury; the Cuckmere, navigable to Longbridge; the Lavant, which, after nearly encircling Chichester, expands into the estuary of Chichester harbour. There are besides the Medway, which, rising at Turner's Hill, in the N. part of the county, flows eastward to the borders of Kent; the Ashbourne, which falls into the sea at Pevensey Bay; the Asten, which runs through the battle-field of Hastings. These streams are much frequented by anglers. "This county," says Izaak Walton, "can boast of several fish—a Selsea cockle, a Chichester lobster, an Arundel mullet, and an Amberley trout." The canals are the Grand Military canal, formed at the time of the threatened invasion by Napoleon, extending through the eastern part of the county, nearly parallel with the sea-coast for 23 miles, from Cliffe End, near Kent, in Sussex, to Shornecliffe, in Kent. The other canals are the Arun and Wey Junction, communicating with the Thames; the Arun and Portsmouth, communicating with Chichester harbour and Havant; and the West Rother, with Midhurst and Petworth.—The lines of railway are the London, Brighton, and South-Coast, which enters the county at Crawley, and runs due S. to Brighton, throwing off branches at the Three Bridges to East Grinstead and Horsham, from which latter place the line forks to Petworth and Shoreham; other branches leave the main line at Hayward's Heath, the western one communicating by Worthing and Chichester with Portsmouth, and the eastern branch proceeding to Lewes, where it forks to Uckfield and Hastings, at which latter place a branch of the South-eastern joins, thus forming a continuous line of communication along the coast, from Kent in the W. to Dorsetshire in the E. The South-Eastern also has a branch to Rye. The roads, which are numerous and well kept, usually follow the line of the coast, or converge in the direction of the metropolis.—The county is co-extensive with the diocese of Chichester, in the province of Canterbury, and is divided into the archdeaconries of Chichester and Lewes. The total number of parishes is 317, of which Horsham is the largest, besides parts of 4 others, and 5 extra-parochial places. For civil and political purposes the county is divided into East and West Sussex, each division returning two members to parliament; the East division comprises the rapes of Hastings, Lewes, and Pevensey; and the West, the rapes of Arundel, Bramber, and Chichester, which are again subdivided into hundreds. It contains the city and port of Chichester, which has separate jurisdiction, but is regarded as the capital of the shire, the cinque ports of Hastings, Rye, Winchelsea, and Seaford, which have also separate jurisdictions, the first two being also parliamentary boroughs; the other boroughs are Lewes, Brighton, New Shoreham, Horsham, Arundel, and Midhurst, the three first returning two and the three last one member each. The ancient boroughs of Bramber, East Grinstead, Seaford, Steyning, and Winchelsea, were disfranchised by the Reform Act. There are besides 17 market towns, and about 400 villages and hamlets. Lewes is the assize town, and the place where the quarter sessions and elections are held for East Sussex. Chichester is the place of election for West Sussex, and where the quarter sessions are held alternately with Petworth and Horsham. The county belongs to the Home circuit and military district, and is governed by a lord-lieutenant, custos rotulorum, sheriff, and about 90 deputy-lieutenants, assisted by about 380 magistrates.—Among the principal seats are Arundel Castle, of the Duke of Norfolk; Goodwood, of the Duke of Richmond; Bayham Abbey, of the Marquis of Camden; Ashburnham House, of the Earl of Ashburnham; Arran Lodge, of the Earl of Arran; Buckhurst, of the Earl Delawarr; Buxted, of the Earl of Liverpool; Eridge, of the Earl of Abergavenny; Lavington, of the Earl of Strafford; Sheffield Park, of the Earl of Sheffield; Slinden, of the Earl of Newburgh; Stanmer, of the Earl of Chichester; Firle, of Viscount Gage; Chichester Palace, of the Bishop of Chichester; Woollavington, of Bishop Wilberforce; Kidbrook, of Lord Colchester; Parham Park, of the Baroness de la Zouch, besides numerous mansions belonging to the resident gentry and merchants. There are numerous remains of ancient forts, camps, barrows, castles, and religious houses, including Chichester Cathedral, the ruins of Amberley, Bramber, Pevensey, Eridge, Mayfield, Hastings, Epres, Winchelsea, Bodiham, and Hurstmonceaux castles, the priory ruins of Battle, Bayham, Lewes, Michelham, Robertsbridge, Shelbred, and others, which are more fully described under the places and parishes in which they are situated.

SUSTEAD, a par. in the hund. of North Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 4 miles S.W. of Cromer. Norwich is its post town. The village is situated on a branch of the river Bure. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £34. The church is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul. The register dates from 1689.

SUSWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Scotter, co. Lincoln, 8 miles N.E. of Gainsborough.

SUTCOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Black Torrington, co. Devon, 6 miles N. of Holsworthy, its post town. The village is situated on the river Waldon. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £300. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. The parochial charities produce about £38 per annum, being the endowment of Sir W. Morice's almshouse.

SUTGROVE, a hmlt. in the par. of Miserden, co. Gloucester, 7 miles N.W. of Cirencester.

SUTHERLAND, a seaside co. of Scotland, and one of the most northerly sections of the Highlands. It includes the districts of Assynt, Durness, Sutherland, Eddrachillis, and Strathnaver, formerly a county of itself. Its form presents five sides, three of which are described by the Dornoch Frith on the S.E., the North Sea on the N., and the Atlantic on the W., while on the E. it is separated by a range of mountains from Caithnesshire, and on the remaining side to the S.W. it adjoins the cos. of Ross and Cromarty. In the early times it appears to have been inhabited by the Pictish tribes, Carnonacæ, Logi, and Mertæ, and was included in the Roman province of Vespasiana. It was subsequently overrun by the Northmen, who gave it its present name, meaning "the Southern Land" of the Orkney Northmen. In the 12th century it was made a thanedom or earldom by David I., who gave it, with other possessions, to Hugh Freskin and his sons, who had crossed over from Flanders. It is now a dukedom in the family of Gower, Marquis of Stafford, who are heritors of the greater portion of this territory. The county lies between 57° 48′ and 58° 38′ N. lat., and between 3° 40′ and 5° 20′ W. long. Its length from Cape Wrath in the S.E. to Brora is 56 miles, and its greatest breadth from N. to S. 51 miles, but the average does not exceed 32 miles. Its area is 1,886 square miles, or 1,207,183 statute acres, deducting about 32,000 for salt-water lochs, but not above 70,000 acres are under cultivation. Its circuit is a little above 220 miles, of which 152 are sea-coast, exclusive of bays and indentations. The northern and western coasts are bold and rocky, deeply indented by inlets of the sea and bays, alternated with headlands, promontories, and cliffs. Among the principal points on the coast are Port Skerry, Strathy Bay (known to the Romans as Straba Flumina), Armidale Head, Farr and Torrisdale bays, Comb and Rona islands, lying off Kyle or Tongue Bay, Whiten Head, near Loch Eribol, Farout Head, near Kyle-of-Durness, and the Stack rocks, one of which forms a peak 230 feet high; at the north-western corner of the county, where the Atlantic and North Sea join, rises Cape Wrath, composed of cliffs 600 feet high, and worn into numerous caverns by the action of the waves. Beyond this point, on the coast of the Atlantic, are Sandwood Bay, Chonnie and Handa islands, with lochs Inchard and Laxford; Eddrachyllis, in Badwell Bay; Kyle; Skee, containing numerous islets; Clashnessie Bay; and Loch Inver, in Assynt. On the E. side of the county, where the coasts are low and sandy, skirting the Frith of Dornoch, the principal points are Meikle Ferry, at the mouth of the river Oikel; Little Ferry, over Loch Fleet; the port of Golspie, near Dunrobin Castle; Brora, Portgower, and Helmsdale, where the cliffs rise towards the Ord of Caithness. Along the W. and N. coasts are several small islands belonging to the county, the largest being Oldany, Calva, and Handa, which are inhabited; also the Stack and Skerries islands, and several islets, as Hoan, Roan, Rabbit, and Holy Island, close to the coast. The interior of the county consists almost entirely of mountains, moors, glens, lakes, and morasses, except a narrow strip of land on the E. coast, which is level, and sheltered from the N. by a ridge of mountains from 300 to 800 feet high. Among these mountain ranges, one of great altitude runs nearly parallel with the shores of the North Sea and Atlantic, separating the hills and valleys of the S. from the wild regions of the W. and N. The highest peaks of this range are, Ben More, which attains an elevation of 3,231 feet above the sea-level; Ben Hee, 2,859 feet; and Ben Spenue or Spinnue, 2,566 feet. The great barrier which for centuries had retarded the progress of material improvement was the difficulty of communication, owing to the dangerous narrow firths to be crossed, and the total want of roads. These difficulties were at length overcome towards the close of the last century through the exertions of the dukes of Sutherland, assisted by Parliament, which advanced a moiety of the expense to be incurred for certain roads and bridges in the Highlands. Under these auspices vast improvements have been carried out, and there are now about 400 miles of road well laid out, connected by numerous bridges spanning the mountain streams, which flow through narrow straths, to which they give name, as the Cassley and Tyvie, tributaries of the Oikel, the Evlix, Fleet, Brora, and Helmsdale, falling into the Dornoch Frith, and the Halladale, Strathy, Naver, Borgie, More, and Gradie into the North Sea, all of which are salmon and trout streams. The lakes, which are numerous, are mostly situated in the middle and western parts of the county. The more important are, the Shin, which is 18 miles long, being the largest in extent; the Naver, the Hope, the More, the Assynt, the Laoghal or Loyal, the Brora, the Merkland, the Maddie, the Nacarr or Nacnan, the Borley, and the Sandwood, besides numerous others, all abounding in fish, including the red-bellied trout, found in Loch Borley. The fisheries on the coast are chiefly of cod, ling, mackerel, lobsters, and herrings, of which last from 30,000 to 40,000 barrels are annually exported. The interior uplands and some of the valleys are divided into extensive sheepwalks, which are well stocked. The arable farms are mostly confined to the E. coast. The soil is generally sandy, and turnips and potatoes are produced in abundance, with good crops of barley and oats, but little wheat and rye are grown. In the mountainous districts, especially in the neighbourhood of Eddrachyllis, game is abundant.—The prevailing rocks of the interior of the county, and a considerable portion of the W. coast, are gneiss and mica slate, with Old Red sandstone, conglomerate, and quartz at Cape Wrath, Ben Stomie, and Ru Storr, and limestone in Durness and Assynt, and near Brora, at which last place it occurs in juxtaposition with

New Red sandstone and jet coal. On the E. coast the high hills of Golspie are of old conglomerate, with oolitic sandstone, limestone, and coal, occupying the lower districts; towards the confines of Caithness granite is met with; and the high hills of Loth are composed of porphyritic granite of different colours—yellow, brown, and grey. Veins of quartz, of calcareous spar, of tremolite, and traces of bog-iron and manganese are found in various parts, also coal. There are no manufactures of any importance in the county, and only a small proportion of the population are employed in trade.—The old valued rent was £2,266, but the assessment for property-tax in 1861 was £53,790. The population in 1851 was 25,793, and in 1861, 25,246, being 272 less than in 1831, when it was 25,518. The county is divided into 13 parishes, 10 of which belong to the Duke of Sutherland, who has also considerable properties in the remaining three. The only town is Dornoch, a royal and parliamentary burgh, and capital of the county, where the sheriffs' and sessions courts are held. The villages are, Bettyhill, Golspie, Helmsdale, Kirkiboll, Lairg, Melvich, Scourie, Tongue, and Portgower, besides about 35 hamlets. The county returns one member to parliament, the constituency in 1860 being 313, and Dornoch joins with Wick, Cromarty, Dingwall, Kirkwall, and Tain, in returning one member. The government is administered by a lord-lieutenant, vice-lieutenant, 20 deputy-lieutenants, a sheriff, and sheriff-substitute. It anciently formed part of the see of Caithness, the bishop's palace and the cathedral of the diocese being at Dornoch, but now belongs to the presbyteries of Dornoch, Tongue, and Caithness, in the synod of Sutherland. There are 16 congregations of the Establishment, and 17 of the Free church. Among the antiquities may be mentioned the Druidical stones at Clacktoll; upright stones, tumuli, and pillars at Criech, Golspie, and other points on the E. coast; Pictish forts at Ru Storr, Craigbarr, Rogart, Bonfrectan, Farr, and Helmsdale; Danish forts at Loth; and foundations and ruins of old towers and strongholds at Ardvraick, where the M'Leods had a castle; at Criech, the stronghold of the Rosses; Big-house, of the Mackays; Dun Reay, of Lord Reay; also at Borve, Dunrobin, Helmsdale, Skilbo, and Tongue; and the episcopal palace at Dornoch, which last is still used for county purposes.

SUTON, a div. in the par. of Wymondham, hund. of Forehoe, co. Norfolk, near Wymondham.

SUTTERBY, a par. in the Wold div. of Candleshoe wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5 miles N.W. of Spilsby, its post town, and 6½ W. of Willoughby. In the vicinity are numerous barrows. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £125. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist.

SUTTERTON, a par. in the wap. of Kirton, parts of Holland, co. Lincoln, 6 miles S.W. of Boston, and half a mile from the Algarkirk and Sutterton station on the Great Northern railway. The par., which is extensive, includes the hmlts. of Shugs Hill and Dowdike. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £1,043, in the patron. of the crown. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £166 per annum. The Wesleyans, Baptists, and Free Methodists have chapels.

SUTTON, a par. in the hund. of Biggleswade, co. Bedford, 1½ mile S. of Potton, its post town. It was a seat of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, and is said to have been given by him to Sir Roger Burgoyne by a curious deed in doggerel verse, preserved among the records in Doctors' Commons. There is a chalybeate spring. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £362, in the patron. of St. John's College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains a brass of T. Burgoyne, bearing date 1516. The parochial charities are Burgoyne's annuity of £30 for repairs of the church, &c. There are charity and Sunday schools. It was in this parish that Bishop Stillingfleet, while rector, wrote his "Origines Sacræ." In Sutton Park is the site of an old seat, called John of Gaunt's Mount. Sir J. M. Burgoyne is lord of the manor.

SUTTON, a par. in the hund. of South Witchford, Isle of Ely, co. Cambridge, 6 miles S.W. of Ely, its post town, and 1½ mile from Mepal. It is the terminus of the Ely and Sutton branch of the Great Eastern railway. The village, which is extensive, is situated on an eminence, and had anciently a market and fair. Saxon coins, and other relics of antiquity, were discovered here in 1634. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £1,200, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, contains a double piscina, stone font, &c. It was built by Bishop Barnet, who died in 1373. The register dates from 1700. There is a free school supported by the Dean and Chapter of Ely. The Wesleyans and Baptists have chapels.

SUTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Prestbury, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 3 miles N. of Macclesfield.

SUTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Runcorn, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 2 miles N.E. of Frodsham, near the river Weaver.

SUTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Middlewich, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 1 mile S. of Middlewich, on the river Wenlock.

SUTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Holt, hund. of Bromfield, co. Denbigh, 5 miles E. of Wrexham, on the river Dee.

SUTTON, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of South Milton, co. Devon, 3 miles S.W. of Kingsbridge.

SUTTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Gussage St. Michael, co. Dorset, 5 miles S.W. of Cranborne.

SUTTON, a par. in the hund. of Rochford, co. Essex, 1 mile S.E. of Rochford, its post town, and 3 miles N. of Southend railway station. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £254. The church is ancient. Mrs. Aitkin is lady of the manor.

SUTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Prestcot, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 3 miles N.E. of Prescot, its post town, and 1½ mile S.E. of St. Helen's. It is a station on the St. Helen's Junction railway. It is a considerable village, situated near the Sutton incline on the Liverpool and Manchester railway. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the collieries, limestone quarries, glass works, and in the manufacture of watch movements and earthenware. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £560, in the patron. of King's College, Cambridge. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum.

SUTTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Beckingham, wap. of Loveden, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 10 miles N.W. of Grantham, near the river Witham.

SUTTON, a par. in the hund. of Happing, co. Norfolk, 10 miles S.E. of North Walsham, and 1 mile S.E. of Stalham. Coltishall is its post town. The village is situated near the river Ant, and there is a broad or lake on which is a staith. Brewing is carried on to some extent. Nearly a third of the parish is in water and marsh. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £292. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure, much dilapidated. The register dates from 1576. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum, besides 80 acres of land allotted to purchase fuel for the poor. The Earl of Abergavenny is lord of the manor.

SUTTON, a chplry. in the par. of Castor and lib. of Peterborough, co. Northampton, 6 miles W. of Peterborough, its post town, 1 mile E. of Wansford, and 1 from Castor. The village is situated on the Northampton railway and the river Nen. There is a large stone quarry. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Peterborough, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum.

SUTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Sutton-cum-Lound, Hatfield div. of Bassetlaw wap., co. Nottingham.

SUTTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Granby, co. Nottingham, 3 miles S.E. of Bingham.

SUTTON, or THE DEANS, a vil. in the par. of Heston, hund. of Isleworth, co. Middlesex, 3 miles W. of Brentford. It forms a prebend in St. Paul's Cathedral. Sutton Court was once the residence of Mary Countess Falconberg, Cromwell's third daughter. In the vicinity is the house once occupied by Dr. Busby, and where in 1672 Ralph, the political writer, died.

SUTTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Stanton Harcourt, co. Oxford, 6 miles W. of Oxford, near the river Thames.

SUTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Drayton-in-Hales, co. Salop, 1 mile S.W. of Drayton.

SUTTON, a par. within the liberties of the borough of Shrewsbury and hund. of Condover, co. Salop, 2 miles S.E. of Shrewsbury, its post town. The village is situated on a branch of the river Severn. In the parish is a sulphurous spa. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £17. The church is dedicated to St. John.

SUTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of West Felton, co. Salop, 4 miles S.E. of Oswestry, near the Llanymynech canal.

SUTTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Claverley, co. Salop, 4 miles E. of Bridgnorth.

SUTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Diddlebury, hund. of Munslow, co. Salop, 6 miles N. of Ludlow.

SUTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Forton, co. Stafford, 2 miles N.E. of Newport, near the canal.

SUTTON, a par. in the hund. of Wilford, co. Suffolk, 4 miles S.E. of Woodbridge, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated at the ferry over the navigable river Deben to Woodford. A portion of the land is in common. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £299. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is old and much dilapidated. The register dates from 1665. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes erected in 1856. The Baptists have a chapel. Sutton Hall and Wood Hall are the principal residences. T. Waller, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SUTTON, a par. and post town in the second div. of Wallington hund., co. Surrey, 3¼ miles N.E. of Ewell, 4 W. of Croydon, and 5 N.E. of Epsom. It is a station on the Epsom railway. The village is situated on the old road to Reigate and Brighton. In Domesday Book it is mentioned as a place of considerable importance, and had then two churches. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £660. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, contains tombs of Isaac Littlebury, translator of "Herodotus," Lady Dorothy Brownlow, and several monuments of the Talbots, besides others. The register dates from 1636. The parochial charities produce about £57 per annum, of which £6 go to Beck's school. The South Metropolitan district schools for pauper children are in this parish. The Independents have a chapel.

SUTTON, a tythg. in the par. of Woking, first div. of Woking hund. co. Surrey, 4 miles N.E. of Guildford. It is situated on the river Wey, near the South Western railway. Sutton Place, a quadrangular building, 80 feet square, caught fire in 1591, after Queen Elizabeth's visit.

SUTTON, a par. in the hund. of Rotherbridge, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 5 miles S. of Petworth, its post town. Lord Leconfield is lord of the manor. In the parish is the union poorhouse. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £256. The church is dedicated to St. John. The register dates from 1656.

SUTTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Tenbury, upper div. of Doddingtree hund., co. Worcester, 2 miles S.E. of Tenbury. There is an ancient chapel-of-ease, containing tombs of the earls of Arundel.

SUTTON, a par. in the middle div. of Holderness wap., East Riding co. York, 3½ miles N.E. of Hull, its post town. It is a station on the Hull and Hornsea branch of the North-Eastern railway. It is situated near the river Hull, and includes the hmlt. of Stone-Ferry, on the left bank of the river. It had a White friary, founded in Edward I.'s time. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £110. The church, dedicated to St. James, was rebuilt in 1841 at the Grooves, and once had a chantry, val. £14. The parochial charities produce about £21 per annum, of which sum £12 go to a school. In the village are two hospitals, or almshouses, one founded by Leonard Chamberlain, and rebuilt in 1800, for ten poor persons, and the other, erected in 1819, by bequest of Mrs. Watson, for widows and orphan daughters of clergymen.

SUTTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Norton, wap. of Buckrose, East Riding co. York, 1 mile S.E. of New Malton.

SUTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirklington, North Riding co. York, 5 miles N. of Ripon.

SUTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Masham, wap. of East Hang, North Riding co. York, 2 miles W. of Masham, and 6 S.W. of Bedale. It is joined with Healey.

SUTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Kildwick, E. div. of Staincliff wap., West Riding co. York, 1 mile S. of Kildwick, and 4 miles N.W. of Keighley. It is situated on the river Aire, near the Leeds and Liverpool canal. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the cotton and worsted mills. There is a National school, at which Divine service is performed on Sundays. The Baptists have a chapel with a school attached.

SUTTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Brotherton, lower div. of Barkstone Ash wap., West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Pontefract.

SUTTON, a tnshp. in the pars. of Burgh Willis and Campsall, upper div. of Osgoldcross wap., West Riding co. York, 5 miles N. of Doncaster.

SUTTON, a hmlt. in the pars. of Coyty and Newcastle, co. Glamorgan, 3 miles S.W. of Bridgend. It is situated at the mouth of the river Ogmore, and has a quarry of good limestone.

SUTTON-AT-HONE, a lathe in co. Kent, contains the hunds. of Axton, Blackheath, Bromley, Codsheath, Lessness, Ruxley, Somerden, and Westerham, comprising an area of 169,510 acres.

SUTTON-AT-HONE, a par. in the hund. of Axton, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 3 miles S.E. of Dartford, its post town, and 7 S.W. of Gravesend. It is a station on the North Kent railway. The village is situated on the river Darent, and on the London, Chatham, and Dover railway. The par. includes the village of Swanley. In the reign of Richard I. the manor was given by Robert Basinge to the Knights Hospitallers of St. John of Jerusalem, who had a commandery here, of which the ancient refectory has been converted into the scullery of a modern house. The principal residences are Sutton Place and St. John's, and near the northern extremity of the parish is Hawley House. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £519, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Rochester. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, was partly burnt in 1615, but has recently been thoroughly restored. There is also a district church at Swanley, the living of which is a perpet. cur. The parochial charities produce about £45 per annum, of which £12 go to Wrott's almshouses. The Baptists and Wesleyans have chapels. There is a National school for both sexes. A court-baron is held by Mrs. Fleet, who is lady of the manor; and T. Fleet, Esq., who is lord of the manor of St. John's, holds a court-leet.

SUTTON-BASSETT, a par. in the hund. of Corby, co. Northampton, 3 miles N.E. of Market Harborough, its post town, and 11 N.W. of Kettering. The village is situated near the river Welland. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Weston-by-Welland, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, which was formerly a chapel-of-ease to Weston, is of great antiquity. Henry Holdich Hungerford, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SUTTON-BENGER, a par. in the hund. of Malmesbury, co. Wilts, 4 miles N.E. of Chippenham, its post town, and 36 N.W. of Salisbury. The village is situated on the river Avon and the Great Western railway. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £285, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Salisbury. The church is dedicated to All Saints. There is a free school, entirely supported by the Rev. G. T. March. Viscount Wellesley is lord of the manor.

SUTTON-BINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Hundsborough, co. Somerset, 3½ miles S.W. of Yeovil, its post town. It is a station on the direct London and Exeter railway. The village is situated on the river Yeo. The living is a rect.* is the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £214. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was formerly a chapel to Malmesbury Abbey. W. H. Helyar, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner. There is a parochial school.

SUTTON, BISHOP'S. See BISHOP-SUTTON, co. Hants.

SUTTON-BONNINGTON, a small town in the S. div. of Rushcliffe wap., co. Nottingham, 5 miles N.W. of Loughborough, its post town, and 1½ mile S.E. of Kegworth railway station. It is a considerable village, comprehending the pars. of St. Michael and St. Ann, and is situated on the Midland Counties railway and the river Soar. The hmlt. of Zouch Mill is included in this parish. The livings are both rects.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, the former val. £520, and the latter £270. The parochial charities produce about £64 per annum, of which £52 go to a school. There are a National and endowed free school., The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Baptists have chapels. G. B. Paget, Esq., is lord of the manor of St. Michael, and W. Paget, Esq., of the manor of St. Ann.

SUTTON-BOURNE, a hmlt. and chplry. in the par. of Long Sutton, co. Lincoln, 2 miles N. of Long Sutton, its post town, and 4 N.E. of Holbeach. It is situated on the Sutton sluice, which empties itself into the Wash. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, and in the gift of the vicar of the parish. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. The Primitive Methodists and Unitarians have each a chapel, and there is a National school.

SUTTON-BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Long Sutton, co. Lincoln, 2 miles S.E. of Long Sutton. It is a station on the Spalding and Lynn branch of the Great Northern railway. It has lately been reclaimed from the Wash.

SUTTON-BY-DOVER, a par. in the hund. of Cornilo, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 4 miles S.W. of Deal, its post town, and 6½ N. of Dover. The village is situated on an eminence. The par. includes the hmlt. of Little Sutton. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £107, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. There is a day school.

SUTTON CHART. See CHART SUTTON, co. Kent.

SUTTON-CHENEY, a chplry. in the par. of Market-Bosworth, hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 5 miles N.W. of Hinckley, its post town, 2 S.E. of Market-Bosworth, and 5 S.W. of Desford. The village is situated near the Ashby-de-la-Zouch canal and Redmoor Plain, where the battle of Bosworth was fought. Lime is burnt here; there are also some brick kilns. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Market Bosworth, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church is dedicated to St. James. The parochial charities consist in Sir W. Roberts's almshouses, founded in 1612, and endowed with an annuity of £24, the rent of lands at Barwell. There is a free school. W. Stewart, Esq., of Aldenham Abbey, Herts, is lord of the manor.

SUTTON COLDFIELD, a par., post, and market town in the Birmingham div. of Hemlingford hund., co. Warwick, 7 miles N.E. of Birmingham, and 8 S.W. of Lichfield. It is a station on the London and North-Western railway. This town, formerly called Sutton-Colville, is of great antiquity, having been of some note in the Saxon times. It is situated on a branch of the river Tame, near the ancient Icknield Street, and is intersected by the Birmingham and Fazeley canal. The par. comprehends the vils. of Little Sutton, Hill, Maney, Hill Hook, and Warmley. The manor was given by Henry I. to the Earl of Warwick in exchange for other manors, and was subsequently possessed by Vesey, Bishop of Exeter, and chaplain to Henry VIII., who revived the ancient prosperity of the town, which had fallen into decay, and gave to it the Chase, called Sutton Park, a demesne with several large sheets of water. At his expense the moot-hall or townhall was erected, and he obtained a charter of incorporation from Henry VIII., investing the government in a warden, two capital burgesses, and 22 other members. The town chiefly consists of one long street, occupying a situation on an acclivity. It is well paved and lighted with gas. The houses are mostly modern. It is a polling and petty sessions town, the sessions being held in the new townhall, constructed in 1859 at a cost of £5,000. There are an edge-tool manufactory, and a mill for boring gun-barrels, but the staple trade is in agricultural produce. The land is principally in pasture. The soil is peaty. The corporation, who are lords of the manor, hold a petty session on the Friday, a general quarter sessions, and also a court of record. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Worcester. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is of the 13th century, with a tower and six bells. The interior contains two old brasses. The aisles were added by Bishop Vesey, whose effigy is in the chancel. In addition to the parish church are the district churches of Boldmere St. Michael's, Hill St. James, and Warmley, the livings of all which are perpet. curs.,* varying in val. from £150 to £134. The parochial charities produce about £2,295 per annum, of which £1,744 is town estate, and is distributed in marriage portions, and other useful objects. The free grammar school was founded and endowed by Bishop Vesey, and there are corporation schools for both sexes, including infants. The Independents and Roman Catholics have chapels. The principal residences are Four Oaks Hall, New Hall, Moor Hall, and Penns. In the vicinity is King's Standing camp, where Charles I. harangued his soldiers, also Rounton mineral well. Market day is on Monday. Fairs are held on Trinity Monday, 14th March, 19th September, and 8th November.

SUTTON COURTNEY, a par. in the hund. of Ock, co. Berks, 2½ miles S.E. of Abingdon, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the Thames, near the Oxford railway and Wilts and Berks canal. The par. includes the tnshps. of Sutton Wick and Appleford. Some of the inhabitants are employed in a paper mill. The soil consists of clay, gravel, and loam. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Appleford, in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £148, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a tower: the roof was restored in 1846. The interior contains a wooden rood loft and a Norman font surrounded by pillars. There is also a chapel-of-ease at Appleford. The parochial charities produce about £160 per annum, of which £45 go to Bradstock's school and £63 to Elderfield's almshouses. T. West, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SUTTON-CUM-DUCKMANTON, a par. in the hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 4½ miles S.E. of Chesterfield, its post town, and 160 from London. In the vicinity are the Duckmanton colliery and iron works. The living is a rect.* with the vic. of Duckmanton annexed, in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £309. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has several stained windows. The parochial charities produce about £23 per annum, of which £18 go to a school, which is free for the instruction of 20 poor boys. The principal residence is Sutton Hall, formerly the seat of the Harstones and Greys. It was fortified by Leake, Earl Scarsdale, for Charles I., but was taken in 1643. R. Arkwright, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SUTTON-CUM-LOUND, a par. in the lib. of Southwell and Scrooby, though locally in the Hatfield div. of Bassetlaw wap., co. Nottingham, 3 miles N.W. of East Retford, its post town, and 6 S.E. of Bawtry. It is a station on the Great Northern railway. The village is situated near the river Idle. The par. includes the tnshp. of Lound, and an old seat of the ancestors of Earl Fitzwilliam. In the vicinity are some gravel pits and Dane's Hill, supposed to have been an ancient encampment. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Scrooby, in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £185. The church is dedicated to St. Bartholomew. The parochial charities produce about £32 per annum, of which £27 go to a school. There are a free school and a National school. The Independents and Wesleyans have chapels. The Duke of Portland is lord of the manor.

SUTTON, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Eyhorne, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 4 miles N. of Headcorn railway station on the South-Eastern line, 5 N.E. of Staplehurst, its post town, and 6 S.E. of Maidstone. The parish is crossed by the ridge of hills bounding the Weald, of which its southern side forms a part. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Sutton-Valence, in the dioc. of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, contains monuments to the Filmer family. There is an infant school. Sir Edmund Filmer, Bart., M.P., whose seat is East Sutton Place, is lord of the manor and owner of the soil.

SUTTON-GRANGE, a tnshp. in the par. and lib. of Ripon, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Ripon. The grange is now a farmhouse.

SUTTON, GREAT AND LITTLE, tnshps. in the par. of Eastham, higher div. of Wirrall hund., co. Chester, 7 miles N.W. of Chester, its post town, and 1 mile of Sutton railway station. The village is situated near the river Mersey. There is a National school for both sexes. The Presbyterians have a chapel. Sutton Hall is the principal residence.

SUTTON GUILDEN. See GUILDEN SUTTON, co. Chester.

SUTTON, HIGH, a chplry. in the par. of Prestbury, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 4 miles S.E. of Macclesfield.

SUTTON-IN-ASHFIELD, a par. in the N. div. of Broxtow wap., co. Nottingham, 3 miles S.W. of Mansfield, its post town. It is a station on the Pinxton railway. It is situated a short distance from the source of the river Maun, and includes the tnshp. of Hucknall and the hmlt. of Eastfield. The town, which is irregularly built, covers a considerable extent of ground. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £118. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum, which go towards the support of a school. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents, Wesleyans, General and Particular Baptists, and the Primitive Methodists have chapels with schools attached. The Duke of Portland is lord of the manor. Saturday is market day, chiefly for provisions. Fairs are held on the second Tuesday in April and the last Tuesday in September for horses and cattle. A statute fair for hiring servants is held on the 25th November.

SUTTON-IN-THE-ELMS, a tnshp. in the par. of Broughton Astley, hund. of Guthlaxton, co. Leicester, 6 miles N.W. of Lutterworth, 6 E. of Hinckley, and 1 mile N.W. of Broughton Astley. It is situated near the Midland Counties railway and the Roman road Fosse Way. The Particular Baptists have a Sunday-school and chapel.

SUTTON-IN-THE-MARSH, a par. in the Marsh div. of Calceworth hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 6 miles N.E. of Alford, its post town, and 18 S.E. of Louth. The village is near the coast. There are brick and tile kilns. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £68. The church, dedicated to St. Clement, has been entirely renovated, and the chancel rebuilt in 1860. The original church, with a considerable portion of the parish, was submerged by the sea several centuries back. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel. F. Cooke, Esq., of Boston, is lord of the manor.

SUTTON, KINGS, a hund. in co. Northampton.

SUTTON, KINGS, a par. in the above hund., co. Northampton, 4 miles S.E. of Banbury, and 5 W. of Brackley. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the Oxford canal, near the river Cherwell, which separates it from Oxfordshire. The par. includes the hmlts. of Astrop, Charlton, and Purston. The principal residence is Astrop Hall, where Mr. Drake's hounds meet. There is a mineral spring known as St. Rumbald's well. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £87. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, contains an antique pulpit, and a rood loft with the figure of the Virgin. The Independents and Wesleyans have chapels. There is a National school for both sexes. The parochial charities produce about £160 per annum, of which £126 arise from Jenkinson's bequest for apprenticing poor children.

SUTTON, KING'S. See SUTTON, ST. MICHAEL, co. Hereford.

SUTTON, LITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Diddlebury, co. Salop, half a mile S.W. of Great Sutton. It is joined with Lawton.

SUTTON, LITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Eastham, co. Chester, 8 miles N.W. of Chester.

SUTTON, LONG, a par. in the hund. of Somerton, co. Somerset, 4 miles E. of Langport, and 3 S.W. of Somerton. The village is considerable, and is situated on the river Yeo or Ivel. The par. includes the hmlts. of Knowle, Load, and Upton. Roman coins and pottery have been discovered here.

SUTTON, LONG, a par. in the hund. of Upper Crondall, co. Hants, 2½ miles S. of Odiham, its post town. It is situated near Sutton Common, and is a meet for the H. H. hounds and Mr. Scotland's harriers. The impropriation belongs to the Master and Brethren of the Hospital of St. Cross. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £75, in the patron. of St. Cross Hospital. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £229, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. The screen and pulpit are of carved oak, and of great antiquity. The register dates from 1711. There is a National school for both sexes, at which a Sunday-school is also held. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

SUTTON, LONG, or SUTTON ST. MARY, a par. and market town in the wap. of Elloe, parts of Holland, co. Lincoln, 9 miles N. of Wisbeach, and 5 E. of Holbeach. It is a station on the Great Eastern railway, and there are pilot and coast-guard stations. The town of late years has been considerably improved, both with respect to its drainage and lighting. The streets are well constructed. In 1856 a building was erected as a corn-exchange, market-place, and public rooms. Petty sessions are held every two months. An agricultural association was established in 1836. In the vicinity are several corn mills, two breweries, and two branch banks. The population in 1861 was 6,124. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £600. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a steeple, which answers as a sea-mark. In addition to the parish church are the district churches of St. Nicholas, St. Edmund, St. James, and St. Matthew, the livings of which are perpet. curs., varying in val. from £365 to £60. The parochial charities produce about £905, of which £56 go to Phillips's school, founded in 1492, £24 to Tilson's almshouses, and £226 for church purposes, being the produce of Thomas Allen's bequest, made in 1603. The Wesleyans, Independents, Wesleyan Reformers, Primitive Methodists, and General Baptists have chapels. Near the church are traces of a mansion which, according to tradition, was the residence of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster. There are three manors—viz., Guanock, Cranwelly, and Sutton Holland, the latter being the most extensive. Market day is Friday for the sale of corn and cattle. Fairs are held on the 13th and 14th May, and the first Friday following the 25th September.

SUTTON-MADDOCK, a par. in the Shiffnall div. of Brimstree hund., co. Salop, 4 miles S. of Shiffnall, its post town, and 3 S.E. of Iron Bridge. The village is near the river Severn, which is here joined by the Shropshire canal. There is a china manufactory. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Kemberton, in the dioc. of Lichfield. The church is dedicated to St. Mary There is a parochial school for both sexes.

SUTTON-MALLETT, a chplry. in the par. of Moorlinch, hund. of Whitley, co. Somerset, 5 miles E. of Bridgwater, its post town, and 3 S.W. of the Edington station, on the Central Somerset line of railway. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Moorlinch, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells. The church has been recently enlarged. There are National and Sunday schools.

SUTTON-MANDEVILLE, a par. in the hund. of Cawden, co. Wilts, 11 miles S.W. of Salisbury, its post town, and 7 from Hindon. The village is situated on the road from Salisbury to Shaftesbury, and about midway between the Dinton and Tisbury stations, on the Salisbury and Yeovil railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £310. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is old. The register dates from 1654. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. W. Wyndham, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SUTTON-MONTAGUE, or SUTTON-MONTIS, a par. in the hund. of Catsash, co. Somerset, 6 miles N.E. of Ilchester, its post town, 6 N.W. of Sherborne, and 2 S.E. of the Sparkford railway station. The soil consists of a sandy loam with a subsoil of clay. The Blackmoor Vale harriers meet here. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £220. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. The register dates from 1701. There is a school for both sexes, supported by subscription, at which a Sunday-school is held.

SUTTON-ON-THE-FOREST, a par. in the wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 8 miles N.W. of York, its post town, and 4 E. of Tollerton railway station. The par. includes the tnshp. of Huby, and once formed part of Galtres Forest. Laurence Sterne was once vicar of this parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £390, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The Independents have a chapel. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum. There are parochial and Sunday schools for both sexes. The principal residence is Sutton Hall. W. C. Harland, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SUTTON-ON-THE-HILL, a par. and tnshp. in the hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 8 miles S.W. of Derby, its post town, and 5 N. of Tutbury railway station. The village is situated on a branch of the river Dove. The par. includes the tnshp. of Osleston and the small vill. of Ash. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £225. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum, of which £12 go to a school.

SUTTON-POYNTZ, a tythg. in the par. of Preston, lib. of Sutton-Poyntz, Dorchester div. of co. Dorset, 4 miles N.E. of Melcombe-Regis. There was formerly a chapel, dedicated to St. Giles.

SUTTON PRIOR, or SUTTON-ON-PLYM, an ecclesiastical district in the borough of Plymouth, co. Devon.

SUTTON ST. EDMUND, a chplry. in the par. of Long Sutton, wap. of Elloe, parts of Holland, co. Lincoln, 10 miles S. of Holbeach, its post town, and the same distance W. of Wisbeach railway station. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £365, in the patron. of the Vicar of Long Sutton. The church is dedicated to St. Edmund. There is a free school for both sexes. The General Baptists and Primitive Methodists have chapels.

SUTTON ST. JAMES, a chplry. in the par. of Long Sutton, wap. of Elloe, parts of Holland, co. Lincoln, 5 miles S.E. of Holbeach. The village is situated on Sutton Holland Drain, near the stone called Ivy Cross. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £60, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an ancient edifice, much dilapidated. The parochial charities produce about £60 per annum. There is a National school built at the expense of the Charity Trustees.

SUTTON ST. MARY. See SUTTON, LONG, co. Lincoln.

SUTTON ST. MICHAEL, a par. in the hund. of Broxash, co. Hereford, 4½ miles N.N.E. of Hereford, its post town, and 1 mile E. of the Moreton railway station. The village is situated on the river Lug, in Marden. On a hill near is Sutton Walls, a camp of 30 acres. It is said to have been the site of King Offa's palace, where he killed Ethelbert in 792. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £64. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. T. Evans, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SUTTON ST. NICHOLAS, a par. in the hund. of Broxash, co. Hereford, 4 miles N. of Hereford, its post town, and 10 S.E. of Leominster. The village is situated on the river Lug. The parish is intersected by the Hereford and Leominster and Hereford and Bromyard turnpike roads. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £195. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. There is an endowed mixed school. The Independents have a chapel. Sutton Court is the principal residence. T. Evans, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SUTTON-SCOTNEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Wonston, co. Hants, 5½ miles S. of Whitchurch. It is a meet for the Kingsworthy hounds.

SUTTON-UNDER-BRAILS, a par. in the upper div. of Westminster hund., co. Warwick, but formerly in Gloucester, 5 miles S.E. of Shipston-on-Stour, its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £313, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a Sunday-school.

SUTTON-UNDER-WHITSTONE-CLIFFE, a tnshp. in the par. of Felixkirk, wap. of Birdforth, North Riding co. York, 3½ miles N.E. of Thirsk, and 5 E. of Thirsk railway station. The village is situated on a branch of the Cod Beck. The Independents and Wesleyans have chapels.

SUTTON-UPON-DERWENT, a par. in the Wilton Beacon div. of Harthill wap., East Riding co. York, 8 miles S.E. of York, its post town, and 7 S.W. of Pocklington. The village is situated near the canal, at the bridge over the river Derwent. The par. includes the hmlt. of Woodhouse. There is an extensive flour mill on the river, also a mineral spring. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £509. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. It was restored in 1841, when a new porch was erected, and in 1846 new stalls were fitted. The register dates from the 15th century. The parochial charities produce about £2 10*s.* per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, at which a Sunday-school is held. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels. Sutton Hall is the principal residence. Gen. Sir R. G. H. Clarges is lord of the manor.

SUTTON-UPON-TRENT, a par. in the N. div. of Thurgarton wap., co. Nottingham, 8 miles N. of Newark, 5 S.E. of Tuxford, and 2 N. of Carlton-on-Trent. It is situated on the western bank of the river Trent, and on the Great North road. The village, which is large and well built, was formerly a market town under the Suttons, from whom it takes its name. It is a polling place for the southern division of the county. There are a bone-crushing mill, patent oil-cake works, and corn mills. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £270. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was restored in 1848. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum, of which £6 go to Sprigg's school. The Independents, Baptists, and Wesleyans have chapels, and the Baptists have a cemetery. J. E. Denison, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SUTTON VALENCE, a par. in the hund. of Eyhorne, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 5 miles N.E. of Staplehurst, its post town, and 6 S.E. of Maidstone. This place is situated on the road from Maidstone to Tenterden, near the Weald, and once formed part of the demesne of William de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, the keep of whose castle, a ruin overgrown with ivy, still exists. A large portion of the land is in hop-gardens and orchards. The soil is a rich loam intermixed with stiff clay upon a subsoil of rock. The village, called Town Sutton, is situated under the ridge of hills bounding the Weald. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of East Sutton annexed, in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £318, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Rochester. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1828. The register dates from 1597. The parochial charities produce about £90, of which £87 go to Lambe's almshouses. Here is the Clothworkers' Free Grammar school, founded by W. Lambe in 1578, with two exhibitions of £10 per annum at St. John's College, Cambridge. There are also National and infant schools. The Independents have a chapel. Sir E. Filmer, Bart., is lord of the manor.

SUTTON-VENEY, a par. in the hund. of Warminster, co. Wilts, 3 miles S.E. of Warminster, its post town, and 2 S.W. of Heytesbury. The village is situated near the river Wiley. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £800. The church is dedicated to St. Leonard. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum. There is a free school. The Independents and Baptists have chapels.

SUTTON-WALDRON, a par. in the hund. of Redlane, co. Dorset, 4½ miles S. of Shaftesbury, its post town, and 7½ N. of Blanford. The village is situated on the high road from Shaftesbury to Blanford, and is watered by a rivulet which falls into the Stour. Traces of copper ore have been found. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £169. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, was erected in 1847, at the expense of the Rev. A. Huxtable. It stands on a hill near the site of the old one. The register dates from 1675. There is a National school for both sexes. H. C. Sturt, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SUTTON-WICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Sutton-Courtney, hund. of Ock, co. Berks, 2 miles S.W. of Abingdon.

SUTTON-WITH-HAZLEWOOD, a tnshp. in the par. of Tadcaster, upper div. of Barkstone Ash wap., West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Tadcaster. It is situated near Bramham Moor, and has two corn mills. The principal seats are Hazlewood Castle and Sutton Grove, the former situated on rising ground, and has adjoining it a Roman Catholic chapel, being the only one not suppressed during the reign of Elizabeth.

SUTTON-WITH-HOWGRAVE, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirklington, wap. of Hallikeld, North Riding co. York, 5½ miles N. of Ripon, and 8 S.E. of Bedale.

SUURSAY, an island, one of the Outer Hebrides, coast of Scotland, in the Sound of Harris, between Bernera and North Uist.

SWABY, a par. in the Marsh div. of Calceworth hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 6 miles N.W. of Alford, its post town, and 3 from Claythorpe railway station. The par. includes the hmlt. of Whitepit. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £330, in the patron. of Magdalen College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, was rebuilt in 1827. The register dates from 1660. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There is a parochial and a Sunday school.

SWADLINCOTE, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Church-Gresley, hund. of Repton, co. Derby, 4½ miles S.E. of Burton-upon-Trent, with which it is connected by a short branch of the Midland railway. The substratum abounds with coal, which is wrought to a considerable extent, and with various kinds of clay for pottery and earthenware, of which extensive works are in operation, affording employment to a considerable number of hands. The Leicester and Swannington extension line of railway passes through the township, and several tramways have been laid from the coalmines and potteries to the Ashby-de-la-Zouch canal for the conveyance of produce. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £105. The church is of recent erection. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

SWAFFHAM, a par., post, and market town, in the hund. of South Greenhoe, co. Norfolk, 12 miles W. of East Dereham, 14½ S.E. of Lynn, and 28 N.W. of Norwich. It is a station on the East Anglian section of the Great Eastern railway. It is a petty sessions, election, and polling town for the western division of the county. The manor formerly belonged to the earls of Richmond, who had a prison here, and who obtained from King John a charter for a weekly market and two fairs. The town is well paved and lighted with gas, and consists of four principal and several minor streets. It contains a shire-hall, assembly rooms, two banks, a savings-bank, county bridewell, theatre, race-stand, union poorhouse, and a market-cross, erected in 1783. The magistrates meet every other week, and the general quarter sessions of the peace are held here, by adjournment from the city of Norwich. The town is under the government of the county magistrates and constabulary. On the N.W. side of the town is a heath of about 1,000 acres, now in process of enclosure, while a meet for coursing takes place on the first Monday after the 3rd of November. The living is a vic.* with the rect. of Threxton annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £738, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient structure. The interior contains some remains of stained glass, and an effigy of Dr. Bowright. The church was built about 1474, and its tower finished in 1510. The register dates from 1557. The parochial charities produce about £235, of which £150 is the produce of the town estate. There are some almshouses, also a free grammar school, National, British, and infant schools. The Baptists, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have chapels. There are two subscription libraries. The Poor-law Union comprises 33 parishes. Market day is on Saturday. Fairs occur on the second Wednesday in May, third Wednesday in July, and the first Wednesday in November, for sheep and cattle, the latter being one of the largest in Norfolk.

SWAFFHAM BULBECK, a par. in the hund. of Staine, co. Cambridge, 6 miles S.W. of Newmarket, its post town, and the same distance from Six-Mile-Bottom railway station. The village is situated on Swaffham Lode, a navigable cut from the river Cam. In the vicinity are the remains of a Benedictine nunnery, founded by one of the Bolebecks in the reign of John, and valued at the Dissolution at £46 18s. 10d. A quarry of chalk marl is extensively worked. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £219, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a tower and six bells. The register commences about 1560. The parochial charities produce about £184, of which sum £20 go to Towers' school. There are National schools for both sexes.

SWAFFHAM-PRIOR, a par. in the hund. of Staine, co. Cambridge, 5 miles N.W. of Newmarket, its post town. This par., which includes part of Newmarket Heath, is bounded on the N. by the Cam, and is intersected by several navigable drains or lodes communicating with that river. It contains the hmlt. of Reach, and was formerly a market town under a charter granted to the prior of Ely. The living consists of the consolidated vica. of St. Cyriac and St. Mary, in the dioc. of Ely, joint val. £301, in the patron. of the bishop and of the dean and chapter alternately. There were formerly two churches, viz., St. Mary and St. Cyriac, but the former has long been in ruins; the latter has been rebuilt. In the interior is a brass of J. Tochyll in armour, bearing date 1462, also four others of the Waters family. The parochial charities produce about £68 per annum, of which £30 go to Thompson's school. There are National schools for both sexes.

SWAFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Tunstead, co. Norfolk, 2 miles N. of North Walsham, its post town, and 16 from Norwich. The Dilham canal passes through the parish, and the river Ant bounds it on the S. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is ancient. The register dates from 1660. There is a National school.

SWAINBY, a vil. in the tnshp. of Whorlton, North Riding co. York, 5 miles S.W. of Stokesley.

SWAINBY-WITH-ALLERTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Pickhill, wap. of Hallikeld, North Riding co. York, 3 miles S.E. of Swainby, and 6½ S.E. of Bedale.

SWAINSCOE-WITH-BLORE, a tnshp. in the par. of Blore, hund. of Totmonslow, co. Stafford, 4 miles N.W. of Ashbourn.

SWAINSTHORPE, a par. in the hund. of Humble-yard, co. Norfolk, 5 miles S.W. of Norwich, its post town. It is a station on the Great Eastern railway. The village is situated on a branch of the river Yare. The Henstead union poorhouse is in this parish. The living consists of the rects. of St. Mary and St. Peter, with that of Newton-Flotman, in the dioc. of Norwich, joint val. £422. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. There was formerly another church, dedicated to St. Mary, which was taken down at the Reformation. The register dates from 1538. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a village school.

SWAINSWICK, a par. in the hund. of Bath-Forum, co. Somerset, 3 miles N.E. of Bath, its post town. The village is small, but neatly built. There is a corn mill. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £220, in the patron. of Oriel College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a tower and six bells. The interior contains a brass to E. Forde, bearing date 1439, and the tomb of Prynne. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes, at which a Sunday-school is also held.

SWAITH, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Worsbrough, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S. of Barnsley.

SWALCLIFFE, a par. in the hunds. of Banbury, Bloxham, and Dorchester, co. Oxford, 5½ miles S.W. of Banbury, and 23 N.W. of Oxford. The par., which is large, includes the chplrys. of Epwell, Shutford, and Sibford-Ferris. The Warwickshire hounds meet in this parish. In the vicinity is Madmason camp. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £292. The church is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul. There are chapels-of-ease at Epwell and East Shutford, and a district church at Sibford. The parochial charities produce about £184 per annum.

SWALE, a tributary of the river Ure, rises in two heads, called Great and Little Steddale becks, on the Westmoreland and Yorkshire border, under Shunner Fells, and after a course of 60 miles joins the Ure at Boroughbridge.

SWALE, a channel or tidal river separating the Isles of Sheppey, Elmley, and Harty, from the mainland of co. Kent. It extends about 17 miles in length, with a varying breadth of from half a mile to 1½ mile, and anciently joined the Wantsum channel, which formed the shortest passage from the Downs to the port of London, but which is now dry.

SWALECLIFF, a par. in the hund. of Bleangate, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 7 miles N. of Canterbury, its post town, and 2 E. of Whitstable. The village is a coastguard station, situated on the Thames at the East Swale's mouth. The village is interesting as having been once the residence of William of Wykeham, whose mantelpiece is preserved in the old parsonage house. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £292. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, contains monuments to the families of Loggin, Duncombe, and Wykeham. There is an endowed school for ten free scholars.

SWALLOW, a par. in the hund. of Bradley-Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles N.E. of Caistor, its post town, and 8 S.W. of Great Grimsby. The village is situated in the Wolds. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £408. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient structure with a tower. The register dates from 1672. There is a school for both sexes, erected at the expense of the Earl of Yarborough, who is lord of the manor. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel.

SWALLOWBECK, a hmlt. in the par. of Skellingthorpe, co. Lincoln, 4 miles W. of Lincoln.

SWALLOWCLIFFE, a par. in the hund. of Dunworth, co. Wilts, 12 miles S.W. of Salisbury, its post town, and 8 N.E. of Shaftesbury. The village is situated under Sheet Hill, and on the road from Salisbury to Shaftesbury. There are quarries of building stone. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £80, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has been rebuilt, with a tower and three bells. The register dates from 1738. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum, realised from poors' land. There is a National school for the children of this parish and that of Anstrey. Middle Deam House is the principal residence. The Earl of Pembroke is lord of the manor.

SWALLOWFIELD, a par. in the hunds. of Charlton and Amesbury, co. Berks, formerly in Wilts, 5 miles S.E. of Reading, and 5 S.W. of Wokingham. The village, which is considerable, is situated at the confluence of the river Blackwater with the Loddon. The principal residence is Swallowfield Place, where Lord Chancellor Clarendon, after his retirement from office, wrote "The History of the Rebellion." The Bramshill hounds meet here. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £180, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Hereford. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. A fair is held on the 9th June.

SWALLOWHILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Darton, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Barnsley, on the Dearne and Dove canal.

SWALLWELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Whickham, W. div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 4 miles S.W. of Gateshead. It is situated on the Carlisle railway, at the confluence of the rivers Derwent and Tyne. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the ironworks of Messrs. Crawley, Millington, and Co., founded here in 1691 by Sir Ambrose Crawley, who was originally a blacksmith. William Shield, the musical composer, was born here in 1749. There are Church schools for children of both sexes, and a school-room licensed for divine service. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Presbyterians have chapels.

SWANAGE, a par., seaport, post, and market town in the hund. of Rowbarrow, South Blanford div. of co. Dorset, 6 miles S.E. of Corfe Castle, and 11 S.E. of Wareham. It is called Swanawic in the Saxon chronicle, and Swanwic and Sonwic in Domesday survey. It is situated on Swanage Bay, is a sub-port to Poole, and is also a coastguard station and bathing place. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Herston and Ulwell, besides the town of its own name, containing in 1861 a population of 2,004. It formed part of Worth Matravers till 1500. The town principally consists of one street about a mile in length, containing many well-built houses of stone, with roofs of the same material. The width of the bay is about 2 miles, with from 5 to 8 fathoms of water, affording anchorage for vessels of 300 tons burthen. The principal occupation of the inhabitants is in the quarrying of freestone, which has been worked for a considerable period under the name of Purbeck stone, and of which upwards of 20,000 tons are shipped annually. In the vicinity are several barrows and Druidical remains, and fossils and pyrites are frequently met with. At a short distance are the ruins of Corfe Castle, where Edward the Martyr was assassinated, and which, during the civil war of Charles I., was partially destroyed by the parliamentary forces. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £555. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has recently been rebuilt, with the exception of its tower. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Independents have chapels.

SWANBOROUGH, a hund. in co. Sussex, contains the pars. of St. Ann and St. John the Baptist, Southover, Iford, and Kingston, comprising an area of 4,670 acres.

SWANBOROUGH, a hund. in co. Wilts, contains the pars. of Allcannings, Alton-Barnes, Beeching Stoke, Charlton, Churton, Great and Little Cheverell, Hewish, East Lavington, Manningford-Abbots and Bruce, Marden, North Newnton, Rushall, St. Bernard Stanton, Upavon, Urchfont, Wilcott, Wilsford, Woodborough, and part of Imber, comprising an area of 47,310 acres.

SWANBOURNE, a par. in the hund. of Cottesloe, co. Bucks, 2 miles E. of Winslow, its post town, and 9 N. of Aylesbury. It is a station on the Oxford and Bletchley railway. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £158. The church, dedicated to St. Swithin, is an ancient structure, with a square tower containing six bells. The parochial charities produce about £43 per annum, of which £15 go to Godwin's school. There are National and infant schools. The Baptists have a chapel.

SWANCOTT, a tnshp. in the par. of Worfield, co. Salop, 1 mile N.E. of Bridgnorth.

SWANLAND, a tnshp. in the par. of North Ferriby, lib. of Kingston-upon-Hull, East Riding co. York, 6½ miles S.W. of Hull. It is situated near the Selby railway and the river Humber, and includes the hmlt. of Braffords.

SWANLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Sutton-at-Hone, hund. of Axton, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 2 miles S.W. of Sutton-at-Hone, and 3 S.W. of Dartford, its post town. It is a small village, situated in the midst of orchards and hop-gardens. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Canterbury. The church is dedicated to St. Paul's.

SWANLINBAR, a post town in the par. of Kinawley, bar. of Tullyhaw, co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 8 miles N.W. of Ballyconnell. It is situated among the mountains, on the old road from Ballyconnell to Enniskillen, and is celebrated for its medicinal waters. It is a chief police station, and petty sessions are held occasionally. There were formerly extensive iron works here.

SWANMOOR, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Great Haywood, co. Stafford, 4 miles N.W. of Rugeley.

SWANMORE, a tythg. in the par. of Droxford, co. Hants, 1 mile S.E. of Bishop's Waltham, its post town.

SWANNAY, or SWONA, an island in the par. of St. Mary, Orkney and Shetland Isles, coast of Scotland, 1¾ mile W. of Barth Head, in South Ronaldshay, and 6 miles N. of Camsbay. It is situated on the N. side of the Pentland Frith, near the Wells of Swannay whirlpools, and extends 1 mile in length by half a mile in breadth. The inhabitants are chiefly fishermen and pilots.

SWANNINGTON, a chplry. in the par. of Whitwick, hund. of West Goscote, co. Leicester, 4 miles S.E. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, and 16½ from Leicester. It is a station on the Leicester and Burton section of the Midland counties railway. The village is situated in a hilly district. The inhabitants are principally employed in the coal mines, 4,000 tons being sent weekly to Leicester by rail. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £120, in the patron. of the vicar. The church, dedicated to St. George, was rebuilt in 1825, and stands at the northern extremity of the district. The Marquis of Hastings is lord of the manor.

SWANNINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Eynsford, co. Norfolk, 3½ miles S.E. of Reepham, its post town. The living is a rect.* with the vic. of Wood-Dalling, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £531, in the patron. of Trinity Hall, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, has a low square tower containing three bells. The register dates from 1538. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum. The Lawn is the principal residence. Major Randall is lord of the manor.

SWAN, OLD, a chplry. in the par. of Walton-on-the-Hill, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 3 miles E. of Liverpool. The village, which may be considered a suburb of Liverpool, contains the cattle market, and is the site of extensive glass works and roperies.

SWANSCOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Axton, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 4 miles E. of Dartford, its post town, and 3 W. of Gravesend. The village is situated near the river Thames, in a hollow surrounded by woods, and is the place where Sweyn formed a camp to protect his fleet. It is mentioned in Domesday survey as Swene's Camp, and belonged to William de Valence, from whom it came to the Mortimers, and was subsequently presented by Queen Elizabeth to the Weldons. In the vicinity is a cavern designated Clappernappers Hole. The land is chalky, and from Greenhithe large quantities of chalk and lime are sent to the neighbouring ports. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £612, in the patron. of Sydney Sussex College. The church, dedicated to St. Hildeforth or to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient edifice, with tower and spire. The interior contains several monuments to the Weldon family. The parochial charities produce about £23 per annum, besides Beare's almshouses. The manor-house is a building of great antiquity, and was formerly the seat of the Weldons.

SWANSEA, a hund. in co. Glamorgan, contains the pars. of Bishopston, Cheriton, Ilston, St. John, Knelston, Llandewy, Llandilo-talybont, Llangennith, Llanmadock, Llanrhidian, Loughor, Nicholaston, Oxwich, Oystermouth, Penmaen, Pennard, Penrice, Port Eynon, Reynoldston, Rhoscilly, and Swansea.

SWANSEA, or ABERTAWY of the Welsh, a par., market town, bonding port, municipal and parliamentary borough in the hund. of the same name, co. Glamorgan, of which it is the county town, 36 miles N.W. of Cardiff, 60 from Bristol by water, and 260 from London by road, or 216¼ by the Great Western and South Wales railways, on which it is a principal station; it is also the terminus of the Vale of Neath, Swansea Vale, Swansea and Mumbles, branch of the Oystermouth, besides various local mineral lines from the extensive collieries and copper and iron works. Steamers ply to Bristol, Ilfracombe, Gloucester, Liverpool, Milford, Singleton, Tenby, and other ports on the coast. It is situated on the right bank of the river Tawe, at its confluence with the Bristol Channel in the centre of a bay, to which it gives name. The harbour, which is left dry at low water, is formed by means of piers of masonry projecting from either side of the mouth of the river 1,800 feet, and 900 feet long, and 215 feet apart at the mouth, with a cross pier within the harbour. It has recently undergone many improvements at a cost of above £100,000, and in 1859 a spacious new dock was opened by the side of the harbour in the Burrows, containing an area of 13 acres; the half tide basin is 430 feet long by 370 broad, and communicates with the docks by a lock 300 feet in length, having three pairs of gates. On the western pier are a watch-tower and a lighthouse with a fixed light 28 feet high, and visible for 9 miles. The bay outside the harbour is about 9 miles across from Scar to the Mumbles point light, and has from 1 to 5 fathoms of water, but in the harbour at high-water it is from 10 to 24 feet. Along the bay are the ports of Aberavon, Neath, Swansea, Oystermouth, and the Mixon Rock, with the Skarweather Shoal in front. On the N.E. and N.W. the bay is backed by lofty hills, and the beach in front of Swansea consists of an extensive level of firm sand. The town itself occupies an acclivity formed by an angular piece of ground between two lofty hills, and consists chiefly of a main street running N. and S. for nearly a mile parallel to the river, which is crossed by a ferry. The other streets either diverge from the High-street, or proceed W. and S.W. nearly in the line of the bay. The houses for the most part are modern and well-built, and the outskirts of the town are studded with villas and marine terraces, formerly the resort of numerous visitors who were in the habit of coming to Swansea for the purpose of sea-bathing, but the promenades have been swallowed up by the docks, and the bathers have been forced to retreat to the Mumbles; added to which the fumes of the copper works, whenever a N.E. wind blows, render it anything but pleasant as a residence. The effect, however, of these changes, which have taken place in the last thirty years, have been eminently beneficial so far as the wealth, population, and size of the town are concerned, which now contests with Cardiff the metropolitan supremacy of South Wales. The port is a bonding-port, having for its sub-ports Aberavon, Loughor, Neath, Newton, Oxwick, and Pennard. It is also a sessions and assize town, and the seat of a Poor-law Union. The principal public buildings are the townhall, a Grecian structure with Corinthian columns, in front of which is the statue of the late J. H. Vivian, Esq., M.P. for the borough; the post-office in Castle Bailey-street; the new market-house, 320 feet by 220, erected in 1830 at an expense of £20,000; the castle, originally founded in 1099 by Henry de Bellamonte, Earl of Warwick, and rebuilt by Bishop Gower in 1333, but now used as a storeroom for the militia,—the part remaining consists of a massive square tower surmounted by an open gallery supporting a carved parapet; and the Royal Institution of South Wales, a Grecian building, with a portico erected in 1840,—this last comprises a theatre, library, and museum of antiquity, natural history, and geology, in which is an unique collection of bones of the mammoth and other animals found in the limestone caves of Gower, also a series of coal plants from the surrounding pits, with rolled pebbles of coal found by Sir W. Logan, apparently the debris of prior seams of coal which had been broken up and transported by the tides thither; other buildings are the house of correction, public assembly rooms, theatre, barracks and gaol at the castle, union poorhouse, infirmary, mechanics' institute, savings-bank, three commercial banks, baths, and gas-works. Along the northern side of the docks are extensive warehouses and straiths for shipment of coal, and on the eastern side of the harbour are the extensive copper works of Port Tennant with their great chimneys. In the Swansea district are seventeen other copper works, also many tin, iron, zinc, alkali, pottery, and patent fuel works extending along the banks of the Swansea canal up the Vale of Taw, and from the Port Tennant Dock by the Neath Junction canal towards Llansamlet. The average quantity of copper ore smelted being about 200,000 tons annually, at an average price of £7 7*s.* per ton. The ore which is imported from distant parts is sold at a kind of auction held in one of the hotels, termed ticketings. A large trade is also done in coal, anthracite coal, timber, lime, grain, and patent fuel. The population in 1851 was 31,461, and in 1861, 41,606, inhabiting 7,578 houses. It returned one member to parliament in conjunction with Cardiff and other towns from the reign of Henry VIII., but by the Reform Act was made the head of a district, including Aberavon, Kenfig, Loughor, Neath, &c., which now sends one member. It claims to be a borough by prescription, having been first chartered by King John, and under the Municipal Act is divided into three wards, governed by a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 18 councillors, with the style of "Portreeve aldermen and burgesses of the borough of Swansea." The municipal revenue is about £6,000. The Cambrian, the oldest of the Welsh newspapers, is published in the town. There are several societies, including the Swansea Literary and Scientific Society, the Society for the Acquirement of Useful Knowledge, and a society for instructing the deaf and dumb. There is a lunatic asylum for the counties of Glamorgan, Caermarthen, Cardigan, and Pembrokeshire. In front of the town is a sandy beach of 3 miles, and the geology of the whole district is full of interest, forming part of the great coal-field of South Wales. The hill of Kilvy to the E. of the town and the town hill overhanging it on the W. are composed of Pennant sandstone, which is of enormous thickness, and possesses some valuable seams of coal. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of St. Peter's annexed, in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £300, in the Church Patronage Society. The parish is 25 miles in circumference. The parish church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt after the fall of the old one in 1739, and has three side chapels. It contains a brass of 1481 to the memory of Sir Hugh Johnys, of Llandymore Castle, in Gower; also a monument to Lady Elizabeth Gordon, daughter of the Earl of Huntley, and who was given in marriage by the King of Scotland to the Pretender, Perkin Warbeck, but subsequently married Sir Matthew Cradock, high steward of Gower. In addition to the parish churches are the district churches of Holy Trinity and St. Paul's, Sketty, the livings of which are perpet. curs., valued respectively at £170 and £60. The church of St. John is a small edifice, built on the site of an ancient chapel of the Knights Templars, who had a preceptory here; and there is just completed a Gothic church, dedicated to St. Luke, as a chapel-of-ease to the mother church. The Wesleyans have two chapels. Calvinistic Methodists, Welsh Baptists, Independents, Unitarians, and Roman Catholics have chapels, and the Jews a synagogue, one episcopal seaman's chapel, and one for Dissenters. The free grammar school, founded in 1682 by Bishop Gore, has an income from endowment of £120, and is attended by about forty scholars. There are also a normal training college, supported on the voluntary principle; National and infant schools for 800 children, built in 1848; St. Peter's schools, situated among the mining population, built in 1858; the parochial schools, on the Oystermouth road, capable of containing 400 children, built in 1862; St. Helen's National schools for infants, erected in 1864; and the Swansea Industrial Home for Orphan Girls. The foundation-stone of a hospital, to contain 100 beds, has been recently laid. There is a library of Welsh history, formed in connection with the Royal Institution, South Wales. The principal residences in the vicinity are Singleton, Sketty, and Sketty Lodge. The races take place annually at Crumlyn Burrows, and a regatta in August or September. The poet Gower and Beau Nash, the celebrated master of ceremonies at Bath, were natives of Swansea. Market days are Wednesday and Saturday. Fairs are held on the 2nd May, 2nd July, 15th August, and 30th October.

SWANSTON, a vil. in the par. of Colinton, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 5 miles S.W. of Edinburgh, on the skirts of the Pentland hills.

SWAN-STREET, a hmlt. in the par. of Halstead, hund. of Hinckford, co. Essex, 2 miles N.W. of Halstead, and 17 N.E. of Chelmsford. It is situated on the river Colne, near the line of the Great Eastern railway.

SWANTHROPE, a tythg. in the par. of Crondall, upper half div. of the hund. of Crondall, co. Hants, 4 miles S.E. of Odiham.

SWANTON-ABBOTT, a par. in the hund. of South Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 11 miles N.E. of Norwich, 1 mile N. of Scottow, and 3 miles S. of North Walsham, its post town. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on a branch of the river Bure, and on the road from Norwich to North Walsham. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £228. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The interior contains an ancient font and a brass with the effigy of S. Multon, rector in the 15th century. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, supported by voluntary contributions. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels.

SWANTON-MORLEY, a par. in the hund. of Launditch, co. Norfolk, 3½ miles N.E. of East Dereham, its post town, and 129 from London. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the river Wensum, which bounds the parish on the E. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in a long established paper manufactory, and there are lime and whiting works. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £228. The church, erected by Lord Morley in 1379, on a hill in the centre of the village, is dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities produce about £95 per annum, of which £84 is realised from town lands. There is a National school. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel.

SWANTON-NOVERS, a par. in the hund. of Holt, co. Norfolk, 8 miles E. of Fakenham, and 6 S.W. of Holt. Thetford is its post town. The village is on the river Stiffkey. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Wood Norton, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Edmund, has a tower and monument of J. Dew, Esq. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The Dean and Chapter of Christ Church, Oxford, are lords of the manor.

SWANTONSTOWN, a hmlt. in the bar. of West Carbery, co. Cork, Ireland, near Ballydehob.

SWANWICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Afreton, co. Derby, 1¼ mile S.W. of Alfreton. This place is productive of coal, ironstone, and red clay. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the collieries, and some in frame-work knitting. The Grange and Swanwick Hall are the principal residences. The Baptists and Wesleyans have each a chapel. A free school was founded in 1740 by Mrs. E. Turner.

SWANWICK, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Sarisbury and par. of Titchfield, co. Hants, 4 miles N.W. of Fareham, on the river Hamble.

SWARBY, a par. in the wap. of Aswardhurn, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 4 miles S.W. of Sleaford, its post town, and 5 N.W. of Falkingham. The village is situated about half a mile off the direct road from London to Lincoln. The par. includes the hmlt. of Crofton. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £60. The church, dedicated to St. Mary and All Saints, is old. It was restored in 1855. There is a village school. Sir T. Whichcote, Bart., is lord of the manor.

SWARCLIFFE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Birstwith, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Ripley.

SWARDESTON, a par. in the hund. of Humbleyard, co. Norfolk, 4 miles S.W. of Norwich, its post town. The village is on the road from Norwich to New Buckenham. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary or to St. Andrew, is built of flint, and has a beautifully carved screen and several monuments to the Kemp family. The register dates from 1538. There is a village school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

SWARKESTONE, a par. in the hund. of Repton, co. Derby, 5¾ mile S.E. of Derby, its post town. The village is near the junction of the Derby canal with the Grand Trunk canal, and at the old bridge on the river Trent, which has 29 arches, and is 3,912 feet in length, though the river is here only 514 feet wide, the additional arches being intended to secure a passage over the low grounds, which are usually flooded in winter. At this place Sir J. Gell defeated the royalists in 1643. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £182. The church, dedicated to St. James, contains some monuments to the Harpur family, whose mansion was garrisoned by the royalists in the reign of Charles I.

SWARLAND, a tnshp. in the par. of Felton, E. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 7 miles S.W. of Alnwick, and 2 N.W. of Felton. The village is near the river Coquet. There is a Sunday-school, supported by the Rev. T. Ilderton. The principal residence is Swarland Hall, situated in a well-wooded park. In front of the Hall, and close to the great road between Morpeth and Alnwick, is an obelisk of white freestone, erected by the late Alexander Davison, Esq., to the memory of Lord Nelson.

SWARLING, a hmlt. in the par. of Petham, hund. of Bridge, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 4 miles S.S.W. of Canterbury. It is situated on the Downs, and is said to be the spot where the Britons encountered Cæsar at his first coming to Britain.

SWARRATON, a par. in the lower half div. of the hund. of Mitcheldever, co. Hants, 3½ miles N.W. of New Alresford, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Winchester. The village is situated a little to the E. of the road from Southampton to Basingstoke, and on a branch of the river Itchen. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Northington annexed, in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £110. The church has a modern spire. Divine service has been discontinued at the mother church, and the inhabitants attend the chapel-of-ease at Northington. There is a school for both sexes, entirely supported by Lady Ashburton. Lord Ashburton is lord of the manor.

SWATHLING, a hmlt. in the par. of Stoneham, co. Hants, 3 miles N.E. of Southampton, on the South-Western railway.

SWATON, a par. in the wap. of Aveland, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 5½ miles N.E. of Falkingham, its post town, and 4½ S. of Heckington station on the Boston and Sleaford line of railway. The village is on the ancient Roman Carr Dyke. The living is a vic.* with the rect. of Spanby annexed, in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £514. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. There is a free school. The Rev. Henry Lee Warner is lord of the manor.

SWATRAGH, a vil. in the par. of Maghera, bar. of Loughinsholin, co. Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Maghera. It is situated on the river Clody, and contains a Presbyterian meeting-house and a large school.

SWAVESEY, or SWASEY, a par. in the hund. of Papworth, co. Cambridge, 3 miles S.E. of St. Ive, its post town, and 11¾ N.W. of Cambridge. It is a station on the Great Eastern railway. The village, which is large, is situated on the river Ouse, near the Huntingdon and Cambridge road. It was formerly a market town, under a charter granted to the Zouch family in 1243, the site of whose ancient castle is about half a mile S.W. of the church. A Black alien priory was founded here soon after the Conquest, as a cell to the abbey of SS. Sergius and Bachus, and that of St. Briocus at Angiers. It was afterwards given by Richard II. to St. Anne's Priory, at Coventry. Upon the enclosure of the parish by Act of Parliament in 1838, an allotment of 5 acres was made for the purpose of recreation. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £428, in the patron. of Jesus College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, anciently belonged to the alien priory. The interior contains a piscina, stone stalls, niches, and the grave of Lady Cutts. The registers date from 1576 for marriages, and from 1613 for deaths. Ockley, the Arabic scholar, once vicar, &c., died here in 1720. The parochial charities produce about £64 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, which was erected in 1842. The Baptists and Unitarians have chapels. There is a Sunday-school, held at the National schoolhouse. The Hon. Mrs. Ryder is lady of the manor.

SWAYFIELD, a par. in the wap. of Bettisloe, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 4½ miles S.E. of Colsterworth, its post town, and 1½ mile S.W. of Corby railway station. The village is situated on the Great Northern railway, and on the river Glen. The houses are much scattered. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £293, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, was rebuilt, with the exception of the chancel, in 1824. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. The manor is the property of Brown's Hospital, to which the larger portion of the land belongs.

SWAY, a tythg. and ecclesiastical district in the par. of Boldre, co. Hants, 4 miles N.W. of Lymington. It is situated on Avon Water.

SWEENEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Oswestry, co. Salop, 2 miles S. of Oswestry.

SWEEP, a hmlt. in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Waterford, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Waterford.

SWEETHOPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Thockrington, N.E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 9 miles S.E. of Bellingham, and 1¾ mile N.W. of Thockrington. It is situated on the river Wansbeck, and is an extensive sheep farm. Sir W. C. Trevelyan is lord of the manor.

SWEET LOVES, a vil. in the tnshp. of Sharples, par. of Bolton-le-Moors, co. Lancaster, 3 miles N. of Bolton. The inhabitants are employed in the neighbouring collieries and cotton mills.

SWEFLING, a par. in the hund. of Plomesgate, co. Suffolk, 3 miles N.W. of Saxmundham, its post town, and 4½ from Framlingham. The village, which is irregularly built, is situated in a vale near the bridge over the river Alde. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £262. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a Norman doorway, and a tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. The Earl of Stradbroke is lord of the manor.

SWELL, a par. in the hund. of Abdick, co. Somerset, 4 miles S.W. of Langport, its post town. The village is near the river Isle. The living is a vic.* annexed to that of Fivehead, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells. The church, dedicated to St. Catherine, is old. The register dates from 1559. Swell Court is now converted into a farmhouse. J. S. Erle Drax, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SWELL, LOWER, a par. in the upper div. of Slaughter hund., co. Gloucester, 1 mile W. of Stow-on-the-Wold, its post town, and 4 miles W. of Addlestrop station on the Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton railway. The village is situated near Dorrington Hill and the ancient Fosse Way. In the vicinity are two stones of great antiquity, respectively called Whittlestone and Hoarstone. A mineral spring was discovered here in 1807, and is covered over with a spa house. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £100, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary the-Virgin, is an ancient edifice, originally built in the Early Norman style, but altered in the reign of Henry VII. There is a National school for both sexes, erected in 1851. J. Hudson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SWELL, UPPER, a par. in the hund. of Upper Kiftsgate, co. Gloucester, 1 mile N.W. of Stow-on-the-Wold, its post town, and 4 N.W. of Addlestrop station on the Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton railway. The village, consisting of a few farmhouses, is situated on the high road from Stow to Tewkesbury. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £85. The church, which is of great antiquity, was partly rebuilt in 1814. There is a day school for both sexes. The Roman Fosse Way bounds the parish on the E. C. V. N. Pole, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

SWEPSTONE, a par. in the hund. of West Goscote, co. Leicester, 5 miles S.E. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, its post town, and 5 from Bagworth railway station. The village is situated near the Ashby canal and river Mease. The par. includes the hmlts. of Newton, Burgoland, and Nethercote. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Snareston annexed, in the dioc. of Peterborough, joint val. £894. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is old, with a modern tower containing four bells. The E. window is of painted glass. The parochial charities produce about £154 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents and Primitive Methodists have chapels. Gopsall and Measham Hall are the principal residences. Miss A. M. Leslie is lady of the manor.

SWERFORD, a par. in the hund. of Chadlington, co. Oxford, 5 miles N.W. of Road Enstone, and 5 N.E. of Chipping-Norton. The village is on the river Snere. On Castle Hill are traces of ancient earthworks. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £496, in the patron. of Magdalen College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a free school for girls. R. Davis, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SWETTENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 5 miles N.W. of Congleton, its post town, and 3 from Holmes Chapel railway station. The village is situated on the river Dane. The par. includes the tnshps. of Kermincham and Swettenham. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £255. The church is old. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, built in 1840. The principal residence is Swettenham Hall. T. J. W. Swettenham, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SWIFT, a tributary of the Avon, rises near Knaptoft, in Leicestershire.

SWIFTGATE, a tributary of the Avon, rises near Cheltenham, in Gloucestershire.

SWILLAND, a par. in the hund. of Bosmere, co. Suffolk, 6 miles N.E. of Ipswich, its post town, and 5 from Claydon railway station. The village is small. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £227, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is old, with a Norman arch. The register dates from 1678. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. Mrs. Cowell is lady of the manor. There is a National school.

SWILLINGTON, a par. in the lower div. of Skyrack wap., West Riding co. York, 7 miles S.E. of Leeds, its post town. The village is near the river Aire, which bounds the parish on the S., and is here crossed by a bridge built in 1771. The par. includes the hmlt. of Astley, where is an extensive colliery. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £510. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains monuments of the Lowther family. The register dates from 1530. The parochial charities produce about £34 per annum, of which £18 go to the school, and £12 to the almshouses founded by Sir W. Lowther in 1748. Sir John Lowther, Bart., is lord of the manor. Near the glebe-house is a strong chalybeate spring.

SWILLY, a sea lough and river on the coast of co. Donegal, Ireland, containing Inch Island.

SWIN, a channel at the Thames mouth, between the Maplin and Barrow sands, forming the direct passage from the Nore to the North Sea.

SWIN, a loch on the W. side of Knapdale, co. Argyle, Scotland.

SWINANESS, a headland on the N. side of Balta Sound, Shetland Islands, Scotland.

SWINBRIDGE, a par. in the hund. of South Molton, co. Devon, 5 miles S.E. of Barnstaple, its post town. The village is large, and surrounded by hills. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Landkey, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church, dedicated to St. James, contains a sculptured stone pulpit, with figures of saints, a carved wooden screen, and tombs of the Chichesters of Athrington. The parochial charities produce about £132 per annum. There is a school for both sexes. The Baptists and Wesleyans have chapels. The Duke of Bedford is lord of the manor.

SWINBROOK, a par. in the hund. of Chadlington, co. Oxford, 2 miles E. of Burford, its post town, and 5 N.W. of Witney. The village is situated on the little river Windrush, near Wychwood Forest. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect. of Widford, in the dioc. of Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains remains of a rood-loft and wooden screen, and tombs of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £343 per annum, of which £60 go to Mrs. Pytt's school, and the remainder, being a bequest of Sir G. Fettiplace, to the poor of this and eleven other parishes. The old seat of the Fettiplaces is now in ruins.

SWINBURN, a hmlt. in the par. of Chollerton, N.E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 6½ miles N. of Hexham. The village is situated on the ancient Watling Street, and takes its name from the Swinburn brook, a tributary of the North Tyne.

SWINBURN, LITTLE, a vil. in the par. of Chollerton, co. Northumberland, 2 miles N.E. of Swinburn, and 9 N.E. of Hexham. It is joined with Whiteside Law to form a township.

SWINCLIFFE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Felliscliffe, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Ripley.

SWINCOMBE, or SWYNCOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Ewelme, co. Oxford, 3 miles S.E. of Watlington, and 1½ mile N.W. of Nettlebed, its post town. The village is situated under the Chiltern hills. The par. includes the hmlts. of Cookley Green and Park Corner, and commands an extensive prospect. A portion of the land is in down pasture, and about 200 acres in beech woods and plantations. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £325, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Botolph. Some fresco paintings were discovered on the walls whilst undergoing renovation. There are two schools for both sexes, one of them being devoted to domestic training. C. E. R. Keen, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SWINDALE, a chplry. in the par. of Shap, co. Westmoreland, 4 miles S.W. of Shap, and 11 N.W. of Orton. Penrith is its post town. It is situated on the river Lowther, in a narrow vale near Hawes Water. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £56, in the patron. of the Vicar of Shap. The church was built at the expense of the inhabitants in 1749. There is a school founded in 1703.

SWINDEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Gisburn, W. div. of Staincliff wap., West Riding co. York, 11 miles W.

of Skipton, and 7 S.E. of Settle. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

SWINDERBY, a par. in the lower div. of Boothby-Graffoe wap., parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 9 miles S.W. of Lincoln, and 8 N.E. of Newark. It is a station on the Midland railway. The village is on the Lincoln and Newark road, near the ancient Fosse Way. It was formerly held by the Disneys of Ingatestone. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £260. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum, of which £3 go to Disney's school. The Wesleyans have a chapel. H. C. Bingham, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SWINDON, a par. in the hund. of Cheltenham, co. Gloucester, 2 miles N.W. of Cheltenham, its post town. The village is situated on the road from Cheltenham to Tewkesbury, near the line of the Birmingham and Gloucester railway. The land is principally in pasture and orchard. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £479. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient Norman structure.

SWINDON, a lib. in the par. of Wombourn, S. div. of Seisdon hund., co. Stafford, 5 miles W. of Dudley, on the Stafford and Birmingham canal.

SWINDON, a par., post and market town, in the hund. of Kingsbridge, co. Wilts, 7 miles from Highworth, 10 from Marlborough, and 41 N. of Salisbury. It is an important station on the Great Western railway, where the Cheltenham Union branches off. This place is situated on a hill near the Wilts and Berks canal, which passes about half a mile from the town, and has here a reservoir of 70 acres. The par. contains the hmlt. of Castcott, and is mentioned in Domesday Book as Svindune. It is a polling-place for the county elections, and a petty sessions town. The locomotive department belonging to the Great Western Railway Company was removed here from Wootton-Basset in 1841, and hence the rapid increase and prosperity of the place. The works afford employment to many. There are some extensive stone quarries in the neighbourhood, producing immense blocks of Purbeck stone. Druidical remains are to be seen at Brome. The hill on which the town stands is sand, but all below and around the hill is clay. There are a mechanics' institute, first-class railway hotel, two banks, and a savings-bank, in the town, which is called New Swindon, and in 1861 contained a population of 4,167, the population of the whole parish being 6,856. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £302, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to the Holy Rood. There is also the district church of St. Mark's, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £120. The parochial charities produce about £162. There are two chapels for the Dissenters. Swindon Lawn is the principal residence. Market day is on Monday. Cattle fairs are held every other Monday, also on the Monday before 5th April, second Monday after 12th May, and 11th September, and on the second Monday in December.

SWINDON, a hmlt. in the pars. of Kirkby-Overblow and Pannall, wap. of Claro, West Riding co. York, 5½ miles S.W. of Wetherby. It is the property of the Earl of Harewood, who is lord of the manor.

SWINE, a par. in the middle div. of Holderness wap., East Riding co. York, 6¼ miles N.E. of Hull, and 6 N.W. of Hedon. It is a station on the Hull and Hornsea branch of the North-Eastern railway. The village is large. The par. comprises Belton, North and South Skirlaugh, Ellerbuy, and other tnshps. There was formerly a Cistercian nunnery, founded by Robert de Verli in the reign of Stephen, which at the Dissolution possessed a revenue of £134 6*s.* 9*d., when the site was given to the Greshams. There are traces of a Roman encampment, near which many relics have been discovered: in 1826 a Roman urn was found in a newly ploughed field, containing upwards of 1,000 copper coins. The living is a vic. with the cur. of Skirlaugh annexed, in the dioc. of York. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There is also a district church at Belton, an ancient Norman structure, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £140; and at Skirlaugh is a chapel-of-ease, built in the 14th century by Walter Skirlaw, Bishop of Durham. The parochial charities produce about £68 per annum, of which £11 go to Langdale's school. The Wesleyans have a chapel. Burton Constable is the principal residence. The Earl of Shaftesbury is lord of the manor.

SWINEFLEET, a chplry. in the par. of Whitgift, lower div. of Osgoldcross wap., West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Howden, its post town, and 3 N.E. of Goole. It is on the S. bank of the river Ouse, and formed part of the honour of Pontefract. The village, which was formerly a market town under the Lacys, earls of Lincoln, consists of a long range of houses close to the Ouse. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £127, in the patron. of the Vicar of Whitgift. The church is old. The charities produce about £35 per annum. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels.

SWINESHEAD, a par. in the hund. of Leightonstone, co. Huntingdon, 3 miles S.W. of Kimbolton, its post town, and 12 from Bedford. The village is on the Great Northern railway and a branch of the river Kym. It is nearly surrounded by Bedfordshire. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £280. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas.

SWINESHEAD, a par. in the wap. of Kirton, parts of Holland, co. Lincoln, 13 miles from Spalding, its post town, 7 S.W. of Boston, and 2 S. of the Swineshead station on the Boston and Sleaford railway. The par. includes the chplry. of Chapel Hill and 5 ext. par. places. It is the Saxon Swinesaefed, to which the sea once came up, and had a Cistercian abbey, founded by Robert de Greslei in 1134, and to which King John escaped in 1216, after losing his carriages and baggage in the Cross-Keys Wash. Swineshead was formerly a market town, and had a harbour near the market-place, and a bridge crossing a river then navigable, but now choked up. Ancient coins and skeletons have been dug up at different times, and in 1825, in the sinking of a well, a skeleton measuring about 6 feet 3 inches was discovered. A short distance N.W. of the town is the Man-of-War Rings, a double-ditched Danish camp 180 feet in diameter. The South Forty-foot and other drains run through the parish, and an Act was passed in 1840 for the more effectual drainage of certain lands. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £240, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains tombs of the Locktons, of Swineshead Abbey. There is a district church at Chapel Hill, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £47, in the patron. of the vicar. This chapel was erected in 1826 for the convenience of the inhabitants residing in that portion of the parish, and is about 10 miles distant from the village. The parochial charities produce about £540 per annum. There is a school for both sexes, founded and endowed in 1720 by T. Cowley, Esq. A fair occurs on 2nd October.

SWINESIDE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Carlton Highdale, par. of Coverham, North Riding co. York, 5 miles S.W. of Middleham, among the moors.

SWINETHORPE, an ext. par. place in the higher div. of Boothby-Graffoe wap., parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 7 miles S.W. of Lincoln. The Hall is situated in a park called the Jungles. The substratum contains coal of considerable thickness. Major Curteis is lord of the manor.

SWINETHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Snelland, W. div. of Wraggoe hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3 miles N.W. of Wragby.

SWINETHWAITE, a hmlt. in the par. of West Witton, North Riding co. York, 5 miles W. of Middleham.

SWINEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Latheron, co. Caithness, Scotland, 3 miles from Lybster.

SWINFEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Weeford, S. div. of Offlow hund, co. Stafford, 2 miles S.E. of Lichfield. The principal residence is Swinfen Hall.

SWINFORD a tythg. in the par. of Cumner, hund.

of Hormer, co. Berks, 4 miles N.W. of Oxford, near the bridge over the river Thames.

SWINFORD, a par. in the hund. of Guthlaxton, co. Leicester, 4 miles S.E. of Lutterworth, its post town, and 2 N.E. of Lilbourne railway station. The village is situated near the river Avon and the ancient Watling Street. There was once a preceptory of the Knights Templars. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £216. The church, dedicated to All Saints, had formerly a chantrey founded by Nic. Cowley, and has a circular E. end and pillar font. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents have a chapel. The Baroness de Braye, of Stanford Hall, is lady of the manor.

SWINFORD, a post and market town in the par. of Kilconduff, bar. of Gallen, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 15 miles S.E. of Ballina, and 140 N.W. of Dublin. It is situated on the river Swinford, and is a rising place. It contains the parish church, Roman Catholic chapel, National school, court-house, and police station. General sessions are held in April and October, and petty sessions once a week. Swinford is the head of a Poor-law Union, and contains the union poorhouse. Tuesday is the great pig market day, and fairs are held 1st February, 17th March, 20th May, 2nd July, 18th August, 31st October, and 18th December.

SWINFORD, KING'S. See KINGSWINFORD, co. Stafford.

SWINFORD, OLD, a par. partly in the S. div. of Seisdon hund., co. Stafford, but chiefly in the lower div. of Halfshire hund., co. Worcester, 1 mile S.E. of Stourbridge, 4½ miles S. of Dudley, and 7 N. of Kidderminster. It is a large and populous parish, situated near the canal and the river Stour, and includes the town of Stourbridge and the tnshps. of Upper Swinford, Ambleside, Lye, Wollaston, and Wollescott. Manufacture of iron and glass is carried on to some extent, and fireclay is procured from a depth of 100 yards. The population of the parish in 1861 was 22,958. [See STOURBRIDGE.] The living is a rect.* with the cur. of St. John's, Stourbridge, annexed, in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £781. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is old, and has a lich-gate. In addition to the parish church are the district churches of Stourbridge, St. Thomas, Lye, Amblecote, Wollaston, the livings of which are all perpet. curs., varying in val. from £200 to £100. The parochial charities produce about £3,159 per annum, of which sum £462 belong to the free grammar school, and £2,352 to Foley's Blue Coat school, or hospital for 70 boys; the school buildings are situated on the road to Bromsgrove. There are, besides several other endowed schools, National, infant, and denominational schools.

SWINFORD, UPPER, a tnshp. in the par. of Old Swinford, hund. of Halfshire, co. Worcester.

SWINGFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Folkestone, lathe of Shepway, co. Kent, 6 miles N. of Folkestone, its post town, and 6 N.W. of Dover. The village is on a hill near the road from Folkestone to Canterbury. The land is partly in common, of which 620 acres, in Swingfield Minnis, were enclosed under an Act in 1840. In the vicinity is a farmhouse formed out of the ruins of the preceptory of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, founded before 1190, and which at the Dissolution had a revenue of £87 3*s.* 3*d.* The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £54. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, contains some old monuments of the Pilcher family. Bishop Robert de Swingfield was born in this parish, and died in 1316.

SWINHOE, a tnshp. in the par. of Bambrough, N. div. of Bambrough ward, co. Northumberland, 9 miles N.E. of Alnwick, and 8 S.E. of Belford. It is situated near the coast, and was once held by the De Vescis, from whom it came to the Nevilles of Raby. The soil is clayey.

SWINHOPE, a par. in the hund. of Bradley-Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 7½ miles S.E. of Caistor, its post town, 2 N. of Binbrooke, and 6 from the North Thoresby station on the East Lincolnshire railway. The village is situated on the Wolds. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £117. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, is ancient. The register dates from 1697. Swinhope House is the principal residence. The Rev. M. Alington is lord of the manor.

SWINNERTON, a par. in the N. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford, 4 miles N.W. of Stone, its post-town, and 1½ mile W. of the Standon station on the London and North-Western railway. The village is near the river Sow. The par. comprises the tnshps. of Acton, Hatton, Shelton, Yarnfield, Millstone Green, and Stableford. It was formerly a market town, and belonged to the Saxon kings. In the reign of Henry VIII. it came to the Swinnertons, and from them to the Fitzherberts. The Staffordshire hounds meet in this parish. The surface is hilly, and the soil generally gravelly. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £1,070. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is old, and contains effigies of the Swinnertons, and a colossal figure of the Saviour pointing to the wound in his side, which was discovered buried at a short distance from its present situation. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum. There is a charity school for both sexes. The Roman Catholics have a chapel in Swinnerton Park. The principal residence is Swinnerton Hall, situated near the church. The park extends over an area of about 1,000 acres. J. Fitzherbert, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SWINSCOE, a tnshp. in the par. of Blore, N. div. of Totmonslow hund., co Stafford, 3 miles N.W. of Ashborne. It is joined with Blore.

SWINSTEAD, a par. in the wap. of Beltisloe, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 6 miles N.W. of Bourne, its post town, and 2 S.E. of Corby railway station. In its vicinity is a cross of great antiquity, also a spring of excellent water. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £80. The church, dedicated to St. Luke or St. Mary, contains a monument of the last Duke of Ancaster. The church was thoroughly restored in 1854, and the chancel in 1859, when several stained windows were inserted. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, and an infant school, principally supported by Lord Willoughby d'Eresby. The Baptists have a chapel. In the neighbourhood are traces of the old seat of the Ancaster family. Lord Willoughby d'Eresby is lord of the manor.

SWINTON, a par. in the district of Merse, co. Berwick, Scotland. It comprises a vil. of its own name and the ancient par. of Simprin. It extends in length about 4 miles from E. to W., with an extreme breadth of 2¾ miles. It is watered by the rivulet Leet, which abounds in pike. The soil is very fertile, and for the most part under good cultivation. The predominant rock is the New Red sandstone, which is quarried. The parish is traversed by the north road from Kelso to Berwick, and by the road from Coldstream to Dunse. The village is about 6 miles from Dunse and Norham railway stations. There are brick and tile works. The estate has been held for 800 years by the Swintons, of Swinton House, of which family were the hero of Scott's "Homildon Hill," and the poet's grandmother. This par. is in the presb. of Chirnside and synod of Merse and Teviotdale, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is about £241. The parish church was erected in 1593, and enlarged in 1837. It bears evidence of having been fortified, and contains an effigy of Allan Swinton, who died in 1200. There are a Free church and a parochial school. The demesne of Simprin, now included in this parish, came from the Cockburns to Lord Elibank, who built the great barn here, which is seen from a long distance.

SWINTON, a vil. in the par. of Old Monkland, co. Lanark, Scotland, 6 miles E. of Glasgow.

SWINTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Appleton-le-Street, wap. of Ryedale, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of New Malton.

SWINTON, a hmlt. and chplry. in the tnshp. of Worsley and par. of Eccles, co. Lancaster, 4½ miles

N.W. of Manchester, its post town, and 6 E. of Bolton. The village is situated on the main road to Manchester. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the cotton mills, collieries, and brick kilns. The Manchester training school is situated here. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £126, in the patron. of the Vicar of Eccles. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a cruciform structure, built in 1791. There is a National school for both sexes, at which a Sunday-school is also held. The Wesleyans, Independents, and Unitarians have chapels.

SWINTON, a chply. and tnshp. in the par. of Wath-upon-Dearne, N. div. of Strafforth wap., West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of Rotherham, its post town, and 9 S.W. of Doncaster. It is a junction station on the North Midland railway. The village is situated at the junction of the Dearne and Dove navigation with the river Don, and has several shops. The population of the tnshp. in 1861 was 3,190. The gas-works were established in 1856. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the Don potteries and in a porcelain manufactory established by Earl Fitzwilliam. A large portion of the land is in pasture. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £340. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, was rebuilt, chiefly at the expense of Earl Fitzwilliam, who gave the site in 1817. There are National schools for both sexes, including infants, at which Sunday-schools are also held. The Independents and Wesleyans have chapels. The Earl Fitzwilliam is lord of the manor.

SWINTON-WITH-WATHERMASK, a tnshp. in the par. of Masham, partly in the lib. of St. Peter's and partly in the wap. of East Hang, North Riding co. York, 1 mile S.W. of Masham. The tnshp. includes the hmlt. of Roomer. The principal seat is Swinton House.

SWITHEN, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Kexborough, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N.W. of Barnsley.

SWITHLAND, a par. in the hund. of West Goscote, co. Leicester, 6 miles S. of Loughborough, its post town, and 4½ S.W. of the Sileby station on the Midland railway. The village is on a branch of the river Soar. The soil consists of clay, sand, and gravel. This parish is noted for its excellent blue slate quarries, which are extensively worked. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £300, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, contains a brass of Lady Ferrers, bearing date 1460. There is a free school, built at the expense of the Earl of Lanesborough. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The Hall is the principal residence.

SWONA. See SWANNAY, Orkney Isles, Scotland.

SWORDS, a par., post, and market town in the bar. of Nethercross, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is situated on the steep banks of a stream, 9 miles N. of Dublin. It is a station on the Dublin and Drogheda railway. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with others £329, in the patron. of the archbishop. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and a large charity school. Brackenstown is one of the chief seats. The town is a place of great antiquity, and is supposed to have originated in a monastery founded here by St. Columbkill. Here, on the outbreak of the civil war in 1641, the first Irish army assembled. In this parish are the ruins of a castle and round tower, and some other antiquities. Fairs are held on 17th March, 9th May, 12th July, and 8th November.

SWYDD, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandegley, hund. of Cefnllys, co. Radnor, 5 miles N.W. of Radnor. In the vicinity is Llandegley spa.

SWYDD, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanfihangel Lledrod, co. Cardigan, 5 miles N.W. of Tregaron, on the river Wyrai.

SWYRE, a par. in the hund. of Uggscombe, Dorchester div. of co. Dorset, 5½ miles S.E. of Bridport, its post town. The village is situated about a mile from the coast of the English Channel. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Sarum, value £140. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. The register dates from 1754. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. A National school was erected in 1851, at the expense of the Duke of Bedford, who is lord of the manor.

SYCHART, a tnshp. in the par. of Llansilin, co. Denbigh, 4 miles S.W. of Oswestry.

SYCH-DYN. See SOUGHTON, co. Flint.

SYCHRYD, a stream of cos. Brecon and Glamorgan, joins the river Hepste near Pont-nydd-fechan.

SYCHTYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llansilin, upper div. of Oswestry hund., co. Salop, 4 miles S.W. of Oswestry, its post town. It is situated in a bleak and mountainous district. The Independents and Welsh Methodists have chapels. The Earl of Powis is lord of the manor.

SYDENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Lewknor, co. Oxford, 4 miles S. of Thame, its post town, and 2½ E. of Tetsworth. The par. includes the hmlt. of Sydenham Street. The living is a vic..* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £100, in the patron. of trustees. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities consist in 30 acres of land. The Baptists have two chapels. The Baroness Wenman, of Thame Park, is lady of the manor.

SYDENHAM, a suburban district of the metropolis, forming a chplry. in the par. of Lewisham, hund. of Blackheath, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 7 miles S.E. of London, with which it is connected by several lines of railway. It occupies an elevated spot on the S. side of the metropolis, and is a rapidly increasing place. About 1610 it first came into public notice on account of a mineral spring, which was supposed to possess peculiar medicinal virtues, and for the benefit of which invalids often came from a considerable distance. This raised the village from a cluster of huts to a town, and though the fame of the spa subsequently declined, the village continued to increase, and was divided under the Act of 58 George III. into the two district parishes of St. Bartholomew's, Sydenham, and Christchurch, Forest Hill. The formation of Sydenham Park, and the removal hither of the Crystal Palace, from Hyde Park, in October, 1851, upon the close of the great International Exhibition, tended much to the improvement of the neighbourhood. The population of the entire chapelry in 1861 was 10,595, comprising 4,641 in Forest Hill, and 5,955 in St. Bartholomew's, Sydenham; the latter district having more than doubled in population in the 20 years between 1841 and 1861. The town now contains a public lecture hall, working-men's institution, and horticultural society; but the attraction is the Crystal Palace, situated in a park of 200 acres, well laid out. The building, which was opened by her Majesty the Queen and the late Prince Consort, on the 10th of June, 1854, is of iron and glass, measuring 1,608 feet in length by 312 feet in general width, besides two wings 574 feet each in length. The height of the great transept from the basement is 198 feet, and that of the water towers 284 feet, at the top of which are tanks holding 357,675 gallons of water for supplying the fountains, which throw 120,000 gallons of water in a minute. The livings of St. Bartholomew's, Sydenham, and Christchurch, Forest Hill, are perpet. curs.,* the former val. £248, and the latter £150. The church of St. Bartholomew was erected in 1830 on the common, at a cost of above £10,000, the greater part of which was allowed by the Parliamentary Commissioners, and a new chancel, with painted windows and carved stone reredos, has since been added. The register dates from the consecration of the church. Christchurch, Forest Hill, is on the hill, and was commenced in 1854, but the tower and spire have not yet been completed. There are besides Sydenham old chapel, which forms a chapel-at-ease to Lewisham, and the Episcopal chapel at Lower Sydenham, recently enlarged and improved. The Baptists have a chapel of recent erection, and there are chapels for Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, Independents, and Bible Christians. There are National and infant schools for St. Bartholomew's and Christchurch districts, also British and Foreign, and Sunday schools in connection with the several denominations. In Sydenham Park is an Elizabethan pile of buildings, called Sydenham College, with a staff of professors. There are also numerous private academies and boarding schools. Campbell resided here when Byron and Moore visited him in 1811. A pleasure fair was until recently held on Trinity-Monday.

SYDENHAM-DAMEREL, or SOUTH SYDENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Lifton, co. Devon, 5 miles N.W. of Tavistock, its post town. The village is situated on the river Tamar, which separates it from Cornwall. Traces of copper and lead have been discovered, and slate is quarried. The northern extremity of the parish is crossed by the Tavistock and Launceston road. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £207. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities consist of Tremayne's, £70 per annum. There is an infant school, supported by voluntary contributions. The Bible Christians have a chapel. The executors of the late John Carpenter, Esq., are lords of the manor and principal landowners.

SYDERSTONE, a par. in the hund. of Gallow, co. Norfolk, 6 miles N.W. of Fakenham, its post town. The village is situated on the road from Fakenham to Docking. There is a considerable tract of heath. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £534. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a round tower containing one bell. The register dates from 1584. There is a National school. The Wesleyans have a chapel, also the Primitive Methodists. The Marquis of Cholmondeley is lord of the manor.

SYDLING ST. NICHOLAS, a par. and lib. in the Cerne div. of co. Dorset, 8 miles N.W. of Dorchester, its post town, and 2½ S.W. of Cerne-Abbas. It comprises the tythgs. of Upper Sydling and Fifehead Sydling. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £169, in the patron. of Winchester College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has a tower containing five bells. The chancel was rebuilt by the late Sir William Smith. There is also a district church at Hilfield, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £52. The church was erected in 1680. The parochial charities produce about £31 per annum, which belongs to Barber's school.

SYDMONTON, a chplry. in the par. and hund. of Kingsclere, co. Hants, 7 miles N.E. of Whitchurch. The chapel, dedicated to St. Mary, is in the park, and has a Norman arch.

SYERSCOTE, a tnshp. in the par. of Tamworth, N. div. of Offlow hund., co. Stafford, 3 miles N.E. of Tamworth.

SYERSTON, a par. in the S. div. of Newark wap., co. Nottingham, 6 miles S.W. of Newark, and 4 E. of Thurgarton railway station. The village is situated on the old Fosse Road, near the river Trent. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of East Stoke, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church is dedicated to All Saints.

SYKE-GREEN, WEST, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Felliscliffe, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Ripley.

SYKEHOUSE, a chplry. in the par. of Fishlake, S. div. of Strafforth wap., West Riding co. York, 4½ miles from Snaith, its post town, and 4 N.W. of Thorne. The village is situated near the river Wente, or Don, and on the Goole canal. The township includes plots of land awarded to it on the enclosure of Hatfield Chase and Thorne Common. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £100, in the patron. of the Vicar of Fishlake. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is built of stone with a tower of brick, added in 1724. The parochial charities produce about £22 per annum, of which £3 go to a school. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel.

SYKES, a hmlt. in the par. of Keighley, West Riding co. York, near Keighley.

SYLEHAM, a par. in the hund. of Hoxne, co. Suffolk, 6 miles N.E. of Eye, and 3½ S.W. of Harleston. Scole is its post town. The village is situated on the river Waveney, which separates it from the county of Norfolk. A large portion of the soil is marshy. The par. includes the hmlt. of Esham, where was formerly a chapel-of-ease. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £88. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has monuments to Mrs. Bridget and Anne Lamb. The register dates from 1538. Syleham Hall is the principal residence. Miss Taylor is lady of the manor.

SYLFAEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Castle Caereinion, co. Montgomery, 4 miles S.W. of Welshpool.

SYMINGTON, a par. in the district of Kyle, co. Ayr, Scotland. It comprises a vil. of the same name. The parish extends in length about 4 miles from E. to W., with a breadth of about 1½ mile. The higher grounds command a prospect of the Frith of Clyde. The land is fertile, and for the most part under good cultivation. The soil is chiefly of a clayey nature upon a substratum of sandstone and whinstone, which are quarried to some extent. Traces of coal and limestone have been found, but are not worked. The parish is traversed by the road from Kilmarnock to Ayr, and by the Kilmarnock and Troon railway, which has a station here; it is likewise within easy access of the Troon and Monkton stations on the Glasgow and Ayr railway. The village of Symington is about 5 miles S.W. of Kilmarnock, and 7 S.E. of Irvine. It was formerly held by Symon Lockhart, ancestor of the Lockharts of Lee. This par. is in the presb. of Ayr and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The stipend of the minister is about £261. The parish church is an ancient structure, enlarged and restored in 1797. There are a Free church and a Free church school. The principal seats are Williamfield, Townend, Dankeith, and Rosemount.

SYMINGTON, a par. in the upper ward of co. Lanark, Scotland. It comprises a vil. of its own name. The parish extends in length about 3 miles from N.E. to S.W., with a breadth of 1½ mile. The river Clyde bounds the parish on the N. and E., and on the western side the Tinto Hill rises 2,312 feet above sea-level. On the declivity of the Tinto are traces of an ancient castle, designated Fatlips. The parish is traversed by the road from Edinburgh to Dumfries, and by the main trunk of the Caledonian railway, on which it has a station. The village is about 3½ miles S.W. of Biggar. It is situated on the river about a quarter of a mile E. of an ancient circular camp called Castlehill, which is well planted. This par. is in the presb. of Biggar and synod of Lothian and Tweedale. The stipend of the minister is about £164. The parish church is very old. There are a parochial school and library.

SYMONDSBURY, a par. in the hund. of Whitchurch Canonicorum, co. Dorset, 1 mile W. of Bridport, its post town, and 6 miles from Beaminster. The village is situated on the road from London to Exeter, and is watered by the small river Simene. The surface is marked by several conical hills. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £969. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum.

SYMOND'S-HALL, a tythg. in the par. of Wotton-under-Edge, upper div. of Berkeley hund., co. Gloucester, 3 miles N.E. of Wotton.

SYNFIN-WITH-ARLESTON, a lib. in the par. of Barrow, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 2½ miles S.W. of Derby.

SYRESHAM-WITH-CROWFIELD, a par. in the hund. of King's-Sutton, co. Northampton, 4½ miles N.E. of Brackley, its post town. The village is situated on a branch of the river Ouse, and on the road from Brackley to Towcester. There are stone quarries. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £152. The church is dedicated to St. James. The parochial charities produce about £28 per annum. There is a village school for both sexes, endowed with an annuity of £16. The Wesleyans have a chapel. Nicholas Parry, Esq., is lord of the manor.

SYRIOR, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandrillo, co. Merioneth, 5 miles S.W. of Corwen.

SYSONBY, a par. in the hund. of Framland, co. Leicester, 1 mile W. of Melton-Mowbray, its post town.

The village is situated on the river Wreak. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Melton-Mowbray, in the dioc. of Peterborough. Lord Dysart is lord of the manor.

SYSTON, a par. and small town in the hund. of East Goscote, co. Leicester, 4½ miles N.E. of Leicester, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Barrow-on-Soar. It is a station on the Midland Counties railway. The village is situated on the ancient Fosse Way and Grand Junction canal, near the junction of the Soar and Wreak navigations. In the village are a needle factory and malt works, but the chief occupation of the inhabitants is in framework knitting. The streets are lighted with gas. There are excellent gypsum and lime works, and plaster of Paris is made. The Belvoir hounds meet in this parish. Part of the land is in rich meadow. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £115, in the patron. of the University of Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a tower containing a clock and six bells. It formerly had a chantry. The parochial charities produce about £40 per annum, of which the greater portion goes towards church repairs. There are a grammar school, also National, infant, and Sunday schools. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Particular Baptists have chapels. The Earl of Stamford is lord of the manor.

SYSTON, a par. in the wap. of Winnibriggs, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 3 miles N.E. of Grantham, its post town. The ancient Ermine Street bounds the parish on the E. The burial-ground, with the distant woods of Jericho, are celebrated by Sir Walter Scott, under the name of Willingham, in his "Heart of Mid-Lothian." The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £83. The church is dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin. The chancel contains a painting figuring the Adoration of the Shepherds, the gift of Sir John Hayford Thorold, Bart. There are monuments of the Thorold family. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum. There is a free school for about 50 children, endowed with an annuity of £30 by Margaret Lady Thorold in 1717. The principal residence is Syston Hall, celebrated for its library. Sir J. C. Thorold, Bart., is lord of the manor.

SYWELL, a par. in the hund. of Hamfordshoe, co. Northampton, 5 miles W. of Wellingborough, its post town, and 6 N.E. of Northampton. The par. includes the ext. par. place of Sywell Bray Lodge, and is traversed by the road from Northampton to Lincoln. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £492. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, has an ivy-covered tower. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a school for infants.

T

TA, a lough near Broadway, co. Wexford, Ireland, 1 mile W. of Carnsore Point. It is about 3 miles in circumference, and contains Inish and Lady's islands, and the ruins of a castle.

TAASKER, an islet on the coast of co. Argyle, Scotland, on the southern side of Islay.

TABLE MOUNTAIN, a lofty peak in co. Wicklow, Ireland, 6 miles E. of Donard. It attains an elevation of 2,302 feet above sea-level.

TABLEY, INFERIOR, a tnshp. in the par. of Great Budworth, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 2 miles S.W. of Knutsford, its post town. It is a small agricultural village, situated on the road leading from Northwich to Altrincham. The manor belonged to the family of Leycester prior to 1276, and in July, 1826, Sir J. F. Leicester, Bart., was created Baron Leicester, of Tabley. The old hall, now in ruins, is situated on an island, with a bridge connecting it to the grounds, and adjoining is a chapel, built at the expense of Lord De Tabley. A short distance from the old hall stands Tabley Hall, a building of red brick with stone dressings. The park, which is extensive and well-timbered, contains several lakes. A free school was erected in 1856 by the above-mentioned nobleman, who is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum.

TABLEY, SUPERIOR, a tnshp. in the par. of Rostherne, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 2 miles N.W. of Knutsford, its post town, and 6½ N.E. of Northwich. It is situated on the turnpike road leading from Altrincham to Chester. The soil is of a clayey and sandy nature, with a subsoil of marl. Cheese of excellent quality is made here. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £100. The church, dedicated to St. Paul, is a stone edifice containing one bell. It was built in 1855, but having been burnt down, was again rebuilt in 1856, and endowed by T. J. L. Brooke, Esq., of Mere Hall. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. A Sunday-school is held in the church. Over Tabley Hall, Tabley Villa, and Yew-Tree House, are the principal residences. Lord De Tabley and T. J. L. Brooke, Esq., are lords of the manor.

TACHBROOK, BISHOP'S. See BISHOP'S TACHBROOK, co. Warwick.

TACHBROOK-MALLORY, a hmlt. in the par. of Bishop's Tachbrook, Kenilworth div. of Knightlow hund., co. Warwick, 3½ miles S.E. of Warwick. It is situated on a branch of the river Avon, and is a meet for the Warwickshire hounds.

TACHBYAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandilo-fawr, co. Carmarthen, near Llandilo-fawr.

TACKLEY, a par. in the hund. of Wootton, co. Oxford, 3 miles N.E. of Woodstock, its post town, and 9 from Oxford. The village is on the Oxford canal and the river Cherwell. The par. includes the hmlt. of Nethercote, and belonged to the Nowers and Aylworths. A peculiar sort of earth used for flooring barns and cottages abounds. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £742, in the patron. of St. John's College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a cruciform structure with a square tower. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a National school for both sexes. The Roman way Akeman Street passes through the parish, and separates the two manors of the Duke of Marlborough and Sir H. Dashwood, Bart.

TACOLNESTONE, a par. in the hund. of Depwade, co. Norfolk, 5 miles S.E. of Wymondham, its post town, and 3 N.E. of Forncett railway station. The village is situated on the road from New Buckenham to Norwich. Edward I. granted to John de Uvedale a market to be held on Wednesday and two annual fairs, all of which have long since fallen into disuse. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £498. The church is large, and dedicated to All Saints. It contains monuments to the Knife and Gobbet families. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum, of which £5 go to Knife's almshouses. There is a National school. John Tacesphalus, prior of the Carmelite friary at Norwich, who wrote against the Lollards, was born in this parish.

TACUMSHIN, a par. in the bar. of Forth, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Killinick. Broadway is its post town. It is situated on Lough Tacumshin and Lady's Island Lake. Sea-weed is used for manure. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with others, £789, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is now a ruin. Here are a parochial school and a coast-guard station. Bennetstown is the chief residence. There is a very extensive fishery, and immense flocks of sea-fowl frequent the coast.

TADCASTER, a par. and market town partly in the upper div. of Barkstone Ash wap., West Riding co. York, and partly in York Ainsty, 9 miles S.W. of York, and 4½ N.W. of Church Fenton station. It is a station on the Harrogate section of the North-Eastern railway. It is situated on both banks of the river Wharfe, which is navigable for vessels of 50 tons, and is crossed by a stone bridge of nine arches, built out of the ruins of the old castle, which stood on a hill to the N.W. of the town. The par. comprises the tnshps. of East and West Tadcaster, Stutton-cum-Hazlewood, Cat-terton, and Oxton. The town, which is of great antiquity, occupies the site of the Roman station Calcaria, or Calca-ceaster of Bede, so named from the limestone which abounds in the vicinity. At Towton, within 2 miles of the town, was fought the battle which displaced Henry VI. and elevated Edward IV. to the throne. In 1642 Tadcaster was taken by the Duke of Newcastle from Fairfax. The town contains about 2,500 inhabitants, and is situated at the intersection of the great road from London to York, and the road from York to Leeds. It is lighted with gas and partially paved. There is a townhall, recently presented to the town by the late Lord Londesborough, also several malt-kilns, a brewery, large corn-mill, and a poorhouse for Tadcaster West. The occupations of the inhabitants are chiefly connected with agriculture, and some business is done in the general trade, though the railways have destroyed its transit traffic, which was once very considerable. The surrounding district is fertile and well wooded, and in the vicinity is Marle quarry, from which the stone was obtained of which York cathedral and several other churches were built. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £240. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a stone structure of the 14th century, with a tower containing six bells. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Independents have each a chapel. There are a grammar school, founded in 1558 by Bishop Oglethorpe, of Carlisle, and a girls' school, founded by Mrs. Dawson, also National and Sunday schools—the last being the first opened in England. The charities include 4 almshouses and 20 female annuitants on Mrs. Dawson's foundation; each receive from £10 to £15 per annum. Petty sessions are held fortnightly on Monday, and a new county court monthly. It is the head of a superintendent registry district. The manor anciently belonged to the Vavasours, but now to Lord Londesborough, of Grimston Hall. Many Roman antiquities have been found in the neighbourhood, and there are still traces of the Roman entrenchment round the town. Market day is on Monday. Fairs are held on the last Wednesdays in May, October, and November, chiefly for cattle and hiring servants.

TADDINGTON, a hmlt in the par. of Stanway, co. Gloucester, 4 miles N.E. of Winchcomb.

TADDINGTON, a chplry. in the par. of Bakewell, hund. of High Peake, co. Derby, 6 miles N.W. of Bakewell, its post town, and 4 S.E. of Tideswell. The village is situated in Taddington Vale. A short distance from the village, on the summit of Five Wells Hill, is a burial-place of the ancient Britons. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £87, in the patron. of the Vicar of Bakewell. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. Near it is an ancient stump cross. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum, exclusive of Priestcliff Grammar school, which is endowed with an annuity of £80, realised from land. There is also a free school for twelve poor children, endowed with an annuity of £15.

TADLEY, a par. in the hund. of Overton, Kingsclere div. of co. Hants, 7 miles from Basingstoke, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Mortimer railway station. The village is on the road from Basingstoke to Aldermaston. Part of the land is in common. The making of brooms is carried on to a considerable extent. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Overton, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a small edifice with a tower. The parochial charities produce about £2 10*s.* per annum. There is a church school. The Independents have a chapel, also a school. The Bishop of Winchester is lord of the manor.

TADLOW, a par. in the hund. of Armingford, co. Cambridge, 8 miles N.W. of Royston, and 13 S.W. of Cambridge. The village is situated on the river Cam. The soil is of a clayey nature, with a subsoil of clay. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £120, in the patron. of Downing College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, contains some effigies bearing date 1496. The register dates from 1770. A Sunday-school is held at the church.

TADMARTON, a par. in the hund. of Bloxham, co. Oxford, 4½ miles S.W. of Banbury, its post town, and 25 N.W. of Oxford. The village is situated on a branch of the river Cherwell. In the vicinity are Hook-Norton Barrow, Tadmarton Castle, and another ancient camp, where the Danes beat the Saxons in 914. Roman coins have been discovered here. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £307, in the patron. of Worcester College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure with a tower. There is a National school for both sexes.

TAF, or TAVE, a river of co. Carmarthen, rises under Precelly Mountain, on the borders of co. Pembroke, and falls into Carmarthen Bay, below Laugharne.

TAFF-WITH-CYNNON, a hmlt. in the par. of Merthyr Tydfil, co. Glamorgan, 6 miles S. of Merthyr Tydfil. It is situated on the Taff river, which rises under Brecknock Beacons, in South Brecon, in two heads, and flows 35 miles to the Bristol Channel, at Cardiff.

TAFOLOG, a tnshp. in the par. of Cemmes, hund. of Machynlleth, co. Montgomery, 7 miles N.E. of Machynlleth.

TAF-VECHAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanthetty, co. Brecon, 8 miles S. of Brecknock. It is situated on the river Taff. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's. The church is a modern structure.

TAGGART, an islet in Lough Strangford, co. Down, near Killyleagh; also another islet in Clew Bay, co. Mayo, Ireland.

TAGHADOE, or TAPTOO, a par. in the bar. of North Salt, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Maynooth, its post town. It lies between the Royal canal and river Liffey. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. £177. There is a small church, erected by aid of the late Board of First Fruits. A round tower and the remains of a chapel are seen. Brooklawn is a neighbouring residence.

TAGHBOY, a par. in the bars. of Killian and Athlone, cos. Galway and Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 12 miles N. of Ballinasloe. Roscommon is its post town. It is situated on the river Suck, and consists of a light soil, including some bog. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. £111, in the patron. of the bishop. There are three schools. Claremont is the principal residence. There is a mineral spring in this parish, also a police station.

TAGHEEN, a par. in the bar. of Clanmorris, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles W. of Clare. Hollymount is its post town. It lies along the river Robe, and consists of a good soil, including some bog. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with Hollymount £515, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Crossboyne. There are two private schools. Holybrook is the principal residence.

TAGHMA-CONNELL, a par. in the bar. of Athlone, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Ballinasloe, its post town. This parish, which lies near the river Suck, comprises much bog. The soil is ill cultivated. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Clonfert, val. with Creagh £216, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a Roman Catholic chapel and three private schools. Glenmore is the chief residence. In this parish are the ruins of Taghma-Connell Abbey, and of two religious houses, the one at Ballinnina, and the other at Clonohill, also castle ruins.

TAGHMON, a par. in the bar. of Corkaree, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles N.E. of Mullingar, its post town. It is situated on Lough Dereveragh, and is crossed by the road from Mullingar to Castle-Pollard. It comprises some woodland and bog. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with two others £307, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an ancient Gothic structure. The Roman Catholic chapel is at Monktown. There are two schools, also traces of several raths.

TAGHMON, a par., post and market town in the bars. of Bargy and West Shelmaliere, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 7 miles W. of Wexford. It is situated on the road from New Ross to Wexford. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with two others £511, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and two public schools. Slevoy Castle and Harperstown are the principal seats. The town originated in a monastery, founded by St. Munno in the 6th century. It was sacked by the Danes early in the 10th century, and was afterwards given to Ferns Abbey. The town contains a chief police station, barracks, and dispensary. Petty sessions are held at intervals. The place was formerly a parliamentary borough, returning two members before the Union. Tuesday and Friday are market days.

TAGHSHEENOD, a par. in the bars. of Shrule and Moydow, co. Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Ballymahon. Colehill is its post town. The surface consists of a medium soil. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns united with Moydow. Here are two day schools, also ruins of the church at Loughan. Park and Richmount are the principal seats. Here are ruins of an abbey, founded by Gormgall O'Quin in the time of King John, and of Mornine Castle.

TAGHSHINNY, a par. and post-office vil. in the bars. of Rathcline and Shrule, co. Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. The surface consists of a good soil, with some bog. The parish is traversed by the river Inny, on which stands the village, and by the Royal canal. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Ardagh, val. with Abbeyshruel, £286, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is about a century old, and contains a monument to Judge Gore. There are two or three schools, chiefly supported by private charity. Park Place and Doory Hall are the chief residences. Black stone is quarried here. Fairs are held on 27th March and 28th May.

TAGOAT, a post-office vil. in the par. of Rosslare, bar. of Forth, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Killinick. It is situated near Wexford harbour, on the road to Wexford, and has a Roman Catholic chapel and chief police station. Hill Castle is the neighbouring seat.

TAI, a tnshp. in the par. of Bettws-yn-Rhôs, co. Denbigh, 3 miles S.W. of Abergele.

TAIBACH, a vil. in the par. of Havod-y-Porth, co. Glamorgan, 1 mile S.E. of Aberafon. It is situated near the Bristol Channel. In the vicinity are Vivian's "Constantinople" copper, tin, and coal works.

TAILBERT, a hmlt. in the par. of Shap, co. Westmoreland, 2 miles S.W. of Shap.

TAIN, a par., market town, royal and parliamentary burgh in the district of Easter Ross, cos. Ross and Cromarty, Scotland. The par., which contains the vil. of Inver, extends 8 miles along the S. shore of Dornoch Firth, by a breadth of 2 miles inland. The surface is generally level, but rises into hills towards the W., the highest being Tain Hill, 800 feet above sea-level, where limestone is quarried. The sea-shore is flat and sandy, the uplands well wooded, and the land near the town much improved. The town, which was anciently called Baldaich, signifying in Gaelic "the town of St. Duthac," is situated on a gentle acclivity about a mile from the Firth of Dornoch, across which arm of the sea several ferries have been established, and near the head of which is an iron bridge. Tain is about 46 miles N. of Inverness, and 26 N.E. of Dingwall, and is a station on the Highland railway. The streets are irregularly laid out, but have of late years been much improved by the erection of many good houses and several public buildings. Among the latter are the new townhall, which was rebuilt in 1833 on the site of the old one, then used as a place of confinement for debtors, also a large modern edifice for assemblies and public meetings, a borough gaol, reading rooms, savings-bank, and three commercial banks, being branches respectively of the North of Scotland, British Linen Company, and of the Commercial Bank of Scotland. The most prominent branches of industry are distilling, brewing, an iron foundry, and in the vicinity of the town is a woollen mill. Though seated almost on the shore of an arm of the sea, Tain is not a shipping port, on account of a difficulty of navigating the firth, at the entrance to which there is on each side a bank of quicksands, named "Gizzen Briggs," leaving scarcely sufficient in the channel for a vessel to pass at high water. As a royal burgh, it is governed under charter of James II. by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer, and 15 councillors, and unites with Cromarty and other contributory burghs in returning one member to parliament. A sheriff's small-debts court is held every Wednesday during session. The burgh revenue is about £400. The par. is in the presb. of Tain, to which it gives name. The minister's stipend is £300. The parish church is a massive quadrangular structure, with a tower at each angle. It was originally built in 1471 for a college, and was dedicated to St. Duthac, whose effigies it contained, as also a carved oak pulpit. Tradition records that James IV. made a pilgrimage to this shrine on foot from Falkland, in Fifeshire, in 1527. St. Duthac's chapel, also in ruins, had the privilege of sanctuary, and was that to which the wife and daughter of Robert Bruce fled when given up to the English. There are besides a Free church, erected in 1844, and a United Presbyterian church. Market days are Tuesday and Friday. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday in January, third Tuesdays in March, August, and October, second Wednesday in July, and Tuesday next before Christmas Day, for ponies, cattle, and sheep.

TAKELEY, a par. in the hund. of Uttlesford, co. Essex, 4 miles W. of Dunmow, its post town, and 4 E. of Bishop Stortford railway station. The village is situated on Pincey Brook, near the Great Eastern railway. There was formerly at Warish Hall a cell to St. Valery Abbey, in France, but which was given by Edward III. to William of Wykeham for his college. The Essex hounds meet in the parish. The soil consists of clay and loam, with a various subsoil. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £207, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The register dates from the middle of the 16th century. There are two parochial schools. This parish is separated into numerous manors.

TALACHDDU, a par. in the hund. of Penkelly, co. Brecon, 4 miles N.E. of Brecknock, its post town, and 6 from Talgarth. The village is situated at the source of the river Achddhu. The par. includes the hmlts. of Velin-vach and Llwryneyrog. Copper is found here. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £143. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The Calvinistic Methodists have a chapel.

TALAR, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Asaph, co. Flint, near St. Asaph.

TALARGOCH, a lead mine in co. Denbigh, 3 miles N.E. of Rhuddlan.

TALATON, a par. in the hund. of Hayridge, co. Devon, 3½ miles N.W. of Ottery St. Mary, its post town, and 11 N.E. of Exeter. The village is on the road from London to Exeter. George III. and three of the princesses were entertained here by Sir George Young, Bart., on the 14th of August, 1780. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £518. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient structure with a square tower, adorned with canopied niches and figures of saints, and contains five bells. The interior contains a wooden screen with a flight of stone steps leading to a rood loft, and several monuments to the Eveleigh family. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum. A new church was erected at Escott in 1840 by Sir J. Kennaway, at an expense of £2,000. It contains several painted windows. Escott House, the principal residence, is situated in a well-wooded park. It has recently been rebuilt on the site of the old one, which was erected in the reign of James II., but destroyed by fire in 1808. Several persons were sentenced to be hanged here by Judge Jefferies. Dr. T. Spratt, the historian and poet, was born here in 1636, when his father was rector, and Sir W. Pole, the antiquary, was a resident. Sir J. Kennaway, Bart., is lord of the manor.

TALBENNY, a par. in the hund. of Roose, co. Pembroke, 8 miles from Haverfordwest, its post town, and 6 N.W. of Milford. The village is situated near Goldtop anchorage, in St. Bride's Bay. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the collieries. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £140. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

TALBOTSTOWN, a vil. in the par. of Baltinglass, bar. of Talbotstown, co. Wicklow, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Baltinglass, and 27 S.W. of Wicklow. It is situated near the three-arched bridge, on the river Slaney.

TALBOTSTOWN, LOWER and UPPER, two bars. of the co. of Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. The former contains the pars. of Blessington, Boystown, Burgage, Crehelp, Donard, Hollywood, Kilbride, and parts of Dunlavin and Tober. The latter contains the town of Stratford-on-Slaney, the pars. of Ballymore, Donaghmore, Freynestown, Kilranelagh, Rathbran, Rathsallagh, Rathtoole, and parts of Baltinglass, Dunlavin, Kiltegan, and Tober.

TALGARTH, a hund. in the co. of Brecon, contains the pars. of Aber-llunvey, Broynllis, Cathedine, Crickadarn, Gwen-ddwr, Hay, Llandefalley, Llanelieu, Llanfihangel-Tall-y-llyn, Llangorse, Llanigon, Llyswen, Talgarth, and part of Glasbury.

TALGARTH, a par. in the hund. of the same name, co. Brecon, 7 miles S.W. of Hay, its post town, and 9 from Brecon. It has stations on the Mid Wales and Brecon and Merthyr railways. It is situated on the river Llyffin, under Pen-cader-fawr, among the Black mountains, and near the river Ennig. Talgarth is a borough by prescription, but without privilege or municipal jurisdiction. It was also a market town, and had a castle at Dinas Hill. There is a cromlech at Croeslechan, and Druid stones on the hills. The surface abounds in hilly sheep walks. The par. includes Forest, Grwyne, Pwll-y-wrach, and Trefeccan. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £250, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Windsor. The church, dedicated to St. Gwendeline, is old, with a tower containing six bells. The parochial charities produce about £31 per annum, besides Gunter's almshouse. The Wesleyans and Independents have chapels. Trefeccan House stands on the Llangorse road, and is the place where Howel Harris founded his sect in 1752, and Tredustan, the seat of the Prossers, is where Lady Huntingdon had her school. Fairs are held on 2nd February, 12th March, 31st May, 10th July, 23rd September, 2nd November, and 3rd December, for cattle.

TALGARTH BOROUGH, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Talgarth, co. Brecon.

TALHAIRN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfairtalhaiarn, co. Denbigh, 10 miles N.W. of Denbigh.

TALIARIS, a chplry. in the par. of Llandilofawr, co. Carmarthen, 4 miles N.E. of Llandilofawr, its post town, and 4 from Llangadoch. The village is situated on a branch of the river Towey. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £133. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity, and was erected at the expense of Lord R. Seymour.

TALISKER, a vil. in the Isle of Skye, co. Inverness, Scotland, 12 miles W. of Broadford. It is near Loch Bracadale, and gives name to a small bay.

TALKIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Hayton, ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 2½ miles S.E. of Brampton, its post town. It is a small agricultural village, situated near Talkin Tarn, on the Carlisle and Newcastle railway and the river Gelt. There are coal mines and slate and stone quarries in the vicinity. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle. The church was built by T. H. Graham, Esq., but the stone, which cost £800, was the gift of the late Earl of Carlisle. There is a new schoolhouse, the gift of T. H. Graham.

TALK-O'-TH'-HILL, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Audley, N. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford, 5 miles N.W. of Newcastle-under-Lyne, its post town, and 1 mile E. of the Harecastle station on the North Staffordshire railway. It is situated on a hill near the Grand Trunk canal, and commands a prospect of nine counties. It comprises the vils. of Talk and Butt Lane, and was once a market town, its old cross still standing central of the town. There are coal mines. Near the village is a sulphur spring. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £138. The church was rebuilt in 1832, and was further enlarged in 1852. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There are National schools for both sexes. Clough Hall and Lindley Wood are the principal residences.

TALLA, an islet in Loch Menteith, co. Perth, Scotland. It has ruins of the stronghold of the Grahams, lairds of Menteith.

TALLAGHOBIGLY, a chplry., bar. of Kilmacrenan, North Donegal, near Dunfanaghy.

TALLAGHT, a par. and post town in the bar. of Uppercross, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles S.W. of Dublin. The surface is hilly, and is traversed by the river Dodder. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. £296, in the patron. of the archbishop and others. The church was erected, in place of an old one, in 1829, by means of a grant from the late Board of First Fruits. The belfry of the old structure still remains. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and convent, and one or two schools. The village is situated on the river Dodder, and contains a police station, where petty sessions are held. The seats in the vicinity are, Friarstown, Kiltaloun, and Tallaght House. This last named was built in 1825, on the site of the old episcopal residence founded by Archbishop Bicknor about the close of the 13th century, and which was attacked by O'Toole in 1331, and removed in 1825 to give place to the present mansion. An abbey is said to have been founded here in the 8th century by St. Maelrune. There are ruins of castles at Timon and Aughfarrel.

TALLAND, a par. in the hund. of West, co. Cornwall, 7 miles S. of Liskeard, its post town, and 2 S.W. of West Looe. The parish is bounded on the S. by the English Channel, and on the E. by a small estuary of the sea called the Looe river, the channel of which is nearly dry at low water. The par. includes the town of West Looe, and part of the fishing town of Polperro. At the former place is an ancient bridge communicating with the old borough of East Looe, also an earthwork, and at Portlooe are traces of Lammana Priory. A canal was constructed in 1830 from Moor's-water, near Liskeard, to within 2 miles of Looe, forming a communication with the Looe river. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £110. The church, dedicated to St. Tallan, has recently been restored. The interior contains several helmets with the crest of the Beville family, and an effigy of John Beville, who died 1574. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, erected by aid of a bequest of the late Sir Harry Trelawney, two chapels for Wesleyans, and one for Independents at Polperro; also a school for both sexes, endowed with an annuity of £10, and a National school at West Looe. There are two circular camps at Berry Park, measuring 122 paces in diameter, and a kistaven was discovered near Fivebarrow field.

TALLANSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Ardee, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S. of Louth. It is crossed by the road from Drogheda to Monaghan, and by the river Glyde. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. with Charlestown, £365, in the patron. of the primate. There are two schools. Lisrenny and South Hall are the principal residences, the latter the seat of Viscount Louth.

TALLA WATER, a stream of co. Peebles, Scotland, joins the Tweed near Tweedsmuir.

TALLENTIRE, a tnshp. in the par. of Bridekirk, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 4 miles W. of Cockermouth, and 1 mile N.W. of Bridekirk. The village is situated on a declivity of the Solway Frith and the Scottish coast. The soil is of a light, sandy, and loamy nature, with a subsoil of gravel. The Hall is very old. William Brown, Esq., is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

TALLEY, a par. in the hund. of Cayo, co. Carmarthen, 7 miles N. of Llandilofawr, its post town, and 7 from Llangadock. It is a station on the Llanelly and Vale of Towey railway. The village is situated on a branch of the river Towey or Cothi. The par. includes Cefnblaidd, Eskernant, Gwastade, Llanfihangel, and Treathnelgan. At Tal-y-Llychau, "head of the lakes," are ruins of a Premonstratensian priory cell to Welbeck Abbey, founded by Rhys-ab-Gruffydd. At the Dissolution its revenue was valued at £186; and the site given to the Williams family.

TALLINGTON, a par. in the wap. of Ness, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 4 miles E. of Stamford, its post town, and 3 S.W. of Market-Deeping. It is a station on the Great Northern railway. The village is situated on the river Welland, and most of the houses have thatched roofs. A canal from Stamford to Boston and the river Welland has been cut through the southern portion of the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient edifice with tower and three bells. The parochial charities produce about £98 per annum. A free school was erected in 1841 for both sexes, the expense being defrayed by voluntary contributions. The Earl of Lindsey is lord of the manor.

TAL-LLACHARN. See LAUGHARNE, co. Carmarthen.

TALLOG, a hmlt. in the par. of Abernant, co. Carmarthen, 5 miles N.W. of Carmarthen.

TALLOW, a par., post and market town, in the bar. of Coshmore, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 45 miles S.W. of Waterford, and 133 from Dublin. The surface is mountainous, but well cultivated, with a fertile soil. It is intersected by the river Bride, upon which stands the town. The town is situated a little to the S. of the river, and consists of two main streets of tolerably well-built houses. It contains the court-house, police station, branch bank, fever hospital, dispensary, and widows' almshouses. Wool-combing was formerly carried on, but has now given way to the grain and lace trade. There are also some flour-mills and breweries. Tallow was formerly a parliamentary borough, incorporated by charter of James I., and returning two members previous to the Union. It was granted by Queen Elizabeth to Sir Walter Raleigh, from whom it came to the Earl of Cork, who held it against an attack of the rebels in 1641. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. with Kilwatermoy, £352. The church has been recently repaired by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and a convent, also four public and several private schools in the parish. The principal seat is Kilmore Hill. Hogan, the sculptor, was born here. Petty sessions are held at intervals. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on the 1st March, Trinity Monday, 10th October, and 8th December.

TALLOWBRIDGE, a vil. in the par. of Tallow, bar. of Coshmore, co. Waterford, Ireland, 1 mile from Tallow, on the river Bride.

TALL WATER, a stream of co. Armagh, Ireland, rises near Hamilton's Bawn, and joins the river Callan.

TALSARN, a hmlt. in the par. of Trefilan, co. Cardigan, 7 miles N.W. of Lampeter. It is situated near the Sarn Helen way, under Talsarn Hill.

TALSARN, a hmlt. in the par of Llangadock, hund. of Perfedd, co. Carmarthen. It is situated under Talsarn Hill, a lofty peak of the Black mountains.

TALT, a lough in the western div. of co. Sligo, Ireland. It is situated amongst the Ox mountains, and has trout. Its surface is 455 feet above sea-level.

TALWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Long Ditton, second div. of the hund. of Kingston, co. Surrey, 1 mile E. of Thames Ditton, and 2 S.E. miles of Kingston.

TAL-Y-BOLION, a hund. in the co. of Anglesea, contains the pars. of Llanbadrig, Llanbalo, Llanddansaint, Llanfairynghornwy, Llanfachreth, Llanfaethly, Llanfechell, Llanfigael, Llanfflewyn, Llanfwrog, Llanrhwydrys, Llanrhyddlad, and part of Holyhead.

TALYBONLLWYDD, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanarth, co. Cardigan, 4 miles S.W. of Aberavon.

TAL-Y-BONT, a vil. in the pars. of Llanthratty and Llanvigan, co. Brecon, 5 miles S.E. of Brecknock.

TAL-Y-BONT, a vil. in the par. of Llanllechid, co. Carnarvon, 3 miles S.E. of Bangor. There are some lead mines at Alltycrib opened in 1851.

TAL-Y-BONT AND MOWDDWY, a hund. in the co. of Merioneth, contains the pars. of Dolgelly, Llanegryn, Llanfachreth, Llangelynin, Llanymowddwy, and part of Mallwyd.

TALY-Y-BRYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llannefydd, co. Denbigh, 5 miles N.W. of Denbigh.

TAL-Y-CAFND, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanbedr-y-Cennin, co. Carnarvon, 3 miles S. of Conway. It is a station on the Conway and Llanrwst branch of the Chester and Holyhead railway. It is situated at the ferry over the river Conway to Eglwys Bach.

TALYGARN, a vil. in the par. of Llantrisaint, hund. of Miskin, co. Glamorgan, 2 miles S.W. of Llantrisaint, and 10 N.W. of Cardiff. It is situated among the hills, near the river Ely.

TALYGARTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangollen, co. Denbigh. It is situated near Llangollen.

TAL-Y-LLYN, a vil. in the par. of Aberffraw, hund. of Malltraeth, co. Anglesey, 14 miles S.W. of Beaumaris. It is situated near the estuary of the Ffraw, which here falls into Carnarvon Bay.

TALYLLYN, a par. in the hund. of Estimaner, co. Merioneth, 5 miles S.W. of Dolgelly, its post town, and 8 from Machynlleth. The village is situated on the river Mathew, under Cader-Idris and Arran-y-Gessel. The par., which is of large extent, comprising 36,000 acres, includes Cedris, Ceuswyn, Corris, Llanerchgoediog, and Ystradgwyn. There are numerous ranges of slaty hills, affording only bare sheep walks. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the woollen manufacture. Llyn Mwyngil is famed for its trout and eel fishing. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £84, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There is also a district church at Corris, the living of which is a perpet. cur. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum.

TAL-Y-LLYN, a vil. in the par. of Llanfihangel-Tal-y-Llyn, co. Brecon, 4 miles E. of Brecknock. It is a junction station on the Mid Wales and Brecon and Merthyr railways. It is situated near the lake Llyn Savaddan.

TAMAR, a river of cos. Cornwall and Devon, rises near Wooley, in Cornwall, and after receiving the tributary waters of the Attery, Lyd, Tavy, and Lynner, forms Hamoaze Harbour, at the head of Plymouth Sound, and nearly opposite Devonport Dockyard.

TAME, a stream of co. Stafford, rises near Wednesbury, and joins the Trent at Alrewas.

TAME, or THAME, a river of cos. York and Lancaster, rises near Saddleworth in the West Riding, and joins the Mersey at Stockport, in Lancashire.

TAMERTON-FOLIOTT, a par. in the hund. of Roborough, co. Devon, 5 miles N.W. of Plymouth, its post town. The village, which is extensive, is situated at the confluence of the rivers Tavy and Tamar. It is supposed by Camden to be the Roman Tamara, on Icknield Street. The parish is celebrated for its fruit. In the grounds of Warleigh House is an heronry. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £315, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains monuments of the Copleston, Radcliffe, and Bampfylde, families. The greater portion of the church has been rebuilt since 1850. The parochial charities produce about £140 per annum, of which £124 go to Dean's school, and £8 to Sir C. Bampfylde's almshouses. There are an endowed and a parochial school, and a Sunday-school is held at each. Maristow, Looseley, Roborough, Upland House, Cann Cottage, and Warleigh are the principal residences. The last named has been the manorhouse since the reign of Stephen. The manor descended through the Folliotts, Gorges, Bonvilles, and Coplestons to the Bampfylde family, and is now the property of the Rev. W. Radcliff, who purchased the estate of the Bamfyldes. A fair for cattle is held on the third Wednesday in July.

TAMERTON, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Stratton, co. Cornwall, 8 miles N. of Launceston, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Holsworth. The village is situated on the Devonshire border, near the Bude canal and the river Tamar. The surface is in general hilly, and the soil a cold clay. The living is a don.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £230. The church, dedicated to St. Dennis, is an ancient stone structure, with a square tower containing five bells. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a dilapidated chapel at Hornacot.

TAMHORN, an ext. par. place in the N. div. of Offlow hund., co. Stafford, 2 miles N.W. of Tamworth. It is situated on the Coventry canal and the river Tame.

TAMLAGHT, a par. partly in the bar. of Loughinsholin, co. Londonderry, and partly in the bar. of Dungannon, co. Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Moneymore, its post town. The surface generally consists of a good soil, with some bog. The parish is crossed by the river Ballinderry. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, value £246, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is small. There are meeting-houses for Presbyterians, Baptists, and Wesleyans, also parochial and other schools. The manufacture of linen is carried on here, and limestone is quarried. Druidical remains are traced at Cloughtogel. Tamlaght House is the principal residence.

TAMLAGHT, a vil. in the bar. of Loughinsholin, co. Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Kilrea.

TAMLAGHT FINLAGAN, a par. in the bar. of Keenaught, co. Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, near Newtown-Limavady, its post town. The parish lies between the sea-coast and Lough Foyle. It is bordered on the S. by the river Roe. The soil is generally boggy, mountainous, and barren. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry, val. £960, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a spacious building in the Early English style, erected in 1778. The old church is still standing, but has been since converted into a Roman Catholic chapel. Here are a Presbyterian meeting-house and three or four day schools, besides a Sunday-school. Roe Park is the chief seat. The monastery was founded here in the 6th century by St. Columkill.

TAMLAGHT O'CRILLY, a par. in the bars. of Coleraine and Loughinsholin, co. Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Kilrea. Port-Glenone is its post town. The surface includes a large extent of bog and basaltic rock. It contains Tamlaght, Innisrush, and a part of Port-Glenone. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry, in the patron. of the bishop. The living is in two divisions, Lower and Upper, val. of the former £115, that of the latter £901. The church was rebuilt in 1815 by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, and two Presbyterian meeting-houses, likewise a parish school and several public establishments. Innisrush is the principal seat. Traces of an ancient fortress and of Druidical remains are seen here. Near the village is a cave formerly used as a burial-place.

TAMWORTH, a div. in the hund. of Hemlingford, co. Warwick, contains the pars. of Austrey, Beddesley-Ensor, Grendon, Kingsbury, Middleton, Newton Regis, Polesworth, Seckington, Shuttington, and part of Tamworth, comprising an area of 32,640 acres.

TAMWORTH, a par., market town, municipal and parliamentary borough in the S. div. of the hund. of Offlow, co. Stafford, and partly in Hemlingford hund., co. Warwick, 23 miles S.E. of Stafford, and 6 from Lichfield. It is a junction station of the Trent Valley and the Derby and Birmingham sections of the Midland railways. The parish, which is very extensive, includes, besides the town of Tamworth, the chplries. of Fazeley, Wigginton, and Wilnecote, with part of Dosthill, now district pars., the tnshps. of Almington-with-Stone, Delph, Biddescote, Bolehall-with-Glascote, Bonehill, and the libs. of Tyerscote and Tamworth-Castle, besides the extra-parochial liberty of Hopwas Hayes. It is situated in an undulating and very fertile country, watered by numerous springs, falling into the two rivers Tame and Anker, which here unite at the foot of the old castle, once a residence of the Mercian kings. In the Saxon times it was called Tamaweorthige, and had a mint, but having been devastated by the Danes, was rebuilt by Ethelfleda, daughter of Alfred the Great, who died here in 920. After the Norman conquest the castle and adjacent territory were granted to Robert de Marmion, Lord of Fontenaye and hereditary champion to the dukes of Normandy, but on the extinction of the male line in the reign of Edward I., the family of Frevile became lords of Tamworth tower and town. The site of the ancient castle is now occupied by the mansion of the Marquis Townshend, as the representative of the Marmions, and is the residence of Miss Wolferstan, to whom the town is indebted for the new cemetery. The town was a borough by prescription, but having declined, was incorporated anew by Queen Elizabeth, and is still governed under a charter of Charles II., by a mayor, 4 aldermen and 12 councillors, with the style of "bailiffs and commonalty of the borough of Tamworth." The municipal revenue is about £400. It has returned two members to parliament since the reign of Elizabeth, but the bounds were enlarged by the Reform Act so as to include the whole parish. The town consists of several well-built but irregularly laid out streets; in the market-place is a bronze statue of the late Sir R. Peel. It has recently been much improved, especially with regard to the sewage and water supply. It contains a townhall, rebuilt by Guy, founder of the hospital in London, and enlarged by the late Sir Robert Peel, both of whom were members for Tamworth; a small gaol beneath the townhall, a savings-bank, a library, which contains above 5,000 volumes, under the patronage of Sir R. Peel, a lunatic asylum, union poor-house, two commercial branch banks, railway station, gas and water works, and two bridges, one over the Tame and the other over the Anker. The trade in cotton and lace has declined, but there are two large paper mills, two manufactories for elastic garters and fancy wares, and brick, tile, and drain-pipe works. In the vicinity are two commons, called the Staffordshire and Warwickshire moors, belonging to the town, also several collieries. At a little distance from the town is Drayton manor, the seat of the late Sir Robert Peel, to which a gallery of valuable paintings has recently been added. Tamworth is the seat of a New County Court, and of a Poor-law Union containing 24 parishes or places, and the head of a superintendent registry district. There is a farmers' club and horticultural society. The Coventry canal passes near the town. The Derby and Birmingham railway, after passing over the Trent Valley line, is conducted by a viaduct of nineteen arches across the valley to the S.E. of the town. Tamworth gives name to a deanery in the archdeaconry of Stafford and diocese of Lichfield. The living is a vic.* with the curs. of Almington and Hopwas St. John annexed, in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £220. The church of St. Edith, which was formerly collegiate, is an ancient Gothic structure with Norman traces, but of different periods. It has a massive tower surrounded by four octagonal turrets or spires. In the interior is a tesselated pavement discovered in the old churchyard, a brass of M. Archer, bearing date 1614, and tombs of the Frevilles and Peels. In addition to the parish church are the following district churches, viz., Frazeley, Wiggington, and Wilnecote, the livings of which are perpet. curs., varying in val. from £220 to £72. The Wesleyans have two chapels, and the Independents, Baptists, and Roman Catholics have each one. There are National, infant, and Sunday schools, also a free grammar school, founded by Edward VI., with an endowment of £35, and a scholarship and fellowship at Cambridge University; Sir Robert Peel's school for the free education of 50 boys, endowed with the interest of £6,000; Rawlet's trustees' school for 20 boys, and a school of industry for 30 girls, liberally endowed. The parochial charities, including school endowments, amount to about £700 per annum. The remains of the castle occupy a mound close to the Tame, and have been included in the modern mansion. Market day is on Saturday. The chartered fairs granted by Queen Elizabeth are held on the 4th May, 26th July, and 24th October for cattle, and merchandise, also monthly fairs for cattle, only of modern institution.

TAMWORTH CASTLE, a lib. in the par. of Tamworth, hund. of Hemlingford, co. Warwick.

TANAR a stream of co. Aberdeen, rises near Glenmuick, in the Grampians, and joins the Dee near Aboyne.

TANARA or TANERA, and TANARABEG, two of the Summer Isles in Loch Broom, co. Ross, Scotland, 29 miles N.W. of Dingwall, and 10 from Ullapool.

TANAT, a river of co. Montgomery, rises in the Berwyn mountains, and joins the Vyrnwy at Llandysilio.

TANDERAGEE, or TAWNATCLEE, a post-office vil. in the par. of Ballymore, bar. of Lower Orior, co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4½ miles N.W. of Lough Strickland. It is a station on the Dublin and Belfast Junction railway. It is situated on the river Cusher, not far from the Newry canal. It consists of two large and two or three smaller streets, ascending the banks of the river. Here are the parish church, three chapels, branch bank, female orphan asylum, fever hospital, founded by Monte de Piété, besides several excellent schools under the patronage of the Duke of Manchester, to whom the town is indebted for many improvements. There is a police station in the town, and petty sessions are held once a fortnight. This town originated in a castle built by the O'Hanlon family, who forfeited it with the surrounding territory in the time of Elizabeth. It was afterwards granted to Sir Oliver St. John by James I., who built the church. The manufacture of linen formerly flourished, but it is now of little importance. The present castle of Tanderagee, the seat of Viscount Mandeville, occupies the site of the ancient one alluded to above. Wednesday is market day. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday of every month, and on the 5th July and 5th November.

TANDRIDGE, first, a hund. in co. Surrey, contains the pars. of Bletchingley, Crowhurst, Godstone, Horne, Limpsfield, Lingfield, Oxted, and Tandridge. The second hund. contains the pars. of Caterham, Chelsham, Farley, Tatsfield, Titsey, Warlingham, and Woldingham, comprising an area of 52,380 acres.

TANDRIDGE, a par. in the first div. of Tandridge hund., co. Surrey, 2 miles S.E. of Godstone, its post town, and the same distance E. of Godstone railway station. The village is situated under the hills, near the South-Eastern railway. It is traversed by the road from Guildford through Godstone to Maidstone, and by the Roman Stane Street. In the reign of Richard I. an Austin priory was founded here by Odo-de-Damartin, the revenue of which at the Dissolution was returned at £86 7*s.* 6*d.*, and the site given to the Redes, with Rook's Nest. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £70. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is old; it has been restored and enlarged. There are National schools for this parish and that of Oxted, also an infant school. The Earl of Cottenham has a seat in this parish. Sir William Clayton, Bart., is lord of the manor. In 1828 several silver and copper coins of Julius Cæsar and other Roman emperors were found.

TANEY, a par. in the bars. of Dublin and Rathdown, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S. of Dublin, its post town. The soil is generally good. The river Dodder passes through the parish, and the Dublin and Wicklow mountains form part of its boundary. Dundrum and Windymills are within the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. £321, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1818, by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The old church still remains, though not used for divine worship. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and a Wesleyan meeting-house, besides the parish and three other public schools. Taney Lodge and Taney Hill are the principal residences.

TANFIELD, a chplry. in the par. of Chester-le-Street, middle div. of Chester ward co. Durham, 7 miles S.E. of Chester-le-Street, 6½ W. of Gateshead, and 8 S.W. of Newcastle-upon-Tyne. The village is situated on Urpeth Burn, near Tanfield Arch, which has a span of 130 feet, springing from abutments 9 feet high to the height of 60 feet. The chplry. includes the tnshps. of Beamish and Lintz Green, and the hmlts. of Burton-Field, Tantobie, and Shield Row. There are numerous collieries, brick kilns, coke ovens, and stone quarries in the vicinity. The coals are of excellent quality, and are conveyed in large quantities by the North-Eastern railway company to the Tyne and Jarrow docks for exportation. The soil is clayey. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £133. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is a stone building, with a tower containing a clock, two bells, and a sundial. The interior has tablets of the Davidson, Edon, and Ripon families. The church was enlarged in 1749, and the tower rebuilt by J. Eden, Esq., of Beamish Hall, in 1853. The register dates from 1580. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, built in 1848. The Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists have chapels, with Sunday-schools in connection. There is a grammar school, with a small endowment. The principal residence is Beamish Hall, the seat of J. Eden, Esq., who is lord of the manor. Statute fairs for hiring servants are held on 2nd November and 12th May.

TANFIELD, EAST, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirklington, wap. of Hallikeld, West Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Ripon.

TANFIELD, WEST, a par. in the wap. of Hallikeld, North Riding co. York, 6 miles from Bedale, its post town, 6 N.W. of Ripon, and 4 S.E. of Masham. The village, which is considerable, is situated at the bridge over the river Ure. The par. includes the hmlts. of Binscoe, Nosterfield, and Thornbrough. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £416. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is old, and contains a brass bearing date 1480. The parochial charities produce about £33 per annum, of which £8 go to a school. There is a National school for both sexes, supported by the Marquis of Ailesbury, and in connection with it is a Sunday-school. The Wesleyans have a chapel. At a short distance from the church are ruins of Tanfield Castle, an old seat of the Marmions, who founded a chantry here in the reign of Henry III. The Marquis of Ailesbury is lord of the manor.

TANGHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Butley, hund. of Plomesgate, co. Suffolk.

TANGLEHA, a vil. in the par. of St. Cyrus, co. Kincardine, Scotland, 4 miles S. of Laurencekirk.

TANGLEY, a par. in the upper half div. of Pastrow hund., co. Hants, 5½ miles N.W. of Andover, its post town. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect. of Faccombe, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a small edifice of great antiquity. There is a chapel for Wesleyans, also National schools. Sir J. Pollen is lord of the manor. A fair for sheep is held on 15th April.

TANGLEY, GREAT and LITTLE, hmlts. in the first div. of Woking hund., co. Surrey, 2 miles S.E. of Guildford.

TANGMERE, a par. in the hund. of Aldwick, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 3 miles N.E. of Chichester, its post town, and 1½ mile N. of Drayton railway station. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £282. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, was thoroughly restored a few years back, and two painted windows inserted by O'Connor. The register dates from 1539. This parish has the privilege of sending two children to the school, and two aged females to the almshouses, at Boxgrove, founded in 1751 by the Countess Dowager of Derby. There is a school for both sexes, erected at the expense of the Rev. W. Burnett, M.A.

TAN-HILL, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Muker and par. of Grinton, North Riding co. York. It is situated in the moorlands, under Shunner Fell, and near the river Swale.

TANKARDSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Coshma, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Kilmallock. Killarney is its post town. The soil is excellent. The parish is crossed by the road from Kilmallock to Bruree, and by the river Maigue. The Hill of Knocksowney is within the limits. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. £129, in the patron. of the bishop. The ruins only of the church remain. There is a day school.

TANKARDSTOWN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Rathvilly, co. Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Tullow. It is situated on the banks of the rivers Slaney and Dereen.

TANKARDSTOWN, a par. partly in the bar. of Ballyadams, Queen's co., and partly in the bars. of Narragh and Kilkea, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Athy, its post town. The land is generally well cultivated. The road from Ashby and the river Barrow traverse the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Athy £420, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is in ruins. There are a National and a private school. Limestone is quarried here.

TANKERSLEY, a par. in the wap. of Staincross, West Riding co. York, 5 miles S. of Barnsley, its post town, and 9 from Sheffield. It is situated near the South Yorkshire railway, which has stations at Westwood and Birdwell. The par. is bounded on the W. by the river Don, and includes the chplry. of Wortley. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the collieries and ironstone mines belonging to Earl Fitzwilliam, who is principal landowner. The soil is generally fertile and the land in good cultivation. The old Hall is in ruins. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £474. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. There is also a district church at Wortley, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £120. There is a National school for both sexes supported by Earl Fitzwilliam, at whose expense it was erected in 1854. The park, which is well wooded and stocked with deer, belongs to Earl Fitzwilliam, who is lord of the manor, and has a seat at Wentworth. The poor have land producing £30 per annum.

TANNACHY, NEW, a vil. in the par. of Rathven, co. Banff, Scotland, 7 miles N.W. of Keith. It is situated on Spey Bay, near Port Gordon.

TANNADICE, a par. in the co. of Forfar, Scotland. It extends in length about 12 miles from N. to S., with an extreme breadth of 8 miles, and is bounded by the pars. of Lethnot, Fearn, Careston, Aberlemno, Oathlaw, Kirriemuir, and Cortachie. The surface is moderately even, but rises in parts of the central and northern districts to 900 feet above sea-level. Along the western border of the parish passes the South Esk, and on the eastern the Noran Water. The prevailing rocks are whinstone and red sandstone. In the vicinity are several antiquities, as Law Hills, a cairn on St. Arnold's Seat, and a Roman camp called Battledykes across the Esk. The par. is traversed by the roads from Kirriemuir to Brechin and Aberdeen, and is within a short distance of several stations on the Scottish North-Eastern railway. The village of Tannadice is about 5¼ miles N. of Forfar, and 6½ N.E. of Kirriemuir. It is situated on the rivers Noran and South Esk, in Strathmore. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the spinning and splash mills. This par. is in the presb. of Forfar and synod of Angus and Mearns, and in the patron. of St. Mary's College at St. Andrew's. The stipend of the minister is about £165. The parish church was erected in 1846. There are a parochial school and two parochial libraries. The principal seats are Downie Park, Glenogle, Tannadice House, Easter Ogle, Wester Ogle, and Wester Markhouse. Tannadice was formerly the seat of the Lindsays and Buchans.

TANNINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Hoxne, co. Suffolk, 4½ miles N.W. of Framlingham, its post town, and 6 N.E. of Debenham. The land is partly in common. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Brundish annexed in the dioc. of Norwich, joint val. £196, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Ethelbert, has a tower. It contains a brass bearing date 1612. The parochial charities produce about £60 per annum, derived from town land.

TANSHELF, a tnshp. in the par. of Pontefract, upper div. of the wap. of Osgoldcross, West Riding co. York. It adjoins the W. end of the town of Pontefract, of which it is a suburb.

TANSLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Crich, hund. of Wirksworth, co. Derby, 5 miles N.E. of Crich, and 1½ mile E. of Matlock, its railway station and post town. The village contains a candle-wick and small-ware manufactory. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £100, in the patron. of the Vicar of Crich. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a stone edifice with a tower, and was built in 1840. There is a National school for both sexes, including infants. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

TANSOR, a par. in the hund. of Wellybrook, co. Northampton, 2 miles N.E. of Oundle, its post town. The village is situated on the Peterborough railway and river Nene. It was originally called Tandisover, and by Camden, Tansover, who supposes it to have been a Roman station, and on the opposite bank of the river a Roman tesselated pavement has been discovered. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £283, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The interior contains the brass of a priest bearing date 1440, and twelve carved stalls brought from the adjacent collegiate church at Fotheringhay. The parochial charities produce about £39, of which £3 go towards the support of a Sunday-school. On the enclosure of the parish in 1777 about 15 acres were allotted to the poor, now let for £22.

TANSTON, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Aldbrough, East Riding co. York, 6 miles N.E. of Hedon. It is a meet for the Holderness hounds.

TANTALLON CASTLE, in the par. of North Berwick, co. Haddington, Scotland, 3 miles E. of North Berwick, and 7 miles N. of Haddington. It was the impregnable stronghold of the Douglasses, as described in "Marmion," overlooking the Frith of Forth, and opposite the Bass Rock, but was finally taken and dismantled by the Covenanters in 1639, notwithstanding the proverb, "Ding doon Tantallon! Mak' a brig to the Bass."

TANTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Stokesley, North Riding co. York, 2 miles from Stokesley, and 39 N. of York. It is situated near the river Leven, under Wainstone Fell.

TANWORTH, a par. in the Warwick div. of the hund. of Kington, co. Warwick, 4 miles N.W. of Henley-in-Arden, its post town, and 11 S. of Birmingham. In the vicinity is an extensive reservoir for supplying the Stratford-on-Avon canal, which passes through the parish. There is a quarry of building stone, but the manufacture of wick-yarn, formerly carried on, has declined. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £380. The church is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen. The interior contains a brass to Margaret Archer, bearing date 1614. There is also the district church of St. Patrick's, at Salters-street, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £150. There is a chapel for Independents. The parochial charities produce about £124 per annum, of which sum £8 go towards the schools. There are two National schools and a free school. Umberslade is the principal residence.

TAPHOUSE, WEST, a hmlt. in the par. of Broadoak, co. Cornwall, 4 miles W. of Liskeard.

TAPLOW, a par. in the hund. of Burnham, co. Bucks, 1 mile N.E. of Maidenhead, its post town. It is a station on the Great Western railway. The river Thames separates this parish from the county of Berkshire. In the vicinity are gas-works and an extensive paper-mill. In this parish is the old mansion of Cleifden, which formerly belonged to a member of the Hamilton family, who, after serving under the Duke of Marlborough, indulged his fancy by figuring the battle of Blenheim by plantations of trees now in full vigour. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £329, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a brick edifice recently rebuilt near the site of the old one, of which part of the chancel and E. window are all that remain. It contains tombs of great antiquity, and among them is the grave of Sarah Milton, the mother of the poet. The parochial charities produce about £25 per annum, of which sum £15 is realised from church lands. Taplow Court, in which Queen Elizabeth, when princess, was confined about 1544, was partially burnt down in 1795.

TAPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Chesterfield, hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 1 mile N.E. of Chesterfield.

TAPTON, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Nether Hallam, West Riding co. York, near Sheffield.

TAR, a stream of co. Tipperary, Ireland, rises near Templetenny, under the Galtee mountains, and joins the Suir near Newcastle.

TARA, a par. and post town in the bar. of Skreen, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Navan. The soil is good. It is bounded on the W. by the river Skreen, and is within a few miles of the river Boyne. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with two others, £439, in the patron. of the crown. The church, which stands on Tara Hill, was built in 1823, partly by aid of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There is a Roman Catholic chapel and a parochial school. In this parish is the celebrated Tara Hill, the spot where St. Patrick preached, and the scene of the defeat of the Danes. This place was the scene of many historical events, and is traditionally asserted to have been the seat of the Irish kings previous to the close of the 6th century.

TARA, a stream of co. Armagh, Ireland, rises near Newtown Hamilton, and joins the Dundalk river.

TARA BAY, a small harbour on the coast of co. Down, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Portaferry. It is sheltered by Tara Hill and Ballyquintin Point.

TARBAT, a par. in the district of Easter Ross, cos. Ross and Cromarty, Scotland. It comprises the vils. of Portmahomach, Balnabruach, and Rockfield. It extends in length about 7½ miles from N.E. to S.W., with an extreme breadth of 4½ miles; and is bounded by the Dornoch and Moray friths, and by the parish of Fearn. The land is of a fertile character, and the soil generally light and sandy, with a deep black loam in some parts. Tarbat Ness, the ancient Aræ Finium, is marked by a revolving lighthouse, put up in 1830; it is 175 feet above sea-level, and is visible at a distance of 18 miles. The coast, which is 15 miles in extent, is rocky, but has several natural harbours and small creeks. The vil. of Tarbat is about 10 miles N.E. of Tain, between Dornoch and Moray friths. In its vicinity are ruins of several castles and of a chapel. Many of its inhabitants are employed in the fisheries, and some in a hemp factory. This par. is in the presb. of Tain and synod of Ross. The stipend of the minister is about £270. The parish church stands in the centre of the parish. There are a Free church, also a parochial school, Gaelic school, and a private school. The principal modern seat is Geanies.

TARBERT, or TARBET, a vil. and seaport in the pars. of Kilcalmonell and South Knapdale, co. Argyle, Scotland. It is situated on a nick of land between East and West Tarbert lochs, and forms a semicircle round the harbour, which is small, with a narrow entrance. The quays are commodious, and the Glasgow steamers regularly call here. It has for many years been a fishing station, especially for herrings. On an eminence overlooking the town and harbour are the ruins of an ancient castle, formerly of considerable strength. Here are a Free church, mission church, and an excellent school, supported by the General Assembly. A fair is held on the last Thursday in July.

TARBERT, a post-office vil. in the par. of Kilnaughtin, bar. of Iraghticonnor, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 30 miles N.E. of Tralee, and 3 from the Foynes station on the Limerick and Foynes railway. It is situated on Tarbert Bay and the river Shannon, and has regular communication by steamers. The village contains a police station, revenue station, parish church, Roman Catholic chapel, bridewell, dispensary, several schools, and a Wesleyan meeting-house. It is a subport to Limerick, and has a lighthouse on the Tarbert Rocks, which is visible for 13 miles. The trade of the place is chiefly in the export of grain and dairy produce. Tarbert was granted to the Crosby family by James I., but afterwards came to the Leslies, the present occupants, whose residence is at Tarbert House. Fairs are held on 20th February, Easter Monday, 22nd June, 20th July, 12th August, and 11th December.

TARBERT, EAST and WEST, two sea-lochs on the coast of co. Argyle, Scotland, near Kantyre and Loch Fyne.

TARBERT, GLEN, a highland valley in the district of Lochaber, co. Inverness, Scotland, between Lochs Leven and Eil.

TARBET, a hmlt. and small bay in the par. of Arroquhar, co. Dumbarton, Scotland, 1½ mile from Arroquhar, and 8 miles N. of Luss. It is the station on the North British railway for Loch Long. It is situated on Loch Lomond, at the ferry to Ben Lomond, and is joined with Arroquhar. The Loch Lomond steam-packets call here.

TARBET, or TURBOT, an islet at the mouth of Ardbear Harbour, bar. of Ballynahinch, co. Galway, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Clifden.

TARBET, EAST and WEST, two sea-lochs in Scalpay Sound, Western Isles, coast of Scotland, lying to the E. and W. of Harris Island; also two lochs in the south-western div. of co. Wigton, separated by the Mull of Galloway.

TARBOCK, a tnshp. in the par. of Huyton, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 8 miles S.E. of Liverpool, and 3 W. of Ditton railway station. The inhabitants are engaged in the collieries and in agriculture. There is a brewery.

TARBOLTON, a par. and small town in the district of Kyle, co. Ayr, Scotland. It extends about 7 miles S.W., with an extreme breadth of 4 miles, and is bounded by the pars. of Craigie, Mauchline, Stair, St. Quivox, and Monkton. The surface is undulating, but nowhere exceeds 400 feet above sea-level. It was formerly moorland, but is now well cultivated and planted. Coal was worked at an early period. There are a flour mill, corn mills, tile kilns, and a manufactory for hones and razor-strops. The parish is traversed by the road from Ayr to Edinburgh, and is within easy access of the Mauchline and Monkton stations of the Glasgow and South-Western railway. The town of Tarbolton stands about 4 miles W. of Mauchline, and 12 S.E. of Irvine. It is situated on the rivers Ayr and Feale, and was created a burgh of barony in the reign of Charles II., when it was granted to John Cunningham, Esq., of Enterkine. A townhall was erected in 1836. A large number of the inhabitants are employed in the cotton, woollen, and silk mills. This par. is in the presb. of Ayr, and synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The stipend of the minister is £313. The parish church was erected in 1821. There are a Free church and an United Presbyterian church; also a school of industry for girls, besides other schools. The parish comprises the larger part of the old parish of Barnwell, with the ruins of Faile convent, situated about 1¼ mile N.N.W. of the village of Tarbolton. The monastery was founded in 1252 for Red Friars, and stood on the banks of the Faile rivulet, near Loch Faile. Near the ruins of the monastery are Willie's Mill and the "Castle of Montgomerie," and at Hood's Hill is a Danish camp. Burns the poet lived at Lochlee farm in the years 1780-83. The principal seats are Coilsfield, Enterkin, Smithston, Drumley, and Afton Lodge. Tarbolton gave title of baron to the Duke of Lennox in 1581. A cattle show is held on the first Monday in May, and a fair on the Tuesday following the 11th June.

TARDEBIGG, a par. chiefly in the upper div. of Halfshire hund., co. Worcester, but partly in the Alcester div. of Barlichway hund., co. Warwick, 3 miles S.E. of Bromsgrove, its post town, and 2 S. of the Blackwell railway station. The village is situated on the Worcester and Birmingham canal, and on the Birmingham and Bristol railway. The par. includes the town of Redditch and the hmlts. of Bentley, Pauncefoot, Webheath, and Tutnall. The soil is rich and productive, and the subsoil abounds in building-stone. The manufacture of needles and fish-hooks is extensively carried on at Redditch [which see]. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £590. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, has monuments of the earls of Plymouth, and of Lady Anna Maria Cookes. It was rebuilt by Act of Parliament in 1776. There are various charities, which are distributed to the poor yearly. There are chapels at Redditch for Roman Catholics, Wesleyans, and Independents, and National schools for both sexes, supported by the Baroness Windsor, of Hewell Grange, who is lady of the manor.

TARF, several trout streams of this name in Scotland: one rises in Loch Whinnion, and joins the Dee near Kirkcudbright; another rises in the Grampians, and joins the river Tilt near Loch Tilt, in Atholl; and a third rises in Loch Tarf, co. Inverness, and falls into Loch Ness.

TARFSIDE, a hmlt. in the par. of Lochlee, co. Forfar, Scotland, 17 miles N. of Forfar, on the braes of Angus, near the rivers Lee and Tarf.

TARLAND AND MIGVIE, an united par. in the district of Kincardine O'Neil, co. Aberdeen. It extends in length about 12½ miles, with a breadth of 7½ miles, and is in four detached portions, the most important containing the vil. of Tarland. The general surface of the parish is hilly, but that portion lying around the village is well cultivated. The soil of the arable lands is of a clayey and loamy nature. The prevailing rock is granite. In the vicinity are ruins of a castle, formerly the seat of the earls of Marr, and traces of Druidical temples. The village of Tarland, which is a burgh of barony, is about 9 miles N.E. of Ballator, and 31 W. of Aberdeen. It is situated on the burn of Tarland, near the river Don, and nearly central of the district of Cromar. In 1830, a new course was cut for the burn. In the village are branches respectively of the Union Bank of Scotland and the Aberdeen Banking Company, also a savings-bank. A sheriff small-debt court is held four times a year. This par. is in the presb. of Kincardine O'Neil, and synod of Aberdeen, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is about £177. There are two parish churches, one situated at Tarland, and the other at Migvie. There are a Free-church preaching station, and a parochial school. The principal seats are, Skellator, Inverernon, Condacraig, and Edinglassie. Fairs are held on the Wednesday prior to the 5th January, on the last Wednesday in February (old style), on the Wednesday before and the Wednesday after the 26th May, on the Friday in June after St. Sair's, on the Friday after Old Rayne, and on the Tuesday after the 22nd November.

TARLETON, a par. in the hund. of Leyland, co. Lancaster, 8 miles N.E. of Ormskirk, and 9½ S.W. of Preston. Chorley is its post town. The village is situated on the river Douglas, near Tarleton Moss. This parish, formerly a chapelry in the parish of Croston, is separated into three divisions, viz., Tarleton, Holmes, and Sollom. The soil is loamy and moss, with a subsoil of clay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £800. The church, dedicated to St. John or St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1719. The parochial charities produce about £37 per annum, of which £29 go to a school. There are a school of industry and an infant school. The parish is skirted by the Leeds and Liverpool canal. Sir T. G. Hesketh, Bart., of Rufford Hall, and G. A. L. Keck, Esq., of Bank Hall, are lords of the manor. Fairs are held on the 23rd and 24th April.

TARMON, or TERMON, a hmlt. in the bar. of Erris, co. Mayo, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 7 miles S.S.W. of Binghamstown. It is situated on Blacksod Bay, near Tarmon Hill, and is a coastguard station with a pier.

TARMON, a stream of co. Donegal, Ireland, rises under Crockinnagoe mountains, and falls into Lower Lough Erne.

TARNACRE, or TARNICAR, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Michael-on-Wyre, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 4 miles S.W. of Garstang. It is joined with Upper Rawcliffe to form a township.

TARNTIE, an ancient par. of co. Perth, Scotland, now joined to Trinity Gask.

TARPORLEY, a par., post, and market town, in the first div. of Eddisbury hund., co. Chester, 10 miles S.E. of Chester, and 2 N. of Beeston station on the Chester and Crewe railway. It is situated on the old coach road from Chester to London, near the Nantwich canal. The par. includes the tnshps. of Eaton, Rushton, Tarporley, and Utkinton. It is a polling place for the S. div. of the county. The town, which is old, is well built, and consists chiefly of one winding street about half a mile in length, which is well paved. Two miles S. of the town are the ruins of Beeston Castle, standing on a rock of its own name. Tarporley was formerly governed by a mayor, but since 1348 two constables only are appointed. It is a meet for the Cheshire hounds. The population of the parish in 1861 was 2,577, and of the town, 1,212. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £704. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, has monuments and effigies, some of which are of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £208 per annum. There is a school for both sexes. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Baptists, have chapels. A literary institution was established in 1851. Salter's Well House and Portal Lodge are the principal residences. Market day is on Thursday. Fairs are held on the 1st May, the first Monday after 24th August, and the 11th December, for cattle.

TARRABY, a tnshp. in the par. of Stanwix, ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 1 mile N.E. of Carlisle.

TARRANSAY, an island in the par. of Harris, co. Inverness, Scotland, 1½ mile from Grodernish. It is situated off the entrance to West Loch-Tarbert. The island extends in length 4½ miles from E. to W., with an extreme breadth of upwards of 2 miles. It comprises two peninsulated hills, which rise to an altitude of 800 feet above sea-level. Gneiss and granite are the prevailing rocks. Its inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the fisheries.

TARRANT CRAWFORD, or PRESTON CRAWFORD, a par. in the hund. of Badbury, East Shaston div., co. Dorset, 3½ miles S.E. of Blandford, its post town, and 6. N.W. of Wimborne. The village is situated near the river Stour, which is here joined by the Tarrant. It had formerly a Cistercian nunnery, founded by Ralph de Kahaines in the reign of Richard I., and rebuilt by Bishop Poor in 1230. It was the burial-place of Joan, Queen of Scotland, and of Joan, Princess of Wales. The living is a don. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £50. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. F. S. Drax, Esq., is lord of the manor.

TARRANT-GUNVILLE, a par. in the hund. of Cranborne, co. Dorset, 6 miles N.E. of Blandford-Forum, its post town. The village is situated about a mile from the Great Western road. The par. includes Stubhampton, Gunville, and Eastbury. The greater part of the surface is in downs, common, and coppice wood. The soil is in general light, upon a subsoil of chalk. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £448, in the patron. of University College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has recently been restored and enlarged. J. J. Farquharson, Esq., is lord of the manor. Henry VIII. assigned this manor as part of the dowry to his queens Catherine Howard and Catherine Parr.

TARRANT-HINTON, a par. in the hund. of Pimperne, co. Dorset, 4¾ miles E. of Blandford, its post town. The village is situated at the head of the river Tarrant. Remains of a Roman villa and many ancient coins have been discovered. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £370. The church has a square tower containing three bells. The register dates from 1577. There is a National school for both sexes. James J. Farquharson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

TARRANT-KEYNSTON, a par. in the hund. of Pimperne, co. Dorset, 3½ miles S.E. of Blandford, its post town, and 5½ N.W. of Wimborne. The village, which is of small extent, is situated on the western bank of the Tarrant, which here joins the Stour. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £394. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has been rebuilt, with the exception of the tower. Sir J. James Smith, Bart., is lord of the manor.

TARRANT-LAUNCESTON, a par. in the hund. of Pimperne, co. Dorset, 5½ miles N.E. of Blandford, its post town. In the vicinity are several barrows. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Tarrant Monckton, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church is much dilapidated.

TARRANT-MONCKTON, a par. in the hund. of Monckton-up-Wimborne, co. Dorset, 4½ miles N.E. of Blandford, its post town. There was formerly a priory. The living is a vic. with the cur. of Tarrant-Launceston annexed, in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £55. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is old. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel. J. J. Farquharson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

TARRANT-RAWSTON, a par. in the hund. of Pimperne, North Blandford div. co. Dorset, 4 miles N.E. of Blandford, its post town. The parish is small, and is watered by the river Tarrant. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £110. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a small structure. Sir James John Smith, Bart., is lord of the manor.

TARRANT-RUSHTON, a par. in the hund. of Cranborne, co. Dorset, 3½ miles E. of Blandford, its post town. Here was formerly St. Leonard's chantry, which Edward III. gave to Christchurch Abbey, at Twynham. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £219. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains some carvings of great antiquity. Henry Charles Stuart, Esq., is lord of the manor.

TARRAS, a trout stream, co. Dumfries, Scotland, rises under Pike Fell, and joins the Esk at Irvine Bridge.

TARRELL, an ancient par., co. Dumfries, Scotland, now joined to Kirkmichael.

TARRELL, a stream of co. Brecon, rises under the Brecknockshire Beacons, and joins the river Usk at Brecknock.

TARRETBURN QUARTER, a tnshp. in the par. of Bellingham, N.W. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 4 miles N.W. of Bellingham. It is of irregular form, and is situated on the E. side of the Tarret Burn, and is surrounded by high hills. There are several collieries in the vicinity. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor.

TARRING, or WEST TARRING, a hund. and par. in the rape of Bramber, co. Sussex, 1 mile N.W. of Worthing, its post town, and 1½ from the Worthing station on the South Coast railway. The par. contains the chplries. of Hene and Durrington and the hmlt. of Salvington, where John Selden, the antiquary and keeper of the records in the Tower, was born in 1584. The village was anciently a place of much importance, and was made a market town by Henry VI. The manor was given by Athelstane to Christ Church, Canterbury. In this parish was a palace belonging to Thomas-à-Becket, who is said to have occasionally resided here, and to have introduced from Italy the fig tree, for which the parish is so famed. In the vicinity of the village is a fig orchard, the only one in England. Tarring gives name to a deanery in the archdeaconry and dioc. of Chichester. The living is a vic.* annexed to that of Durrington, in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £474, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, has recently been thoroughly restored. There is a National school for both sexes.

TARRING-NEVILLE, or EAST TARRING, a par. in the hund. of Danehill-Horsted, rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex, 2 miles N. of Newhaven. The parish is bounded on the W. by the river Ouse. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a rect. united to that of Heighton. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a remarkably large chancel.

TARRINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Radlow, co. Hereford, 6½ miles N.W. of Ledbury, its post town, and 7½ E. of Hereford. The village is on the main road. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The soil is of a light character. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £300. The church, dedicated to St. James, has a square tower containing six bells. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. There is a school for both sexes, entirely supported by Lady Emily Foley. Tarrington House is the principal residence.

TARRINSAY, an island in West Loch Tarbet, co. Inverness, Scotland. It is situated on the W. side of Harris Island, and is about 3½ miles in length, with a rocky coast-line, the highest hills rising 800 feet above sea-level.

TARSET, WEST, a tnshp. in the par. of Thorneyburn, co. Northumberland, 3 miles N.W. of Bellingham. It is a station on the Border Counties railway. The township is situated on Tarset Burn, which takes its rise in Kielder Moor, under the Cheviots, and flows 15 miles S.E. to the river Tyne at Graystead. Here was formerly an ancient castle of the Comins.

TARTARAHAN, a par. and post-office vil. in the bar. of West O'Neilland, co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 6 miles N. of Richhill. The soil is fertile. The parish is bounded by the rivers Bann and Blackwater, and by Lough Neagh. The vils. of Maghery and Milltown are within the limits. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £266. The church was rebuilt in 1816 by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and chapels for Presbyterians and Wesleyans, also several Sunday and private day schools. Ruins of the old church are still remaining.

TARTH, a trout stream, co. Peebles, Scotland, rises under Mendick Hill, and joins the Lyne near Drochil Castle.

TARVES, a par. and vil. in the district of Ellon, co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It extends in length about 12 miles from N.E. to S.W., with an extreme breadth of 8 miles, and is bounded by the pars. of Methlick, New Deer, Ellon, Udny, Bourtrie, Meldrum, and Fyvie. The land is for the most part fertile. The prevailing rocks are gneiss, granite, and limestone. The village of Tarves is about 5 miles N.E. of Old Meldrum, and 6 W. of Ellon. It is in the centre of the parish, near the river Ythan. This par. is in the presb. of Ellon and synod of Aberdeen. The stipend of the minister is about £191. The parish church was erected in 1798. At Craigdam is an United Presbyterian church. The principal seat is Schivas House. Tarves gives title of baron to the Earl of Aberdeen. Fairs are held on the Wednesday in January after Old Deer, on the next Wednesday after 19th March, on the first Wednesday after 5th May, Wednesday after 26th July, Wednesday in September after Old Deer, Wednesday after 2nd November, and on the Wednesday in December after Old Deer.

TARVIN, a par. chiefly in the second div. of Eddisbury hund., but partly in the lower div. of Broxton hund., co. Chester, 5½ miles N.E. of Chester, and 5 N.W. of Tarporley. The village, which is large, is situated near the border of Delamere Forest, at the junction of the roads from London and Manchester to Chester. The Chester and Nantwich canal and the Crewe and Chester railway run just within the southern boundary of the parish. During the civil war of Charles I. it was a considerable military post, and after several vicissitudes was held by the parliament to the end of the war. In the middle of the 16th century Sir John Savage, of Rock Savage, then lord of the manor, procured a charter for a market and fair, which have been long disused. The par. contains the chplries. of Ashton, Hargrave, Kelsall, and Duddon, with 7 other tnshps. There are several quarries of white and red sandstone. The population of the parish in 1861 was 3,319, and of the township of Tarvin with Oscroft 1,074. The impropriation belongs to the Dean and Chapter of Lichfield. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £563, in the patron. of the bishop. The parish church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure with a tower enriched with sculpture, though now much mutilated. It contains the tomb of John Thomason, the celebrated calligrapher. A new church was erected in 1833, and there are chapels-of-ease at Ashton, Hargrave, Duddon, and Kelsall. There are chapels for Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists. There are a grammar school and a National school, the former endowed with about £20 per annum. Two fairs are held annually for cattle, one in the spring and the other in autumn.

TARVIN-WITH-OSCROFT, a tnshp. in the par. of Tarvin, second div. of Eddisbury hund., co. Chester.

TASBURGH, a par. in the hund. of Depwade, co. Norfolk, 8 miles S.W. of Norwich, and 1½ mile from Flowden railway station. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the East Union railway, on the river Tese. Many coins, fibulæ, and other relics of antiquity, have been found in the neighbourhood. The surface is undulating, and the land well cultivated. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £275. The church, dedicated to Mary the Virgin, is an ancient edifice. It was recently damaged by lightning, and stands in a camp of 24 acres, where coins and other antiquities have been found. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £38 per annum. There are a National school for both sexes, and a Friends' meeting-house. The principal residence is Tasburgh Lodge.

TASLEY, a par. in the Chelmarsh div. of Stottesden hund., co. Salop, 2 miles N.W. of Bridgnorth, its post town. The village is situated on the high road from Bridgnorth to Shrewsbury, by way of Much-Wenlock. The soil consists of a strong clay, intermixed with a white loamy earth. Coal of inferior quality is obtained in the northern part of the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £212. The church was rebuilt in 1840.

TASTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Spelsbury, co. Oxford, 6 miles N.W. of Woodstock.

TATCHBURY, a tythg. in the par. of Eling, co. Hants, 4 miles S.W. of Romsey. It has traces of a Roman station at Tatchbury Mount.

TATENHILL, a par. in the N. div. of Offlow hund., co. Stafford, 3½ miles S.W of Burton-upon-Trent, its post town, and 11 N.E. of Lichfield. The village has much increased of late years. The par. contains the hmlts. of Dunstall, Barton-under-Needwood, Wichnor, and Callingswood. The soil is heavy, but fertile. Gypsum is found here in large quantities. The Trent and Mersey canal passes at a short distance from the village. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield. The church is old. In addition to the parish church are the district churches of Barton-under-Needwood, Dunstall, and Wichnor, the livings of which are perpet. curs., varying in val. from £135 to £71. The parochial charities produce about £90 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels.

TATHAM, a par. in the hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 12 miles N.E. of Lancaster, its post town, and 1 mile from the Wennington railway station. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the river Lune or Wenning. The par. includes the vils. of Lowgill and Tatham Fell. There are some collieries, and traces of a Roman road. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £300. The church, dedicated to St. James, is an ancient structure with a steeple, erected in 1722, containing three bells. In the interior is a brass to the Cansfield family. There is also the district church of Tatham Fell, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £125. The parochial charities produce about £28 per annum. There is an endowed school. A manor court is held in May, at Hall Barns.

TATHWELL, a par. in the Wold div. of Louth Eske hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3 miles S.W. of Louth, its railway station and post town. The village is situated on the Wolds. The par. includes the hmlts. of Cadwell and Dovendale. On Orgarth Hill are traces of two ancient encampments, and on Bully Hill, about 1 mile S.E. of Tathwell, are six tumuli. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £345, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Vedast, contains tombs of the Hanby and Chaplin families. It was partly restored in 1857. The register dates from 1637. There is a parochial school for this parish and those of Haugham and Raithby. The Hall is the principal residence.

TATSFIELD, a par. in the second div. of Tandridge hund., co. Surrey, 7 miles S.E. of Stoat's Nest railway station, and 3 N.W. of Westerham, its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £150. The church was almost entirely rebuilt in 1838. There is a parochial school. W. L. Gower, Esq., is lord of the manor.

TATTENHALL, a par. in the lower div. of Broxton hund., co. Chester, 7 miles S.E. of Chester, its post town, and 5½ S.W. of Tarporley. It is a station on the Chester and Crewe railway. The village, which is extensive, is situated on a branch of the river Dee. The par. includes the tnshps. of Golbourne-Bellow and Newton. The land is principally devoted to grazing. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £277, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Alban, is old, with a tower containing a clock and five bells. In the E. window are fragments of ancient stained glass. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, at which a savings-bank is held, also subscription and reading rooms. The Independents and Wesleyans have chapels. Mackenzie, Esq., is lord of the manor.

TATTENHOE, a par. in the hund. of Cottlesloe, co. Buckingham, 2½ miles N.W. of Fenny Stratford, its post town. The living is a don. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £40. The church is encircled by a moat. W. S. Lowndes, Esq., is lord of the manor.

TATTERFORD, a par. in the hund. of Gallow, co. Norfolk, 4 miles S.W. of Fakenham, its post town and railway station. The village is situated on the river Wensum. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of Tattersett, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £685. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret. The parochial charities consist of some poor's land.

TATTERSETT, or GATESEND, a par. in the hund. of Gallow, co. Norfolk, 6 miles W. of Fakenham, its post town and railway station. The village is situated on the river Wensum. The soil is of a mixed character, with a subsoil of gravel. There are about 80 acres of common, and 40 of woodland. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Tatterford, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is dedicated to All Saints, or to St. Andrew. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a school for both sexes, erected in 1858. J. S. S. Chad, Esq., J.P., is lord of the manor.

TATTERSHALL, a par. and small market town in the S. div. of Gartree hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 9 miles S.W. of Horncastle, its post town, and 12 N.W. of Boston. It is a station on the Great Northern loop line of railway. The town, which is a place of great antiquity, is now much decayed, but the trade is considerable. It is situated on the Horncastle canal and the river Bain, near its junction with the Witham. The par. contains the hmlt. of Thorpe Tattershall. Tattershall was anciently a Roman military station on the Upper Saltway, and was given by William the Conqueror to Eudo, whose descendants erected a castle here about 1440, on a moor to the S. of the town, which was rebuilt by Sir Ralph Cromwell in the reign of Henry VI., who likewise erected a lofty tower, with a spiral staircase leading to its summit, about 4 miles to the northward. This castle was given by Henry VII. to his mother, the Countess Richmond, in 1487, and afterwards came to the Brandons and Clintons. The ruins consist of a machicolated tower 100 feet in height, with octangular corner turrets and a double ditch, but the earlier portion has been entirely demolished. The living is a don. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £110. The church, dedicated to Holy Trinity, is a venerable cruciform structure, and was made collegiate in the reign of Henry VI. It contains three brasses bearing date from 1486. The collegiate buildings have been taken down, and the church is in a half-ruined condition. The register dates from 1569. The parochial charities produce about £89 per annum. There is a National school, partly supported by £20 per annum from the Gibson charity. The Wesleyans, Baptists, and Primitive Methodists have chapels. The Earl of Fortescue is lord of the manor. Market day is on Thursday. Fairs for cattle and sheep are held on the 15th May and 25th September.

TATTERSHALL THORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Tattershall, S. div. of Gartree hund., co. Lincoln, 2 miles N.E. from Tattershall. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

TATTINGSTONE, a par. in the hund. of Samford, co. Suffolk, 5½ miles S.W. of Ipswich, its post town, and 1 mile E. from Bentley railway station. The village is situated on a branch of the river Stour. The Samford union poorhouse is in this parish. On the estate called the Place is a thick deposit of marine shells. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £460. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower and five bells. The parochial charities consist in two poorhouses. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The principal residence is Tattingstone Place, situated in a well-wooded park watered by large fish ponds. It was formerly the seat of the Beaumont family. In the vicinity is a crag in which many fossils have been discovered. T. B. Western, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

TATTNALL. See TOTTANHOE, co. Bedford.

TATTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Rostherne, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 2 miles N. of Knutsford. Tatton Hall is the principal residence. The park occupies upwards of 2,000 acres, and above 50 of water.

TATWORTH, a tythg. in the par. of Chard, co. Somerset, 1½ mile S. of Chard. It is joined with Forton.

TAUD, a stream of co. Lancaster, rises near Lathom Park, and joins the Douglas at Rufford.

TAUGHBOYNE, a par. in the bar. of Raphoe, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing the vils. of St. Johnstown and Creaghdoos. Bogay is its post town. The parish includes a considerable portion of bog, but the arable soil is good. The river Foyle traces part of its eastern boundary. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Raphoe, val. £1,436. The church was built in 1626. There are a dispensary, a Roman Catholic chapel, a parochial and several other day and Sunday schools. Mongavlin Castle is the principal seat. The ancient borough of St. Johnstown, in this parish, was founded by St. Baithen in the 6th century.

TAUNTON, or TAUNTON DEAN, a hund. of co. Somerset, contains the town of Taunton and the pars. of Angersleigh, West Bagborough, Bradford, Cheddon Fitzpaine, Combe-Florey, Corfe, Cothelstone, Heathfield, Hillfarrance, Hull-Bishop's, Kingston, Lydeard St. Lawrence, Norton-Fitzwarren, Nynehead, Oake, Orchard-Portman, Otterford, Pitminster, Rimpton, Ruishton, Staplegrove, Stoke St. Mary, Tolland, Trull, Wilton, and Withiel-Florey, comprising an area of about 41,000 acres.

TAUNTON, a market and assize town and parliamentary borough in the hund. of the same name, co. Somerset, of which it is the county town, 51 miles S.W. of Bath, and 30 N.E. of Exeter. It is a station on the Bristol and Exeter section of the Great Western railway. The town, which is of great antiquity, is situated in a vale called Taunton Dean, on the southern bank of the small river Tone, here crossed by a stone bridge of three arches, and which is now only partially navigable, the locks having been neglected by the conservators since the construction of the Bridgwater canal, which affords readier water communication, and has also a branch to Chard. Numerous early remains are found in the vicinity, including an ancient bridge of one arch, somewhat pointed, called the Ram's Horn, and another bridge on the line of the Roman way to Bridgwater. In the 7th century it was occupied by the West Saxons, and in 680 was fortified by Ini of Wessex, who built a castle here, in which the Witenagemote, or Great Council, framed the code of laws known as those of King Ini. This castle was, about 722, razed to the ground by Ethelburga, his queen, after having expelled Eadbricht, king of the South Saxons, who had seized it. Subsequently the manor and town were granted to the see of Winchester. It was a mint town, and some of the coins of the reign of William the Conqueror, struck here, are still in existence. In this reign the Bishop of Winchester rebuilt the castle, and fitted it for an episcopal residence. In the reign of Henry I. it was again rebuilt by Bishop William Giffard, and enlarged in 1496 by Bishop Thomas Langton, who added the gateway fronting the Castle-green, which is still standing, and bears the escutcheon of the bishop, with the date 1496. In 1497 the town and castle were seized by Perkin Warbeck, but were abandoned on the approach of the royal troops. In 1642, it was occupied for the parliament; in 1643, by the royalists; and in 1645 by Colonel, afterwards Admiral, Blake, who sustained in it a siege of several months against 10,000 royalist troops, under Lord Goring, till relieved by Sir Thomas Fairfax. At the Restoration, the inhabitants, having incurred the displeasure of Charles II. for their zeal in the cause of the commonwealth, were deprived of their charter, first granted in 1627, but which was shortly after restored, and finally forfeited in 1792, through the neglect of the corporate body in filling up vacancies. In 1685 the town was occupied by the Duke of Monmouth, who proclaimed himself king. Although now entirely dismantled, the castle still forms an interesting object, with a circular tower at the S.W. angle, and a hall, 119½ feet by 30½, built by Bishop Horne in 1577, in which, until very recently, the assizes were held, and where Judge Jeffreys held his "bloody assize," after Monmouth's capture. The moat was filled up in 1785, and the drawbridge removed. Among the constables of this once important fortress occurs the name of Thomas Chaucer, eldest son of the poet Geoffrey Chaucer. The civil government is now under the jurisdiction of the county magistrates, who hold petty sessions twice a week, on Wednesday and Saturday, at the Guildhall. The sanitary arrangements of the town are under a local board of health, and the police arrangements under the county constabulary force. The borough, which has returned two members to parliament since the reign of Edward I., was enlarged by the Reform Act, so as to include Ashleigh, Haydon, Holway, North Town, Sherford, and Shoreditch, in the town parishes of St. Mary Magdalene and St. James, and parts of the suburban parishes of Bishopshull and Wilton, and one house in West Monkton. The court leet is held under the lord of the manor of Taunton Dean, at which two bailiffs, two portreeves, and two constables are chosen annually—the first are the returning officers. The population in 1851 was 14,176, and in 1861, 14,660, of which the parliamentary borough contains 14,660, with about 810 electors. The town, which consists of three main streets, diverging from a spacious open area called the Parade, and numerous smaller streets, is near a mile in length. The streets are well paved and lighted with gas, and have numerous good shops. The principal public buildings are the shire hall, an Elizabethan structure, erected in 1858 at a cost of £28,000, from the designs of W. B. Moffat, Esq., architect, and containing marble busts of Admiral Blake and John Locke; the Somerset county gaol, situated opposite the shire hall, with which it is connected by an underground passage, and covering an area of 4½ acres; the old market house, situated on the S. side of the Parade, is a brick building of considerable size, containing the guildhall, and surrounded on either side by arcades, used on market days for corn, and surmounted by a clock; the upper part comprises an assembly room, with a full-length portrait of George III. The new market house was erected in 1821 at the western side of the Parade, the lower story being used for meat, poultry, and dairy produce, and adjoining it is the fish market; while the upper part is appropriated to the Somerset and Taunton Literary Institution, with reading rooms, library, &c., and to the museum of the Somersetshire Archæological and Natural History Society, which is rich in valuable geological specimens, chiefly of saurians from the lias, Devonian fossils, and cave bones from the Mendip hills, some of the latter specimens being unique; there is also a rich collection presented to the county by John Hugh Smith Pigot, Esq., of drawings of churches and other architectural buildings in Somersetshire. Besides these buildings there are cavalry barracks in Mount-street, with accommodation for 63 men and horses; a savings-bank, at the top of High-street; four commercial banks; several good hotels; philharmonic society; assembly rooms, at Meeton's London Hotel; the union workhouse, in South-street, erected in 1837; the Taunton and Somerset Hospital, in East-reach, founded in 1809; the eye infirmary, established in 1816; the lying-in institution; gas and water works; also three silk mills, iron and brass foundries, maltings, breweries, coach-building works, and cabinet manufactories. The woollen manufacture was established here in the 14th century, but has long since decayed, and that of silk, which superseded it, is now on the decline, but a considerable business is done in gloving and machine sewing. Four weekly newspapers are published in the town—viz., the Taunton Courier, Somerset County Herald, Somerset Gazette, and Western News. The county assizes and quarter sessions are held here alternately with Wells, also a county court, which sits monthly at the shire hall. Taunton is likewise the seat of a superintendent registry and of a Poor-law Union embracing 37 parishes and townships in Somersetshire. It is the head-quarters of the 1st Somerset Militia, and of the 2nd battalion of the Somerset Rifle Volunteers. Taunton gives name to an archdeaconry, and to a deanery in the dioc. of Bath and Wells. The livings are St. James's, a perpet. cur., val. £250, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells; St. Mary Magdalene's, a vic., val. £350, in the gift of the Church Patronage Society; Trinity, a perpet. cur., val. £160, in the patron. of the bishop; St. John's, in Park-street, also a perpet. cur.; and St. George's, in the par. of Wilton, a perpet. cur., val. £125. The church of St. James, which formerly belonged to Bishop Giffard's priory for Black Canons, founded in 1127, is a structure of the 14th century, with a quadrangular tower of the Tudor period, containing five bells, and an octagonal font. The church of St. Mary Magdalene, which stands near the centre of the town, was originally a chapel to the conventual church of St. James, but was made parochial in 1308. It was rebuilt in the reign of Henry VII., and has a tower at the W. end, 153 feet high. The rebuilding, after a facsimile of the original, was completed in 1865. The interior of the church had been restored twenty years previously, and contains a ceiling of bog oak and a carved pulpit, a painted E. window of seven lights, a painted W. window by Gibbs, of London, inserted in 1864, and some specimens of ancient glass saved from the debris of the old E. window, and now inserted in the side windows, also a peal of eight bells, and a rhyming epitaph on Robert Gray, commencing "Taunton bore him, London bred him," &c. The register dates from 1558. The church of the Holy Trinity was built in 1842, at a cost of £7,000, and is situated in South-street. The church of St. John the Evangelist is a modern structure, by Scott, erected at a cost of above £12,000. The church of St. George, in Wilton parish, is an ancient structure with a square tower. The register commences in 1558. The Roman Catholics also have a church, erected in 1861, at the top of Billet-street, the highest ground in the town, which, when completed by the addition of a steeple to be placed on the tower, will attain an elevation of 210 feet, and form one of the most striking architectural features of the town. There are two chapels belonging to the Wesleyans two to the Independents, and one each to the Primitive Methodists, Baptists, Society of Friends, Unitarians, and Plymouth Brethren; of these the most interesting are the Unitarian and Independent, the former for its internal architecture and the latter as standing on the site of Paul's Meeting, once held by George Newton, the Nonconformist minister of St. Mary Magdalene, at Taunton, who was ejected, with 2,000 brother clergymen, by the Act of Uniformity passed in 1662. The convent formerly called Taunton Lodge was purchased in 1807 by the society of religious ladies of the Second Order of St. Francis, who came over from Belgium during the French Revolution and settled at Winchester, from which place they subsequently removed to Taunton, where they devote themselves to educational purposes. The West of England Dissenters' Proprietary School was founded here in 1847, and is connected by royal warrant with the University of London, and has about 130 pupils. The Wesleyans have a collegiate institution here, built in 1847, by J. Wilson, with a frontage of 250 feet in length and a tower 80 feet high. In Bath-place is the School of Art. The free grammar school was founded in 1522 by Bishop Fox, of Winchester, and endowed by the Rev. William Walbec, the patronage being in New College, Oxford. It has in connection with it a botanical garden, museum, and laboratory. There are National, British, Sunday, and infant schools, also several first-class educational establishments for both sexes, including Fullard's House School, which deserves notice as being situated in a demesne of 20 acres, with 10 acres of cricket and play grounds. The principal residences in the vicinity are Pyrland Hall, the old seat of the Yea family, Flook House, Longford House, and Belmont. Besides the remains of the castle above described, and the Roman bridges, there are traces of a Carmelite Friary, founded in 1322 by Walter de Meryet; of a Black Priory, at Priory Farm, founded by Bishop Giffard, of Winchester, in 1127; also of a lepers' hospital of the 13th century. The charities are considerable, producing annually about £1,200, including the town lands and the incomes of the almshouses, among which must be mentioned Huish's hospital for 13 poor, with a chapel; R. Gray's almshouses for 18, with a chapel and school attached; also Pope's, Henley's, and St. James's almshouses. Taunton was the birthplace of Samuel Daniel, the poet; of the Rev. Henry Grove, who wrote Nos. 588, 601, &c., of the "Spectator;" and of A.W. Kinglake, M.P., author of "Eöthen" and other works. Cardinals Beaufort and Wolsey, while Bishops of Winchester, resided in the castle, and Dr. Joshua Toulmin, who wrote the town history, was a Nonconformist minister here. The races have been discontinued for some years. Market days are Wednesdays and Saturdays, the last Saturday in every month being the chief day for cattle and sheep. Fairs are held on 17th June and 8th July for cattle.

TAVERHAM, a hund. in the co. of Norfolk, contains the pars. of Attlebridge, Beeston St. Andrew, Catton, Crostwick, Drayton, Felthorpe, Frettenham, Hainford, Horseford, Horsham St. Faith, Horstead, Newton St. Faith, Rackheath, Salhouse, Spixworth, Sprowston, Taverham, Wroxham, and part of Hellesdon, comprising an area of 30,980 acres.

TAVERHAM, a par. in the above hund., co. of Norfolk, 5½ miles N.W. of Norwich, its post town. The village is situated on the river Wensum and on the road from Norwich to Fakenham. Many of the inhabitants are employed in a paper mill. In a plantation called Friars' Wood are slight remains of a friary. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £300. The church, dedicated to St. Edmund, has a brass to J. Thorpe, bearing date 1515. The register dates from 1713. There is a National school for both sexes. The Hall has recently been rebuilt. J. N. Micklethwait, M.A., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

TAVISTOCK, a hund. in the co. of Devon, contains the pars. of Brent-Tor, Milton Abbots, and Tavistock, comprising an area of 19,790 acres.

TAVISTOCK, a par., market, and stannary town and parliamentary borough in the hund. to which it gives name, co. Devon, 15 miles N. of Plymouth, and 32 S.W. of Exeter. It is a station on the Plymouth and Launceston branch of the South Devon and Cornwall railway. It is situated in a hollow on the river Tavy, sheltered by lofty hills on the western border of Dartmoor, of which about 4,000 acres are within the parish. The town is a place of considerable antiquity, having grown up under shelter of the abbey of Black Canons founded in 961 by Orcar, or Orgar, Duke of Devon, and father of Elfrida, wife of King Edgar. The abbey was burnt by the Danes, but was rebuilt, and became one of the richest in the W. of England. At the Dissolution its revenues were returned at £902 5s. 7d., and the site was then given by Henry VIII. to Lord John Russell, from whom it has descended to the present Duke of Bedford, of Endsleigh, who is lord of the honour of Tavistock and owner of most of the land, and takes his second title from this place. The remains of the abbey have been incorporated in the Bedford Hotel, which was erected in 1720 by the duke. It has returned two members to parliament since the reign of Edward I., and during the civil war of Charles I. was occupied by the royalists in 1643. By the Reform Act the bounds of the borough were made co-extensive with the parish, which comprises 14,578 acres, except only the outlying manor of Cudliptown. It was never chartered, but is governed by a portreeve, who is elected annually by the freeholders, and sworn in at the court-leet, and who is also returning-officer, and may qualify to act as a magistrate for the borough. It is a polling-place for the county elections. Petty sessions are held fortnightly, and a county court monthly. It is the head of a Poor-law Union comprising 24 pars. or tnshps., and the seat of a superintendent registry. The population of the borough in 1851 was 8,086, and in 1861, 8,857, inhabiting 1,133 houses. The streets are irregularly laid out, but well paved and lighted, and the houses generally well built. It contains the guildhall, erected in 1848 by the Duke of Bedford, on the site of the ancient abbey; the market-hall, a granite structure, erected in 1839; a savings-bank, held in the abbey gatehouse, which has been carefully restored; literary and scientific and mechanics' institutions, both held in the Abbey-buildings; a public library, where a meteorological register is kept; a dispensary, founded in 1832; union poorhouse, and two commercial branch banks; also gas and waterworks, three bridges, and a race-stand. There are several large foundries, engine-factories, and metal works, a woollen manufactory, two breweries, and four malting establishments. The town was anciently noted for its manufacture of kersey cloth; but the principal industries are now connected with mining operations, which are extensively carried on in the adjacent hills of the Tavistock district, which abounds in copper, lead, silver, tin, iron, manganese, as also in good oilstone for sharpening tools. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £298. The church, dedicated to St. Eustachius, is a spacious structure with a lofty tower supported on four open arches, which form the principal entrances to the church. The tower contains a peal of eight bells, and an illuminated clock, with chimes that play every three hours; and in the chancel is a mural monument of alabaster to Sir John Glanville, C.E., also tombs of the Fitz family, and of Carpenter, of Mount Tavy. The church was thoroughly restored in 1845, when a carved stone pulpit and altar-screen were added. There is also the district church of St. Paul's, Gulsworthy, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £150. This church, with the parsonage-house and schools adjoining, have just been completed at the sole cost of the Duke of Bedford, who has also liberally endowed them. There are chapels belonging to the Wesleyans, Association Methodists, Bible Christians, Society of Friends, Plymouth Brethren, and Unitarians—the last having once been the refectory of the old abbey, adjoining the chapel, of which considerable remains are still to be seen in the churchyard. An extramural cemetery was formed in 1834 on ground presented by the Duke of Bedford. There is a grammar school, built and chiefly maintained by his grace, also National, British and Foreign, Sunday and Wesleyan schools. Races are held in May on Church Down, a little to the S. of the town, on an oval course of 2 miles. Mr. Deacon's hounds hunt here. At Old Morwell is a seat of the abbots, who, being mitred, were entitled to sit in parliament as barons after 1513, and who are said to have cultivated the Saxon tongue, and to have erected the second printing-press in England, at which "Boethius" and other works were struck off as early as 1525. Market days are Tuesday and Friday, the latter being one of the largest in the county. Fairs for cattle are held on the first Wednesday in December, the second Wednesdays in January, March, May, July, September, October, and November, and the third Wednesday in August.

TAVY ST. MARY, a par. in the hund. of Lifton, co. Devon, 4 miles N.E. of Tavistock, its post town. The village is situated on the road from Plymouth to Barnstaple, near the river Tavy, which rises at Cranmere Pool, under Okement Tor, in Dartmoor Forest, and flows 20 miles in a S.W. direction to the river Tamar, at Tamerton. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the Weal Friendship copper mine. A mineral called tungstate of lime has been found in this parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £224. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a staircase leading to a rood-loft. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. The Wesleyans have two chapels. There are National and Lancastrian schools.

TAVY ST. PETER, a par. chiefly in the hund. of Roborough, but partly in that of Lifton, co. Devon, 3 miles N.E. of Tavistock. The village is situated near the rivers Tavy and Tamar. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £250, with 64 acres of glebe, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is an ancient structure dedicated to St. Peter, and contains a monument to Pocock, a former rector. There was formerly a chantry chapel at Wilsworthy, which has been converted into a barn.

TAW, a river, co. Devon, rises under Okemont Hill, in Dartmoor Forest, and after receiving the tributary streams of the Little Dart and Yeo, falls into Barnstable Bay.

TAWE, a river of co. Brecon, rises in Llyn-y-fan-fawr, and after receiving the tributary streams of the Twrch and Clydach, falls into Swansea Bay at Aber-Tawe.

TAWIN, an islet in Galway Bay, co. Galway, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Galway.

TAWNAGH, a par. in the bar. of Tirerill, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles S.S.E. of Colloony. Riverstown is its post town. The soil is generally good, except a large quantity of bog. The river Arrow, which flows from Lough Arrow, in the neighbourhood, traces part of its boundary. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with another, £60, in the patron. of the bishop. The church has long been in ruins. There are the ruins of Bahy Castle. A fair is held on 17th March.

TAWNY, a vil. in the bar. of Kilmacrenan, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Carrickart. It is situated not far from Lough Tawny.

TAWSTOCK, a par. in the hund. of Fremington, co. Devon, 2 miles S. of Barnstaple, its railway station and post town. The village is situated on the river Taw. The manor comes from the Tracies, Audleighs, Fitz-Warrens, Bourchiers, to the Wreys. The par. includes the hmlts. of Lake, Harracott, St. John's Chapel, and Collibear. The soil is rich and fertile. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Harracott annexed, in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £783. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, contains monuments to the above-mentioned families. The parochial charities produce about £100 per annum. There is a school for both sexes, also one at Harracott, both of which are entirely supported by the rector. The Roman Catholics and Independents have chapels. The principal residence is Tawstock Court, the seat of Sir B. P. Wrey, Bart., who is lord of the manor. The mansion has been rebuilt, after having been destroyed by fire in 1787, except the ancient gateway, which bears the date 1574.

TAWSTOCK. See TOSTOCK, co. Suffolk.

TAWTON, BISHOP'S. See BISHOP'S TAWTON, co. Devon.

TAWTON, NORTH, a par. and small market town in the hund. of North Tawton, co. Devon, 7 miles N.E. of Okehampton, its post town, and 7½ W. of Copplestone railway station. It is situated on the river Taw, near the old road from Exeter to Okehampton, and contains the chplry. of Broad Nymet. Many of the inhabitants were formerly employed in the woollen manufacture, but this has declined. There are extensive flour and grist mills, and several maltings. The market, instituted by charter in 1270, was discontinued about 1720, but has recently been revived. The market-house was built in 1849. The river Taw affords excellent fishing. At a short distance from the town is Bathe Pool, a natural hollow usually dry, but which occasionally becomes flooded, even in the dryest weather. Water was first conveyed to the town in pipes from Slade farm in 1851. The harriers belonging to J. Skinner, Esq., of Westacott, are kennelled here. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £761. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient stone structure with a spired tower containing six bells. There were formerly chapels at Crook-Burnell, Nichols-Nymet, and Bath-Barton. The parochial charities produce about £48 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents, Baptists, and Bible Christians have chapels. The Earl of Portsmouth is lord of the manor. Market day is on Thursday. Fairs occur on the third Thursdays in April and December, and on the second Tuesday in October.

TAWTON, NORTH, WITH WINKLEIGH, a hund. in co. Devon, contains the pars. of Ashreigney, Atherington, High Bickerton, Bow, Brushford, Bondleigh, Burrington, Chawleigh, Clanaborough, Coldridge, Dolton, Dowland, Down St. Mary, Eggesford, Lapford, Mymet-Rowland, North Tawton, Wembworthy, Winkleigh, and Zeal-Monachorum, comprising an area of 66,300 acres.

TAWTON, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Wonford, co. Devon, 3 miles S.E. of Oakhampton, and 10 S.W. of the Copplestone station, on the North Devon railway. The village is situated on the river Taw and the turnpike road leading from Exeter to Cornwall. There are two mines, and limestone is worked to a considerable extent. The par. includes Taw-Green, Itton, South Zeal, and five other hmlts. The soil consists of loam and clay, with a subsoil of shale. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £150, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Windsor. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient granite structure with a tower containing six bells. The parochial charities produce about £35 per annum, of which sum £2 go to Burgoyne's almshouses. Infant and Sunday schools are held at the church, and a school is also held at the ancient chapel of Zeal. Oxenham Manorhouse is the principal residence. A fair occurs on 7th July for the sale of cattle.

TAXALL, a par. in the hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 4 miles W. of Chapel-en-le-Street, and 8 N.E. of Macclesfield. The village is situated on the banks of the river Goyt, which separates it from Derbyshire. The Peak Forest canal passes through the township of Whaley-cum-Yeardsley, and is here met by the railroad from Cromford. The surface is mountainous and partially barren, but well wooded. There are collieries, slate works, and quarries of good building and flagstone, chiefly in the township of Whalley. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £312. The church, dedicated to St. James, is modern, with an old tower containing three bells. It has tombs of the Shallcrosses of Shallcross Hall. The church, with the exception of the tower, was rebuilt in 1825. Erwood Hall is the principal residence. The parochial charities produce about £17 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, at which a Sunday-school is also held. J. W. Jodrell, Esq., is lord of the manor.

TAY, a river of co. Perth, Scotland, rises in Loch Tay, in the district of Breadalbane, and after a circuitous course of about 50 miles, in which it receives the tributary streams of the Lyon, Tummel, Brand, Isla, Slochie, Almond, and Earne, falls into the Firth of Tay at Newburgh, being navigable as far as Perth.

TAY, a stream of co. Waterford, Ireland, rises in the Commeragh mountains, and falls into Stradbally Bay.

TAY, or LUGGELAW, a lough of co. Wicklow, Ireland, lies among the mountains at the head of the river Annamoe, its surface being 808 feet above sea-level.

TAYINLOAN, a vil. in the par. of Killean, co. Argyle, Scotland, 20 miles N.W. of Campbelton. It is situated on the W. coast, opposite Gigha, and adjoining the ferry to that island. Fairs are held on the Friday in May before Kilmichael, and on the Wednesday in July after Tarbert.

TAYMOUTH CASTLE, the seat of the Marquis Breadalbane, co. Perth, Scotland. It is situated near Kenmore, at the mouth of Loch Tay, and commands a view of the vale of the Tay from the terrace, which is 3 miles long. It includes the Baron's Hall, Chinese Room, and a gallery of paintings, and is surrounded by a richly-timbered deer park, containing moose-deer, buffaloes, &c.

TAYNTON, a par. in the hund. of Chadlington, co. Oxford, 1½ mile N.W. of Burford, its post town. The village is situated on the river Windrush, near the borders of Wychwood Forest. There are quarries of freestone. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £56. The church, dedicated to St. John, contains an ancient font. There is a school with a small endowment.

TAYNTON, a par. in the hund. of Botloe, co. Gloucester, 6 miles N.W. of Gloucester, its post town, and 3 S.E. of Newent. The village is situated on the turnpike road from Newent to Huntley and Newnham. The soil consists of a loamy clay. The parish is noted for its perry and cider. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £321, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Gloucester. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, has a low square turret. It was rebuilt by an ordinance passed in 1647. There are two infant schools. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. Taynton House is the principal residence. The manorial rights belonging to this parish are extinct.

TAYNUILT, a hmlt. on the S. side of Loch Etive, co. Argyle, Scotland, 1 mile from Bunawe and 10 miles E. from Oban.

TAY-PORT, a hmlt. in the par. of Monifieth, co. Forfar, Scotland, 6 miles E. of Dundee, and 2 from Broughty Ferry. It is a station on the North British railway.

TAYRIBBI, a vil. in the district of Appin, co. Argyle, Scotland.

TEALBY, a par. in the S. div. of Walshcroft wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles N.E. of Market-Rasen, its post town, and 19 N.E. of Lincoln. The village is situated on the Wolds, and is watered by a rivulet called the Rase, which forms the principal source of the river Ancholme. Upwards of 5,700 silver pennies of Henry II. were discovered in 1807, on the estate of the Right Hon. Charles Tennyson D'Eyncourt, who presented many of them to the British Museum. The parish was enclosed in 1793, when the moor allotments contained 990 acres, and the Wold 1,956. The soil on the moors is light and sandy, and in other parts a sandy loam alternated with stiff clay. There are numerous quarries of greystone and chalk. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £120. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a stone structure with a tower containing a clock and four bells. The parochial charities produce about £17 per annum. There is a school for both sexes, erected at the expense of the Right Hon. Charles Tennyson D'Eyncourt in 1858, and by whom it is entirely supported. The same building answers for an institution, with a reading-room and library attached. The Wesleyans, Primitive and Free Methodists have chapels. The principal residence is Bayons Manor, the seat of the D'Eyncourts, with a circular keep. After the Conquest the manor became the property of Odo, Bishop of Bayeux, and thence it came to the families De Bayeux, Beaumont, Lovel, and D'Eyncourt. C. T. D'Eyncourt, Esq., is lord of the manors of Tealby and Bayons.

TEALING, a par. in the district of Dundee, co. Forfar, Scotland. It comprises the vils. of Balkello, Balgray, Kirkton, and Todhills. It extends in length about 7 miles, with a mean breadth of 2 miles, and is bounded by the pars. of Inverarity, Murroes, Dundee, Mains, Strathmartine, Auchterhouse, and Glammis. The surface is hilly, forming the south-eastern slope of the Sidlaws. Craigowl, the loftiest of the Sidlaws, rises 1,100 feet above sea-level, and the base of the slope is about 500 feet above sea-level. The land is chiefly arable. The soil of the higher ground is a light gravel, while that of the lower is principally clayey and loamy. The prevailing rocks are grey slate and sandstone. The village of Tealing is about 4 miles N. of Dundee, and is intersected by the Dundee and Newtyle railway, and by the W. road from Dundee to Aberdeen. This par. is in the presb. of Dundee, and synod of Angus and Mearns, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is about £162. The parish church was erected in 1806. There are a Free church, a parochial school, and other schools. The principal seat is Tealing House. At Balckembeck are Druidical stones.

TEAN, UPPER and LOWER, hmlts. in the par. of Checkley, co. Stafford, 2 miles S. of Cheadle, and 7 N.W. of Uttoxeter, its post town. These hamlets are situated on the Tean river, which rises near Kingsley, and flows 15 miles S.E. to the Dove at Uttoxeter. There is an extensive tape manufactory, with bleach-fields adjoining. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £150, in the patron. of the Rector of Checkley. The church was erected in 1841. The Independents and Wesleyans have chapels. Fairs are held on Easter-Tuesday and 10th November.

TEARNSIDE, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirkby-Lonsdale, co. Westmoreland, 1 mile N.W. of Kirkby-Lonsdale, and 9 miles S.E. of Kendal, near the river Lune.

TEATH, ST., a par. in the hund. of Trigg, co. Cornwall, 2½ miles S.W. of Camelford. The parish, which is large, is bounded on the W. by the Bristol Channel, and intersected by the great road running to the N. There are two large slate quarries, that called Delabole, belonging to the Trevanion family, being of great extent and value. A lead mine, yielding a large proportion of silver, has been successfully worked, and there are deposits of iron, antimony, and other minerals. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £226, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Teath, is a structure of Henry VII.'s time, and was formerly collegiate for two prebendaries. It contains monuments to the Cheyneys of Bodanan and the Phillippses of Treveares. The Wesleyans and Bible Christians have chapels. There are National schools. On a hill in this parish are traces of an ancient British encampment.

TEBAY, a tnshp. in the par. of Orton, co. Westmoreland, 2 miles S.W. of Orton. It is situated under Tebay Fell, near the river Lune, and is a junction station of the London and North-Western and Barnard Castle railways.

TEBWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Chalgrave, co. Bedford, 4 miles N.W. of Dunstable.

TECOLM, a par. in the bar. of Ballyadams, Queen's County, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Stradbally. The parish is crossed by the road from Stradbally to Carlow. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Leighlin, united with Dysertenos and Kilteale.

TEDAVNET, a par. in the bar. of Monaghan, co. Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Monaghan. Lisbellaw is its post town. The surface is mountainous and boggy, and is intersected by the river Blackwater. The principal hills are the Slieve Beagh mountains. The vils. of Bellanode and Scotstown are within the limits. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Clogher, val. £578, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which is at Bellanode, was enlarged in 1830. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, meeting-houses for Presbyterians and Wesleyans, a dispensary, and several public and private schools. The principal seats are Tallaghan and Mount Louise. Fairs are held on the 19th January, 2nd and 31st March, 24th June, and 28th September.

TEDBURN ST. MARY, a par. in the hund. of West Wonford, co. Devon, 7 miles N. of Exeter, its post town, and 4 S. of the Crediton station on the Exeter and Barnstaple railway. The village is situated on the Ned stream, which joins the Creedy at Crediton. The soil is of a clayey nature, with a subsoil of shale. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £435. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a tower and six bells. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum. There are schools for each sex. Fulham House is the principal residence. B. Fulford, and J. H. Hippesley, Esqs., are lords of the manor. A fair occurs on the Monday prior to Michaelmas Day.

TEDDESLEY HAY, an ext. par. place in the E. div. of Cuttlestone hund., co. Stafford, 2 miles N.E. of Penkridge, on the Stafford and Worcester canal.

TEDDINGTON, a par. and suburban village in the hund. of Spelthorne, co. Middlesex, 12 miles S.W. of London, and 2½ from Kingston. It has stations on the North London and South-Western railways. The village is situated on the western bank of the Thames, about 19 miles above London Bridge, and on the high road from Richmond to Hampton Court, through Bushey Park. It was anciently called Todynton and Tuddington, and is the site of the first lock on the river, which has recently been rebuilt in masonry, with a subsidiary lock for the passage of pleasure boats. The river is at this point scarcely affected by the tides, which are two hours later than at London Bridge, and the low and high water levels are respectively 16½ and 1½ feet higher, the bed of the river rising about one foot per mile. The population of the village, which is included within the south-western postal district, was in 1861 1,183. Many villa residences have lately been erected on the banks of the Thames, and here are the wax bleaching-grounds and candle manufactory of Messrs. Barclay. There is an old house which tradition styles Queen Elizabeth's Hunting Box. The living is a don. cur.* in the dioc. of London, val. £100. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a comparatively modern structure, the earliest portion being of the time of the Reformation. It occupies the site of an ancient chapel belonging to Staines' Abbey, and has tombs of Lord Keeper Bridgman, Whitehead the poet, Dr. Stephen Hales, and Mrs. Woffington, the celebrated actress. The parochial charities produce about £23 per annum, of which £20 belong to Dame Bridgman's school. There are also schools for boys, girls, and infants, erected through the aid of voluntary contributions, and £100 contributed by the late Queen Dowager. The principal seats are, Teddington House, Teddington Place, and Broom House, the first celebrated for its ceiling by Verrio, and some wood carvings by G. Gibbons.

TEDDINGTON, a chplry. in the par. of Overbury, middle div. of Oswaldslow hund., co. Worcester, 5 miles N.E. of Tewkesbury, its post town, and 2½ E. of Ashchurch station on the Bristol and Birmingham railway. In the vicinity is a finger-post, with a singular inscription upon it, pointing to five different roads. The Cheltenham stag hounds meet here. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Overbury, in the dioc. of Worcester. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure with a tower and two bells.

TEDSMORE, a tnshp. in the par. of West Felton, co. Salop, 5 miles S.E. of Oswestry.

TEDSTONE-DELAMERE, a par. in the hund. of Broxash, co. Hereford, 4 miles N.E. of Bromyard, its post town, and 13 N.W. of Worcester. The surface is hilly, and the land is partly in hop-grounds. Limestone is abundant. The soil consists of red marl and clay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £238, in the patron. of Brasenose College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. James, is old and dilapidated. The parochial charities produce about £2 10*s.* per annum. A school is held at the rectory-house on Sundays. Tedstone Court is the principal residence.

TEDSTONE-WAFER, a par. in the hund. of Broxash, co. Hereford, 4 miles N.E. of Bromyard, its post town, and 14 from Worcester. A portion of the land is in hop-grounds. The soil is of a clayey and loamy nature, with a subsoil of limestone. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Edwin-Loach, in the dioc. of Hereford. The church is ancient. There is a free school for both sexes. E. Higginson, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

TEEL, a stream of co. Fife, Scotland, rises in Camilla Loch, and falls into the Firth of Forth, near Kirkcaldy.

TEELIN, a vil. in the bar. of Bannagh, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 6 miles W. of Killybegs. It is situated on Teelin Bay, near Slieveleague and Teelin Head. It has a small harbour and coastguard station.

TEES, a river of the north of England, rises under Cross Fell, in co. Cumberland, and traversing Teesdale on the borders of cos. Westmoreland and York for near 70 miles, falls into the North Sea between Snook and Turn points.

TEETON, a hmlt. in the par. of Ravensthorpe, hund. of Newbottle-Grove, co. Northampton, 7 miles N.W. of Northampton.

TEFFONT-EVIAS, or TEFFONT-EWYAS, a par. in the hund. of Dunworth, co. Wilts, 10 miles W. of Salisbury, its post town, 6 W. of Wilton, and 5 E. of Hindon. The village is situated at the head of the river Nadder, which rises in the chalk hills near the adjoining village of Teffont Magna, and forms a lake covering two acres. In the reign of Edward III. it belonged to Speaker Hungerford, the first who held that office. There is an excellent freestone quarry, besides extensive excavations, from which the stone used in building Salisbury Cathedral was taken. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £240. The church has been rebuilt. The principal residence is Teffont House. It was the birthplace of Henry, Earl of Marlborough, Lord Treasurer and Chancellor of England in the reign of James II. There is a National school, partially endowed. Mrs. D'Salis owns the whole of the parish.

TEFFONT MAGNA, a par. in the hund. of Warminster, co. Wilts, 10 miles W. of Salisbury, its post town, and 5 E. of Hindon. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Dinton, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church is an ancient edifice. W. Wyndham, Esq., of Dinton House, is lord of the manor.

TEHALLAN, a par. in the bar. of Cremorne and Monaghan, co. Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles E.N.E. of Monaghan. The surface consists of a good soil, and includes some extent of bog. It is traversed by the Ulster canal and the river Blackwater. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, in the patron. of the bishop. Liscarty is the seat of Major Ross. There is a police station. The manufacture of linen is carried on, and limestone is quarried.

TEHIDY, an old seat of the Bassets, in the par. of Redruth, co. Cornwall, 3 miles W. of Redruth, and 9 W. of Truro. It is surrounded by extensive plantations, and contains a gallery of paintings by the best masters.

TEIGH, a par. in the hund. of Alstoe, co. Rutland, 5 miles N. of Oakham, its post town. The village is situated on the Melton-Mowbray and Oakham canal. The manor was held by the Mallets at the Conquest, and subsequently came to the Folvilles. There is a strong petrifying spring, and fossil fish have been found in the blue rock. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £430. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. The Earl of Harborough is lord of the manor.

TEIGN, a river of co. Devon, rises in Dartmoor Forest, under Siddaford Tor, and falls into the English Channel at Teignmouth.

TEIGNBRIDGE, a hund. in co. Devon, contains the pars. of Ashburton, Bickington, North Bovey, South Bovey, Hennock, Highweek, Ideford, Ilsington, Kingsteignton, Lustleigh, Manaton, Moreton Hampstead, and Teigngrace, comprising an area of 65,300 acres.

TEIGNGRACE, a par. in the hund. of Teignbridge, co. Devon, 2 miles N.W. of Newton-Abbott, its post town and railway station, and 6 from Chudleigh. The village is situated near the river Teign, and on the great western road from Exeter to Plymouth. The Stover canal and railway facilitate the exportation of potters' clay found in the neighbourhood, and of granite from the extensive quarries at High Tor. The subsoil principally consists of clay and yellow sand. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £171. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, or to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1787, at the expense of the Templers of Stover. It has an altar-piece figuring the dead Christ in the Virgin's lap; also another painting in the pew of the Templer family representing Simeon worshipping the infant Jesus. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. There is a free school. The principal residence is Stover House, a granite mansion, belonging to the Templer family, who constructed the canal. The Duke of Somerset is lord of the manor.

TEIGNHOLT, a hmlt. in the par. of Drewsteignton, co. Devon, 3 miles N.W. of Moreton Hampstead.

TEIGNMOUTH, a seaport, market town, and fashionable watering-place in the hund. of Exminster, co. Devon, 6 miles N.E. of Newton Bushel, and 13 S. of Exeter, of which city it is a sub-port. It is a station on the South Devon railway. The town, which is sheltered by hills, is situated at the N. side of the mouth of the river Teign, on the coast of the English Channel. It comprises the two parishes of East and West Teignmouth, and is a place of great antiquity, being the Saxon Tegntun. In 970 it was burnt by the Danes, and in 1338 and 1690 by the French, who in this last attack succeeded in destroying 116 houses, with 11 ships in the harbour. During the siege of Calais in 1348 it supplied 7 ships. It sent members to the council at Westminster in the reign of Edward I., and returned members to parliament in the 14th of Edward III., but was never incorporated. It is now governed by the local magistrates, and by two portreeves chosen annually for either manor at the courts leet and baron. The manor of East Teignmouth anciently belonged to the see of Exeter, but was alienated to the Courtenays of Powderham, and now belongs to the Earl of Devon, and that of West Teignmouth to Lord Clifford. Although the old town is irregularly built, and some of the streets are narrow and ill-paved, it is a rapidly improving place, containing many good shops and numerous modern villa residences, the latter situated principally at the N.W. end of the town, where the land lies high, commanding extensive views of the sea and river. It has no manufactures, but a considerable coasting trade, also a good Newfoundland trade and home fishery for whiting, soles, turbot, mackerel, and pilchards on the coast, and for salmon in the river Teign. The principal exports are granite from the Haytor quarries, timber, bark, cider, manganese, pipe and potters' clay, which two last amount to some 50,000 tons annually, and are dug principally in the adjoining parish of King's Teignton, and brought down to the quay in lighters, and thence shipped to the Staffordshire potteries. The imports are of culm, coal, deals, iron, groceries, &c. Much of the prosperity of the town, however, depends upon the influx of visitors in the season for sea-bathing, for which it is admirably adapted, having a broad sandy beach, and every accommodation. The population of the town is about 6,000, including the suburb of Shaldon, which is connected by a bridge of thirty-four arches supported on iron trusses, and extending a length of 1,671 feet, with a swing bridge over the main channel to allow the passage of ships. It has two commodious quays, called Old and New, a custom-house, coastguard watch-house, court-house where petty sessions are held fortnightly on Mondays, public assembly rooms built in 1826, and containing a spacious ball-room 70 feet long, billiard rooms, and other apartments; a theatre built in 1849, and situated in Northumberland-place, public baths on the beach, a new market house, several good hotels, lodging houses, circulating libraries, and reading rooms, also two branch banks, ship-building yards, maltings, breweries, and two free dispensaries. In front of the town is the Den, or Dene, an open grass plat of several acres running parallel with the sea. This open space forms a promenade of about three-fourths of a mile in length, and serves as a course for the races, which take place annually in August. At one end of the Den is the lighthouse erected by the harbour commissioners in 1845, 31 feet high, with a fixed light visible for 9 miles. About 1 mile from the town, and near the Exeter road, is the cemetery for the united parishes of East and West Teignmouth. The living of East Teignmouth is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £135, in the presentation of the Vicar of Dawlish, to which parish it was once annexed, and that of West Teignmouth is a vic., val. £157, in the presentation of the Vicar of Bishops-Teignton. Both churches have been rebuilt within the present century. East Teignmouth Church is a cruciform structure, dedicated to St. Michael, and situated on a cliff overlooking the sea; West Teignmouth Church, dedicated to St. James, is a spacious octagonal structure built on the site of the old cruciform one in Bitton-street; it has a tower at one corner containing four bells and a clock, and the centre is surmounted by an octagonal dome lantern. The Independents, Wesleyans, Roman Catholics, and Plymouth Brethren have chapels. There are spacious National schools for the united parishes, also Sunday and other schools, partially endowed by Coleman and Elwell. The Teignmouth Gazette and Times are published weekly. The charities, arising principally from the parish lands, produce about £19 per annum. In the neighbourhood the cliffs are of New Red sandstone, and attain an altitude of from 150 to 200 feet. The mate is so genial that the myrtle and other exotics flourish in the open air. East Teignmouth gives the title of baron to the Shore family. A regatta takes place in August. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on the third Tuesday in January and the last Tuesday in February and September.

TEIGNTON, BISHOPS, DREWS, AND KING'S. See BISHOPS TEIGNTON, &c., co. Devon.

TEIRTREF, a tnshp. in the par. of Meiford, co. Montgomery, 5 miles N.W. of Welshpool.

TEITH, a river of co. Perth, Scotland, rises near Loch Lomond in two head waters, which, uniting at Callander, flow through scenery celebrated in "The Lady of the Lake" to the Forth at Drip Bridge, near Stirling. There are salmon and trout.

TEITH, or BRIDGE-OF-TEITH, a vil. in the par. of Kilmadock, co. Perth, Scotland, 4 miles from Doune, and 25 S.W. of Perth. It is situated on the river Teith.

TELLAROUGHT, or TELLARATH, a par. in the bar. of Shelburne, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of New Ross, its post town. The surface consists of a good soil, and is crossed by the road from Enniscorthy to Waterford. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with St. Mary's, New Ross, £864, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is in ruins. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and a school, also a police station. There was formerly a very considerable village here, some traces of which are yet visible, as also of a Norman castle.

TELLISFORD, a par. in the hund. of Wellow, co. Somerset, 5 miles N.E. of Frome, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Freshford railway station. The village is situated at the bridge over the river Frome, which here separates this co. from that of Wiltshire. About a third part of the village was burnt in 1785. The soil consists of clay and loam. In the vicinity is a fulling mill. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £173. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a tower containing three bells, and has recently been restored. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a school with a small endowment.

TELSCOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Holmstrow, rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, 6 miles S.W. of Lewes, its post town, and 3 from Newhaven. The village is situated in a secluded valley amongst the Downs, near the coast of the English Channel, which bounds the parish on the S. The Brookside hounds meet at Telscombe Tye, which is supposed to have been a Roman station. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £231. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient stone structure with a square tower. The register dates from 1684. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum, which go to Povey's school. H. E. A. and W. W. Dalbrie, Esqs., are lords of the manor.

TELSFORD, a par. in the hund. of Wellow, co. Somerset. See TELLISFORD.

TELTOWN, or KILLALTON, a par. in the bar. of Upper Kells, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles E.S.E. of Kells, its post town. The surface consists of first-rate pasture lands with a little bog. It is traversed by the rivers Blackwater and Carlanstown, or Rosmin, and by the road from Dublin to Enniskillen. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Donaghpatrick £380. This place is said to have originated from a church founded here by St. Teallean. In the Roman Catholic arrangement the par. is united to Kilberry and Teltown, and has a chapel at Oristown. Here is an ancient place of burial, also two Roman Catholic schools. The principal residences are Teltown House and Hardlestown.

TELYCH, a hamlt. in the par. of Llandingat, hund. of Perfedd, co. Carmarthen, near Llandovery.

TEME, a river of co. Worcester, rises under Kerry Hill, on the borders of cos. Radnor and Montgomery, and, after a course of nearly 60 miles, joins the Severn near Worcester.

TEMPLAND, a vil. in the par. of Lochmachen, co. Dumfries, Scotland, 4 miles W. of Lockerby. It is situated near the confluence of the rivers Dryffe and Kinnel.

TEMPLE, a par. in the co. of Edinburgh, Scotland. It contains the vil. of its own name, and those of Gorebridge and Stobbsmills, also the ancient par. of Clerkington. It extends in length 8¾ miles from N. to S., with an extreme breadth of about 5, and consits of a main body and of a detached district; the former is bounded by Peeblesshire, and by the pars. of Pennycuik, Carrington, Borthwick, and Heriot, and the latter, comprising about 300 acres, is encircled by the pars. of Newbattle and Borthwick. The surface is hilly, rising in some parts 2,000 feet above sea-level. The soil of the arable lands is fertile. Coal, sandstone, and limestone abound. The parish is within easy access of the Gorebridge, Fushiebridge, and Dalhousie stations on the Edinburgh and Hawick railway. The village of Temple is about 6 miles from Dalkeith, and 12¼ S.E. of Edinburgh. It is situated on the rivers Gladhouse and South Esk. In the vicinity is an old Gothic church, founded by David I. for the Knights Templars. This par. is in the presb. of Dalkeith and synod of Lothian and Tweedale. The stipend of the minister is about £158. The parish church was erected in 1832. There are a Free church for Temple and Carrington, a sub-parochial school, two other schools, and a subscription library. At Gorebridge is an United Presbyterian church. The principal seat is Toxside.

TEMPLE, a par. in the hund. of Trigg, co. Cornwall, 6 miles N.E. of Bodmin, its post town. The extensive moors between Bodmin and Launceston take their name from this parish. It formerly belonged to the Knights Templars' preceptory at St. Ive's. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £21. The church has long since been dilapidated.

TEMPLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Selborne, co. Hants, 4 miles S.E. of Alton. It was made a grange to Southington preceptory by Adam Gordon the outlaw, who was eventually captured here in single combat by Edward I., when prince, in 1266.

TEMPLE, a par. in the city of Bristol, co. Gloucester. See BRISTOL.

TEMPLE, a vil. in the par. of Largo, co. Fife, Scotland.

TEMPLEACHALLY, a par. in the bars. of Owney and Arra, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland. The surface consists of a rich soil, with some little bog and mountain. It includes Ballina-on-Shannon and Lough Derg. The living is a rect. united to Kilmastulla. There are quarries of slate and gritstone. The principal residence is Forthenry.

TEMPLE BALSALL. See BALSALL, co. Warwick.

TEMPLEBEG, a par. in the bar. of Upper Kilnamanagh, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles W. of Thurles. It is crossed by the road from Newport to Thurles. The living is an impropriate rect. in the dioc. of Cashel. There is a Roman Catholic chapel united to that of Toom.

TEMPLEBODEN, a par. in the bar. of Barrymore, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S.S.E. of Rathcormack. Cork is its post town. The surface consists of first-rate pasture land and some little extent of bog. It is traversed by the road from Middleton to Fermoy. The river Middleton takes its rise near here. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £140, in the patron. of the bishop. Here is a private school. The principal residences are Cadogan and Dunlarich. The ruins of the castle of Rathgabbane stand in this parish.

TEMPLEBOY, a par. in the bar. of Tyreragh, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles E.S.E. of Dromore. Killala is its post town. The parish, which lies near the mouth of Sligo Bay, is very mountainous, and comprises some extent of bog. The soil is generally fertile. Aughris Head is a promontory on the coast. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killala, val. with Kilmacshalgan, £320, in the patron. of the bishop. There are five private schools. Building stone and slate are quarried. The principal residences are Dunowla, Sea-view House, Cork Hill, Grange, and Donahantra. A priory was founded at Akeras in 1280 by the MacDonalds.

TEMPLEBREDON, a par., partly in the bar. of Clanwilliam, co. Tipperary, and partly in the bar. of Coonagh, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S.S.E. of Pallas-Grean, its post town. The land is generally good pasture. The living is a suspended vic. in the dioc. of Emly, in the patron. of the crown for the Earl of Kenmare. There are three private schools.

TEMPLEBREEDY, a par. in the bar. of Kerrycurrihy, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S. of Queenstown. Crosshaven is its post town. The river Annabuoy here falls into Cork Harbour. It includes Crosshaven, famous for the escape of Sir F. Drake in 1589. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £90, in the patron. of the dean. The spire of the church serves as a beacon. Hoddersfield is the principal residence.

TEMPLE BRUER, or TEMPLE GRANGE, an ext. par. place in the waps. of Flaxwell and Langoe, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 6 miles N.W. of Sleaford. It is situated near the ancient Ermine Street. At a farm in the vicinity are the ruins of a Knights Templars' preceptory, founded before 1185, and subsequently given to the Hospitallers. At the Dissolution its revenues were valued at £184 6*s.* 4*d.*

TEMPLEBRYAN, a par. in the bar. of East Carberry, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N. of Clonakilly. Rosscarbery is its post town. The soil is very fertile. The old road to Bandon traverses the parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ross, val. £45, in the patron. of the bishop. The church has long been in ruins. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this parish is united to that of Clonakilly. The Knights Templars possessed this parish in the 14th century. There are some Druidical remains.

TEMPLECARN, a par., partly in the bar. of Lurgh, co. Fermanagh, and partly in the bar. of Tyrhugh, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It contains the vil. of Pettigoe, its post town. The surface is mountainous, and the soil poor. It is intersected by the rivers Pettigoe, Omra, Letter, and Rossharbor, which fall into loughs Derg and Erne, both within the limits of this parish. There are very picturesque views, including that of Santo Island. Petty sessions are held fortnightly. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Clogher, val. £372, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is situated at Pettigoe, and is an old building in a ruinous condition. Not far from it is the supposed site of the residence of the first bishop of Clogher, destroyed in Cromwell's time. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, a meeting-house for Presbyterians, two Wesleyan chapels, and four public and several private and Sunday schools. Marble, lime, iron ore, and millstone are found here. There are the ruins of a monastery, once a favourite resort of pilgrims, but destroyed in 1207. Fairs are held on the 25th of each month.

TEMPLECOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Horethorn, co. Somerset, 5 miles S. of Wincanton, its post town, and 7 E. of Sherborne. It is a station on the South-Western railway. The village is situated on the river Kale, a tributary of the Stour. The soil is of a loamy nature, with a subsoil of stone in the upper portion of the parish, and clay in the lower portion. There are several extensive dairy farms. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £398. The church is a stone edifice with a tower. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes with a small endowment. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel. J. Bailward, Esq., is lord of the manor.

TEMPLECORRAN, par in the bar. of Lower Belfast, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Carrickfergus, its post town. The surface consists of a fertile soil, and is well tilled. The parish is bordered on two sides by Lough Belfast and Lough Larne. Ballycarry is in this parish. The predominant rocks are basalt and mountain limestone. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Connor, val. with Kilroot, £142, in the patron. of the bishop. This living was once held by Dean Swift. The Presbyterians and Methodists have chapels. There are two National and one private school. The ruins of the old church are used by the Presbyterians.

TEMPLECRONE, a par. in the bar. of Boylagh, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing Dunglow, its post town. The surface, which is very barren and mountainous, lies between the bays of Gweedore and Trawenagh. The par. includes Arran, Rutland, Cruit, Innisfree, and other islands. The Croochy Mountain rises to a height of 1,033 feet. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Raphoe, val. £304. The church was erected in 1760 by means of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. There are three Roman Catholic chapels, two parish and six private schools. The ruins of Dungloe Castle are visible.

TEMPLEDERRY, a par. and post town in the bar. of Upper Ormond, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 10 miles S.E. of Nenagh. It lies along the river Nenagh, near the Keeper Mountain. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is a small edifice in good preservation. There are five Roman Catholic chapels and six private schools. Castle Otway is the principal residence.

TEMPLEDOWNEY, a par. in the bar. of Upper Ormond, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland. The parish lies near the Devil's Bit mountains, and comprises a good soil. It is traversed by the road from Dublin to Limerick. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Ballymakey £469, in the patron. of the bishop. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this parish is united to that of Aghnamadle. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, also the ruins of Knockane Castle.

TEMPLE-ETNEY, a par. in the bar. of East Iffa, co.

Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles E.N.E. of Clonmell. The Slievenaman mountains are partly within its limits. The living is a vic. united to Kilcash (which see). Griaque is the principal residence.

TEMPLE, GRAFTON. See GRAFTON TEMPLE, co. Warwick.

TEMPLE GUYTING. See GUYTING, TEMPLE, co. Gloucester.

TEMPLE HALL, a hmlt. in the par. of Sibson, hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 3 miles S.W. of Market Bosworth. It is situated near Temple Mill, on a branch of the river Anker. It is in conjunction with Wellesborough to form a liberty, and gives name to the Temple family, of Morlands, descendants of Leofric and Godiva.

TEMPLEHARRY, a par. in the bar. of Clonlisk, King's co., prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.N.W. of Moneygall. The surface is very boggy. The par. is crossed by the road from Dublin to Limerick, and by the river Ollitrim. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Cullenwaine, £299, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1814 by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The ruins of the old church stand on an eminence. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this parish is united to that of Dunkerrin. There are one public and two private schools. The principal residences are Emell Castle, Ballintemple, Foxborough, Clonlohan, and Silver Hill. There are traces of a Danish rath at Wolfe Hill, near which the English were defeated by the O'Carrolls during the Revolution.

TEMPLE HOUSE, a hmlt. in the pars. of Bray and Cookham, co. Berks, 4 miles N.W. of Maidenhead. It is situated on the Thames, and contains Temple Mills copperworks.

TEMPLEHOUSE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Middle Sligo, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles W.N.W. of Ballymote. It is situated at the mouth of the river Owenmore. The principal residence is Temple House. There is a police station, also the ruins of a house formerly belonging to the Knights Templars.

TEMPLE HURST, a tnshp. in the par. of Birkin, lower div. of Barkstone-Ash wap., West Riding co. York, 5½ miles from Birkin. There is a chapel for Wesleyans.

TEMPLEKEERAN, a par. in the bar. of Skreen, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Navan Tara, its post town. The soil is excellent. The parish, which lies near the course of the river Boyne, is traversed by the road from Dublin to Enniskillen. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Skreen £507, in the patron. of the crown. The church was erected in 1811 partly by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this parish is united to that of Skreen.

TEMPLEMACATEER, a hmlt. in the bar. of Moycashel, co. Westmeath, Ireland, 5 miles W.N.W. of Kilbeggan. It was the site of Templemacateer Abbey.

TEMPLEMALEY, a par. in the bar. of Upper Bunratty, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Ennis, its post town. The surface is boggy. The parish, which is situated near Lough Dromore, is traversed by the river Fergus. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Drumcliffe, £235. The church has long been in ruins. The Roman chapel is united to that of Dowry or Doora. There is a village school.

TEMPLE MARSH, a hmlt. in the par. of Little Wakering, co. Essex, 4 miles S.E. of Rochford.

TEMPLEMARTIN, a par. in the bar. of Kinalmeaky, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Bandon, its post town. The surface consists of poor soil, with bog. The parish is traversed by the road from Kinsale to Macroom. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £72, in the patron. of the dean. The church was erected in 1793 by means of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. There are Roman Catholic chapels, and public, private, and Sunday schools. The chief residence is Mossgrove. The spinning of cotton has been introduced. There are ruins of an ancient residence of the Baldwins, several Danish raths, and some Druidical remains. Fairs are held on 17th March, Corpus Christi days, 2nd September, and 8th December.

TEMPLEMARTIN. See MARTIN, ST., co. Kilkenny.

TEMPLEMICHAEL, a par. in the bars. of Ardagh and Longford, co. Longford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Longford is its post town. The soil is rich, but has a great proportion of bog. The parish is crossed by the road from Dublin to Sligo, and is traversed by the river Camlin and the Royal canal, which terminates here. There are quarries of a fine description of limestone. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ardagh, val. with two others £693, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which has a tower and spire, is situated at Longford, and was renovated and enlarged in 1812 by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, meeting-houses for Wesleyans and Presbyterians, and several schools. The principal residence is Clonbally. Here are the ruins of an old church.

TEMPLEMICHAEL, a par. in the bar. of Slievardagh, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles N. of Carrick-on-Suir. Youghal is its post town. The soil is generally fertile. The parish is traversed by the river Lingan. The village of Ninemilehouse is within its limits. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. with Dysert £270.

TEMPLEMICHAEL, a par. in the bar. of Arklow, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N. of Arklow. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Dublin and Glendalough joined to Kilbride (which see). The church is in ruins. There is a Roman Catholic chapel.

TEMPLEMICHAEL, a par. in the bar. of Coshmore, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles W.N.W. of Youghal, its post town. The surface consists of a well-cultivated, productive soil, with woods and a small amount of bog. The parish is bounded on the S. by the river Touro, and on the E. by the river Blackwater. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. with Kilcokan £270. The church was erected in 1823, partly by means of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. There are three Roman Catholic chapels, two public, and one Sunday school, also a police station. The chief residence is Templemichael House. Here are the ruins of St. Molanfide's Abbey, founded during the 5th century. These ruins were given to Sir Walter Raleigh with Rincrew Castle, and was the burial-place of Raymond-le-Gros.

TEMPLEMICHAEL, a par. in the bar. of Kinalea, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Innishannon, its post town. The surface consists of moderately good soil with some bog. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £201, in the patron. of the bishop. The principal residence is Hawthorn Hill.

TEMPLEMOLAGA, a par. in the bar. of Condons, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles N.W of Mitchellstown. The soil is moderately productive, there being some mountain and bog. The Galtee mountains are partly within its limits. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. with Clenore £596, in the patron. of the bishop. The Roman Catholic chapel is united to that of Kildorrery. The principal residence is that of the Hon. Robert King. There are ruins of two churches.

TEMPLEMORE, a par. in the N.W. libs. of Londonderry, co. Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing part of Londonderry. The surface, which is hilly, consists of a first-rate soil. The river Foyle traverses the interior. There are flax mills and a brewery, and the salmon fishery employs over 200 people. The living is connected with the cathedral in the dioc. of Derry, in the patron. of the crown. There are also two minor churches, several public, four private, and nine Sunday schools. The principal seats are Boom Hall, the residence of the Bishop of Derry; the Farm, in the occupation of Sir R. A. Ferguson, Bart.; and Brook Hall, noted for its gardens, the residence of the Right Hon. Sir G. F. Hill, Bart. The Chichester family take their title from this place. The substratum abounds in limestone, greenstone, and other materials for building purposes. "Jenny's Cairn," notorious for a murder, and another cairn, still remain here, also ruins of a church and of a fortress.

TEMPLEMORE, a par., post, and market town in the bars. of Eliogarty and Ikerrin, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 20 miles N. of Cashel, and 86 from Dublin. It is a station on the Great Southern and Western railway. The surface consists chiefly of good pasture land. The parish is crossed by the road from Athlone to Cork, and is skirted by a tributary of the river Suir. The town, situated in the valley of the Suir, is substantially built. It contains a market-house, military and police stations, bridewell, fever hospital, dispensary, and news-room. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with two others £700, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in the present century. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, a meeting-house for Wesleyans, a public, and six private schools. The Priory and Lloydsborough are among the principal residences. The Carden family are the principal proprietors. Petty sessions are held every Wednesday. Fairs take place on 30th January, 30th March, 17th May, 28th June, 31st July, 4th September, 21st October, and 7th December.

TEMPLEMORE, or STRAID, a par. in the bar. of Gallen, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 4 miles S.S.W. of Foxford, its post town. The surface consists of arable land, with some bog. The parish is traversed by the road from Foxford to Castlebar, and by the river Moy and Lough Cullen. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Achonry, val. with four others £375, in the patron. of the bishop. There are two churches, a Roman Catholic chapel, and four private schools, also a police station. Limestone is quarried. The ruins of an ancient church and monastic establishment, founded by the MacJordans, and of Ballyhahan Castle, are to be seen here. Fairs are held on 31st May, 30th July, 23rd October, and 27th November.

TEMPLEMOYLE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Tirkeeran, co. Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 1 mile S.S.W. of Muff. There is a school of agriculture.

TEMPLEMURRY, a par. in the bar. of Tirawley, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles N.N.W. of Killala. Rathlackan is its post town. The surface consists of good soil, and is crossed by the road from Ballina to Lackan. The bay of Rathfran, near Killala bay, is within the limits, and serves as a harbour for small craft. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killala, val. with Lackan £198. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this parish is united to that of Killala. The principal residence is Summerhill. The ruins of Palmerston House and Rathfran Abbey (founded in the 12th century) are visible. Fairs are held on 25th August and 11th November.

TEMPLENACARRIGA, a par. in the bar. of Barrymore, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Middleton, its post town. The surface consists chiefly of pasture lands. It contains the hmlt. of Walshtown. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £394, in the patron. of the bishop. The church has long been in ruins. There are four schools. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this parish is united to that of Lisgoold.

TEMPLENEIRY, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Tipperary, its post town. The surface consists chiefly of mountain and bog. The par. includes the vil. of Bansha. It is traversed by the river Aherlow and by the Galtee mountains. The living is a rect., val. with two others £562, in the patron. of the bishop. The principal residences are Lismacue and Bansha Castle.

TEMPLENEWSAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Whitkirk, lower div. of Skyrack wap., West Riding co. York, 4½ miles S.E. of Leeds, within which borough it is included. It contains Colton, Halton, Whitkirk, and five other hmlts. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as Newhusam, and was a Knights Templars' preceptory. At the suppression of this order in 1311 the manor was given by Edward III. to the Sir John D'Arcy, whose descendant, Thomas Lord D'Arcy, was beheaded by Henry VIII. for joining the "Pilgrims of Grace," and his forfeited estates given to the Earl of Lennox, from whom they reverted to the crown, and were given by James I. to the Duke of Richmond, who sold the estate to Sir Arthur Ingram, ancestor of the present proprietor. The mansion was built by Sir Arthur. There is a school endowed with £15 per annum by the late Marquis of Hertford.

TEMPLENOE, a par. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Tipperary, its post town. The surface consists of pasture land, and is crossed by the road from Tipperary to Cashel. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with Tipperary £810, in the patron. of the bishop. There are two schools. The chief residences are Greenane and Friarsfield Cottage.

TEMPLENOE, a par. in the bar. of Dunkerron, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 1 mile W.S.W. of Kenmare. Sneem is its post town. The surface includes a large proportion of mountain and bog. The parish, which is crossed by the road from Kenmare to Sneem, is bounded on the N. by the river Kenmare, and on the E. and the W. by the rivers Tinitry and Blackwater. There is a police station. Petty sessions are held on the first Wednesday in each month. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with Kilcrohane £355, in the patron. of the crown. The church was erected in 1816, partly by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. In the Roman Catholic arrangement the parish is united to Kenmare. There are three schools. Dunkerrin and Dromore are the chief residences. Limestone is quarried at the islands of Cappancus and Dunkerron, and fishing is carried on to a small extent. Here are the ruins of Dunkerron and Cappancus castles.

TEMPLEOGUE, a hmlt. and post-office station in the bar. of Uppercross, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, near Rathfarnham, on the river Dodder. Templeogue House, formerly the residence of the Domvilles, is the principal residence.

TEMPLEOMALUS, a par. in the bar. of Ibane, co. Cork, prov of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles E.S.E. of Clonakilty, its post town. The surface consists of good soil, enriched by sea-weed manure. The par. is crossed by the road from Clonakilty to Donoughmore, and includes Clonakilty bay and the vils. of Arundelmills or Ring. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in fishing. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Ross, val. £158, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which stands on an eminence, has long been in ruins. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, also public and private schools. The chief residence is Lackenduff. There are some slate quarries. The ruins of Arundel Castle, built by the lord of that name in the 13th century, are to be traced, also Druidical remains.

TEMPLEORAN, a par. in the bar. of Moygoish, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Mullingar. Rathowen is its post town. The surface consists of pasture land, with some bog. The parish is crossed by the road from Mullingar to Ballincargy, and is intersected by the Royal canal. Frewin Hill rises to an altitude of 568 feet. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Leny £67. The church has long been in ruins. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and a private school. The principal residence is Sonna, the seat of the Tuite family for over six centuries. There are remains of several Danish raths.

TEMPLEORUM, a vil. in the bar. of Iverks, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Pilltown. The ruins of Templeorum Castle are to be seen from this village.

TEMPLEOUGHTER, an ancient par. in co. Antrim, Ireland, now joined to Ticmacrevan (which see).

TEMPLEOUTRAGH. See UPPERCHURCH, co. Tipperary.

TEMPLEPATRICK, a par. and post town in the bars. of Upper and Lower Belfast, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 6 miles N.W. of Belfast. The surface is mountainous, consisting of grazing land, with some bog. It is crossed by the road from Belfast to Londonderry. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Connor, val. £240. The church was erected in 1837, by means of a gift of the late Board of First Fruits. There are four National and five private schools. The principal residence is Castle Upton. The family of the Uptons take their title from this place. There are quarries of limestone and basalt, and the weaving of linen and calico is carried on. The ruins of Cairn Graine cromlech, with several other raths, and the Templars' church, in the crypt of which is the tomb of Josias Welsh, grandson of Knox, are in this parish. The Templepatrick presb. includes Antrim, Crumlin, Duncane, Dundrod, Donegore, Killead, Lynehill, Muckamore, Randlestown, and Templepatrick.

TEMPLEPATRICK. See MOYVORE, co. Westmeath.

TEMPLEPATRICK, a vil. in the par. of Ards, co. Down, Ireland, 2 miles from Donaghadee.

TEMPLEPETER, a par. in the bar. of Forth, co. Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles from Tullow. Leighlin Bridge is its post town. The parish is crossed by the road from Carlow to Fennagh, and by the river Burren. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. £48, in the patron. of the bishop. There is a Protestant church at Dunleckney. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this parish is united to that of Dunleckney. There is a private school. Granite is quarried. The ruins of the church still stand.

TEMPLEPLACE, a vil. in the bar. of South Salt, co. Kildare, Ireland, 1 mile S.W. of Celbridge, on the river Liffey.

TEMPLEPORT, a par. in the bar. of Tullyhaw, co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles W.S.W. of Ballyconnel. Bawnboy is its post town. The surface consists chiefly of mountain waste. The interior is crossed by the road from Killeshandra to Ballyconnel. The par. includes Bawnboy and eight lakes. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kilmore, val. £449, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, which stands on the bank of a lake, was built in 1815, partly by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are four Roman Catholic chapels, four public, and ten private schools. The chief residences are Bawnboy, Brackley Lodge, and Corville. At the island of Inch are the ruins of the abbey of St. Maedock, founded in the 6th century, also the ruins of a monastic establishment at Kilnavat. Fairs are held on 23rd May, 12th August, and 23rd November.

TEMPLEQUINIAN, a par. in the bar. of East Carbery and Ibane, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles E.N.E. of Clonakilty, its post town. The soil is productive. The parish is crossed by the road from Clonakilty to Timoleague, and by the river Arigadeen. The living is a suspend. vic. in the dioc. of Ross, in the patron. of the bishop. The church has long been in ruins. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this parish is united to that of Clonakilty. The principal residence is Castleview. The weaving of coarse linen is carried on to some extent. The ruins of Ballinarohan Castle are in this parish. The burial-place is still used, and contains the family vaults of the Allens.

TEMPLEREE, a par. in the bar. of Ikerrin, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles E. of Templemore, its post town. The surface consists of good soil, with some bog. The river Suir passes near the limits of the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. £155, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is in ruins. The principal seat is Castle Eeny.

TEMPLEROAN, a par. in the bar. of Fermoy, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles E. of Doneraile, its post town. The surface consists of good land, with bog, and comprises Shanballymore. The parish is crossed by the road from Mallow to Mitchelstown, and by the river Awbeg. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £262, in the patron. of the bishop. It is joined to Doneraile. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and two private schools. The principal residences are Graig, Clogher, and Ballynamona. The ruins of the church and of Ballynamona Castle are visible. Clogher was formerly in the possession of Edmund Burke. Limestone is quarried, and coal is found at Graig Mountain.

TEMPLEROBIN, a par. in the bar. of Barrymore, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It contains the vil. of Queenstown, or Cove (which see), the Spike and Hawlbowline islands, and a portion of Great Island. The living is a rect. united with that of Clonmel (which see), in the patron. of the bishop. The church has long been in ruins.

TEMPLESCOBY, a par. in the bar. of Bantry, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles W.S.W. of Enniscorthy, its post town. The surface consists of a fair soil, with a little bog. The parish is crossed by the road from Enniscorthy to New Ross, and the river Urrin traverses its northern limits. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. £125, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1817 by means of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this parish is united to that of Davidstown. There are two private schools. The chief residences are Dunsinane, Verona, and Clohass. There are quarries of stone and clay.

TEMPLESHANBO, a par. and post office vil. in the bar. of Scarawalsh, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Newtownbarry. The surface is mountainous, but includes a large extent of fair pasture land, with a small quantity of bog. This parish is crossed by the road from Scollagh Gap to Carlow, and is traversed by the river Slaney on the N.E. border. Mount Leinster, rising to a height of 2,610 feet, and the Blackstairs mountains, are on the borders. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. £927, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1815, partly by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are six Roman Catholic chapels, one public and eight private schools. The principal residences are Killoughram Forest and Ballychristal. Lime, slate, and granite are found. There are ruins of a monastic establishment in the churchyard, and of a convent founded in the 6th century by Colman O'Fiachrah. Fairs are held on the 2nd June, 26th October, and 7th November.

TEMPLESHANNON, a par. in the bars. of Ballaghkeen and Scarawalsh, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. The surface consists of good soil. The parish contains a part of Enniscorthy, near which place the river Blackwater joins the river Slaney. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with St. Mary, Enniscorthy, £1,080, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, originally founded by Maidoc, Bishop of Ferns, is in ruins. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this parish is united to that of Enniscorthy and Monageer. There are a meeting-house for Friends and several schools. In this parish is a tumulus in perfect preservation. Vinegar Hill was a chief station of the rebels in 1798.

TEMPLE SOWERBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby-Thore, ward of East, co. Westmoreland, 6½ miles N.W. of Appleby. Penrith is its post town. It is a station on the Eden Valley branch of the North-Eastern railway. The village, which consists of two spacious streets of well-built houses, is situated on the ancient Watling Street, at a point where the rivulet Crowdundle joins the Eden, here crossed by a bridge built in 1823. The manor was given by the Viponts to the Knights Templars, and came to the Dalstons of Acorn-bank. The soil is loamy, with a gravelly subsoil. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £96. The church, dedicated to St. James, was enlarged and rebuilt in 1770 at the expense of the late Sir W. Dalston. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum. There is a day-school for both sexes, at which a Sunday-school is also held. A Roman milestone still stands about 100 yards from the 14th milestone from Brough. H. Boazman, Esq., is lord of the manor.

TEMPLETENNY, a par. in the bar. of West Iffa and Offa, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 10 miles S.W. of Cashel. Clogheen is its post town. The surface is mountainous, but soil good. The parish is crossed by the road from Ballyporeen to Mitchels-town, and the rivers Tar and Arralgan traverse its interior; the Galtee and Knockmealdown mountains are partly within its limits. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. £140, in the patron. of the crown. The church is modern. There is a Roman Catholic chapel. Limestone is quarried. The ruins of the old church are visible, and the churchyard is still in use. The Ballyporeen and Mitchellstoun caves, which were discovered in 1833, are to be seen here.

TEMPLETOGHER, a par. in the bar. of Ballymoe, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles N.E. of Dunmore. The surface is mountainous and boggy. Petty sessions are held in the village weekly. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. with Kiltullagh £624, in the patron. of the bishop. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, and one public and three private schools. The principal residences are Springfield, Beahagh, and Gurtane. Limestone is quarried. A sulphurous spring is situated at Springfield. Fairs are held on Easter and Whit Mondays.

TEMPLETON, a vil. in the par. of Newtyle, co. Forfar, Scotland.

TEMPLETON, a par. in the hund. of Witheridge, co. Devon, 4½ miles N.W. of Tiverton, its post town, and 8 from Bampton. The village is situated on a branch of the river Exe. The manor formerly belonged to the Knights Templars, and afterwards to the hospitallers of St. John of Jerusalem. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £162. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum.

TEMPLETOUGHY, a par. and post town in the bars. of Eliogarty and Ikerrin, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles E. of Templemore. The surface consists of a well-cultivated soil, with some extent of bog. The parish is crossed by the road from Johnstown to Kilkenny. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. £606, in the patron. of the archbishop. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, and four public schools. The chief residences are Cranagh and Long Orchard. Here is a dispensary. The remains of several old castles are visible.

TEMPLETOWN, or KILCLOGHAN, a par. in the bar. of Shelburne, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. New Ross is its post town. The surface consists of good soil, and is well cultivated. The parish is crossed by the road from Fethard to New Ross. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. £91. There is a Roman Catholic chapel, also day and Sunday schools. The principal residence is Ballystraw. There are ruins of a Knights Templars' preceptory, founded in the reign of John, and the remains of Kilcloghan Castle.

TEMPLETOWN, a vil. in the bar. of Lower Dundalk, co. Louth, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Carlingford, on Dundalk Bay.

TEMPLETRINE, a par. in the bars. of East Carbery and Courceys, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. Kinsale is its post town. The surface is hilly, with some extent of bog and waste, but the soil is good. Boggestown, Rochestown, Hacketstown, and Kilbrittain are within the limits of this parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £380. The church, which stands on an eminence, was built in 1821, by means of gifts from the late Board of First Fruits. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, and two schools. The chief residences are Garretstown, Kilmore, and Knockanroe. There is a chalybeate sulphur spring. The ruins of Crohane Church, and a large fort with a treble rampart, are visible.

TEMPLEUDIGAN, or ST. PETER'S, a par. in the bar. of Bantry, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. New Ross is its post town. The surface is hilly, and the soil is generally well cultivated. The road from New Ross to Newtonbarry crosses its interior, and it is traversed on the W. by the river Barrow. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. £153, in the patron. of the incumbent of New Ross. The church was built in 1808, part by means of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, a private school, and a police station. The principal residence is Coolbawn. The ruins of a cromlech, near White Mountain, are visible.

TEMPLEUSQUE, a par. in the bar. of Barrymore, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland. The surface is hilly, and the soil well cultivated. It is crossed by the road from Cork to Dublin, and by the river Glanmire. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, and in the patron. of the bishop. The church has long been in ruins, and the Protestants attend worship at Ballydelahor. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this parish is united to that of Glanmire. There is a public school. The chief residences are Riverstown, Sarsfield, and Woodview. The woollen manufacture is carried on to some extent. There are the remains of a castle.

TEMPO, a post office vil. in the par. of Enniskillen, bar. of Tyrkennedy, co. Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It is situated on the road from Enniskillen to Five-mile-town. There are a chapel-of-ease, and a meeting-house for Presbyterians. In the village are a police station and post office. A customary market is held on the 28th of every month.

TEMPSFORD, a par. in the hund. of Biggleswade, co. Bedford, 5 miles S.W. of St. Neot's, its post town, and 9 N.E. of Bedford. It is a station on the Great Northern railway. The village is on the great north road, and at the confluence of the rivers Ivel and Ouse. The soil consists of light loam and clay. The Cambridgeshire hounds meet in this parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has recently been restored. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum. The principal residence is Tempsford Hall. W. Stuart, Esq., is lord of the manor.

TENANTRY, a quoad sacra par. in the district of Athole, co. Perth, Scotland. It contains portions of the quoad civilia parishes of Blair Athole, Moulin, and Dull. It is in the presb. of Dunkeld. The church was erected in 1836.

TENBURY, a par., post, and market town, in the upper div. of Doddingtree hund., co. Worcester, 22 miles N.W. of Worcester. It is a junction station on the Tenbury and Bewdley and Shrewsbury and Hereford railways. It is situated in the fertile valley of the Teme, which is here a considerable river, separating Worcestershire from Salop. Tenbury is a polling and petty sessions town. The par. includes the hmlts. of Tenbury-Foreign, Berrington, and Sutton, and was held by Richard Fitz-Richard at the Conquest, and subsequently came from the Lacys, Mortimers, &c., to the Cornwalls. The Teme is here crossed by a bridge of six arches, and is celebrated for its scenery and trout fishing. The town consists of two streets, intersecting nearly at right angles. It has of late years greatly improved. There are a bank, savings-bank, new corn exchange, market-house, union poorhouse, and gasworks. There is a salt spring, which a few years back was fitted up with pump-rooms and baths for the accommodation of visitors, but never came into favour. The population of the parish in 1861 was 1,947, and of the town 1,171. Malting is carried on, but the chief trade is in hops and cider. A charter for a market was granted by Henry III. in 1249. Courts leet and baron are held by the lord of the manor. The Tenbury Poor-law Union comprises 19 parishes or places, 10 of which are in Worcestershire, 5 in Salop, and 4 in Hereford. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £744, in the patron. of trustees. The church, dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin, was partly rebuilt in 1777, the old one having been much injured by a flood in November, 1770. In the interior are several interesting monuments. The church had formerly a chantry attached to it, and from the 11th to the 15th century belonged to the monastery of Lyra in Normandy. There is also the college and church of St. Michael, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £60. There are National and free schools. The Baptists have a chapel. Market day is on Tuesday. Fairs are held on Wednesday before Bromyard March fair, 22nd April, 26th September, 3rd December, and a statute fair on 1st May for the hiring of servants. They are all toll free.

TENBURY-FOREIGN, a hmlt. in the par. of Tenbury, upper div. of Doddingtree hund., co. Worcester. It is joined with Tenbury to form a township.

TENBY, a seaport, market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in connection with Milford and Pembroke returning one member, co. Pembroke, on the W. side of Carmarthen Bay, 10 miles E. from Pembroke, in the hund. of Narberth, and union of Pembroke, to which it sends guardians. It is a station on the Pembroke and Tenby railway. Tenby was originally built by the Flemish colonists, who were placed in this part of the country by Henry I., though its Welsh name, Dyntych y Pyscoed, "the hill fort of fishes," implies that it was a fishing village long before. It was defended by bastioned walls and a strong castle, of both of which there are remains. Its Flemish inhabitants were celebrated for their woollen manufactures, and kept up a considerable trade with the Continent. Henry VII., when Earl of Richmond, found refuge at Tenby after the siege of Pembroke Castle, and the then mayor of the town, Mr. White, a wealthy merchant, provided him with a vessel to convey him and his mother to Brittany. In the reign of Henry VIII. Irishmen came into the town in such numbers, and created so many disturbances, that a petition was sent to Cardinal Wolsey complaining of them. A great part of the town and walls was destroyed in a three-days' bombardment in March, 1644, when it was stormed by Colonel Laugharne. Three years after it stood a longer siege from Cromwell. After this the town fell rapidly into decay, but within the present century it has risen into repute as a watering place, and contains numerous well-built terraces, modern streets, clean, and well-supplied with shops and good hotels. On the N. and S. side are excellent sands, with numerous bathing machines. St. Catherine's is a small mount on the S. side, surrounded by the sea at high tides, with the ruins of a chapel on the summit. The Castle Hill, which divides the port from the S. Sands, is laid out in walks, furnished with numerous seats. Near the summit are the ruins of the old castle, in part of which is the National school, and between the ruins and the town is a statue of the late Prince Consort on a pedestal of native limestone, inaugurated by Prince Arthur, August, 1865. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was originally built by one of the old Earls of Pembroke. It consists of a nave, side aisles (one of which is curiously sloped off to suit the line of the main street; originally built in this fashion, as appears by an ancient window lately discovered), chancel, and side chapels. The interior, which has lately been restored, contains several stained-glass windows and monuments, especially of the White family. There is a cemetery on the road to Narberth, with a chapel, in which one service is held every Sunday. There is also a service every Sunday in the school of New Hedges, an outlying hamlet. The Wesleyans, Independents, and Baptists have chapels. Baths, with an assembly room adjoining, are situate at the foot of the Castle Hill. There is also a handsome assembly room, lately built, at the back of the Gate House Hotel. There are National and infant schools, a literary institute, a subscription library and reading room, and billiard rooms. Races are held in August, and a regatta in the course of the summer every year; there is also a cricket club.

TENDRING, a hund. in the co. of Essex, contains Harwich, and the pars. of Alresford, Ardleigh, Beaumont-cum-Moze, Great and Little Bentley, Bradfield, Brightlingsea, Great and Little Clackton, Elmstead, Frating, Frinton, Great and Little Holland, Kirby-le-Soken, Lawford, Manningtree, Mistley, Great and Little Oakley, St. Osyth Chich, Ramsey, Tendring, Thorpe-le-Soken, Thorrington, Walton-le-Soken, Weeley, Wix, and Wrabness, comprising an area of 80,840 acres, exclusive of Harwich.

TENDRING, a par. in the above hund., co. Essex, 10 miles S.E. of Colchester, its post town, and 7 W. of Walton steamboat pier. It is a place of great antiquity, and is situated nearly in the centre of the hundred. The village is considerable. Petty sessions for the division were formerly held here. The surface is elevated, and the soil generally a light loam, with a strong subsoil. The Poor-law Union of Tendring comprises 32 parishes, and the workhouse, which is situated on the heath, was erected in 1838, at a cost of £6,500. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £734, in the patron. of Balliol College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Edmund, has two stained windows, recently inserted, and there is an effigy of Edmund Saunders bearing date 1615. The register dates from 1538. There are a National school, and a chapel for the Wesleyans. The manor-house is the principal residence. John Cardinall, Esq., is lord of the manor. A fair is held on the 21st September.

TENTERDEN, a hund. in the lathe of Scray, co. Kent, contains the pars. of Tenterden, Boveiste, Castweasle, Dumborne, Shrubcote, and part of Ebony, comprising an area of 8,620 acres.

TENTERDEN, a par., market town, and municipal borough, locally in the above hund., lathe of Scray, co. Kent, but enjoying separate jurisdiction as part of the Cinque Port liberty of Hastings, 18 miles S.E. of Maidstone, and 12 from the Staplehurst station of the South-Eastern railway. The borough comprises, besides the town of Tenterden, Bird's Isle, Lye, Hithe, Small, and part of Ebony. It was anciently called Thein-warden, and was first chartered by Henry VI. Under the new Municipal Act it is governed by a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors, with the style of "Mayor, jurats, and commons of the town and hundred of Tenterden." The municipal revenue is about £550. The population in 1851 was 3,901, and in 1861, 3,762, having decreased; while the houses had increased in the decennial period from 708 to 711. The town stands on elevated ground, and consists chiefly of one long street, forming part of the West Kent road. It is lighted with gas. The principal public buildings are, the townhall, rebuilt in 1792, assembly rooms, subscription library, union workhouse, and two commercial branch banks. It is a polling place for West Kent, and the head of a Poor-law Union comprising 11 parishes. A court of quarter sessions is held before the Recorder, and petty sessions fortnightly, also a county court monthly. An agricultural society has been established, and an extramural cemetery formed outside the town. The manor anciently formed part of the possession of St. Augustine's monastery, but now belongs to the corporation. Tenterden gives title of baron to the Abbotts of Hendon, in Middlesex. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £450, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Mildred, is of the 13th century, with a tower containing a peal of eight bells. On the N. side of the church is an exclusorium or penitentiary used by the monks, and in which five Protestant martyrs were confined in the reign of Queen Mary. There is also the district church of Smallhythe, the living of which is a don. cur., val. £107. The Wesleyans, Baptists, Calvinists, and Unitarians have chapels. The town charities produce about £300 per annum, of which £80 is Lady Maynard's bequest for apprenticing poor children. Market day is on Friday, chiefly for corn. There is an annual fair on the first Monday in May for cattle, wool, and merchandise.

TENTERGATE, a hmlt. in the par. of Knaresborough, lower div. of Claro wap., West Riding co. York, near Knaresborough. It is joined with Scriven.

TERLING, a par. in the hund. of Witham, co. Essex, 4 miles W. of Witham, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Chelmsford. The village, which is large, is situated on the river Ter, a tributary of the river Chelmer. The manor was held by the bishops of Ely before William the Conqueror gave it to the Peverels, and in the 13th century it became the property of the bishops of Norwich, who had a palace and park here, which subsequently was granted by Henry VIII. to the Audleys. The chapel attached to the palace possessed the privilege of sanctuary. The land is chiefly arable, with a subsoil of clay and gravel. Many gold and silver coins of the later Roman emperors were discovered here in 1824, as bright as if just taken from the mint. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £310. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a tower containing a clock and five bells. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum. There is a National school. The Independents have a chapel. Terling Place is the principal residence. Lord Rayleigh is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

TERMONAMUNGAN, a par. in the bar. of Omagh, co. Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. Castlederg is its post town. The surface is mountainous, affording good grazing land, but a very small proportion of the soil is cultivated. It is crossed by the road from Pettigoe to Newton-Stewart, and by the river Derg. The Longfield mountains are on its northern limits. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry, val. £344, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1822, by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, a meeting-house for Presbyterians, six public, three private, and two Sunday schools, also a police station. The chief residences are, Derg Lodge, the seat of Sir R. A. Ferguson, Bart., Lisnacloon, and Woodside. The prevailing rocks are freestone, limestone, whinstone, and graywacke, with slight veins of coal. Fairs are held on the 21st May, July, September, and November.

TERMONBARRY, a par. in the bar. of North Ballintober, co. Roscommon, and Mohill, co. Leitrim, Ireland, 7 miles E. of Strokestown. It is situated near the terminus of the Royal canal and Lough Forbes, at the nine-arched bridge over the river Shannon. The par., which is boggy, includes the vil. of Roosky, or Rusky, where are a post-office and a police station, and where petty sessions are held. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kilmore, Ardagh, and Elphin, val. £200, in the patron. of the bishop. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, and several schools.

TERMONCARRAGH, a vil. in the bar. of Erris, co. Mayo, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Belmullet, on Portnafrankagh Bay, under Armagh Head.

TERMONEENY, a par. in the bar. of Loughinsholin, co. Londonderry, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. Innisrush is its post town. The surface, which is boggy, consists of a moderately good soil. The parish is traversed on its northern limits by the river Moyola. The inhabitants are principally employed in the weaving and bleaching of linen. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry, val. £323, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1801, partly by means of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. In the Roman Catholic arrangement the parish is united to that of Maghera. There are two public and one private school. The principal residences are Clover Hill and Brough.

TERMONFECKIN, a par. in the bar. of Ferrard, co. Louth, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Drogheda is its post town. The surface consists of a moderately productive soil, and is traversed by the river Boyne. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. with two others £481, in the patron. of the crown. The church was partly rebuilt in 1792. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, two public and two private schools. The principal residences are Cartown, Newtown, and Black Hall. There is a police station. Good stone for building is quarried. A monastery was founded here in 665, and here are the ruins of Glass-Pistol Castle, once the residence of Dr. Plunket, who was executed for treason.

TERMONMAQUIRK, or TARMON M'QUIRK, a par. in the bars. of Strabane and Omagh, co. Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. Carrickmore is its post town. The surface is mountainous and boggy, but the soil is productive. The parish is crossed by the road from Omagh to Dungannon, and includes the vil. of Termonrock. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £1,181. The church was erected in 1786, partly by means of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. There are three Roman Catholic chapels, two public and four private schools. There are quarries of freestone, and small quantities of coal are found. The ruins of the old church, with an old bell tower called the Clogh of Fermon, and a cromlech, are visible. Fairs are held on the last Friday of every month.

TERMONROCK, a vil. in the par. of Termonmaquirk, as above. Fairs are held on the last Friday in each month.

TERN, a tnshp. in the par. of Ercall Magna, co. Salop, 3 miles N.W. of Wellington. It is situated on the Tern river, which rises near Woore, and flows past Market Drayton, about 30 miles, in a S.W. direction, to the Severn, near Atcham.

TERNEWAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llansalloes, co. Cornwall, 3 miles E. of Fowey.

TERRACOED, a hmlt. in the par. of Llangendeirne, co. Carmarthen, 4 miles S.E. of Carmarthen.

TERREGLES, a par. in the co. of Kirkcudbright, Scotland. It extends in length about 4¾ miles from N.E. to S.W., with an extreme breadth of 2¾ miles, and is bounded by Dumfriesshire and by Troqueer, Lochrutton, and Kirkpatrick Irongray. The surface, with the exception of a range of heights in the W., is low. The uplands are partly clothed with wood, and partly in pasture. The parish is situated at the confluence of the rivers Cluden and Nith, and contains Newbridge, with the ruins of Lincluden College, founded by Malcolm IV. for Black nuns, and Moscrops, the old seat of the Earls of Nithsdale, through the Lords Herries. This par. is in the presb. and synod of Dumfries. The stipend of the minister is about £158. The parish church was erected in 1799. There is a parochial school. Terregles House is the principal residence.

TERRINGTON, a par. chiefly in the wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, and partly in the lib. of St. Peter's, East Riding co. York, 7 miles S.W. of Malton, its post town, and 5 N. of the Flaxton station on the York and Scarborough line of railway. In the vicinity is a stone quarry. The soil is of various qualities, upon a subsoil of lime. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £571. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a tower and three bells. The interior contains several brasses and monuments. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, at which a Sunday-school is also held. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels. The Earl of Carlisle is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

TERRINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Freebridge Marshland, co. Norfolk, 5½ miles W. of Lynn, its post town, and 6 from Long Sutton. It has stations on the Spalding and Lynn branch of the Great Northern and Peterborough and Lynn section of the Midland railways. The parish, which is extensive, includes a quantity of salt marsh and common. It was an important place in the Saxon times, and had then considerable salt works. The soil is loamy, with a subsoil of clay. Coins were discovered here in 1844, while removing the Roman embankment. The village is spacious and well built. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £450, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Clement, is a cruciform structure, with a tower at the N.W. angle containing six bells; it was built in 1380, and restored in 1829. The interior contains tablets to the Bentinck, Upwood, Goode, Morphew, and Hamond families, and stained glass windows in memory of members of the family of the Rev. T. T. Upwood, Vicar, who has presented the church with an organ, at a cost of 200 guineas. There was formerly a chapel-of-ease, dedicated to St. James, but which has been washed away by the sea. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum, of which sum £7 go to a school. There are a dispensary and lying-in-charity, and allotment lands of about 50 acres. A National school for both sexes is supported by subscription and a small endowment. Petty sessions are held here on the first and third Monday in each month. Walter Terrington, LL.D., and Dr. John Colton, Archbishop of Armagh, were natives; and the Rev. E. Gonville, who, with Dr. Caius, founded the college which bears their names at Cambridge, Dr. John Pearson, Bishop of Chester, and Dr. Marsh, late Bishop of Peterborough, were rectors. G. W. P. Bentinck, Esq., is lord of the manor of Terrington. There are two other manors in this parish—viz., Howard's and Lovel's; Sir W. J. H. B. Ffolkes being lord of the former, and the Rev. T. T. Upwood, M.A., of the latter.

TERRINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Freebridge Marshland, co. Norfolk, 6 miles S.W. of Lynn, its post town. The village is situated on the Wisbeach road. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £220, in the patron. of the crown. The church, which was restored in 1853, is dedicated to St. John, and has a tower at the W. end containing six bells. The register dates from 1536. The parochial charities produce about £50 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes and a Dissenting day school. The New Connexion Methodists have a chapel.

TERRYGLASS, a par. in the bar. of Lower Ormond, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Borrisokane. Carrigahorrig is its post town. The surface consists of cultivated soil, with bog. It is crossed by the road from Cortumna to Nenagh, and is bounded on the N.W. by the river Shannon. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. £178, in the patron. of the bishop and crown alternately. The church was erected in 1808 by means of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and two private schools. The principal seat is Castle Biggs. Limestone is quarried. The ruins of the old church, and of a monastic establishment, founded by St. Columba in the 6th century, as also the remains of Old Court Castle, are to be seen.

TERWICK, a par. in the hund. of Dumpford, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 1 mile E. of Rogate, 4 miles N.W. of Midhurst, and 5 E. of Petersfield, its post town. The village is situated on the river Rother, and is chiefly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £150. The church was restored in 1847. The register dates from 1577.

TESTERTON, a par. in the hund. of Gallow, co. Norfolk, 3 miles S.E. of Fakenham, its post town, and 2 W. of Ryburgh railway station. The parish is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £13. The church is in ruins. Testerton House, the principal residence, commands extensive views.

TESTON, a par. in the hund. of Twyford, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 4 miles S.W. of Maidstone, its post town, and 1½ mile from Wateringbury railway station. The village is situated on the river Medway, which is here crossed by a bridge. The manor was formerly held by the Crevequers, and given by Edward I. to Canterbury Cathedral. At the Dissolution Henry VIII. presented it to the Wyatts, from whom it came to the Botelers of Barham. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The land is partly in hop-grounds and orchards. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £233. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, has recently been repaired and considerably enlarged. There are schools for both sexes, supported by Lord Kingsdown. Barham Court is the principal residence.

TESTWOOD, a tythg. in the par. of Eling, co. Hants, 4 miles N.W. of Southampton, on the river Test, near Southampton Water.

TETBURY, a par., post, and market town, in the hund. of Longtree, co. Gloucester, 5 miles N.W. of Malmesbury, its post town, and 7 S.W. of Tetbury Road railway station. It is at the southern extremity of the county, bordering on Wilts, and near the source of the river Avon, over which is a long bridge or causeway, leading into the Malmesbury road. The Great Western railway and the Roman Ackman Street pass near the village. The par. contains the tythgs. of Charlton, Doughton, Elmstree, and Upton. Tetbury is a petty sessions town under a bailiff and two constables, who are elected annually at the court leet of the feoffees of the manor. The petty sessions for the town and hundred are held in the townhall on alternate Wednesdays in rotation with Horseley and Rodborough. The town consists principally of one long street, which is paved and lighted with gas, and is crossed at right angles by two shorter ones, with a market-place at the intersection. There are a bank, savings-bank, townhall, market-house, police station, and union poorhouse. The population in 1861 was 2,285, and of the parish 3,274. There are extensive maltings, breweries, and woolstaplers, but the staple trade of the place is in agricultural produce. British and Roman coins of the lower empire have been found on the site of an ancient camp. The Poor-law Union comprises 13 parishes or places, of which 11 are in Gloucestershire, and 2 in Wilts. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of St. Saviour's annexed, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £771. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1781, with the exception of the tower, which contains a clock and eight bells. In the interior are monuments and effigies, some of which are of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £653 per annum. There is an endowed National school for both sexes. The Independents, Baptists, Wesleyans, and Plymouth Brethren have chapels. Market day is on Wednesday. Fairs are held on Ash Wednesday and 22nd July, and on the Wednesday before and after 10th October for corn, cheese, cattle, and horses.

TETCHILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Ellesmere, co. Salop, 1 mile S.W. of Ellesmere, near the canal.

TETCHWICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Ludgershall, hund. of Ashendon, co. Bucks, 10 miles N.W. of Aylesbury. It is joined with Ludgershall to form a township.

TETCOTT, a par. in the hund. of Black Torrington, co. Devon, 5 miles S.W. of Holsworthy, its post town. The village is situated at the confluence of the rivers Tamar and Claw, near the Bude canal. The inhabitants are wholly agricultural. Tetcott House, the seat of Sir W. Molesworth, Bart., was destroyed by fire in May, 1841. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £147. The church, dedicated to the Holy Cross, has some monuments to the Arscott family. The parochial charities produce about £2 10*s.* per annum. There are Sunday-schools, and the Wesleyans have a chapel.

TETFORD, a par. in the hund. of Hill, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 6½ miles N.E. of Horncastle, its post town, and 8 W. of Alford railway station. The village, which is extensive, is situated on the river Steeping and the Wolds. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. Limestone is abundant, and is burnt for manure. In the vicinity are extensive encampments of British origin. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £373. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice with a tower and three bells. There is a National school for both sexes, which has a small endowment, and day and infant schools. The Wesleyans have a chapel. Sir M. J. Cholmeley, Bart., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

TETNEY, a par. in the wap. of Bradley Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 7 miles S.E. of Great Grimsby, its post town, and 3 N.E. of North Thoresby railway station. The village, which is extensive, is situated on the Louth navigation, near Tetney Haven. It is a coastguard station. The weaving of cloth was formerly carried on. There are several wells of clear water, called "blow-wells," which contain pike and eels. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £250, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is an ancient structure with a tower and four bells. The register dates from 1600. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There are Sunday-schools in connection with the church and chapels. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels. The children of this parish have the privilege of being educated in the Humberstone free school. A reading-room was established in 1854, and in the same year the Tetney Agricultural Society was formed. There is a fair on the first Monday following the 12th July.

TETSWORTH, a par. and post town in the hund. of Thame, co. Oxford, 4 miles S.W. of Thame, and 12 S.E. of Oxford. The village is situated on the high road from London to Oxford. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £130, in the patron. of trustees. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is modern. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents and Wesleyans have chapels. Miss Weston is lady of the manor.

TETTENHALL REGIS WITH TETTENHALL CLERICORUM, a par. in the N. div. of Seisdon hund., co. Stafford, 2 miles N.W. of Wolverhampton, its post town. It is situated on the Stafford and Birmingham canal, and comprises the hmlts. of Compton, Pirton, Bovenhill, Pendeford, and Wrottesley. The Danes were beaten here in 907 with great slaughter. The Seisdon union poorhouse is situated in this parish, also the Wolverhampton water-works, which have a tower 180 feet in height. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the hardware manufactures, especially that of locks. The population of the parish in 1861 was 3,716. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £196. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a royal free chapel, and was made collegiate before the Conquest, for a dean and four prebendaries. It was repaired and enlarged in 1825, and the tower has recently been restored. It has a painted E. window representing St. Michael and the dragon, and contains monuments to the Wrottesley family, a carved font of great antiquity, and an ancient oak chest 13½ feet in length, hewn out of a solid block. The register dates from 1606. The parochial charities produce about £105 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, also a chapel for Wesleyans at Tettenhall Wood.

TETTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Warmingham, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 3½ miles N.W. of Sandbach. The township is situated on the Trunk canal and the river Wenlock. Here are extensive brick and tile kilns belonging to the Cheshire Landowners' Drainage and Enclosure Company. Lord Crewe is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

TETWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Toseland, co. Huntingdon, 6 miles S.E. of Neot's, and 3 N.W. of Potton. It is joined with Everton, in Biggleswade hundred. [See EVERTON.]

TEVERSALL, a par. in the N. div. of Broxtow wap., co. Nottingham, 4 miles W. of Mansfield, its post town, and 4 N.W. of Sutton railway station. The village is situated on an eminence near the source of the river Meden. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture, and a few in stocking weaving. Coal and limestone abound, but are not worked. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £510. The church, dedicated to St. Catharine, is a Norman structure, with a tower clothed in ivy, and a Saxon doorway marked with symbolical representations. The interior contains tombs of the Molyneux, Greenhaulgh, and Babington families. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. The Earl of Carnarvon is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

TEVERSHAM, a par. in the hund. of Flendish, co. Cambridge, 3½ miles E. of Cambridge, its post town. The village is situated on the Cambridge and Newmarket road, and is wholly agricultural. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £352, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, or to All Saints, is an ancient edifice with a tower and bell. The register dates from 1593. The charities consist of the rent of lands bequeathed by Lady Joan Jermy, which now produce about £35 per annum.

TEVIOT, a river of co. Roxburgh, Scotland, rises under Pikelaw, and flowing through Teviotdale, receives the tributary waters of Slitrig, Rule, Ale, Jed, and Kail, and joins the Tweed at Kelso.

TEVIOTHEAD, a par. in the district of Hawick, co. Roxburgh, Scotland. It was created into a separate parish out of the parishes of Hawick and Cavers in 1850. It is bounded by Dumfriesshire, and by the parishes of Roberton, Hawick, Cavers, and Castleton. The surface is upland, and is drained by the principal streams of the Teviot. This par. is in the presb. of Jedburgh and synod of Merse and Teviotdale. The old chapel of Caerlanrig was the original parish church; but a new church was erected at the expense of the late Duke of Buccleuch in 1856.

TEW, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Wootton, co. Oxford, 3½ miles N.E. of Neat-Enstone, its post town, and 16 N.W. of Oxford. The Heythrop hounds meet in this parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £134. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has been enlarged. The interior contains some ancient brasses and sculptured effigies, and the tomb of Lord Falkland. The parochial charities produce about £36 per annum. There is a National school. Near this place several Roman antiquities have been discovered. M. P. W. Boulton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

TEWIN, a par. in the hund. and co. of Hereford, 4½ miles W. of Hertford, its post town, and 2½ S.E. of the Welwyn station on the Great Northern railway. The village is situated on the river Maran. The manor was formerly held by St. Alban's Abbey, the Tywinges, St. Bartholomew's Priory, Cooks of Broxbourne, the Cecils, and Lord May. The land is partly in common. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £438, in the patron. of Jesus College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has a tower containing a clock and five bells. In the churchyard is the tomb of Lady Ann Grimstone, which in the course of a century has been gradually displaced by seven ash trees and sycamores. There are also monuments to Lady Cathcart and her second husband, General Sabine, who rebuilt Tewin House. The register dates from 1559. The parochial charities produce about £38 per annum, of which £13 go to a school. There is a National school for both sexes. Marden is the principal residence.

TEWKESBURY, a par., market, and sessions town, municipal and parliamentary borough, locally in the above hund., co. Gloucester, 10 miles N.E. of Gloucester, and 108 from London. It is a station on the Midland railway. The town, which is of great antiquity, is situated at the confluence of the rivers Avon and Severn, in the Vale of Evesham. It is the Teodechesberie of Domesday Survey, and has the remains of a mitred Benedictine Abbey, founded in 715 as a cell to Cranborne. In 1471 Edward IV. defeated the Lancastrians at Bloody Meadow, where Queen Margaret was taken prisoner, and her son slain. In the civil war of Charles I. it was garrisoned by the royalists, but was surprised by Massie in 1644. The town consists of three principal streets, with several smaller streets running off in different directions, but all paved and lighted with gas. The houses are chiefly built of brick. The public edifices comprise the townhall, built in 1785 by Sir W. Codrington, whose portrait it contains; a new gaol, and house of correction; a market-house, on the site of the Tolsey; a mechanics' institute, library, and reading-rooms, a savings-bank, union poorhouse, house of industry at Holme Hill, a dispensary, three commercial branch banks, a small theatre, recently converted into a silk mill, and two iron bridges, the one over the Severn, of one arch, 179 feet span, and the other over the Avon. There are manufactories of stockings, lace, and nails, also a tannery, corn mills, and malting establishments. It is a borough by prescription, and was incorporated by Elizabeth. Under the Municipal Act it is governed by a mayor, who is also returning officer, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors, with the style of "bailiffs, burgesses, and commonalty." The borough has returned two members to parliament since 1609, and was extended by the Reform Act so as to include the whole of the parish. The area of the borough is 1,890 acres, and the municipal revenue about £900. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £313, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The Abbey church, dedicated to St. Mary, is principally in the Anglo-Norman style of architecture, with a tower rising from the centre 300 feet high. It was partly restored in 1796. The ceiling is of stone, groined and panelled, and the walls are decorated with a genealogical series of portraits of the Clares, earls of Gloucester, Despencers, Beauchamps, and other benefactors to the abbey. There is besides the district church of the Holy Trinity, erected in 1837, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £140, in the gift of trustees. The Roman Catholics, Independents, Wesleyans, Baptists, and Society of Friends, have chapels. The grammar school, founded in 1576, has an income from endowment of £55. There are besides a blue-coat school, with an endowment of £40, National, infant, and Dissenters' schools. The charities, including the school endowments, produce about £600 per annum. A mineral spring, similar to that at Cheltenham, occurs at Walton-Cardiff. In the vicinity are Towbury and other Roman camps, and at the house of H. Brown, Esq., M.P., is the Shakespeare cup. Market days are Wednesday and Saturday, the former being chiefly for corn and cattle. Fairs are held on the second Monday in March, the second Wednesdays in April, June, August, and December, the 14th May, first Wednesday after the 4th September, and a pleasure fair on the 10th October, also statute fairs on the Wednesday before and the Wednesday after 10th October.

TEWKESBURY, LOWER, a hund. in co. Gloucester, contains Tewkesbury, and the pars. of Ashchurch, Boddington, Forthampton, Kemerton, Oxenton, Tredington, and Walton-Cardiff, comprising an area of 11,720 acres, exclusive of Tewkesbury.

TEWKESBURY, UPPER, a hund. as above, contains the pars. of Alderton, Clifford-Chambers, Lower Leamington, Prescott, Shenington, Stanway, Great Washbourne, and parts of Ashton-under-Hill, and Bourton-on-the-Hill, comprising an area of 11,720 acres. This hundred forms five different portions.

TEW, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Wootton, co. Oxford, 3 miles N. of Enstone, its post town, and 1 mile S.W. of Great Tew. The village is wholly agricultural. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £50, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is modern. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Baptists have a chapel.

TEXA, an island in the par. of Islay, co. Lanark, Scotland.

TEY, a small stream of co. Kent, joins the river Beult, near Staplehurst.

TEY, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Lexden, co. Essex, 7 miles S.E. of Halstead, 4 N.E. of Coggeshall, and 7 W. of Colchester. The village is situated on the river Roman, near its source. The par. includes the chplry. of Pontesbright and the hmlts of Tey Cross and Pattock Green. The manor belonged to Queen Maud. The land is chiefly arable, and is in a high state of cultivation. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £250, besides which there is a sinecure rect., united with that of Chapel, val. £800 per annum. The church, dedicated to St. Barnabas, is an ancient structure with a tower supported on four arches, containing a peal of eight bells. In 1829 the tower was found to have pressed the pillars of the nave so much out of the perpendicular that it became necessary to take down all the building to the W. of it; divine service is now performed in the old chancel and transept. There is a National school.

TEY, LITTLE, a par. in the Witham div. of Lexden hund., co. Essex, 2½ miles S. of Great Tey, and 5 W. of Colchester. The parish is situated on the old Roman road from Colchester to St. Alban's, and near the line of East Union railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £120, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. James.

TEY, MARKS. See MARKS TEY, co. Essex.

TEYNHAM, a hund. in the lathe of Scray, co. Kent, contains the pars. of Doddington, Linstead, and Teynham, comprising an area of 6,210 acres.

TEYNHAM, a par. in the hund. of the same name, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 3 miles E. of Sittingbourne, its post town, and 3 N.W. of Faversham. It is a station on the London, Chatham, and Dover line. Teynham is of ancient date, and has the ruins of a place formerly belonging to the Archbishops of Canterbury. It is situated on the river Swale, near Conyer Creek, and was formerly a market town. In the vicinity are traces of a Roman camp. A portion of the land is in hop-grounds, and several acres in cherry and apple orchards, said to be the remains of 105 acres of fruit planted by R. Harris, Henry VIII.'s fruiterer. An accession has lately been made to the parish by the embankment of the island of Fowley. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £230, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has some stained windows, and two brasses, one of them bearing date 1443. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a Church lending library, supported by voluntary contributions. The Wesleyans have a chapel. Teynham gives title of baron to the family of Curzon. Colonel Tayler is lord of the manor.

THACKLEY, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Idle, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Bradford.

THAKEHAM, a par. in the hund. of East Easwrith, rape of Bramber, co. Sussex, 6 miles N.W. of Steyning, its post town, and 4 S.E. of Pulborough railway station. The village is situated on an eminence, and is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the hmlt. of Greenhurst. The Poor-law Union of Thakeham comprises 14 parishes or places. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £585. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a tower and five bells. In the interior are monuments to the Apsley and other families.

THAME, a hund. in co. Oxford, containing the pars. of Attington, Little Milton, Tetsworth, Thame, Waterstock, and part of Great Milton, comprising an area of of 10,580 acres. It constituted part of Dorchester hund. at the time of Domesday survey.

THAME, a par. and market town in the hund. of Thame, co. Oxford, 12 miles E. of Oxford, 10 S.W. of Aylesbury, and 45 N.W. of London. It is a station on the Oxford and Aylesbury branch of the Great Western railway. This place, which is of great antiquity, is situated on the Thames, adjoining the vale of Aylesbury, and comprises, besides the town of Thame, the hmlts. of Moreton, North Weston, Priestend, and Thame Park. Roman coins have been found here. It was the Thama of the Saxons; Oscytel, Archbishop of York, died here in 972. At the Norman conquest it was given to the bishops of Lincoln, who founded a Cistercian monastery here in 1138, and of which there are still some remains in the grounds in Thame Park. After the Dissolution the manor was given by Edward VI. to the Protector Somerset, and subsequently to Lord Williams, from whom it passed to the Berties. In the civil war of Charles I. several skirmishes took place here, and John Hampden died at a house till lately the "Grey Hound Inn," whither he was brought home wounded from Chalgrove Field. It is the seat of a Poor-law Union, new county court, and superintendent registry district. The town consists chiefly of two long streets, with a market-place nearly in the centre of the High-street. The public buildings are the townhall and market-house situated in the market-place, a union poorhouse situated at Priestend, a savings-bank, and commercial branch bank. The population in 1851 was 3,260, and in 1861, 3,245. The employment of the people is agricultural, there being no other trades carried on, except chair and fan making. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £240, in the patron. of trustees. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a cruciform structure with a tower erected in 1138, and formerly a chantry chapel founded by the Quatremains of Weston. The interior contains several emblazoned windows and brasses, the earliest dating 1420, also monuments and effigies of the Quatremains, Sir J. Clarke, Lord Williams, and the Dormers of Place House, now taken down. Adjoining the church are the refectory, chapel, and other parts of the prebendal house founded in 1241 by Bishop Grossetete, and now converted into the dwelling house of T. J. Clifford, Esq. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, Baptists, and Independents have chapels. There is a free grammar school, built and endowed by Lord Williams, at which many distinguished men have been educated, as Dr. Fell, Anthony à Wood, John Hampden, Lord Chief Justice Holt, Sir George Crook, Pocock, the traveller and orientalist, George Hetheridge, and others. There are, besides, National schools, partially endowed by funds left by the Earl of Abingdon, British and Foreign, and infant schools. The charities produce about £200 per annum, besides an almshouse for five poor men and one woman. Tuesday is market day. Fairs are held on Easter Tuesday, the Tuesday previous to Whit-Sunday, and the first Tuesday in August, for cattle, horses, and pigs, and a statute fair on the 11th October.

THAMES, the largest and most important river of Great Britain, rises in two heads, one at Ullen Farm, and the other at Coates near Cirencester, on the Gloucestershire border. It drains a basin of about 7,000 square miles, including parts of the counties of Gloucester, Oxford, Buckingham, Middlesex, and Essex, on the northern bank, and Wilts, Berks, Surrey, and Kent on the southern. Its source is 376 feet above the sea at the Nore, and the level descends by stages to London Bridge, where it is only 4¼ feet above the sea, with 12 feet water at low tide, and 17 or 18 feet rise at high tide, with a width of about 290 feet. From this point the fall in the bed is about 1 foot per mile, and the force of the current from 3 to 3½ miles per hour. Depth of low-water from London to Gravesend 2 to 5 fathoms, gradually deepening to the mouth, where it is obstructed by numerous sand-banks and shallows, with deeps or channels between them. Mean tides at full and change 2¼ hours at London Bridge and the Docks, 2 hours at Blackwall, 1¼ at Gravesend, and 12½ at the Nore, where it rises 14 feet. The principal of the tributary streams commencing from its source are the Swill, Churn, Ray, Cole, Colne, Leach, Windrush, Evenlode, Cherwell, Ock, Thame, Kennet, Loddon, Colne, Wey, Bourn, Mole, Cran, Brent, and Wandle; besides the Severn canal, to which barges come up, the Wilts canal, Kennet and Avon canal, and Grand Junction canal.

THAMES-DITTON, a par. in the second div. of Kingston hund., co. Surrey, 2 miles W. of Kingston, its post town, and 5 E. of Walton-on-Thames. It is a station on the South-Western railway. The village is situated on the S. bank of the river Thames, and is much resorted to by anglers. The par. includes the hmlts. of Weston Green, Gigg's Hill, and Ditton-Marsh. In the vicinity are numerous market gardens and a brewery. The village of Long Ditton adjoins this parish. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £290, in the patron. of King's College, Cambridge. The church was formerly a chapel-of-ease to Kingston, but was made parochial in 1769. It is dedicated to St. Nicholas, and the interior contains several brasses and tablets. The register dates from 1663. The parochial charities produce about £90 per annum, of which £35 go to Bridge's and Hill's almshouses. There are National and infant schools. The Independents have a chapel. W. D. Speer, Esq., is lord of the manor of Weston, and the Earl of Lovelace of Claygate manor.

THANET, ISLE OF. See KINGSLOW hund., lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent.

THANINGTON, a par. chiefly in the hund. of Westgate, lathe of St. Augustine, but partly also within the city of Canterbury, co. Kent, 1 mile S.W. of Canterbury, its post town, and 9 miles from Faversham. The village is situated on the South-Eastern branch railway, and near the river Stour. In the vicinity are the ruins of the hospital of St. James, for female lepers, founded in the reign of John by Archbishop Walter, and of which the revenue at the Dissolution was £46 6*s.* 3*d.* The par. includes Wincheapstreet, a suburb of Canterbury, and is intersected by the Roman Stane Street. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £62, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, contains a brass of T. Halls, bearing date 1480.

THANKERTON, a par. in the upper ward of co. Lanark, Scotland, 5 miles W. of Biggar, and 4 S.E. of Carstairs. It is a station on the Caledonian railway. It is joined with the parish of Covington.

THARSTON, a par. in the hund. of Depwade, co. Norfolk, 1½ mile N.W. from Long Stratton, its post town, and the same distance from the Forncett railway station. The village is situated on the East Union railway. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £118, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to the Virgin Mary. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes.

THATCHAM, a par. in the hunds. of Faircross and Reading, co. Berks, 3 miles E. of Newbury, its post town, and 14 W. of Reading. It is a station on the Reading and Bath section of the Great Western railway, near the navigable river Kennet and the Kennet and Avon canal, and includes the chplries. of Greenham and Midgham. It was a place of importance at the time of the Norman survey, and was formerly a market town, under charter of Henry II. to the Abbot of Reading, to whom the manor then belonged. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the silk trade, and some in a paper-mill at Colthrop. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £460. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, or to St. Luke, contains several monuments, including one to Lord Chief Justice Danvers. There are also the district churches of Greenham and Midgham, the livings of which are both perpet. curs. The parochial charities produce about £441 per annum, of which £208 go to Lady Winchcomb's school, and £95 to Loundy's almshouses. A National school was erected in 1845, on the site called Clapper's Green, which was presented by W. Mount, Esq., of Wasing, who is lord of the manor. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have chapels, and the first has a school adjoining. Fairs for cattle are held on the second Tuesday after Easter week, and on the first Tuesday after the 29th September.

THAVIES-INN, an ext. par. place in the City of London-Without, co. Middlesex.

THAXTED, a par. in the hund. of Dunmow, co. Essex, 6 miles N. of Dunmow, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Elsenham railway station. The village is situated on the river Chelmer, near its source, and on the road from Chelmsford to Saffron Walden. The manor was formerly held by the Clares, Audleys, Badlesmeres, and Mortimers, and was given by Queen Catherine to the Cutts family in 1514. It was anciently a place of importance, and was incorporated by Queen Mary, the government being vested in a mayor, recorder, two bailiffs, and 20 burgesses, but on a writ of quo warranto issued by James II. the corporation resigned their functions, and the market, which was on Friday, was discontinued. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture. A brisk trade was formerly done in cutlery. Some Roman coins and an amphora were discovered here some years since. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £500. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, or to St. Mary, is strengthened by buttresses terminating in canopied niches, and having a tower upwards of 180 feet in height. It contains a brass of a priest bearing date 1470, also a pinnacled font, arms, and some stained glass windows. The church was built between the years 1260 and 1465; its interior measures 183 feet in length by 87 feet in breadth. Its spire was destroyed by lightning in 1814, but was replaced in 1821. The parochial charities produce about £822 per annum, of which £503 are derived from Lord Maynard's bequest for augmentation of the living, &c., and £155 from the town estate. There are National and British schools; the former was erected at the expense of Viscount Maynard in 1844. Edward IV. built the chancel, and a free school endowed from Yardley's town estate. The chantry in connection with the church is now an almshouse. The Independents, Baptists, and Society of Friends have chapels. Samuel Purchas was born here in 1577. Horham Hall, built by Sir John Cutts, is the principal residence. A fair is held on the Monday prior to Whit Monday and on 10th August.

THEAKSTONE, a tnshp. in the par. of Burneston, wap. of Hallikeld, North Riding co. York, 3 miles S.E. of Bedale, and 3½ S. of Leeming-lane railway station.

THEALBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Burton-upon-Stather, N. div. of Manley hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 10 miles N.W. of Glandford Brigg.

THEALE, a hund. in the co. of Berks, contains the pars. of Aldermaston, Bradfield, Burghfield, Englefield, Padworth, Purley, Sulham, Sulhampstead Bannister, Tedmarsh, Ufton, Woolhampton, and parts of Shinfield and Stratfield-Mortimer, comprising an area of 26,690 acres.

THEALE, a chplry. in the par. of Wedmore, hund. of Bempstone, co. Somerset, 7 miles S.E. of Axbridge. This district, formerly a marsh, has recently been improved by drainage, and comprises much rich pasture land. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £100, in the patron. of the Dean of Wells. The church was erected in 1824.

THEALE, a par. in the hund. of Reading, co. Berks, 5 miles S.W. of Reading, its post town, and 12 from Newbury. It is a station on the Great Western railway. It is situated on the river Kennet. Until recently, it was a chplry. in the par. of Tilehurst, but was separated from it by Act of Parliament. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, in the patron. of Magdalen College, Oxford. The church was erected in 1830 by Mrs. Sophia Sheppard. There is a National school with a small endowment.

THEARNE, a tnshp. in the par. of St. John Beverley, East Riding, co. York, 3 miles S.E. of Beverley, within the liberties of which borough it is included. It is situated on the river Hull.

THEBERTON, a par. in the hund. of Blything, co. Suffolk, 4 miles N.E. of Saxmundham, its post town. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on an eminence. The par. includes the hmlt. of East Bridge and the vil. of Potter's-Street. The surface is generally flat. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £400, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, contains a monument to the wife of the late Rev. C. Montague Doughty, of Theberton, at whose expense the church was restored. There is a National school for both sexes. The principal residence is Theberton Hall. The devisees in trust under the will of the late Rev. C. M. Doughty are lords of the manor.

THEDDINGWORTH, a par. chiefly in the hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, but partly in the hund. of Rothwell, co. Northampton, 4 miles N.E. of Welford, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Harborough. It is a station on the Rugby and Stamford branch of the London and North-Western railway. The village is situated on the river Welland, near the Grand Union canal. The par. includes the hund. of Hothorpe. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £137. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains monuments to the Clark and Bathurst families. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum, £5 of which go towards apprenticing poor children. Earl Spencer is lord of the manor.

THEDDLETHORPE ALL SAINTS, or WEST THEDDLETHORPE, a par. in the Marsh div. of Calceworth hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 10 miles N.E. of Alford, its post town. The village is situated on the sea-coast. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £98. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains a brass bearing date 1429, and several monuments. The parochial charities produce about £3 10s. per annum. A school was erected here in 1810, at the expense of the Rev. R. G. Boyer, for the children of this parish and that of East Theddlethorpe. T. Alcock, Esq., is lord of the manor.

THEDDLETHORPE ST. HELEN, or EAST THEDDLETHORPE, a par. in the Marsh div. of Calceworth hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 9½ miles N.E. of Alford, its post town. The village is situated on the sea-coast. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of Mablethorpe, in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £498. The church is dedicated to St. Helen. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

THEDWESTRY, a hund., co. of Suffolk, contains the pars. of Ampton, Great Barton, Beyton, Combust-Bradfield, Bradfield St. Clare and St. George, Drinkstone, Felsham, Fornham St. Genevieve and St. Martin, Gedding, Hessett, Livermere Magna, Pakenham, Rattlesden, Rougham, Rushbrooke, Stanningfield, Thurston, Timworth, Tostock, Great and Little Whetnethan, and Woolpit, comprising an area of 39,820 acres. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeaconry of Sudbury and diocese of Ely.

THEESCOMBE, a hmlt. in the par. of Minchinhampton, co. Gloucester.

THE FENCE, an ext. par. place adjoining the par. of St. Briavell's, co. Gloucester, 9 miles S.W. of Newnham.

THELBRIDGE, a par. in the hund. of Witheridge, co. Devon, 7 miles S.E. of Chulmleigh, its post town, 2 S.W. of Witheridge, and 6 N.E. of the Lapford station on the North Devon railway. The village is situated on the road from Crediton to South Molton and Barnstaple, and near the river Little Dart. The soil consists of loam, with a subsoil of clay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £198. The church, dedicated to St. David, is an ancient structure, with a tower and five bells. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. J. Partridge, Esq., is lord of the manor.

THELNETHAM, a par. in the hund. of Blackbourn, co. Suffolk, 3 miles N.W. of Botesdale, and 6 W. of the Diss railway station. The village is situated on the river Brandon, or Lesser Ouse, which here divides the counties of Norfolk and Suffolk. The waste lands were enclosed under an Act obtained in 1821. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £508. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, contains a monument to Henry Bokenham. The parochial charities produce about £34 per annum, besides a fuel allotment. There is a National school. Sir E. C. Kerrison, Bart., is lord of the manors of Eye and Thelnetham.

THELSFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Charlcote, co. Warwick, 4 miles S. of Warwick, on a branch of the river Avon.

THELVETON, a par. in the hund. of Diss, co. Norfolk, 2½ miles N.E. of Diss railway station. Scole is its post town. The village is situated on the road from London to Norwich, by way of Scole. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £249, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is situated within the grounds belonging to the Hall. It has been restored at the expense of the rector, by whom the day and Sunday school are supported. The Hall is the principal residence; adjoining it is a Roman Catholic chapel. T. Avers, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

THELWALL, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Runcorn, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 3 miles S.E. of Warrington, its post town. It is a joint station of the Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire and London and North-Western railways. The village is situated on the Bridgwater canal and the river Mersey. It was founded by Edward the Elder in 920. Several of the inhabitants are employed in the gunpowder mills situated on the S. bank of the river. The soil is clay, with a subsoil of sand. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £150. The church is dedicated to All Saints.

THEMELTHORPE, a par. in the hund. of Eynsford, co. Norfolk, 2 miles S.E. of Foulsham, its post town, and 6 N.E. of Elmham station on the Great Eastern railway. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Bintree, co. Norwich. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. The register dates from 1664.

THENFORD, a par. in the hund. of King's Sutton, co. Northampton, 4 miles E. of Banbury, and 5½ N.W. of Brackley, its post town. The village is situated on a branch of the river Cherwell, near Arbury Roman camp. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture, and a few in lacemaking. There is a mineral spring. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £120. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice, with a tower and five bells. The parochial charities produce about £19 per annum. There is a village school supported by Mrs. Severn. The principal residence is Thenford House. J. M. Severn, Esq., is lord of the manor.

THEOBALDS, a mansion of co. Herts, 2 miles W. of Waltham Abbey. It is situated on the New River, and was built by William Cecil, Lord Burghley, near the site of an ancient moated hall called Thebauldes, in 1560. It was frequently visited by Queen Elizabeth and James I., who exchanged Hatfield House for it, when it became a royal palace, but was dismantled by order of Parliament in 1650, except the cloisters, which stood till 1750. The manor, granted to Monk by William III., came to the Bentincks, Montagues, and Cromwells, of Cheshunt, by whom the mansion was rebuilt in 1765, and is now the seat of Lady Prescott, and Theobalds Park of Sir Henry Meux, Bart.

THEOBALD STREET, a hmlt. in the par. of Aldenham, co. Herts, 3 miles N.W. of Barnet.

THERFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Odsey, co. Herts, 3 miles S.W. of Royston, its post town, and 6 N.E. of Baldock. The village is considerable. The par. includes the hmlt. of Buckland. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £937, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a tower and five bells. The interior contains monuments to the Turner family. The register dates from 1560. There are a National school and an Independent Congregational school. The Independents have a chapel.

THETFORD, a chplry. in the par. of Stretham, hund. of South Witchford, co. Cambridge, 3 miles S.W. of Ely, its post town, and 2 from Stretham railway station. The village is situated on the Great Eastern railway, and at the ferry over the river Cam. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Stretham, in the dioc. of Ely. The church is dedicated to St. George. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum. The Baptists have a chapel.

THETFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Baston, co. Lincoln, 3 miles S.E. of Bourne, on the river Glen.

THETFORD, a market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, having exclusive jurisdiction, but locally in the hund. of Shropham, co. Norfolk, and partly in that of Lackford, co. Suffolk, 12 miles from Bury St. Edmund's, 28 E. of Lynn, and 31 S.W. of Norwich. It is a station on the Great Eastern railway, which passes a little to the N. of the town. This town, which is a place of great antiquity, is supposed to have been the Roman Sitomagus, and was long the capital of the East Angles, by whom it was named Theodford, from the river Thet, a branch of the Little Ouse, which passing through the town, separates the counties of Norfolk and Suffolk, and is navigable hence to Lynn. During the Saxon period it suffered frequently from the incursions of the Danes, who fixed their head-quarters here in 870, and slew Edmund, king of the East Angles, at Snarehill Park, a little to the E. of the town, where twelve large barrows still mark the scene of battle. It was made a mint town by King Athelstan, and so much recovered its ancient prosperity under Cnut, that at the time of Domesday survey it contained 13 churches and 944 burgesses. In the reign of William the Conqueror, the episcopal see of East Anglia was transferred hither from North Elmham, but was removed to Norwich by Herbert de Losinga, who commenced the building of Norwich Cathedral in 1093. In the reign of Henry VIII. it again became the seat of a bishop suffragan to Norwich, which it continued during his reign. On its reversion to the crown in the reign of Elizabeth, the queen rebuilt the mansion of the earls of Warren, and occasionally resided in it, as did also James I., for the purpose of hunting. The old house, situated in King-street, and still known as the King's House, bears the royal arms over the door, and is surrounded by gardens. The town was once much larger than at present. It comprises five principal streets, partly paved, and is connected with the parish of St. Mary, on the Suffolk side of the Ouse, by a cast-iron bridge, erected in 1829. The principal buildings are, the guildhall, built in the reign of Charles II.; the gaol, now converted into a police station; mechanics' institute, with a library of 700 vols.; union workhouse; spa, or pump room; commercial bank, and theatre, now converted into a private house. At the eastern extremity of the town is an artificial eminence, called Castle Hill, about 100 feet high, 990 feet round at the base and 255 feet at the top, with a ditch 60 to 70 feet wide, supposed to have been once a Roman fortification. The population in 1851 was 4,074, and in 1861, 4,208. The principal business is in the malting and carrying trade, great quantities of coal and timber being imported from Lynn by the river, and corn, malt, wool, and agricultural produce exported. There are three large breweries, a tannery, large paper mill belonging to Messrs. Mackey & Watson, an extensive iron foundry, two agricultural machine manufactories, engine and coach building works, flour mill, bone-crushing mill, malting-houses, rope-walks, and extensive brick and lime yards. The subsoil is chalk and lias limestone, containing numerous fossils, and in the vicinity is an extensive rabbit warren. It was incorporated by Queen Elizabeth, and under the new Municipal Act is governed by a mayor, who is returning officer, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors, with the style of "mayor and burgesses of the borough of Thetford." The municipal revenue is about £1,200. The parliamentary borough, comprising the three parishes mentioned below, with the extra-parochial place of Ford Place, has returned two members to parliament since the reign of Elizabeth. The Poor-law Union contains 37 parishes and townships. The assizes, formerly held here, were removed to Norwich in 1833, but quarter sessions for the borough are held in the guildhall. It is the seat of a New County Court and the head of a superintendent registry district. Thetford gives name to a deanery in the archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich. The town comprises the three parishes of St. Mary, St. Peter, and St. Cuthbert. St. Peter's is a rect., val. £122; St. Mary's and St. Cuthbert's are perpet. curs., val. respectively £83 and £50. The church of St. Mary, situated on the Suffolk side of the river, is an ancient edifice with a tower and six bells. The interior contains a monument to Sir R. Fulmerston. The church dedicated to St. Peter is popularly called the "Black" church, and was partly rebuilt in 1789, and has a beautiful peal of eight bells, also an illuminated clock. The church dedicated to St. Cuthbert is near the market-place, and has recently been restored. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, Independents, Society of Friends, and Roman Catholics have chapels. The charities produce above £1,000, of which sum £330 was bequeathed by Sir J. Williamson, in 1701, for apprenticing poor children, and each parish has about £70 per annum derived from the enclosure of the common, besides almshouses. The free grammar school, endowed by Sir R. Fulmerston, bears the date 1610, with the name of the founder. It has several exhibitions to the universities, and was the place of education of Thomas Martin, the town historian, and of Thomas Paine, author of the "Rights of Man," &c. There are besides National, infant, and Sunday schools. The antiquities consist chiefly of the remains of several religious houses and churches, the earliest of which are the ruins of the nunnery founded in the reign of Cnut as a cell to the Abbey of Bury St. Edmund's. Market day is on Saturday. Fairs are held on 14th May, 2nd and 16th August, and 26th September, for cattle and pedlery, and in July for wool.

THICKLEY, EAST, a tnshp. in the par. of St.

Andrew Auckland, N.W. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 4 miles S.E. of Bishop Auckland, near the line of the Stockton and Darlington railway.

THIMBLEBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Osmotherley, wap. of Allertonshire, North Riding co. York, 9 miles N.E. of Thirsk, and 6 N.E. of Northallerton railway station. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture, and in the worsted manufacture. At a short distance to the E. of the village stands Thimbleby Lodge, situated in a wood.

THIMBLEBY, a par. in the soke of Horncastle, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 1½ mile N.W. of Horncastle, its post town, and 6½ miles from the Kirkstead station on the Great Northern railway. The village, which is chiefly agricultural, is situated on the Wolds, near the river Baine and the Horncastle canal. The manufacture of bricks and drain tiles is carried on. The drainage of the fen lands is under the jurisdiction of the Fen Commissioners. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £441, in the patron. of trustees. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, was rebuilt in 1744. The register dates from 1643. There is a National school for both sexes, built in 1857. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels. Halgarth is the principal residence.

THINGDON, a par. in the hund. of Huxloe, co. Northampton. See FINEDON.

THINGOE, a hund. in co. Suffolk, contains the town of Bury St. Edmund's, and the pars. of Barrow, Brockley, Chevington, Flempton, Fornham All Saints, Hargrave, Hawstead, Hengrave, Horningsheath, Ickworth, Lackford, Nowton, Rede, Risby, Great and Little Saxham, Westley, and Whepstead, comprising 31,850 acres, exclusive of Bury St. Edmund's. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeaconry of Sudbury and dioc. of Ely.

THINGWALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Woodchurch, lower div. of Wirrall hund., co. Chester, 5 miles N.W. of Great Neston, and the same distance from the Birkenhead railway station.

THINGWALL, a hmlt. in the par. of Childwall, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 6 miles W. of Liverpool, on the Manchester railway.

THIRKLEBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirby-Grindalyth, wap. of Buckrose, East Riding co. York, 8 miles S.E. of New Malton.

THIRKLEBY, a par. in the wap. of Birdforth, North Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Thirsk, its post town, and 7 from Easingwold. The village, which consists of the two hamlets called High and Low Thirkleby, is situated near the Great North of England railway, on a branch of the river Swale. The par. includes the hmlt. of Osgodby. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £210, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The roof is of oak, and several of the windows are stained. It was erected by Sir Thomas Frankland, Bart., in 1722, and rebuilt in 1849, at the expense of Lady Russell. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. Thirkleby Hall is the principal residence.

THIRLBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Felixkirk, wap. of Birdforth, North Riding co. York, 5½ miles N.E. of Thirsk, and 6½ from the Thirsk railway station. The village is situated on a branch of the river Swale, and is wholly agricultural.

THIRLE-MERE, a lake of co. Cumberland, 5 miles S.E. of Keswick. It is situated under Helvellyn, and is about 3 miles long by a quarter of a mile broad, with 18 feet water. It is crossed by a bridge at the ford, and abounds in trout, perch, &c.

THIRLESTANE CASTLE, several seats of this name, one belonging to Lord Napier, in co. Selkirk, Scotland, situated on the Ettrick Water, near the ruins of the old seat of the Scotts, where "the Flower of Yarrow" was born; another in co. Berwick, near Lauder, belonging to the Earl of Lauderdale; and a third in co. Gloucester, near Cheltenham, belonging to Lord Northwick, and celebrated for its gallery of paintings.

THIRLWALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Haltwhistle, W. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 3½ miles N.W. of Haltwhistle. It is situated on the Tippal Burn, near Gilsland Spa, and under the Great Roman Wall. On the W. side of the stream stands the ruined castle of Thirlwall, formerly the property of the Swinburnes and Howards. The ruins occupy the summit of a rock precipice, and consist of walls 9 feet thick, vaulted within, and defended by an outer wall of great strength.

THIRN, a tnshp. in the par. of Thornton Watlass, wap. of East Hang, North Riding co. York, 3 miles N. of Masham, and 4 S.W. of Bedale. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The Marquis of Ailesbury is lord of the manor.

THIRNE, a par. in the hund. of West Flegg, co. Norfolk, 5 miles N.E. of Acle, and 11 N.W. of Yarmouth. The village is situated near the confluence of the Bure and Thirne rivers. The par. includes the hmlts. of Ashby and Owby. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Ashby, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Edmund, is of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £23 per annum, realised from 18 acres of land allotted to the poor at the enclosure of the parish. There is a National school for both sexes. It was erected at the expense of the rector in 1845. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel.

THIRNTOFT, a tnshp. in the par. of Ainderby-Steeple, wap. of Gilling-East, North Riding co. York, 3½ miles N.W. of Northallerton.

THIRSK, a par., parliamentary borough, post and market town, chiefly in the wap. of Birdforth, North Riding, but partly within the lib. of St. Peter's, East Riding co. York, 7½ miles from Northallerton, 11 from Ripon, and 23 N.W. of York. It is a junction station on the North-Eastern railway. The town is situated on the Codbeck, a branch of the river Swale, and nearly in the centre of the Vale of Mowbray. This stream, which is here crossed by two bridges, separates Old Thirsk from the more modern part of the town. The latter once contained the castle of the Mowbrays, built about 980, and razed by Henry II. after the rebellion of Roger de Mowbray. In the old town, which alone is included within the limits of the borough, is the space called Elm Green, where the elm tree formerly stood, under which the members were chosen to represent the borough in parliament, and where it is said Henry Percy, Earl of Northumberland, and lieutenant of the county, was killed by the mob in the reign of Henry VII. The par. includes the borough of Thirsk, the tnshps. of Carlton-Miniott, and Sandhutton. The town was never incorporated, but is a borough by prescription, under a bailiff chosen by the burgage-holders, and sworn in at the court-leet of the lord of the manor, which is held at Michaelmas. The borough returned two members to parliament once in the reign of Edward I., and regularly from Edward VI.'s time; but since the passing of the Reform Act it now sends only one, the bailiff being the returning officer. The new bounds include Towerby, Carlton, and four other townships. The town is well paved and lighted with gas, and contains three banks, a savings-bank, market-house and cross, mechanics' institute, and union-workhouse. Petty sessions are held every Monday, and a county-court monthly. The police station and justice hall are situated in Westgate. There are several corn-mills, tanneries, maltings, iron foundries, brick and tile works. The Poor-law Union comprises 40 parishes or places. There is a small extent of common. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £137, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was built out of the castle ruins, with the exception of the porch on the S., which has been recently rebuilt. The interior contains three sedilia, and several old tombs. In addition to the parish church are the district churches of Carlton-Miniott, Sandhutton, and Sowerby, the livings of which are all perpet. curs., varying in val. from £310 to £115. The parochial charities produce about £39 per annum. There are a British, charity, and infant schools. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have chapels. The union poor-house is situated in the Sutton Road.

THIRSTON, EAST AND WEST, a tnshp. in the par. of Felton, E. div. of Morpeth ward, co. Northumberland, 1 mile S.E. of Felton, and 10 miles S. of Alnwick. At West Thirston the Presbyterians have a chapel and a day school.

THIRTLEBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Swine, middle div. of Holderness wap., East Riding co. York, 4 miles N. of Headon, and 7 N.E. of Hull.

THISTLETON, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirkham, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 4 miles N.W. of Kirkham. It is joined with Greenalgh to form a township.

THISTLETON, a par. in the hund. of Alstoe, co. Rutland, 11 miles N.W. of Stamford, its post town, and 8 N.E. of Oakham. The village is situated on the border of the cos. Leicester and Lincoln. It is mentioned in Domesday survey as Tisterton, and belonged to Eric and Sivard, the Saxons. The Cottesmore hounds meet in this parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £118. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. There is a free school, endowed with an annuity of £36. Lady Mary Fludyer is lady of the manor and chief landowner.

THIXENDALE, a tnshp. in the par. of Wharram-Percy, wap. of Buckrose, East Riding co. York, 8 miles N.E. of Pocklington, and 2 from Burdale railway station. The village is situated near Thixendale Wold. There is a school for both sexes, supported by Lady Sykes, and in which divine service is performed. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

THOCKRINGTON, a par. in the N.E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 11 miles N.E. of Hexham, its post town, and 8 S.E. of Bellingham. The village is situated near the ancient Watling Street. The par. contains the tnshps. of Little Bavington, Cary Coats, and Sweethope. The soil consists of clay and loam, and is in general rich and well cultivated. There are numerous freestone and limestone quarries, a productive colliery, and formerly a lead mine. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £48, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is of great antiquity, situated on an eminence. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel. An ancient boundary stone, supposed to be of Roman origin, was found here in 1839, and has been erected on the spot where Mr. Forster, M.P., on the 6th of October, 1715, harangued the assembled gentry of the county, including the Earl of Derwentwater, on the advantages of raising Prince James Stuart to the throne. C. O. Shafto, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

THOLTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Alne, wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 4 miles W. of Easingwold, and 5 E. of Boroughbridge. The village is situated on a branch of the river Ouse, and near the Great North of England railway. About 1 mile distance from the village is "Ten-Mile Hill." The common was enclosed in 1800. There are a village school, and a chapel for the Wesleyans, at which a Sunday-school is also held. W. F. Webb, Esq., is lord of the manor.

THOMAS-CLOSE, a tnshp. in the par. of Hutton-in-the-Forest, ward of Leath, co. Cumberland, 8 miles N.W. of Penrith.

THOMAS, ST., a hmlt. in the par. of Swansea, co. Glamorgan, near Swansea.

THOMAS, ST., a vil. in the par. of St. Peter Port, Guernsey, Channel Islands.

THOMAS, ST., THE APOSTLE, a par. in the N. div. of East hund., co. Cornwall. It adjoins the borough of Launceston, its post town, and includes the hmlt. of St. Thomas Street. The village is situated on the Kensey stream. There are quarries of good building-stone, and manganese is obtained. In the vicinity is a portion of the wall of the canonry founded by Bishop Warlewast in 1126. At the Dissolution its revenue was valued at £354 0*s.* 11*d.* The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £110, in the patron. of the ratepayers. The church stands on the site of the priory, and contains some ancient tombs. The Launceston grammar school, and the National schools for the parishes of St. Thomas and St. Stephen are situated in this parish. At Kestelwood are vestiges of ancient earthworks.

THOMAS, ST., THE APOSTLE, a par. in the hund. of Wonford, co. Devon, 1 mile S.W. of Exeter, its post town. The village is situated on the river Exe, which is here crossed by a bridge connecting it with Exeter. Near the river is the site of a small priory of Black Canons, founded in Henry III.'s reign as a cell to Plympton. The Poor-law Union comprises 49 parishes or places. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £237. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas, was erected in 1412, and enlarged in 1829. There are also chapels-of-ease at Exwick and Oldridge. The charities produce about £15 per annum, of which £10 belong to William Gould's school for 24 children.

THOMAS-STREET, a hmlt. in the bar. of Athlone, co. Roscommon, Ireland, 11 miles N.W. of Athlone.

THOMASTOWN, a par., post and market town, in the bar. of Gowran, co. Kilkenny, Ireland, 10 miles S.E. of Kilkenny. It is a station on the Waterford and Kilkenny Junction railway. The surface consists of good soil, and is well cultivated. The parish is traversed by the river Nore, which is spanned by a bridge, built in 1792. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, joined with two others, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected partly by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel has an altar-piece from the ruins of the abbey of Jerpoint. There are two public, three private, and two Sunday schools. The principal residences are Mount Juliet, the seat of the Earl of Carrick, Dangan Lodge, and Coolmore. The town contains some well-built houses, with a bank, bridewell, court-house, police station, dispensary, two breweries, and several flour mills. This place derives its name from the founder, Thomas Fitz-Anthony Walsh, seneschal of Leinster. The ruins of Jerpoint Abbey, of a Dominican abbey, Grenan Castle, and Dysett Castle, the birthplace of Bishop Berkeley, in 1684, are all within a short distance of the town. There are quarries of limestone and good building-stone. This town was formerly a borough, and returned two members to parliament before the Union. Petty sessions are held every other week. Market days are Monday and Saturday. Fairs are held on the 17th March, 25th May, 29th June, and 15th September.

THOMASTOWN, a vil. in the bar. of Clanwilliam, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles N.E. of Tipperary. It is situated near the river Suir. The principal residence is Thomastown House, the seat of Viscount Chabot. There are a school, a police station, and the ruins of the church, the burial-place of the family of Mathew.

THOMASTOWN, a par. in the bar. of East Offaly, co. Kildare, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Rathanger. It gives name to a Poor-law Union. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin, Glendalagh, and Kildare, val. with two others, £200. There is a Roman Catholic chapel.

THOMLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Waterperry, co. Oxford, 5 miles N.W. of Thame, on the river Thame.

THOMPSON, a par. in the hund. of Wayland, co. Norfolk, 3 miles E. of Watton, its post town, and 10 N.E. of Thetford railway station. The village is situated on the river Wissey. There was formerly a college or chantry for a master and five chaplains, founded in 1349, and valued at the Dissolution at £52 15*s.* 7*d.* In the vicinity is a mere called Thompson's Water, and a large portion of heath. The soil is light, with a subsoil of clay and black gravel. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £49, in the patron. of Hemsworth's trustees. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is of great antiquity. In the churchyard are the ruins of a North chapel. The parochial charities produce about £25 per annum.

THOMPSON, a par. in the hund. of Coombs-Ditch, co. Dorset, 6 miles S.E. of Blanford-Forum. There is no village. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Salisbury, val. £100. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, was rebuilt by Archbishop Wake.

THOMPSON'S HILL, a vil. in the par. of Ecclesfield, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N. of Sheffield.

THOMPSON'S WALLS, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirk-Newton, W. div. of Glendale ward, co. Northumberland, 8 miles N.W. of Wooler. It is joined with Couldsmouth to form a township.

THONGLANDS, a tnshp. in the par. of Munslow, co. Salop, 9 miles N.E. of Ludlow, on the river Corve.

THONG, NETHER, a tnshp. in the par. of Almondbury, upper div. of Agbrigg wap., West Riding co. York, 5 miles S.W. of Huddersfield, its post town, and 1 mile N. of Thongs-Bridge station on the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. The village, which is situated on rising ground near the western bank of the river Holme, is considerable, and the inhabitants are chiefly employed in the woollen manufacture. The tnshp. contains the hmlts. of Greave and Thongs-Bridge. The soil is fertile, and the land in good cultivation. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Almondbury. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is modern. There are several stone quarries.

THONG, UPPER, a tnshp. in the par. of Almondbury, upper div. of Agbrigg wap., West Riding co. York, 6 miles S.W. of Huddersfield. The tnshp. includes part of the vil. of Holmfirth, and the vil. of Upper Thong. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the woollen manufacture. The Independents and Wesleyans have chapels. There are National schools. The parochial charities produce £29.

THORALBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Aysgarth, wap. of West Hang, North Riding co. York, 9 miles S.W. of Leyburn, and 4 S.E. of Askrigg. The village is situated on the river Ure. In the vicinity is a waterfall, designated the Silver Chain Force. There are traces of lead. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels. W. Purchas, Esq., is lord of the manor.

THORESBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Aysgarth, wap. of West Hang, North Riding co. York. See CARPERBY-CUM-THORESBY.

THORESBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Edwinstow, co. Nottingham, 2 miles N.W. of Ollerton. It is situated on the river Meden, and is the place where Lady Mary W. Montague was born in 1690. The park is 13 miles in circumference. The mansion was rebuilt in 1745 by the Duke of Kingston, the old one having been destroyed by fire.

THORESBY, NORTH, a par. in the wap. of Bradley-Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 8 miles N.W. of Louth, its post town, and 8 S.E. of Great Grimsby. It is a station on the Great Northern railway. The village, which is large, is situated on the road from Louth to Grimsby, and about 2½ miles from the Louth canal. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £573. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, was restored in 1848. The register dates from 1546. The parochial charities produce about £54 per annum, of which sum £30 go to Mapletoft's free school, founded in 1676. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels, and the former have a day-school. Courts leet and baron are held twice a year, under the Earl of Yarborough, who is lord of the manor.

THORESBY, SOUTH, a par. in the Marsh div. of Calceworth hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles N.W. of Alford, its post town, 8 N. of Spilsby, and 2 W. of the Claythorpe railway station. The village is watered by a trout stream. The substratum is chiefly limestone, which is burnt for manure. Remains of the nautilus and other fossils are found in the chalk. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £214, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, was rebuilt in 1738. The register dates from 1648. W. Wood, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

THORESTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Saleby, Wold div. of Calceworth hund., co. Lincoln, 1 mile N. of Alford.

THORESWAY, a par. in the S. div. of Walshcroft wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5 miles S.E. of Caistor, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Market Rasen. The village is situated in a valley on the Wolds. There is a considerable extent of rabbit warren. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £493, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The register dates above 100 years back. There is a parochial school for both sexes. The Rev. J. Jarratt is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

THORGANBY, a par. in the S. div. of Walshcroft wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 9 miles S.W. of Great Grimsby, its post town, and 7 S.E. of Caistor. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £47. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The register dates from 1562. Thorganby Hall was the seat of the Willoughby family.

THORGANBY, a par. in the wap. of Ouse and Derwent, East Riding co. York, 10 miles S.E. of York, its post town, and 8 N.E. of Selby. The village is situated on the Wolds, and is wholly agricultural. The soil is sand and clay, with a subsoil of clay. The par. includes the hmlt. of West Cottingwith. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £53. The church is dedicated to St. Helen. There are a government school for both sexes, and a chapel for the Wesleyans. The parochial charities produce about £84. The Rev. J. D. Jefferson, M.A., is lord of the manor.

THORINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Blything, co. Suffolk, 4 miles S.E. of Halesworth, and 8 S.W. of Southwold. Saxmundham is its post town. The par. includes No-where House, and was held by the Uffords, Cokes, and other families. The surface is generally level. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £239. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure with a tower. The register dates from 1561. The Hall is the principal residence.

THORLBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Kildwick, E. div. of Staincliffe wap., West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Skipton. It is joined with Stirton to form a township.

THORLEY, a par. in the lib. of West Medina, Isle of Wight, co. Hants, 1 mile S.E. of Yarmouth, its post town. The village is situated on Yarmouth Creek. The land was formerly in a barren state, but is now chiefly arable and pasture, with about 50 acres of down. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £100. The church, dedicated to St. Swithin, or St. Mary, was built by Amicia, Countess of Devon, by whom it was given to the priory of Christchurch, in Hampshire.

THORLEY, a par. in the hund. of Braughin, co. Herts, 2 miles S.W. of Bishop's-Stortford, and 3 N. of Sawbridgeworth. The village is situated near the Cambridge railway and the river Stort. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £542, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. James, was restored in 1822. Bishop Horsley and Joseph Warton were once rectors. The parochial charities produce £4 per annum.

THORMANBY, a par. in the wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 4 miles N. of Easingwold, its post town, and 6 S.E. of Thirsk. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £216. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient edifice with a tower and two bells. The stalls are of black oak. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum.

THORN, a vil. in the par. of Paisley, co. Renfrew, Scotland, 2 miles S. of Paisley, and 1 mile S. of Johnstone.

THORN. See THORNE, cos. Somerset and York.

THORNABY, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Stainton, W. div. of Langbaurgh lib., North Riding co. York, 1½ mile S.E. of Stockton, its post town, and 1 from the South Stockton railway station. The village, which is large but straggling, is situated on the line of the Stockton and Darlington railway, which is here carried by a bridge across the river Tees, on the banks of which are extensive wharves and shipbuilding-yards. The tnshp. includes the hmlt. of Stockton South of the Tees, and has increased in population. Many of the inhabitants are employed in cotton-spinning, and in the potteries, glass-bottle manufactory, iron-foundry, and in ship-building. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £120, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is an ancient structure with a turret containing two bells.

THORNAGE, a par. in the hund. of Holt, co. Norfolk, 2½ miles S.W. of Holt, its post town. In the vicinity are a manufactory for the making of agricultural implements, and a flour-mill. There are some lime-pits. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Brinton, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £467. The font in the church is of great antiquity, as also the oak table, and a communion cup bearing date 1456, presented by John Butts and Margaret his wife. There are a monument to Sir William Butts, and a stone to Lady Heigham bearing date 1590. The register dates from 1561. The Baptists have a chapel. Courts-leet and baron are held annually. Lord Hastings is lord of the manor.

THORNBOROUGH, a par. in the hund. of Buckingham, co. Bucks, 3 miles E. of Buckingham, its post town, and 6¼ N.W. of Winslow. The village is extensive. On opening an ancient barrow at Thornborough-Field, in 1839, bronze ornaments were discovered in excellent preservation, amongst which were a lamp, two jugs, a dish, a bowl, and the hilt of a sword, also an ornament of pure gold with a figure of Cupid chased upon it, and a glass vessel. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £130. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower and five bells. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, supported by voluntary contributions. The Wesleyans have a chapel. Sir H. Verney, Bart., is lord of the manor.

THORNBROUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Corbridge, E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 6 miles E. of Hexham. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the lime quarries. A lead mine has been anciently wrought, and was re-opened in 1801, but has since been abandoned.

THORNBROUGH, a hmlt. in the par. of West Tanfield, North Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Masham.

THORNBROUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Kilvington, wap. of Birdforth, North Riding co. York, 8 miles S.E. of Northallerton, and 3 N.E. of Thirsk railway station. There is no village. The place was formerly a Roman settlement.

THORNBURY, a par., post and market town, in the lower div. of the hund. of the same name, co. Gloucester, 11 miles N.E. of Bristol, and 22 S.W. of Gloucester. It is situated in the vale of Berkeley, on the banks of a small rivulet, about 2 miles E. of the river Severn, and near the Gloucester railway. It is a polling-place for the W. division of the county, and a petty sessions town. The par. contains the chplries. of Falfield, Oldbury-on-Severn, Rangeworthy, and the tythg. of Kington Moorton, where the Union poorhouse is situated. The town, which consists of three principal streets, contains a county court-house, police station, reading-rooms, and a savings-bank. In the vicinity are the ruined gateway, tower, chimneys, and walls of an old castle begun by Edward, Duke of Buckingham, in 1511, but left in an unfinished state owing to his execution in 1522. These ruins command a view of the valley of the Severn, which flows on the western side of the parish, with the hills of South Wales in the distance. Henry VIII. and Anne Boleyn were entertained here for ten days in 1539. The corporation is now merely nominal. Courts leet and baron are held annually, and a court of record for the honour of Gloucester takes place every three weeks on Tuesday. The Poor-law Union comprises 21 parishes or places. The living is a vic.* with the curs. of Falfield and Oldbury annexed, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £500, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains a brass of Mrs. Tyndall, bearing date 1571. There are also the district church of Rangeworthy, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £80, and chapels-of-ease at Falfield and Oldbury-upon-Severn. The parochial charities produce about £240 per annum. There are besides six almshouses for fifteen poor people, founded by Sir J. Stafford and others; also National schools for both sexes, a grammar school, founded in 1648 by William Edwards, a free school, instituted by John Atwells in 1729, and an infant school. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Baptists have chapels. Thornbury Castle and Park are the principal residences. Market day is on Saturday. Fairs are held on Easter Monday, 15th August, and the Monday before 21st December.

THORNBURY, a par. in the hund. of Broxash, co. Hereford, 4 miles N.W. of Bromyard, its post town, and 8 E. of Leominster. The village is situated on the river Frome. The par. includes the hmlts. of Netherwood, Westwood, and Fencott, and Wall Hill treble-ditched camp, which is almost perfect, and is supposed to be a work of the Britons under Caractacus. The land is partly in hop grounds. The soil is clay and loam, with a subsoil of red marl. The manor anciently belonged to the Mortimers, and at Netherwood in this parish Roger Mortimer, the last Earl of March, was born in 1330, also Robert Devereux, Earl of Essex, and favourite of Queen Elizabeth, who was beheaded in 1601. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £185. The church is old. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a Sunday-school.

THORNBURY, a par. in the hund. of Black Torrington, co. Devon, 5 miles N.E. of Holsworthy, its post town. The village is situated on the Bude canal and river Waldon. The soil is of a clayey character. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £198. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, contains effigies of the Edgecumbe family, and a brass of T. Brooke. The Wesleyans have a chapel and a Sunday-school. Miss Fowke and Mrs. Freer are ladies of the manor.

THORNBURY, a tnshp. in the par. of Forden, co. Montgomery, 3 miles N. of Montgomery.

THORNBURY, LOWER, a hund. in co. Gloucester, contains the pars. of Almondsbury, Iron-Acton, Thornbury, and part of Tytherington, comprising an area of 16,150 acres.

THORNBURY, UPPER, a hund., co. Gloucester, contains the pars. of Marshfield, Ashton-under-Hill, Beckford, and Hinton-on-the-Green, comprising an area of 5,980 acres.

THORNBY, a par. in the hund., of Guilsborough, co. Northampton, 3¾ miles S.E. of Welford, its post town, and 9 S.W. of Market-Harborough. The parish is intersected by the road from London to Lutterworth. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £364. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, has a tower containing a clock and five bells. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum, exclusive of 24 acres of poor's land. There is a day and Sunday school for both sexes. Mrs. M. J. W. Bishop is lady of the manor.

THORNCLIFFE, a vil. in the par. of Rawmarsh, wap. of North Strafforth, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N. of Rotherham, and 5½ from Sheffield. It contains several collieries and ironworks, and has a joint station for Chapeltown and Thorncliffe on the South Yorkshire and Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway.

THORNCOMBE, a hmlt. in the par. of Long Langton, co. Dorset, near Blanford.

THORNCOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Axminster, co. Dorset, formerly in Devon, 6 miles N.E. of Axminster, its post town, and 8 from Beaminster. It is situated near the river Axe, and comprises the seat of Ford Abbey. The village was formerly a market town. Many of its inhabitants are employed in the woollen mills. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £457. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a free school with a small endowment, founded by the Rev. T. Cooke in 1734.

THORNCOTE, a hmlt. in the par. of Northill, hund. of Wixamtree, co. Bedford, 3 miles N.W. of Biggleswade. It is joined with Brookend and Hatch to form a township.

THORNDEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Herne, hund. of Bleangate, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 4 miles N.E. of Canterbury.

THORNDON ALL SAINTS, a par. in the hund. of Hartismere, co. Suffolk, 3½ miles S. of Eye, its post town, and 5 E. of Finningham railway station. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £600. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was built by Robert de Ufford, Earl of Suffolk, in 1358, and its chancel has recently been restored. The register dates from 1538. The parochial charities produce about £152 per annum, including town estates, which realise £147 per annum. There is a reformatory for boys, established by Sir E. C. Kerrison, Bart. Hestley Hall is the principal residence. F. Hayward, Esq., is lord of the manors of Thorndon and Hestley Hall, and N. C. Barnardiston, Esq., of the manor of Little Thorndon.

THORNE, a par., post and market town, in the S. div. of Strafforth wap., West Riding co. York, 7 miles S.E. of Snaith, 11 N.E. of Doncaster, and 28 S.E. of York. It is a station on the South Yorkshire and Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincoln railways. It is situated on the verge of the moors, and near the centre of Hatfieldchase, the enclosure of which was completed in 1824. The par., which is intersected by the Stainforth and Keadby canal and the river Don, includes the hmlts. of Bradholme, Ditchmarsh, Waterside, Levels, Moor Ends, and Hangman Hill Quay. The land formerly consisted of flat moor and marsh, but was drained by Sir Cornelius Vermuyden in the reign of Charles I., and is now converted into good arable and pasture land. Many of the inhabitants are employed in rope-making, barge-building, malting, brewing, sacking-weaving, and in the carrying trade. The Union poorhouse is situated near the lock. In Leland's time Thorne was only a small village, with a castle near it—the foundations of which are still visible—but has since become a flourishing town. The streets are paved and lighted with gas, and many of the houses are well built. The population of the parish in 1861 was 3,381, and of the town 2,591. The moor is covered with heather, and is remarkable for insects, mosses, etc., and for a fern named Lustrea cristata, which is found in only two other places in England. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £117. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is of the time of Edward III., with a tower and five bells. The parochial charities produce about £240 per annum. The great tithes realise £1,600. There are a mechanics' institute, Union poorhouse, &c. The Independents, Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, New Connexion Methodists, Unitarians, and Society of Friends have chapels. Market day is on Wednesday. Fairs are held on the Monday and Tuesday following 11th June and 11th October, chiefly for horses, cattle, and pedlary.

THORNE COFFIN, a par. in the hund. of Tintinhull, co. Somerset, 3 miles N.W. of Yeovil railway station, its post town. The soil is clayey. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £200. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. The register dates from 1695. A Sunday-school is held at the church.

THORNE-FALCON, a par. in the hund. of North Curry, co. Somerset, 3½ miles E. of Taunton, its post town, and 9 N.W. of Ilminster. The village is situated near the Great Western railway and the Chard canal. The soil consists of clay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £296. The church, dedicated to the Holy Cross, is an ancient edifice with a tower and three bells. There is a school for both sexes, supported by voluntary contributions.

THORNER, a par. and tnshp. in the lower div. of Skyrack wap., West Riding co. York, 7 miles N.E. of Leeds, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the Tadcaster road, and consists of one long street. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in cotton spinning, for which there is an extensive mill. The par. includes the tnshps. of Scarcroft and Shadwell. The substratum abounds with limestone, flagstone, and slates, all of which are extensively quarried. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £143. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure with a tower and three bells. It was enlarged in 1855. The register dates from 1650. There is also a district church at Shadwell, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £78. The parochial charities produce about £43 per annum, of which £16 go to a school. There are a National school, free school, and Sunday-school. The Wesleyans have a chapel. In the parish is a spring of water called Sykes's Well.

THORNES, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Templenewsom, par. of Whitkirk, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.E. of Leeds.

THORNES, a hmlt. in the par. of Horton-in-Ribblesdale, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N. of Settle.

THORNES, a hmlt. and ecclesiastical district in the par. of Wakefield, lower div. of Agbrigg wap., West Riding co. York. It is situated near Wakefield, and is joined with Alverthorpe. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture, but a considerable number in the woollen and worsted manufactures, and in the extensive dye-works; there are also numerous market-gardens. Law Hill was once fortified, protecting the pass of the river Calder, which bounds the chapelry on the W. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £160, in the patron. of the Vicar of Wakefield. The church, dedicated to St. James, was erected in 1830. There are National and infant schools.

THORNE ST. MARGARET, a par. in the hund. of Milverton, co. Somerset, 3 miles W. of Wellington, its post town, and 5½ S. of Wivelscombe. The village is situated between the river Tone and the Bristol and Exeter railway. The soil is sandy, with a subsoil of limestone and sandstone. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £113, in the patron. of the archdeaconry of Taunton. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is an ancient structure with a tower and three bells. J. C. Luxmore, Esq., is lord of the manor.

THORNEY, a par. in the N. div. of Newark wap., co. Nottingham, 14 miles N.E. of Newark, its post town, 8 E. of Tuxford, and near the Torksey railway station. The village is situated on the Lincolnshire border, near the Fosse Dyke, which connects the Trent and the Witham. The par. includes the hmlts. of Broadholme and Wiggesley. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £160. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, has several stained windows, a piscina, and some ancient monuments of the Nevill family. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a Sunday-school. The Hall is the principal residence. The Nevills are lords of the manor.

THORNEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Kingsbury Episcopi, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.E. of Langport, on the river Parret.

THORNEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Muchelney, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.E. of Langport, near the river Parret.

THORNEY, a par. and liberty in itself, but locally in the hund. of Wisbeach, Isle of Ely, co. Cambridge, 9 miles N.E. of Peterborough, and 86 N. of London. It is a station on the Peterborough and Lynn branch of the Midland Counties railway. This place, which is situated close to the Catwater, on the road from Wisbeach to Peterborough, was formerly called Ankeridge, from a monastery for hermits or anchorites founded here in 662 by Saxulf, first abbot of Peterborough; having been wasted by the Danes, it was refounded in 972 by Ethelwold, bishop of Winchester, as a Benedictine abbey, the abbots of which attained to great power, were mitred, and sat in parliament. At the Dissolution the revenue was stated to be £411 12*s.* 11*d.* The only remains of this edifice are portions of the parish church, a gateway, and some ruined walls. The village, which had formerly a market, has recently been much improved. It stands on an eminence, and in 1861 had a population of 2,219. Extensive sanitary works have recently been effected by the Duke of Bedford, who has expended £400,000 on the drainage of the surrounding fen lands, which were until recently relieved of their superfluous waters by the uncertain help of windmills. The town is now well drained, and supplied with gas and water. There is a literary society with a good library. Petty sessions are held here. Upwards of 3,000 sheep are sent annually from this district to the London market. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £250. The church, dedicated to St. Botolph, was originally the nave of the conventual church built about 1128, and was considerably enlarged in 1841, when the interior was refitted. The E. window is in 21 compartments. In the churchyard are several tombs of French refugees, who were invited to settle here in the 16th century by the Duke of Bedford, who employed them in the drainage of the fens. The register, which commences in 1650, is partly in French. There are schools and almshouses supported by the Duke of Bedford. Fairs are held annually on 1st July and 21st September for horses and cattle, and on Whit-Monday for pleasure.

THORNEYBURN, a par. in the N.W. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 4 miles N.W. of Bellingham, its post town, and 24 N.W. of Hexham. It is an occasional station on the North British railway. The village is situated on Tarsetburn, in a mountainous district near the river North Tyne. The par., which includes the hmlt. of West Tarset, is one of the five new parishes formed out of the parish of Timonburn in 1814. The surface is hilly, and the soil sandy in the low grounds, but loamy in the uplands. The land is chiefly in pasture, with a small proportion of woodland. There are a colliery and two limestone quarries. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £200, in the patron. of the governors of Greenwich Hospital. The church was erected in 1818, at the cost of £4,000, by the governors of Greenwich Hospital. The register dates from 1818. There is a Sunday-school.

THORNEY-LANE, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Newborough, par. of Hanbury, co. Stafford, 3 miles E. of Abbots-Bromley.

THORNEY, WEST, a par. and island in the hund. of Bosham, co. Sussex, 3 miles W. of Emsworth, its post town, and 8 S.W. of Chichester. This place, called also Thorney Island, is situated nearly in the centre of the great estuary termed Chichester Harbour, and is a coast-guard station. Its dimensions are about 3 miles in circumference, comprising about 1,500 acres of rich arable, pasture, and meadow land. About a furlong to the S. is Pilsey Island, also within the parish, comprising about 18 acres, and the resort of almost every species of marine wild fowl that frequent the English Channel. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £240. The church is an ancient edifice with a Norman tower. The chancel is separated from the nave by an ancient screen and rood-loft. The interior was restored in 1839. The Saxon poet Cædmon was born here in 660.

THORNFORD, a par. in the hund. of Sherborne, co. Dorset, 3 miles S.W. of Sherborne, its post town, and 4 S.E. of Yeovil. The road from Sherborne to Evershot passes through the parish, which is situated near the river Yeo. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £200. The church is dedicated to St. Magdalen, and was formerly a chapel dependent on Sherborne Abbey. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a National school.

THORNGATE HILL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Hunderthwaite, par. of Romald-kirk, North Riding co. York, 5 miles N.W. of Barnard Castle, on the river Tees.

THORNGATE, LOWER, a hund., co. Hants, contains the pars. of Bossington, Broughton, East Dean, Lockerley, Mitchelmersh, Mottisfont, Sherfield English, East and West Tytherley, East Wellow, and part of West Dean, comprising an area of 27,000 acres.

THORNGATE, UPPER, a hund. in the Andover div. of co. Hants, contains the pars. of Leckford, Longstock, Stockbridge, and Over and Nether Wallop, comprising an area of 7,200 acres.

THORNGRAFTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Haltwistle, W. div. of Tindale ward., co Northumberland, 1 mile S. of Bardon-Mill railway station, and 5½ miles N.E. of Haltwistle. The village is situated at the confluence of the rivers Allen and Tyne, and near the line of the Newcastle and Carlisle railway. The tnshp. includes House Steads, the site of a Roman station, still marked by the foundations of houses, streets, baths, &c.; and on Chapel Hill, a little to the S., are the remains of a Doric temple, with altars, inscriptions, and carved figures in relief. The soil chiefly consists of sand and lime, and there are sand and ironstone quarries, also three collieries. The Duke of Northumberland and Sir Edward Blackett are lords of the manor.

THORN-GUMBOLD, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Paul, S. div. of Holderness wap., East Riding co. York, 1¾ mile from Burstwick railway station, and 2 miles S.E. of Hedon station. The village is situated on the Hull and Patrington turnpike road. The soil consists of clay and sand. Market gardening is carried on. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Paul, in the dioc. of York. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with a tower, the latter erected in 1768. There is a village school for both sexes. The Independents and Wesleyans have chapels, and the latter a Sunday-school. Sir T. A. C. Constable is lord of the manor.

THORNHAM, a par. in the hund. of Eyhorne, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 3 miles N.E. of Maidstone, its post town. The village is mentioned in Domesday Book as Turneham, and came from the Turnhams and Northwoods to the Derings of Surrenden. A vein of white sand, commercially known as Maidstone sand, and much used in the manufacture of glass, was first worked in this parish. The pits are remarkable for their subterranean caverns, which are curiously arched. On the summit of a chalk hill a short distance from the church are the ruins of Godard's Castle, where urns and other antiquities have been discovered. It is said to have been of Roman origin, and the walls, which enclose an area of a quarter of an acre, are still 13 feet high by 3 thick. In the upper part of the parish the soil is chalky and light, but in the lower part it is of a richer nature. The living is a vic.* with the rect. of Allingham annexed, in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £392. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, has been restored. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum, realised from church estate. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

THORNHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Middleton, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 2 miles N.W. of Oldham, and 3½ S.W. of Rochdale. It is situated near the Manchester and Leeds railway. The tnshp. is the largest in the par. of Middleton, and contains some coal mines.

THORNHAM, a par. in the hund. of Smithdon, co. Norfolk, 20 miles N.E. of Lynn, its post town, and 6 N.W. of Burnham-Market. The village, which is extensive, is situated near the sea-coast, on the road from Lynn to Wells, and about half a mile to the N. is a staith sufficiently large for ships of 100 tons burthen. The soil consists partly of loam, with a subsoil of brick earth and chalk. Along the shore is a tract of salt marsh, which was once a forest, as appears from the stumps of trees and horns of stags frequently found in it. The living is a vic.* with that of Holme-next-the-Sea annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £428, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities produce about £42 per annum, besides a small sum realised from 8 acres of land, which go towards church repair. There is a Church of England school for both sexes, built by William Hagge, Esq., in 1858, and a Sunday-school, which is held at the church. This parish has the privilege of sending four children to the free school at Brancaster. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels. William Hagge, Esq., is lord of the manor.

THORNHAM MAGNA, a par. in the hund. of Hartismere, co. Suffolk, 3 miles S.W. of Eye, its post town, and 2½ S.E. of Mellish railway station. The village is situated on the road from London to Norwich by way of Ipswich. The living is a rect.* with that of Thornham Parva consolidated, in the dioc. of Norwich, joint val. £497. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has monuments to the Major and Henniker families. The register dates from 1555. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. The Hall is the principal residence. Lord Henniker is lord of the manor.

THORNHAM PARVA, a par. in the hund. of Hartismere, co. Suffolk, 2½ miles S.W. of Eye, its post town. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Thornham Magna, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The register dates from 1711. Lord Henniker is lord of the manor.

THORNHAUGH, a par. in the lib. of Nassaburgh, co. Northampton, 1 mile N.W. of Wansford, its post town, and 9 miles from Peterborough. The village is situated on the great north road, and within a mile of the river Nen. There are stone quarries. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Wansford annexed, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £483. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, is an ancient structure with a tower and three bells. The parochial charities produce £14 per annum, which go to the Wansford school. A school has also been erected at the expense of the Duke of Bedford, who takes from this place the title of baron.

THORNHILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Hope, hund. of High Peake, co. Derby, 3 miles N.E. of Castleton, and 6 N.E. of Tideswell, near the river Noe.

THORNHILL, a tythg. in the par. of Stalbridge, hund. of Brownshall, co. Dorset, 2 miles S. of Stalbridge, on a branch of the river Stour.

THORNHILL, a par. and tnshp. in the lower div. of Agbrigg wap., West Riding co. York, 2½ miles S.E. of Dewsbury, and 6 W. of Wakefield. At Thornhill Lees is a station on the Wakefield, Leeds, and Manchester railway. The village, which was anciently a place of considerable importance, and had a market, is situated on the Leeds and Manchester canal and the river Calder. The par. contains the tnshps. of Millbank, Flockton, Shitlington, Thornhill, and Lower Whitley, and the hmlts. of Thornhill Lees and Thornhill Edge. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the woollen mills, brass and iron works, &c., and in the Stansfield colliery. The soil consists of clay and loam upon a subsoil of stone and clay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £988. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. A portion of it was rebuilt in 1773. On the S. side of the church is the mortuary chapel of the Saville family, containing numerous monuments, one of which, entirely of oak, has the effigies of Sir John Saville and his two wives. There are also the district churches of Flockton, Lower Whitley, and Thornhill Lees, the livings of which are all perpet. curs.* varying in val. from £200 to £94. The parochial charities produce about £313 per annum, of which £20 go to Greenwood's and £51 to Walker's free schools. There is a Sunday-school. The Wesleyans, Baptists, and Primitive Methodists have chapels. In a large park, sloping towards the banks of the river Calder, are the ruins of the moated seat of the Thornhill and Saville families, which was garrisoned for Charles I., and besieged and taken by the Roundheads, and subsequently demolished.

THORNHILL, a vil. and burgh of barony in the par. of Morton, co. Dumfries, Scotland, 7 miles N.E. of Minniehive, and 14 N.W. of Dumfries. It is a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. It is situated on the river Nith, and on the road from Glasgow to Dumfries. The surface is from 200 to 300 feet above sea-level. The town is well built and lighted with gas. There are three branch banks, a savings-bank, library, Freemasons' hall, tannery, and brewery, and a cross built by the Duke of Queensberry. There is an United Presbyterian church. Fairs are held on the second Tuesdays in February, May, August, and November, old style, on the last Friday in June, and on the third Tuesday in September.

THORNHILL, a vil. in the par. of Kincardine, co. Perth, Scotland, 3 miles S.W. of Doune, and 43 from Edinburgh. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday in January, and on the second Tuesday in March.

THORNHILL LEES, or THORNHILLS, a vil. and ecclesiastical district in the chplry. of Hartshead, and par. of Dewsbury, West Riding co. York, 2 miles from Dewsbury, and 5 S.E. of Halifax. It is a station on the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway.

THORNHOLME, a tnshp. in the par. of Burton-Agnes, wap. of Dickering, East Riding co. York, 4½ miles S.W. of Bridlington. William St. Quintin, Esq., is lord of the manor.

THORNLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Kelloe, S. div. of Easington ward, co. Durham, 6 miles S.E. of Durham, its post town. It is a station on the Hartlepool, Durham, and Sunderland branch of the North-Eastern railway. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the colliery and lime-works, the produce of which is shipped at Hartlepool. Thornley Hall, now a farmhouse, is supposed to occupy the site of an old castle, to which Bishop de St. Barbara fled from William Comyn, who had usurped the see of Durham. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £150, in the patron. of the vicar. The church was erected by the Parliamentary Commissioners.

THORNLEY-WITH-WHEATLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Chipping, lower div. of Blackburn hund., co. Lancaster, 2 miles from Longridge, and 7½ W. of Clitheroe. The township is situated on the river Lond, under Long Ridge Fell. There are some lime works. A court leet is held at the Derby Arms. The Earl of Derby is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

THORNLIEBANK, a vil. in the par. of Eastwood, co. Renfrew, Scotland, 1½ mile S. of Pollockshaws. It is situated on Auldhouse-burn, and its inhabitants are chiefly employed in the extensive cotton-mills. An United Presbyterian church has been recently erected.

THORNS, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Muker, par. of Grinton, North Riding co. York, near the river Swale, in the moorlands, under Shunner Fell.

THORNSETT, a hmlt. in the par. of Glossop, hund. of High Peake, co. Derby, 5½ miles N.W. of Chapel-en-le-Frith, on a branch of the river Goyt. Brindley, the engineer, was born here in 1716, and died in 1772.

THORNSHIP, a hmlt. in the par. of Shap, co. Westmoreland, near Shap.

THORNTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Burythorpe, East Riding co. York, 2 miles S.W. of New Malton.

THORNTHWAITE, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Crosthwaite, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 4 miles N.W. of Keswick, its post town. The village is situated near Bassenthwaite Water, with a fine prospect of Skiddaw and the lakes from Thornthwaite Fell. The manufacture of woollen cloth is carried on to a small extent. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £140, in the patron. of the Vicar of Crosthwaite, and the Incumbent of St. John's, Keswick. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, stands at a short distance from the head of Bassenthwaite Lake; it has been enlarged. The trustees of the late John Marshall, Esq., are lords of the manor.

THORNTHWAITE, a tnshp. in the par. of Hampsthwaite, lower div. of Claro wap., West Riding co. York, 7 miles from Ripley, its post town, and 4 S. of Pateley Bridge. The village is situated on a branch of the river Nidd. The surface is undulating, and a considerable portion is moorland. The district abounds in coal, which is partially worked, and some of the inhabitants are employed in spinning flax, and in linen weaving. The tnshp. includes the hmlt. of Padside. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £109, in the patron. of the vicar. The church was rebuilt in 1810, at a cost of £500.

THORNTON, a par. in the hund. of Buckingham, co. Bucks, 4 miles from Stony Stratford, its post town, and 4½ N.E. of Buckingham. The village is situated on the canal and the river Ouse. The inhabitants are wholly agricultural. The living is a rect. in the dioc.

of Oxford, val. £197. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has recently been restored. It contains two brasses of the Ingletons, one of which bears date 1472. The Hall is the principal residence. It was formerly the seat of the Tyrrel family. The Hon. Richard Cavendish is lord of the manor.

THORNTON, a vil. and quoad sacra par. in the pars. of Markinch, Dysart, and Kinglassie, co. Fife, Scotland, 2½ miles from Dysart, and 18½ from Edinburgh. It is a junction station on the Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee railway, which here branches off to Dunfermline and Leven. There is a chapel-of-ease.

THORNTON, a vil. in the par. of Carrington, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, near Borthwick.

THORNTON, a vil. in the par. of Glammis, co. Forfar, Scotland, 5 miles S.W. of Forfar.

THORNTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Poulton-le-Fylde, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 2 miles N.E. of Poulton, its post town and railway station. The tnshp., which is extensive, is situated on the Preston railway and the river Wyre, and includes the new town and port of Fleetwood [which see]. The lands on which the town is built were, prior to 1836, one wild tract of rabbit warren, but through the enterprise of Sir Peter Hesketh Fleetwood, Bart., have been transformed into a populous and thriving district, with harbour and docks, the plan of which was laid down by Decimus Burton, of London, architect. The township is bounded on the N. by Lancaster and Morecombe Bay, and on the E. and S. by the river Wyre. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £105, in the patron. of trustees. The church has a stained E. window. Rossall is now converted into a collegiate school.

THORNTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Sephton, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 6½ miles N.W. of Liverpool. On Thornton Green is an ancient cross. The Earl of Sefton is lord of the manor.

THORNTON, a par. in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 7 miles N.E. of Market-Bosworth, its post town, 9 N.W. of Leicester, and 1 mile from Merrylees railway station. The village is situated on the ridge of a hill, near the Leicester and Stannington railway and a branch of the river Soar. The par. includes the chplries. of Bagworth and Stanton-under-Bardon. In the vicinity is a reservoir, which supplies the town of Leicester with water. The living is a vic. with the curs. of Bagworth and Stanton annexed, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £202. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure, with a tower and three bells. The S. doorway is a curious and antique piece of workmanship, said to have been brought from Ulverscroft Priory. There is a chapel-of-ease at Bagworth, and the ruins of one at Stanton-under-Bardon. The parochial charities produce about £89 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Baptists have chapels. Viscount Maynard is lord of the manor.

THORNTON, a tythg. in the par. of Marnhull, co. Dorset, 3 miles N. of Sturminster.

THORNTON, a par. in the S. div. of Gartree hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 1½ mile S.W. of Horncastle, its post town, and 6 N.E. of Kirkstead. The village is situated near the river Bain. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £160, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Lichfield. The church, dedicated to St. Wilfred, is ancient. Sir H. Dymoke, Bart., is lord of the manor of Brampton.

THORNTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Easington, co. Warwick, 4 miles S.W. of Kington.

THORNTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Norham, hund. of Norhamshire, co. Northumberland, formerly in Durham, 4 miles S.W. of Berwick-on-Tweed. There is a school for both sexes, maintained chiefly from the Bamborough estate.

THORNTON, a par. and tnshp. in the par. of Harthill, East Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Pocklington, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the canal and a branch of the river Derwent. The par. includes the tnshps. of Melbourne and Storthwaite. There are cotton-mills. The land is partly in common. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Allerthorpe annexed, in the dioc. of York, val. £210, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is old. The register dates from the 16th century. There is a parochial school for both sexes, and a Sunday-school in the township of Melbourne. Colonel Wyndham is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

THORNTON, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Bradford, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 5 miles W. of Bradford, its post town. The township is situated on the S. side of the valley of Bradford Dale, and the lower grounds are watered by a rivulet that has its source in this township, and flows through the town of Bradford into the river Aire. There are stone quarries, collieries, and worsted mills. The tnshp. includes the vil. of Scholes Green, and the hmlts. of Thornton Heights, Denholme, Leventhorpe, and Clayton. The arable land is fertile and in good cultivation, but the pasture is chiefly moorland, let out in dairy farms. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £160, in the patron. of the Vicar of Bradford. The church is dedicated to St. James. The parochial charities produce about £22 per annum. A free grammar school was erected in 1831 at Scholes Green, and is endowed with £60 per annum. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have chapels and day and Sunday schools. A mechanics' institution was founded in 1837.

THORNTON, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Stainton, North Riding co. York, 4 miles N.W. of Stokesley.

THORNTON, BISHOP'S. See BISHOP-THORNTON, co. York.

THORNTON-BRIDGE, a tnshp. in the par. of Brafferton, wap. of Hallikeld, North Riding co. York, 4 miles N.E. of Boroughbridge, and 1 mile N.W. of Brafferton, on the river Swale.

THORNTON CHILDER. See CHILDER THORNTON, co. Chester.

THORNTON-CURTIS, a par. in the N. div. of Yarborough wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles N.W. of Ulceby, its post town, 5 S.E. of Barton-upon-Humber, and 8 N.E. of Glanford-Brigg. It is a station on the Great Northern railway. The village is situated on the Wolds. The par. includes the hmlt. of Burnham, and the ruins of a priory of Black Canons, founded by William le Gros, Earl of Albemarle, in 1139, which at the Dissolution had a revenue of £730 17*s.* 2*d.* It was made a college for a dean and 19 prebendaries by Henry VIII., who visited it in 1541; but in 1553 Edward VI. dissolved the college, and gave the site to the Bishop of Lincoln. The building occupied a square area, encompassed by a fosse and ramparts. The ruins comprise a turreted gate-house, abbots' lodge, now converted into a farmhouse, part of the church, and the octagonal chapter-house. The Brocklesby hounds meet in this parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £250. The church, dedicated to St. Laurence, contains a font of great antiquity. There is a village school, partly supported by the parish.

THORNTON-DALE WITH FARMANBY, a par. in Pickering Lythe wap., North Riding co. York, 3 miles S.E. of Pickering, its post town, and 9 from Malton. The parish, which is extensive, is situated on the main road between Scarborough and Pickering, and includes a large tract of moorland, chiefly a rabbit warren. Coarse paper is made, and there is also a tanyard. The soil is loamy, with a subsoil of rock and limestone. There are numerous stone quarries and lime kilns. The surface, at the base of the moorlands, is flat, and the land chiefly arable. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £396. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains several monuments. There are National schools for both sexes, and infant and Sunday schools. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The Viscountess Lumley founded and endowed, in 1567, a free grammar school, and 12 almshouses; the income of the charity is now about £500 per annum, and from the same fund are also maintained similar establishments in London.

THORNTON, EAST, a tnshp. in the par. of Hartburn, W. div. of Morpeth ward, co. Northumberland, 6 miles W. of Morpeth.

THORNTON HOUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Neston, higher div. of Wirrall hund., co. Chester, 2 miles N.W. of Great Neston, and 2 S. of Bromborough railway station.

THORNTON-IN-CRAVEN, a par in the E. div. of Staincliffe wap., West Riding co. York, 6 miles S.W. of Skipton, its post town, and 6¼ E. of Colne. It is a station on the Colne branch of the Midland railway. The village, which is still considerable, was formerly a market town under the Munceys by charter of Edward I. It is situated on the Leeds and Liverpool canal, and is intersected by a rivulet, which falls into the river Aire. The par. contains the tnshps. of Earby, Kelbrook, and Harden. The soil consists principally of loam with a subsoil of limestone, which is quarried for building, and for burning into lime. The population in 1861 was 2,112. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £248. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is old. The register dates from 1566. There is also the district church of Kilbrook, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £120, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a Gothic structure, erected and endowed in 1838 by Miss Currer. The parochial charities produce £120 per annum, of which £20 go to the free school at Earby, founded in 1633 by Robert Windle. There are almshouses founded by Mrs. Rachel Smith in 1815 for five poor women. A National school for both sexes has been recently built by subscriptions, at which a Sunday-school is also held.

THORNTON-IN-LONSDALE, a par. partly in the W. div. of Staincliffe wap., West Riding co. York, and partly in the hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 6 miles S.E. of Kirkby-Lonsdale, 17 N.E. of Lancaster, and 4 N. of the Bentham railway station. The par., which is extensive, includes the tnshps. of Thornton, Burton-in-Lonsdale, and Ireby, in the first of which is the hmlt. of Westhouse. It is situated at the head of the river Greta, and contains in its upper part the high valley of Kingsdale. The soil is generally a rich loam alternated with clay, upon a subsoil of clay and gravel, and in the northern part of the parish limestone rock, which is quarried. The population of the parish, which in 1861 was 1,151, is chiefly located in the villages of Westhouse and Burton, the latter being a place of considerable manufacturing industry. There are a cotton-mill, several potteries, where both black and brown ware is made, and an extensive manufactory of stone bottles. In the township of Thornton is Thornton Scar, a precipitous rock, rising to the height of 300 feet, at the foot of which a mountain stream rushes with considerable violence, forming several cascades. At a short distance from this is Thornton Force, a cataract falling 90 feet, the greater part in one unbroken sheet of water, and at the northern extremity of Kingsdale is Yordas Cave, formed by nature in a solid rock of black marble, called Gray Garth, and resembling the interior of a cathedral. The roof of the cavern is hung with stalactites. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £119, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Worcester. The church, dedicated to St. Oswald, is an ancient structure, partly Norman, with a tower and three bells. There is also the district church of Burton-in-Lonsdale, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £94. The church is old. The Wesleyans have a chapel at Westhouse and Burton. There is an endowed school for boys, and a school for girls, at which a Sunday-school is also held, and at Burton is a free school, founded and endowed by Richard Thornton, Esq., in 1853, for 46 boys and the same number of girls. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor. The principal residences, in addition to the Vicarage, are Halsteads, and in Burton, Lowfields, Stone Bower, and Hill House. Fairs are held at Burton-in-Lonsdale on Whit-Monday, and on the 6th November for cattle and sheep.

THORNTON-LE-BEANS, a tnshp. in the par. of North Otterington, wap. of Allertonshire, North Riding co. York, 8½ miles E. of Bedale, and 4 S. of Northallerton. The village is situated near the turnpike road from York to Darlington. The enclosure of the moorlands took place in 1652. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel.

THORNTON-LE-CLAY, a tnshp. in the par. of Foston, wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 8 miles S.W. of Malton, and 11 N. of York. There is a school for both sexes. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Society of Friends have chapels.

THORNTON-LE-FEN; a tnshp. and parochial chplry. in the soke of Horncastle, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5 miles S.E. of Tattershall, and 7½ N.W. of Boston. Coningsby is its post town. The village is situated on the high road from Boston to Tattershall. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £84, in the patron. of trustees. The church was built in 1816, by voluntary contributions. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels.

THORNTON-LE-MOOR, a par. in the N. div. of Walshcroft wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 6 miles S.W. of Caistor, its post town, and 4 W. of the Moortown station on the Lincoln and Hull railway. The village is situated near the Caistor and Ancholm navigation. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £319, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is old, with a Norman doorway.

THORNTON-LE-MOOR, a tnshp. in the par. of North Atherington, wap. of Birdforth, North Riding co. York, 4 miles N.W. of Thirsk, near the Great North of England railway. There was formerly a chapel-of-ease, now converted into a school.

THORNTON-LE-MOORS, a par. in the second div. of the hund. of Eddisbury, co. Chester, 6½ miles N. of Chester, its post town, and 2 N. of Dunham railway station. The village is situated near the Dee and Mersey canal, and the river Mersey. The par. contains the tnshps. of Dunham-on-the-Hill, Elton, Hapsford, and Wimsbold Trafford. The soil is peaty, except in the higher parts, where it consists of clay or marl. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £508, in the patron. of Hulmore's trustees. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is old. The parochial charities produce about £31 per annum, which go to a school, &c. There is a National school for both sexes. G. C. Leigh, Esq., is lord of the manor.

THORNTON-LE-STREET, a par. in the wap. of Allertonshire, North Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Thirsk, its railway station and post town, and 6 S. of Northallerton. The village is situated on the turnpike road leading from Thirsk to Northallerton. The par. includes the tnshp. of North Kilrington, the old seat of the Meynells, who hold the manor. The living is a vic. annexed to that of North Otteringham, in the dioc. of York. The church is dedicated to St. Leonard. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. Wood End Hall is the principal residence. Sir R. Lester, the eminent physician, was born at this place.

THORNTONLOCH, a vil. in the par. of Innerwick, co. Haddington, Scotland, 6 miles S.E. of Dunbar, on Thornton water, near the coast. Here was formerly a stronghold of the Humes, blown up by the English under the Protector Somerset.

THORNTON-ON-THE-HILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Coxwold, wap. of Birdforth, North Riding co. York, 4 miles N. of Easingwold. The soil is of a limy character, with a subsoil of limestone.

THORNTON-RISEBROUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Normanby, wap. of Ryedale, North Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Pickering, and 4½ from Kirkby-Moorside. The soil consists of deep loam, with a subsoil of clay and gravel. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum, which is devoted to educational purposes. Mrs. Wrangham is lady of the manor and principal landowner.

THORNTON-RUST, a tnshp. in the par. of Aysgarth, wap. of West Hang, North Riding co. York, 7 miles E.

of Hawes, and 10 W. of Middleham. The village is situated on the river Ure. The Baptists and Calvinistic Methodists have chapels, and there is a free school.

THORNTON-STEWARD, a par. in the wap. of West Hang, North Riding co. York, 7 miles W. of Bedale, its post town, and 3½ N.E. of Middleham. The village is situated near the river Ure. The par. includes the hmlt. of Danby. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £234, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Oswald. The register dates from 1562. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum. There are a school for both sexes, endowed with an annuity of £10, and a church school. The Wesleyans have a chapel. Lord Bolton is lord of the manor.

THORNTON-WATLASS, a par. and tnshp. in the wap. of East Hang, North Riding co. York, 3 miles S.W. of Bedale, its post town, and 3½ N. of Masham. The par. includes the tnshps. of Thirn, Rookwith, and Clifton-upon-Ure. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £475. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains monuments to the Dodsworth family. There is a free school for eight boys, endowed with an annuity of £8, and a girls' school, principally supported by the rector and Sir C. Dodsworth. Mark Milbank, Esq., is lord of the manor. The Hall is the principal residence.

THORNTON, WEST, a tnshp. in the par. of Hartburn, co. Northumberland, half a mile E. of Hartburn, and 7 miles N.W. of Morpeth. It is supposed to be the site of a Roman town.

THORNVILLE, a tnshp. in the par of Whixley, lower div. of Claro wap., West Riding co. York, 2½ miles S. of Whixley, 7 N.E. of Wetherby, and 5 S.E. of Boroughbridge. It is situated on the bank of the river Nidd, and comprises about 200 acres of fertile land.

THORNWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of North Weald, hund. of Harlow, co. Essex, 2 miles N. of Epping.

THORNYBANK, a vil. in the par. of Dalkeith, co. Edinburgh, Scotland. It is chiefly inhabited by colliers.

THOROTON, a par. in the N. div. of Bingham wap., co. Notts, 4 miles N.E. of Bingham, its post town, 8 S. of Newark, and 3 N. of Elton railway station. The village is situated on the river Smite. The soil is clay. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Orston, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church is dedicated to St. Elena. The Hall is the principal residence.

THORPACRE-CUM-DISHLEY, a par in the hund. of West Goscote, co. Leicester, 1 mile N.W. of Loughborough, its post town. The village is situated near the Midland counties railway and the river Soar. The par. includes the hmlt. of Dishley, where Bakewell, the great agriculturist, lived, and at which place is an ancient chapel, and a barn 45 feet in breadth and 150 feet in length. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £150, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1845. The parochial charities produce about £22 per annum, of which £11 go towards the support of Ransdale's school of industry for girls.

THORP-ARCH, a par. in York ainsty, 3½ miles from Tadcaster, its post town, and 3 S.E. of Wetherby. It is a station on the Church Fenton and Harrogate branch of the North Midland railway. The village is situated in the vale of the river Wharfe, at the Arched Bridge. The river here forms several cascades. The soil is clay, with a subsoil of limestone. In the vicinity is the Boston mineral spa, discovered in 1744. The manufacture of the coarser kinds of paper is carried on, and there are two large flour-mills. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £356. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, rebuilt in 1755, with the exception of the tower, and repaired in 1841. It has an E. window by Wailes, of Newcastle, and contains several monuments to the Hatfield family. The parochial charities produce about £44 per annum, of which £38 go to the free school. The Hall is the principal residence. William Hatfield, Esq., is lord of the manor.

THORP-AUDLING, a tnshp. in the par. of Badsworth, upper div. of Osgoldcross wap., West Riding, co. York, 1 mile N. of Badsworth, and 4 miles S.E. of Pontefract. The tnshp. includes the hmlt. of Wentbridge.

THORPE, a par. in the hund. of Wirksworth, co. Derby, 3 miles N.W. of Ashborne, its railway station and post town, and 10 S.W. of Wirksworth. The village is situated on the river Dove. To the N. of the village is a conical limestone hill called Thorpe Cloud, rising 300 feet above the bed of the river, which flows at its base. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £144, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is old. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum.

THORPE, a par. in the second div. of Godley hund., co. Surrey, 2 miles N.W. of Chertsey, its post town, 2 S.W. of Staines, and 1½ mile S.E. of Egham. The village is situated on the river Thames, which here receives several tributaries, which are the means of driving two mills. The soil consists of loam and gravel, with a subsoil of gravel and clay. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £141. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains several brasses and tablets. It was restored in 1854. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There are National and Sunday schools. Thorpe Lee, Thorpe House, Thorpe Place, and Eastly End, are the principal residences. The Rev. H. L. Bonnett, M.A., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

THORPE, a chplry. in the par. of Ashfield, hund. of Thredling, co. Suffolk, 1½ mile S.E. of Debenham. It is joined with Ashfield to form a township. The chapel-of-ease, dedicated to St. Peter, was rebuilt in 1739, with the exception of the circular tower.

THORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Aldringham, co. Suffolk, 2 miles N.E. of Aldborough, on the coast. The church of St. Mary is in ruins.

THORPE, a par. in the S. div. of Newark wap., co. Nottingham, 3½ miles S.W. of Newark, its post town. The village is situated on the Fosse Way, near the river Trent. A Roman pavement, coins, and other relics have been discovered here. It was in this parish that Henry VII. first erected his standard, on the 6th of June, 1487. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £280, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Lawrence. Sir R. H. Bromley, Bart., is lord of the manor.

THORPE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Kimberworth, par. of Rotherham, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Rotherham, its post town, near the river Don. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £160, in the patron. of trustees. The church is modern.

THORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Howden, wap. of Howdenshire, East Riding co. York, 1 mile N.E. of Howden, on the Hull and Selby railway.

THORPE, a hmlt. in the par. and lib. of Ripon, West Riding co. York, 1½ mile S.E. of Ripon. It is joined with Whitcliffe to form a township.

THORPE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Sockbridge, co. Westmoreland, 2 miles S.W. of Penrith, near the river Eamont.

THORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Almondbury, West Riding co. York, 1 mile S.E. of Huddersfield, near the Huddersfield canal and the river Colne. There are cotton and woollen mills.

THORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Rudstone, East Riding co. York, 4 miles W. of Bridlington.

THORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Wycliffe, wap. of West Gilling, North Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Barnard Castle, on the river Tees.

THORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Welwick, East Riding co. York, 1 mile S.E. of Patrington.

THORPE, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Idle, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Bradford.

THORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Rothwell, lower div. of Agbrigg wap, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N.W. of Wakefield.

THORPE-ABBOTS, a par. in the hund. of Earsham, co. Norfolk, 4 miles E. of Diss railway station, 5 S.W. of Harleston, and 2½ E. of Scole. The village is situated on the road from Bury St. Edmund's to Yarmouth, and is bounded on the S. by the river Waveney, which separates it from Suffolk. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £305. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum. The Rev. E. Holland is lord of the manor.

THORPE-ACHURCH, a par. in the hund. of Navisford, co. Northampton, 4 miles N.E. of Thrapston, its post town, and 3 S.W. of Oundle. It is a station on the Peterborough and Northampton railway. The living is a rect.* with the vic. of Lilford annexed, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £420. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, contains monuments of the Elmes, Powys, and other families. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum.

THORPE-ARNOLD, a par. in the hund. of Framland, co. Leicester, 1½ mile N.E. of Melton-Mowbray, its post town. The village is situated near the Melton and Oakham canal, and on the small river Eye. The land is chiefly in pasture, with a small proportion of arable and meadow. The living is a vic. with the cur. of Brentingly annexed, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £400. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has an old font. Here was formerly a castle built by Ernald de Bois. The Duke of Rutland is lord of the manor.

THORPE-BASSETT, a par. in the wap. of Buckrose, East Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of Malton, its post town. The village is situated at the head of a rivulet. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of York, val. £328. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a small ancient structure. There is a National school for both sexes.

THORPE, BISHOP'S. See BISHOP THORPE, co. Norfolk.

THORPE BOCHART. See THORPE-IN-THE-GLEBES, co. Nottingham.

THORPE-BRANTINGHAM, a tnshp. in the par. of Brantingham, Hunsley-Beacon div. of Harthill wap., East Riding co. York, 2 miles S.E. of South Cave. Thorpe Hall was built in the reign of Elizabeth.

THORPE-BULMER, a tnshp. in the par. of Monk Hesleton, S. div. of Easington ward, co. Durham, 4 miles N. of Hartlepool, and 12 N.E. of Stockton, near the Clarence railway.

THORPE-BY-IXWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Blackbourn, co. Suffolk, 1½ mile N.W. of Ixworth, its post town, and 5 miles N.W. of Thurston railway station. The manor formed part of the endowment of a moated priory for Black Canons, founded by Gilbert de Blount in 1110, and at the Dissolution granted with the priory to Richard Codyngton. The surface in some parts is wet and fenny. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £21. The church is dedicated to All Saints.

THORPE-BY-WATER, a hmlt. in the par. of Seaton, hund. of Wrangdike, co. Rutland, 3¾ miles S.E. of Uppingham. It is situated on the river Welland, and is mentioned in Domesday Book as being part of the honour of Berchedune, which belonged to John de Beaufoy.

THORPE CONSTANTINE, a par. in the N. div. of Offlow hund., co. Stafford, 5 miles N.E. of Tamworth, its post town. It is situated on the road from Tamworth to Ashby-de-la-Zouch, near the borders of Warwickshire. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £89. The church, dedicated to St. Constantine, was rebuilt in 1778. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. The principal residence is Thorpe Hall. Lieut.-Colonel William Inge, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

THORPE, EAST, a hmlt. in the par. of Londesborough, Holme-Beacon div. of Harthill wap., East Riding co. York, 3 miles N. of Market Weighton.

THORPE, EAST. See AISTHORPE, co. Lincoln.

THORPE-IN-BALNE, a tnshp. in the par. of Barnby-upon-Don, S. div. of Strafforth wap., West Riding co. York, 5½ miles N.E. of Doncaster, on the western bank of the river Don.

THORPE-IN-THE-FALLOWS. See THORPE, WEST, co. Lincoln.

THORPE-IN-THE-GLEBES, or THORPE-BOCHART, a par. in the S. div. of Rushcliffe wap., co. Nottingham, 1 mile S. of Wysall, 9 miles S.E. of Nottingham, and 6½ N.E. of Loughborough, its post town. The village is situated on a branch of the river Soar. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church is in ruins.

THORPE LANGTON. See LANGTON, THORP, co. Leicester.

THORPE LATIMER, a hmlt. in the par. of Helpringham, wap. of Ashwarden, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 5 miles N.E. of Folkingham.

THORPE-LE-SOKEN, a par. and vil. in the hund. of Tendring, co. Essex, 12 miles S.E. from Colchester, and 5 W. of Walton steamboat pier. It is a station on the Tendring hundred branch of the Great Eastern railway. This place is situated on the road from Colchester to Walton-on-the Naze, near Landermere Creek, on which is a wharf. It is a petty sessions town and polling place, and the seat of the court of the liberty of the soken, including the three parishes of Thorpe, Kirby, and Walton, in Eadulfes-ness district. It was given by King Athelstane, in 941, to St. Paul's Cathedral, and belonged to the canons at the time of the Domesday Survey, but was taken away by Henry VIII., and given by Edward VI. to Sir Thomas D'Arcy, Vice-Chamberlain of his household, and has since had various owners. The land is partly in common and saltmarsh, but the greater part is arable. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, or St. Michael, is old, with a tower and five bells. It was repaired and a gallery added in 1827. The interior contains several monuments and an ancient font. In the vestry room is an effigy of a warrior of Edward I.'s time. The register dates from 1682. There was formerly a chapel belonging to the French Protestant refugees who settled here. The Baptists have a chapel. The Hall and Comarques, and the Grange, are the principal residences. Fairs are held on the Monday before Whitsuntide, and on 29th September.

THORPE-LE-STREET, a tnshp. in the par. of Nun-Burnholme, Holme Beacon div. of Harthill wap., East Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Market Weighton.

THORPE-LE-WILLOWS, a tnshp. in the par. of Kilburn, wap. of Birdforth, North Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of Easingwold.

THORPE-LUBBENHAM, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Rothwell, co. Northampton, 2 miles S.W. of Market-Harborough, on the river Welland.

THORPE MALSOR, a par. in the hund. of Rothwell, co. Northampton, 2½ miles N.W. of Kettering, its post town, on a branch of the river Nen. There are quarries of red sandstone. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £255. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, contains memorials of the Marmsells. Robert Talbot, the antiquary, was born in this parish. T. P. Maunsell, Esq., is lord of the manor.

THORPE-MANDEVILLE, a par. in the hund. of King's-Sutton, co. Northampton, 6 miles N.E. of Banbury, its post town, and 7 N.W. of Brackley. Petty sessions are held here. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £350. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, contains monuments to the Pargiter and Humfrey families. There is a Sunday-school. W. Peareth, Esq., is lord of the manor.

THORPE-MARKET, a par. in the hund. of North Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 7 miles from Aylsham, its post town, and 4½ N.W. of North Walsham. The village is situated on an open green, and is said to have been a market town of some note. The living is a vic. annexed to the rect. of Antingham, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is built of flint and freestone, having at each angle a turret, and each side being terminated by a gable with a stone cross. In the interior are some stained windows, a light oaken screen, and memorials of the Rant, Morden, and Britiffe families. The register dates from 1723. Sir T. Rant, in 1670, founded and endowed almshouses for four widows.

THORPE-MORIEUX, a par. in the hund. of Cosford, co. Suffolk, 3 miles N.E. of Lavenham, 9 S.E. of Bury St. Edmund's, and 4 N.W. of Bildestone, its post town. The village is situated on the river Brett. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £656. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The register dates from 1538. The parochial charities produce about 10*s.* per annum. H. Sparrow, Esq., is lord of the manor.

THORPE-NEAR-WAINFLEET. See THORPE ST. PETER, co. Lincoln.

THORPE-NEXT-HADDISCOE, a par. in the hund. of Clavering, co. Norfolk, 5 miles E. of Loddon, its post town, and 10 W. of Yarmouth. The village is situated near the Lowestoft railway and river Waveney. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £75. The church is dedicated to St. Matthias. The chancel was rebuilt of brick in 1838. The register dates from 1653. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

THORPE-NEXT-NORWICH, or THORPE ST. ANDREW, a par. in the city of Norwich and hund. of Blofield, co. Norfolk, 2 miles E. of Norwich. The village is situated on the river Yare, which is here crossed by the Norwich and Yarmouth railway. In the vicinity is the county lunatic asylum, and a ruined palace of the bishops, who had a grant from Henry I., but changed it away to Henry VIII. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £608. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. The register dates from 1642. The parochial charities produce about £122 per annum, of which £45 go to Chapman's school. There are two free schools. The Independents have a chapel and a Sunday-school.

THORPE-ON-THE-HILL, a par. in the lower div. of Boothby-Graffo wap., parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 6 miles S.W. of Lincoln, its post town. It is a station on the Midland Counties railway. The village is situated near the ancient Fosse Way. There are some mineral springs, and Roman coins have been found. The manor formerly belonged to the Swillington, Gascoigne, and Ingram families. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £247, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum, distributed among four poor widows. There is a National school, and the Wesleyans have a chapel.

THORPE PARVA, a par. in the hund. of Diss, co. Norfolk, 3 miles E. of Diss, and 1 mile E. of Scole, its post town. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Billingford, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is in ruins.

THORPE ST. ANDREW. See THORPE-NEXT-NORWICH, co. Norfolk.

THORPE ST. PETER, or THORPE-NEAR-WAINFLEET, a par. in the E. div. of Bolingbroke hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2 miles N.W. of Wainfleet, its post town, and 3 S.E. of Firsby railway station. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £313. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The register dates from 1698. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels. C. B. Reynardson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

THORPE-SALVIN, a par. in the S. div. of Strafforth wap., West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.W. of Worksop, its post town, and 1 mile from the Kiveton Park station, on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway. The village is situated on the Chesterfield and Trent canal. The par. includes the hmlt. of Netherthorpe. There are several large malting establishments, two flour-mills, and brick and lime kilns. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of York, val. £300, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a Norman structure of the reign of Henry I., with a tower of later date. The interior contains some mural monuments of the Salvin and Sandford families, who formerly held the manor. The Duke of Leeds is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

THORPE SATCHVILLE, a chplry. in the par. of Twyford, hund. of East Goscote, co. Leicester, 5 miles S. of Melton-Mowbray, its post town, and 13 N.E. of Leicester. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Hungerton, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The parochial charities produce about £37 per annum.

THORPE STAPLETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Whitkirk, lower div. of Skyrack wap., West Riding co. York, 3½ miles S.E. of Leeds. In this township, which is situated on the N. bank of the river Aire, are several collieries and ironstone mines.

THORPE-SUB-MONTEM, a hmlt. in the par. of Burnsall, E. div. of Staincliff wap., West Riding co. York, 7 miles N.E. of Skipton. It is situated near the river Wharfe, in a glen under Thornton Scar. In the glen is a cavern called Knave Knoll Hole.

THORPE THEWLES, a tnshp. in the par. of Grindon, co. Durham, 4 miles N.W. of Stockton, on a branch of the river Tees.

THORPE TILNEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Timberland, first div. of Langoe wap., parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 1 mile S. of Timberland, and 9 miles N.E. of Sleaford.

THORPE-UNDER-STONE, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Hudswell, North Riding co. York, 3 miles W. of Richmond, on the river Swale.

THORPE-UNDERWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Rothwell, co. Northampton, 1 mile W. of Rothwell.

THORPE UNDERWOODS, a tnshp. in the par. of Little Ouseburn, lower div. of Claro wap., West Riding co. York, 9 miles N.W. of York, 2 S.E. of Little Ouseburn, and 6 S.E. of Aldborough, in the vale of the Ouse.

THORPE, WEST, or THORPE-IN-THE-FALLOWS, a par. in the wap. of Lawress, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 7 miles N.W. of Lincoln, its post town. It is situated on the river Till. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Aisthorpe, in the dioc. of Lincoln. There is no church.

THORPE WILLOUGHBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Brayton, lower div. of Barkstone-Ash wap., West Riding co. York, 2 miles S.W. of Selby. It is on the road to Leeds.

THORPLAND, a hmlt. in the par. of Fakenham-Lancaster, hund. of Gallow, co. Norfolk, 2 miles N. of Fakenham.

THORPLAND, a par. in the hund. of Clackclose, co. Norfolk, 3½ miles N. of Downham-Market. It is joined with Wallington. The living is a discharged rect. consolidated with those of Holme, South Runcton, and Wallington. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas has long been in ruins

THORRINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Tendring, co Essex, 8 miles S.E. of Colchester, its post town, and 2½ N of Brightlingsea. The village is situated on a branch of the river Colne. The soil is of a light and sandy nature, and lies low. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Frating, in the dioc. of Rochester. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, contains an ancient brass. The register dates from 1558. The charities consist of an almshouse. There is a chapel for the Wesleyans, and a National school.

THORROCK, a hmlt. in the par. of Gainsborough, wap. of Corringham, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, near Gainsborough. The principal residence is Thorrock Hall. There are traces of a Danish camp, supposed to have been formed by Sweyn.

THORVERTON, a par. in the hund. of Hayridge, co. Devon, 8 miles N. of Exeter, 5 from the Hele station, on the Great Western railway, and 7 S.W. of Cullompton, its post town. The village is situated on the road from Exeter to Tiverton, and near the river Exe, which bounds the parish on the E. At East Roddon is a house called "No Man's Chapel," built on the site of a church. The soil is clay and sand, with a subsoil of red rock, which is quarried. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £507, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket, was built in the reign of John, and has a tower and five bells. There are several stained windows, and some old monuments to the Tuckfield family. The parochial charities produce about £62 per annum. There are National schools for both sexes, a free school for girls, and a Sunday-school. The Baptists have a chapel. The Dean and Chapter of Exeter, J. H. Hippisley, and the representatives of the late G. S. Fursdon, are lords of the manor. Fairs for cattle occur on the last Monday in February, and the Monday following the 18th July.

THOYDON-BOIS, a par. in the hund. of Ongar, co. Essex, 3 miles S. of Epping, its post town, and 9 N. of Romford. The village is situated within the limits of Epping Forest, near the river Roding. The land is partly in common and woodland. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £67. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was re-erected in 1852. The register dates from 1750. The parochial charities consist of the interest of £1,000. There are a National school for both sexes, and four almshouses.

THOYDON-GARNON, or COOPER-SAIL, a par. in the hund. of Ongar, co. Essex, 6 miles W. of Ongar, and 2½ S.E. of Epping, its post town. The Epping Union poorhouse is situated in this parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £700. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure with a tower and five bells, which can be rung with one hand by means of a mechanical contrivance. The steeple was erected in 1740, at the expense of Sir John Crosby, of Crosby Hall, Bishopsgate-street. The interior of the church contains the brass of a priest bearing date 1458. There is also the district church of Cooper-Sail, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £90. This church was erected at the expense of Miss Archer Houblon. The parochial charities produce about £105 per annum, of which £12 go to Lady Ann Sydney Fitzwilliam's hospital for four widows. There are a Sunday-school adjoining the church, and a parochial school for both sexes.

THOYDON MOUNT, a par. in the hund. of Ongar, co. Essex, 3½ miles S. of Epping, its post town, and 8 N. of Romford. The village is situated in the most elevated portion of the ancient district of Thoydon, on the banks of the river Roding, and near Abridge, on the London road. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Stapleford Tawney, in the dioc. of Rochester. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, was burnt in the 17th century, and was rebuilt by Sir William Bowyer Smijth, Bart. The interior contains monuments to the Smijth family of Hill Hall. There is a National school.

THRANDESTON, a par. in the hund. of Hartismere, co. Suffolk, 3 miles N.W. of Eye, and 2 S. of Diss railway station. The village is within the parliamentary borough of Eye. A small portion of the land is in common. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £470. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, contains armorial bearings of the Rix and Blakeby families. The parochial charities produce about £29 per annum. Sir E. C. Kerrison, Bart., is lord of the manor. A cattle fair is held on the 31st July.

THRAPSTON, a par., post, and market town in the hund. of Navisford, co. Northampton, 21 miles N.E. of Northampton, and 75 N.W. of London. There are stations both on the North-Eastern and Midland railway, from Kettering to Huntingdon. This town, at the last census, numbered 1,275 souls. It is situated in a valley on the eastern bank of the river Nene or Nen, which is here crossed by a stone bridge erected about twenty years ago, superseding the wooden bridge of 1795, connecting Thrapston with the village of Islip, 1 mile from Thrapston. At the bridge end, in Leland's time, was a ruined hermitage. There are two banks, one having a branch at Kettering, and the other is a branch of the Northamptonshire Banking Company; a county courthouse, corn-exchange, much frequented by farmers and tradesmen in the vicinity. A new police-station was erected a few years ago, having a resident inspector and constables. The magistrates meet here on every second Monday. There are manor-courts for Thrapston and the honour of Gloucester. There is a considerable market for grain, larger than some other towns in the county, from the presence of two railways, inducing buyers to come from a considerable distance, the Nene navigation simply carrying coals and timber. There are no manufactures here. It is a meet for Captain Thomson's hounds, lately hunted by Hon. G. Fitzwilliam. The vicinity has numerous residences of the nobility and gentry, and within 6 miles of the town are 24 villages. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £430, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. James, underwent considerable repairs in 1810. The nave and side aisles were rebuilt in 1841. In the chancel there are three stone stalls with mouldings and crocketed canopies. The east-end window was replaced by a memorial one to the memory of Mr. John Yule, vice-chairman of the Northampton quarter sessions, by means of a subscription of his friends. The parochial charities consist of two acres of pasture land, left for the repairs of the church. In 1845, Mrs. Mary Montague left £1,500 for the educating and clothing of 12 girls, which, from some opposition of her late husband, was reduced considerably, and not being found sufficient to educate the children, was, by decree of the Master of the Rolls, assigned for ever to the trustees of the National school to augment the salary of the master and mistress. The dividends now produce only £21 10s. The National school for both sexes was built in 1851, the site for which was given by the present incumbent, with the consent of the patron and diocesan. The Baptists have a British and Foreign school, £200 being left by a Mr. Hagge, a former minister, to enable them to erect one. Mrs. Mary Elkins, in this connection, left £10 per annum to educate five children for Thrapston, and five for Islip. The Baptists and Wesleyans have chapels. The Poor-law Union of Thrapston consists of 26 parishes or places, 20 of which are in co. of Northampton, and 6 in co. Huntingdon. The market day is on a Tuesday for cattle, sheep, grain, pigs, &c. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday in May, 5th August, and on the first Tuesday after Old Michaelmas Day.

THREAPLAND, a hmlt. in the par. of Torpenhow, wap. of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 6½ miles N.E. of Cockermouth. It is joined with Bothel to form a township.

THREAPWOOD, an ext.-par. place in the hunds. of Maylor and Broxton, cos. Flint and Chester, 3 miles S.W. of Malpas. Wrexham is its post town. It is situated near the river Dee. There are brick and tile kilns. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £87, in the patron. of the Bishop of Chester.

THRECKINGHAM, a par. in the wap. of Aveland, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 2½ miles N.E. of Falkingham, its post town, and 11 N.E. of the Corby railway station. The par. contains the hmlt. of Stow. It is said to have derived its name from a battle fought here in 870, in which three kings or leaders of the Danes were killed. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £87, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure with a tower and three bells. The interior contains several monuments of great antiquity, two stone coffins, a screen, a carved stall, and a font of red stone, with Early English panelling. The Baptists and Calvinistic Methodists have chapels. A. Heathcote, Esq., is lord of the manor.

THREDLING, a hund. in co. Suffolk, contains the pars. of Ashfield, Debenham, Framsden, Pettaugh, and Winston, comprising an area of about 7,630 acres.

THREE-BRIDGES, a junction station on the London, Brighton, and South-Coast railway.

THREE-COCKS, a junction station on the Mid-Wales railway.

THREE-FARMS, a tnshp. in the par. of Eccleshall, N. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford, near Eccleshall.

THREEMILETOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Ecclesmachan, co. Linlithgow, Scotland, 4 miles E. of Linlithgow.

THRELKELD, a chplry. in the par. of Greystock, Leath ward, co. Cumberland, 4½ miles N.E. of Keswick, its post town. It is a station on the Cockermouth and Penrith railway. The village is situated under Blencathra, with a prospect over St. John's Valley. About a third of the parish is in poor pasture and woodland. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £60. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1776, at a cost of £270.

THRESHFIELD, a tnshp. in the par. of Linton, E. div of Staincliffe wap., West Riding co. York, 7 miles N. of Skipton. It is situated on the river Wharfe, and contains the hmlt. of Skirethorns, or Skythorne. The soil is generally light, on limestone. There is a grammar school endowed with £30 per annum.

THREXTON, a par. in the hund. of Wayland, co. Norfolk, 2½ miles S.W. of Watton, its post town, and 10 N. of Brandon. The village is situated on the river Wissey. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Swaffham, in the dioc. of Norwich. A little to the S. of the church is a Roman encampment, where several antiquities have been found.

THRIBERGH, or THRYBERGH, a par. in the S. div. of Strafforth wap., West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Rotherham, its post town. The village is situated on the river Don, and on the high road from Rotherham to Doncaster. The par. includes the hmlt. of Dalton. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £329. The church is dedicated to St. Leonard. The parochial charities produce about £32 per annum, which go towards the support of Hedge's and Finch's schools. J. Fullerton, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner. Thribergh Park is the principal residence.

THRIGBY, a par. in the hund. of East Flegg, co. Norfolk, 7 miles N.W. of Yarmouth. Stokesby is its post town. The principal residence is Thrigby Hall. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £165. The church is old, and dedicated to St. Mary. Thomas Brown, Esq., is lord of the manor.

THRIMBY, a chplry. and tnshp. in the par. of Morland, East Ward, co. Westmoreland, 7 miles S.E. of Penrith, its post town, 3 N.W. of Shap, and 3 S. of Clifton railway station. The village is situated on the river Leath, and on the high road from Lancaster to Carlisle. The chplry. includes the tnshp. of Little Strickland, where is the chapel-of-ease dedicated to St. Mary, and a school-house built by the Earl of Lonsdale. The soil consists of a rich loam, with a subsoil of limestone. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

THRINGSTONE ST. GEORGE, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Whitwick, hund. of West Goscote, co. Leicester, 5 miles N.E. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, its post town, and 1 mile N. of Whitwick. T. Boultber, Esq., is lord of the manor. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £44, in the patron. of the Vicar of Whitwick. The church is dedicated to St. George. There is a chapel for Wesleyans, and a National school.

THRINTHOFT, a tnshp. in the par. of Ainderby-Steeple, wap. of Gilling East, North Riding co. York, 1 mile from Ainderby railway station, and 4 miles S.W. of Northallerton.

THRIPLOW, a hund. in co. Cambridge, contains the pars of Foulmire, Foxton, Harston, Hauxton, Newton, Great Shelford, Little Shelford, Stapleford, Thriplow, and Trumpington, comprising an area of 16,279 acres.

THRIPLOW, a par. in the hund. of the same name, co. Cambridge, 6 miles N.E. of Royston, its post town, and 3 W. of Whittlesford railway station. The village is near Thriplow Heath, a rendezvous of the parliamentary army commanded by Cromwell and Fairfax in July, 1647. The soil is of a sandy nature, with a subsoil of gravel and chalk. An Enclosure Act was passed in 1840. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £129, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient stone structure, with a tower and five bells. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There are British and Church schools. The Independents have a chapel.

THRISLINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bishop's-Middleham, N.E. div. of Stockton ward, co. Durham, 6½ miles S.E. of Durham. It is a station on the Hartlepool branch of the North Eastern railway.

THRIVEWELL, a vil. in the par. of Kirkharle, co. Northumberland, 12 miles N.E. of Hexham.

THROAPHAM, a par. and tnshp. in the S. div. of Strafforth wap., West Riding co. York, 6 miles S.W. of Tickhill. Rotherham is its post town. It includes the hmlts. of Gildingwells, Letwell, and Thorpe-St.-John. For ecclesiastical purposes it forms the hamlet of Laughton-en-le-Morthen, with which parish it has been united from time immemorial. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Laughton-en-le-Morthen, in the dioc. of York. The church, dedicated to St. John, is old.

THROCKING, a par. in the hund. of Edwinstree, co. Herts, 2 miles N.W. of Buntingford, its post town and railway station. The village occupies the highest ground in the county. The par. includes a part of Buntingford, and had a seat of the Soames family. The road from London to Cambridge passes along its eastern boundary. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £252. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, has been restored, chiefly at the expense of the present rector. The interior contains monuments of the Elwes family, one of which is by Nollekens. The register dates from 1612.

THROCKLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Newburn, W. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 6½ miles N.W. of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and 2 N. of Ryton railway station. The village is situated near the river Tyne and the Roman wall. There are extensive collieries and brick works. The Wesleyans have a chapel, built in 1850. There is a school, partly supported by the governors of Greenwich Hospital.

THROCKMORTON, a chplry. in the par. of Fladbury, middle div. of Oswaldslow hund., co. Worcester, 4 miles N.E. of Pershore, its post town, and 2 from the Pershore station on the Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton railway. The soil is clayey. This place gave name to the Throckmortons of Coughton. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Fladbury, in the dioc. of Worcester. The church is an ancient structure, with a tower and four bells; it was thoroughly restored and new roofed in 1833. Sir R. Throckmorton is lord of the manor.

THROOP, a tythg. in the par. of Holdenhurst, co. Hants, 3 miles N.W. of Christchurch, on the river Stour.

THROOPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Bishopstone, co. Wilts, 3 miles S.W. of Wilton.

THROPPLE, or TROPHILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Mitford, W. div. of Morpeth ward, co. Northumberland, 5 miles W. of Morpeth, and 3 W. of Mitford, near Whittle Hill Roman camp, the traces of which have almost been obliterated.

THROPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Rothbury, W. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 2½ miles W. of Rothbury, and 18 N.W. of Morpeth. The village is situated at the confluence of the rivers Coquet and Snitterburn, over the latter of which is a bridge, rebuilt in 1810. The soil consists of a light loam, with a subsoil of gravel. The Roman Catholics and Presbyterians have chapels. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor.

THROSTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Hart, N.E. div. of Stockton ward, co. Durham, 3 miles W. of Hartlepool.

THROUGHAM, a tythg. in the par. of Bisley, co. Gloucester, 3 miles E. of Stroud.

THROWLEY, a par. in the hund. of Faversham, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 4 miles S.W. of Faversham, its post town, and 12 from Canterbury. The village is near the road from Faversham to Ashford. It has been held by the Sondes of Lee Court since the reign of Henry VI. The land is partly in hop grounds. The soil is a strong loam, with an admixture of flints, and rests upon chalk. The vicarage-house occupies the site of a priory, founded as a cell to the abbey of St. Bertin, at St. Omers, in Artois, and granted in the 22nd of Henry VI. to Sion Abbey. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £200, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, contains a brass bearing date 1558, and effigies of the Sondes. The register dates from 1557. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum, besides three almshouses supported by Lord Sondes. The Wesleyans have a chapel. There are National schools with a small endowment. The principal residence is Belmont.

THROWLEY, or THROWLEIGH, a par. in the hund. of Wonford, co. Devon, 7 miles S.E. of Okehampton, its post town, and 10½ S.W. of the Copplestone station on the North Devon railway. The village is situated near the river Teign, on the Exeter and Okehampton turnpike road. The surface is hilly and the soil sand, with a subsoil of granite. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a tower and five bells. There are also remains of a chapel-of-ease at Walland Hill. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There are a school for both sexes, supported by R. D. Gay, Esq., two Sunday-schools, and an infant school. F. Dunning, Esq., is lord of the manor.

THROWLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Ilam, co. Stafford, 9 miles N.E. of Cheadle, and 8 N.W. of Ashbourn, near the confluence of the rivers Manifold and Hamps. In the reign of King John it was a seat of the Meverls. Throwley Hall, once occupied by the family of Oliver Cromwell, is now a farmhouse.

THROXENBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Scalby, Pickering lythe, North Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Scarborough.

THRUMPTON, a par. in the N. div. of Rushcliffe wap., co. Nottingham, 12 miles S.E. of Derby, 7 S.W. of Nottingham, and 2 S. of the Long Eaton railway station. The village is situated on the Midland Counties railway, where the Erewash canal and river Soar join the river Trent. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £77. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a small ancient structure, with a tower and four bells. The Hall is an Elizabethan seat built by G. Pigot in 1630.

THRUNSCOE, a hmlt. in the par. of Clee, hund. of Bradley Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 1 mile S.E. of Great Grimsby.

THRUP, a hmlt. in the par. of Kidlington, hund. of Wootton, co. Oxford, 2 miles S.E. of Woodstock, on the Oxford canal and the river Cherwell.

THRUPP, a hmlt. in the par. of Norton, co. Notts, 2 miles N.E. of Daventry.

THRUPP, a lib. in the par. of Radley, hund. of Hormer, co. Berks, 1½ mile E. of Abingdon. It is situated near the Oxford railway and the river Thames, and is joined with Wick.

THRUPP, a hmlt. in the par. of Great Farringdon, hund. of Shrivenham, co. Berks, 2 miles N.E. of Great Farringdon. It is situated on the river Thames, and with Wadley and Littleworth forms a tything.

THRUPP, THE, a hmlt. in the par. of Stroud, hund. of Bisley, co. Gloucester. This village is situated in a vale, through which passes the Thames and Severn canal. The manufacture of superfine woollen cloths is extensively carried on, and there are wool-stapling firms, an iron and brass foundry, and an engineering establishment.

THRUSCROSS, a tnshp. in the par. of Fewston, lower div. of Claro wap., West Riding co. York, 10 miles N.W. of Otley, its post town, and 5 S. of Pateley Bridge. A considerable portion of the land is moorland, and the remainder chiefly meadow and pasture. The tnshp. includes the hmlts. of Bramley Head, West End, and Low Mill. In the vicinity are extensive flax-mills. The soil is gravelly, with a subsoil of rock. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Fewston, in the dioc. of Ripon. The church was enlarged in 1841. There is also a district church at West End, the living of which is a perpet. cur. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels. There are National and Sunday schools. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor.

THRUSHELTON. See THURSHELTON, co. Devon.

THRUSSINGTON, a par. in the hund. of East Goscote, co. Leicester, 9 miles N.E. of Leicester, its post town, and 7½ S.W. of Melton Mowbray. The village is situated on the river Wreak and the road from Leicester to Melton Mowbray. In the vicinity are the Melton Hunt stables and kennels for 60 horses and 300 dogs, which cost the late Sir H. Goodricke upwards of £12,000. The Melton navigation and the ancient Fosse Way pass through the parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £240. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient structure with a tower and three bells. It was restored and repewed in 1836. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There are a free school and a National school; also chapels for Wesleyans, Baptists, and Primitive Methodists. J. H. Haycock, T. Beasley, Wells Charlton, and Benjamin Simpkin, Esqs., are lords of the manor.

THRUXTON, a par. in the hund. of Andover, co. Hants, 5 miles W. of Andover, its post town. A Roman tesselated pavement in excellent preservation was discovered here in 1823. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £390. The church, dedicated to the Holy Rood, was repaired in 1839, when a stained E. window was inserted by the Rev. D. Baynes. The interior contains monuments and brasses. The parochial charities produce about £17 per annum. The manor is the property of St. John's Hospital, Winchester.

THRUXTON, a par. in the hund. of Webtree, co. Hereford, 6 miles S.W. of Hereford, its post town, and 3 W. of the Tram Inn railway station. The village is situated on the road from Ross to Hay. The soil is sandy, with a subsoil of sandstone rock. In the vicinity are several barrows. The living is a rect.* with the vic. of Kingston annexed, in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £252, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedited to St. Bartholomew. The parochial charities produce about £19 per annum. There is a National school for this township and Kingston. A. Clive, Esq., is lord of the manor.

THUNDERBRIDGE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Shelley, West Riding co. York, 5 miles S.E. of Huddersfield.

THUNDERLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Wimbish, co. Essex, 2 miles S.E. of Saffron-Walden. The living is a vic. consolidated with that of Wimbish, in the dioc. of Rochester. The church is in ruins.

THUNDERSLEY, a par. in the hunds. of Rochford and Barstable, co. Essex, 2 miles S.W. of Rayleigh, its post town, and the same distance from South Benfleet railway station. The village is situated near the high road from Grays to Southend. It once belonged to Godric, the Saxon thane. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £640. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. There is a school erected at the expense of the Rev. Robert Bosanquet in 1856.

THUNDRIDGE, a par. in the hund. of Braughin, co. Herts, 2½ miles N.E. of Ware, its post town, and 23 N. of London. The village is situated on the great North road, near the river Nib. The par. includes the vil. of Wade's Mill. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £123. The church, dedicated to St. Mary and All Saints, is in the vicinity of Wade's Mill. The parochial charities produce about £45 per annum. There is a free school for both sexes, supported by R. Hanbury, Esq. C. W. G. Puller, Esq., is lord of the manor.

THURCASTON, a par. in the hund. of West Goscote, co. Leicester, 4½ miles N.W. of Leicester, its post town. The village, which is large, is situated on a branch of the river Soar. The living is a rect.* with that of Anstrey consolidated, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £676, in the patron. of Emanuel College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities produce about £78 per annum, of which £26 go to Hill's free school. Bishop Latimer was born at a farm in the neighbourhood in 1478. The Earl of Lanesborough is lord of the manor.

THURGARTON, a par. in the hund. of North Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 7 miles N. of Aylsham, and 5½ S.W. of Cromer. Hanworth is its post town. The village is situated on a branch of the river Bure. The surface is flat, and the soil good. This place is mentioned in Domesday Book, and at that time belonged to the Abbot of St. Benet Holme, but at the Dissolution was given by Henry VIII. to the see of Norwich. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £206, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains a carved screen and several monuments of the Spurrell family. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum.

THURGARTON, a wap. in two divs., N. and S., co. Nottingham; the N. contains the pars. of Averham, Caunton, Cromwell, Fledborough, Holme, Kelham, Maplebeck, Marnham, Mering, North Muskham, South Muskham, Normanton, Norwell, Ossington, Park Leys, Sutton, Weston, and parts of Kneesal, Rolleston, and East Stoke, comprising an area of 37,990 acres.; the S. contains the pars. of Barton-Joyce, Calverton, Colwich, Epperstone, Gedling, Gonalston, Lambley, Lowdham, Oxton, Snenton, and Woodborough, comprising an area of 25,620 acres.

THURGARTON, a par. in the Southwell div. of Thurgarton wap., co. Nottingham, 3 miles S.W. of Southwell, its post town, and a quarter of a mile from the Thurgarton station on the Midland railway. The village is situated on the road from Nottingham to Southwell, at the foot of a declivity overlooking the vale of the Trent. In the vicinity are traces of an Austin priory, founded by Ralph D'Ayncourt in 1130, and valued, at the Dissolution, at £360, when the site was given to the Coopers. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £56, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, was formerly a magnificent structure, but now consists of the half-ruined aisle of the original church, and of a chancel and N. aisle, which have been added at an expense of £3,000, chiefly through the generosity of R. Milward, Esq. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There is a free school. R. Milward, Esq., is lord of the manor.

THURGOLAND, a tnshp. in the par. of Silkstone, wap. of Staincross, West Riding co. York, 10 miles N.W. of Sheffield, its post town, 4 S.E. of Penistone, and 2 N.E. of the Wortley railway station. The village, which is considerable, is situated on an eminence. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the iron and steel wire works, woollen mills, charcoal burning, and in the extensive collieries. The tnshp. includes the hmlts. of Coates Crane Moor, and Huthwaite. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £120, in the patron. of the Vicar of Silkstone. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, was erected in 1842. There is a national school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels. The Earl of Scarborough is lord of the manor.

THURLASTON, a par. in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 7½ miles S.W. of Leicester, its post town, and 6 N.E. of Hinckley. The village is chiefly agricultural. The par. includes the tnshps. of Normanton, Turville, and Newhall Park. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £400. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains monuments of the Turville and Grundy families. There is a National school. The General Baptists have a chapel. The principal residence is Normanton Hall. The heirs of the late Joseph Grundy, Esq., are lords of the manor of Thurlaston, and the Rev. J. Arkwright, M.A., of Normanton Turville.

THURLASTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Dunchurch, Rugby div. of Knightlow hund., co. Warwick, 3 miles S.W. of Rugby, and 1 mile W. of Dunchurch, on Dunsmoor Heath.

THURLBEAR, a par. in the hund. of North Curry, co. Somerset, 3 miles S.E. of Taunton, its post town, and 3½ from the Taunton railway station. The living is a rect. and don.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £136. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas, is an ancient edifice, with a tower containing four bells. The register dates from the commencement of the 17th century. There is a school for both sexes. Lord Portman is lord of the manor and owner of the soil.

THURLBY, a par. in the lower div. of Boothby Graffo wap., parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 9 miles S.W. of Lincoln, and 3 S.E. of Swinderby railway station. Newark is its post town. The village is situated between the rivers Witham and Trent, near the ancient Fosse Way. The surface rises gradually from each river towards the centre of the parish. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £55, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Germain, has been recently restored. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. Thurlby Hall is the principal residence. Sir E. G. Bromhead, Bart., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

THURLBY, a par. in the wap. of Ness, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 2 miles S. of Bourn, its post town, and 5 N.W. of Market Deeping. It is a station on the Great Northern railway. The village, which is extensive, is situated on the road from Lincoln to Peterborough, near the river Glen, and on the ancient Roman canal called Caer Dyke. The par. contains the hmlts. of Northope and Obthorpe. There are some brick kilns in the vicinity The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £252, in the patron. of Eton College. The church, dedicated to St. Firmin, contains a circular Norman font, several piscinæ and sedilia, part of an old rood loft, and a painted E. window, inserted in 1860. It was thoroughly restored in 1856. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, erected in 1853. The Wesleyans and Free Methodists have chapels.

THURLBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Bilsby, Wold div. of Calceworth hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2 miles E. of Alford.

THURLEIGH, a par. in the hund. of Willey, co. Bedford, 7 miles N. of Bedford, its post town, and 2 E. of Bletsoe. The village is considerable, but irregularly built. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture, and in the manufacture of pillow lace. In this parish are Bury Hill round camp and the moated site of Blackbull Hall. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £142. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, contains the brass of a knight, and a carved block of stone representing the Temptation and Fall. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum. There is a National school, in which six boys are educated free. The Baptists have a chapel. J. S. Crawley, Esq., is lord of the manor.

THURLES, a par., post and market town, in the bar. of Eliogarty, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 12 miles N.N.E. of Cashel, and 87 from Dublin. It is a station on the Great Southern and Western railway. The surface consists of a productive soil, with some bog. The parish is crossed by the road from Tipperary to Templemore. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with three others, £950, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, situated at the E. end of the town, was built in 1820, partly by means of a gift and loan from the late Board of First Fruits. The Roman Catholic chapel is the cathedral of the diocese. Here stands St. Patrick's College, built in 1836 for the education of Roman Catholics; also 4 public and 13 private schools. The principal residence is Brittas Castle. The town is situated on the banks of the Suir, and consist chiefly of one spacious street. It has a bridewell, police station, two branch banks, savings-bank, dispensary, fever hospital, and a brewery. The chief trade is in corn. The Danes were defeated here by the Irish in the 10th century. The Marquis of Ormond takes his title of viscount from this place. In this parish are the ruins of the old church, a monastery, and two castles. Petty sessions are held every Saturday. Market days are

Tuesday and Saturday. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday in every month, on Easter Monday, 21st August and December.

THURLESTON, a par. in the hund. of Stanborough, co. Devon, 4 miles S.W. of Kingsbridge, its post town, and 13 W. of Kingsbridge-road railway station. The village is situated on the eastern bank of the river Avon, near Bigbury Bay, in the English Channel. The par. includes the hmlts. of Buckland, Banthorn, and Avonmouth. The soil is loamy, with a subsoil of rock. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £321. There is a day-school for both sexes. The Earl of Devon is lord of the manor.

THURLOW, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Risbridge, co. Suffolk, 10 miles S.E. of Newmarket, its post town, and 3 N.E. of Haverhill. It is situated on a branch of the river Stour. A hospital or free chapel was founded here in the reign of Richard II., as a cell to Hautpays, or "De Alto Passu," and was given by Edward IV. to King's College, Cambridge. Great Thurlow Hall was the seat of the Vernon family. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £300. The church is dedicated to All Saints.

THURLOW, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Risbridge, co. Suffolk, 10 miles from Newmarket, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Haverhill. The village is chiefly agricultural. It is a meet for the Suffolk hounds. Little Thurlow Hall, the seat of the Soame family, was built by Sir Stephen Soame, Knt., Lord Mayor of London, who died in 1619. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £401. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, contains the brass of a knight in armour, bearing date 1500. The parochial charities produce about £69 per annum, of which £60 go to Sir S. Soame's school and almshouses for eight inmates.

THURLOXTON, a par. in the hund. of North Petherton, co. Somerset, 5½ miles N.E. of Taunton, and 5 S.W. of Bridgwater. The village is situated on the road from Taunton to Bridgwater. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £170. The church is dedicated to St. Giles. The register dates from 1538. There is a Sunday-school. Lord Portman is lord of the manor.

THURLSTONE, a tnshp. in the par. of Penistone, wap. of Staincross, West Riding co. York, 1 mile W. of Penistone, its post town, 8 miles S.W. of Barnsley, and 2 W. of Hazlewood station on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway. The village, which is spacious and well built, is situated on the N. bank of the river Don, on which are several mills. The tnshp. comprises 7,740 acres, a considerable portion of which is wild, uncultivated moor, extending to the confines of co. Chester. It contains the hmlts. of Carlcoats and Ecklands. The cultivated lands are fertile, and the neighbourhood abounds in springs. The substratum consists of grit-stone, ironstone, and coal, the last being of an excellent quality, from a bed named the Halifax. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the woollen manufacture, which has long been the staple trade of the place. There is a school for both sexes, at which divine worship is performed on Sunday evenings. The Independents and Wesleyans have chapels, and the former a school. Nicholas Saunderson, the eminent blind mathematician, was born here in 1682. The Earl of Scarborough is lord of the manor.

THURLTON, a par. in the hund. of Clavering, co. Norfolk, 5 miles S.E. of Loddon, its post town, and 6 N. of Beccles. The village, which is extensive, is situated near the Lowestoft railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £211, in the patron. of trustees. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum, realised from church lands. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

THURLTON, a par. within the liberty of the borough of Ipswich, co. Suffolk, 2 miles N.W. of Ipswich. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Whitton. The church is dedicated to St Botolph.

THURMASTON, NORTH, a tnshp. and chplry. in the pars. of Barkby and Belgrave, co. Leicester, 3½ miles N.E. of Leicester, its post town, and 1 mile from the Syston station on the Midland Counties railway. The village is situated on the river Soar, and near the ancient Fosse Way. The inhabitants are employed in frame-work knitting and in agriculture. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £106. The church, dedicated to St. John the Evangelist, has been recently rebuilt, after having remained in ruins for almost a century. There is a National school for both sexes, erected in 1844. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels. W. A. Pochin, Esq., and T. Allen, Esq., are lords of the manor.

THURMASTON, SOUTH, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Belgrave, co. Leicester, 3 miles N.E. of Leicester. The village, which is considerable, is situated near the Leicester canal, which here joins the Melton-Mowbray canal, and is intersected by the ancient Fosse Way on which the Roman milliarium was discovered in 1771. This relic of antiquity is 3½ feet high and 7½ inches in circumference, and now stands on a pillar in the town of Leicester. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £120. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure, containing monuments to the family of Simons. There is a chapel for Wesleyans, and a National school.

THURNBY, a par. in the hund. of Gartree, co. Leicester, 4 miles S.E. of Leicester, its post town. The par. includes the hmlts. of Bushby and Stoughton. In the vicinity is a petrifying spring. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Stoughton annexed, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £258. The church is dedicated to St. Luke. There is also a chapel-of-ease at Stoughton. The parochial charities produce about £36 per annum. There is a free school. G. A. L. Keck, Esq., is lord of the manor.

THURNE. See THIRNE, co. Norfolk.

THURNHAM, a tnshp. in the pars. of Lancaster and Cockerham, hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 4½ miles S.W. of Lancaster, its post town. The village is situated where the branch canal joins the river Lune, and contains the harbour of Lancaster called Glasson Dock; this last was constructed in 1787, and capable of containing 25 merchant vessels. A considerable traffic is carried on. Within the township are the remains of Cockersand Abbey, situated on a neck of land projecting into the sea, and adjoining the Cocker Sands, from which the abbey derived its name. The ruins consist of an octagonal chapter-house, with a roof supported on a single central column, now the sepulchral chapel of the Daltons. The Roman Catholics have a chapel and a school.

THURNING, a par. in the hund. of Eynsford, co. Norfolk, 6 miles S. of Holt, and 8 N.E. of Elham railway station. Thetford is its post town. The village is situated on the river Bure. The soil is favourable to the growth of oak timber, and the meadows for the abundance and variety of wild flowers. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £350, in the patron. of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. The chancel is dilapidated, but the rest of the edifice was restored in 1825. The register dates from 1715. The principal residence is Thurning Hall.

THURNING, a par. partly in the hund. of Polebrook, co. Northampton, and partly in Leightonstone, co. Huntingdon, 5 miles S.E. of Oundle, its post town, and 13 N.W. of Huntingdon. The village is situated on a branch of the river Ouse. The land is partly in common, interspersed with wood. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £181, in the patron. of Emanuel College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. James. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Earl of Sandwich is lord of the manor.

THURNSCOE, a par. in the N. div. of Strafforth wap., West Riding co. York, 7½ miles N.W. of Doncaster, its post town, and 2½ from the Darfield station on the North Midland railway. The soil is clay and loam, with a subsoil of sandstone shale. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £341. The church is dedicated to St. Helen. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum, which go to the support of an almshouse. There is a school for both sexes, at which a Sunday-school is held. The Rev. T. W. Simpson is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

THURROCK, GRAYS. See GRAYS-THURROCK, co. Essex.

THURROCK, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Barstaple, co. Essex, 1 mile E. of Grays-Thurrock, and 2 miles N.W. of Tilbury Fort. The village is bounded on the S.W. by the river Thames, and near the line of the Tilbury railway. There are chalk pits, and on the road to Stifford are some ancient excavations, termed "Dane holes," or "Cunobelin's Gold Mines." The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £524. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with arched recesses in the S. wall.

THURROCK, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Chafford, co. Essex, 1 mile W. of Grays-Thurrock. This par., which includes the populous vil. of Purfleet, is bounded on the S. by the river Thames, where is a landing-place opposite to Greenhithe. There are barracks. The living is a discharged vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £350. The church is dedicated to St. Clement. There is also a chapel-of-ease at Purfleet.

THURSBY, a par. in the ward and co. of Cumberland, 6 miles S.W. of Carlisle, its post town, 5 N.E. of Wigton, and 1 mile from the Curthwaite station on the Maryport and Carlisle railway. The village is situated on the river Wampool. The parish is divided into three townships, High-Thursby, Crofton, and Parton, with the hamlet of Micklethwaite. The soil is fertile. This place is supposed to have derived its name from Thor, to whom a temple is said to have been erected at Woodrigs, in the neighbourhood. A pillar of coarse stone, inscribed to Philip the Emperor and his son, bearing date 248, was dug up near the line of the military way to Wigton, and is preserved here. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £160, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, contains monuments of the Briscoe family. It was built in 1846 on the site of the old one, which was partly built by David I. The parochial charities produce about £31 per annum, of which £18 go to Tomlinson's school. The Earl of Lonsdale and Sir W. Brisco, Bart., are lords of the manor.

THURSCROSS. See THRUSCROSS, co. York.

THURSFIELD, or NEWCHAPEL, a chplry. in the par. of Wolstanton, N. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford, 2¼ miles N. of Tunstall, its post town, 3 N. of Burslem, and 6 N.E. of Newcastle. The living is a perpet. cur.* with the cur. of St. Mary's annexed, in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £260. The church, dedicated to St. James, was erected in 1767, and re-roofed in 1827. There is a National school for both sexes.

THURSFORD, a par. in the hund. of North Greenhoe, co. Norfolk, 4 miles S.E. of Walsingham railway station, and 6 N.E. of Fakenham. Thetford is its post town. The village is situated near the river Stiffkey, at the junction of the roads from Fakenham and Walsingham to Holt. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of Great Snoring, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, contains tablets to the Guyons. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. The principal residence is Thursford Hall, recently restored and enlarged by its proprietor, J. S. S. Chad, Esq., who is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

THURSHELTON, a par. in the hund. of Lifton, co. Devon, 9 miles N. of Tavistock, and 10 S.W. of Oakhampton. The village is situated on the river Haine. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Marystow, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church is dedicated to St. George. There is a National school for both sexes. J. H. Tremayne, Esq., is lord of the manor.

THURSLEY, a par. in the second div. of Godalming hund., co. Surrey, 5 miles S.W. of Godalming, its post town. The village is situated on the river Wey. The soil is light. The land is partly in common and copse, and the remainder arable. Ironstone is abundant, and there were anciently several large iron foundries, the site of which is marked by the Hammer Ponds. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £85. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum.

THURSO, a par., seaport, market and sessions town, and burgh of barony, co. Caithness, Scotland, 21 miles S.W. of Wick, and the same distance W. from John-o'-Groat's house. Coaches run to Bonar Bridge in connection with the Highland railway, and the Leith steamers call at the bay, which has good anchorage. It is situated on the north-western coast of the county, at the head of a bay, into which the river Thurso falls, between Dunnet and Holburn Heads, after a course of 25 miles from the borders of Halkirk parish. Vessels of any burthen may find shelter in the bay, or Scrabster Roads, as it is called, in all weathers, but those intending to enter the harbour must wait the tide before they can cross the bar. It is a subport to Wick, and has a pier and custom-house. The main export of the place consists of the Caithness pavement, the manufacture of which is carried on to a great extent, and heavy draughts of salmon are occasionally taken in the river, which is here spanned by a stone bridge. The largest draught recorded was in 1743, when 2,560 were taken in one draught of the net. The parish is about 6½ miles in length by 5 broad, and the land is well cultivated. The coast, except near the bay, is rocky, the cliffs rising 400 feet above the sea-level in some parts. The prevailing rocks are Old Red sandstone, coarse slate, and trap, with flagstone, which is quarried. Traces of lead have been found. The town, which is called in Gaelic Inverhorsa, stands on the left bank of the river, about 2 miles to the eastward of the harbour. The streets are neat and clean, and there are many good houses. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the fisheries and coasting trade, and some in the linen, woollen, leather, and straw-plait manufactures. There are a a post-office, masonic lodge, assembly rooms, custom-house, savings-bank, and two branch banks. In the parish are "Picts' houses," a Danish camp, and the ruins of a house where the Earl of Montrose stayed on landing, before his capture. The par. is in the presb. of Caithness. The church was erected in the early part of the present century by Sir G. Sinclair, the projector of the great statistical account of Scotland. There are, besides a Free church, chapels for Original Seceders, Independents, and Baptists, also parochial and Free Church schools, and several private seminaries. A little to the E. of the town stands Thurso Castle, the seat of Sir G. Sinclair, Bart., an ancient building recently enlarged; and at a short distance on the coast is Harold's Cross, erected by the late baronet to the memory of Harold Earl of Caithness, who fell here in 1190. Market day is on Friday. Fairs are held on the last Tuesdays of April and May, second Tuesday in July Monday next before Inverness, Friday after Links of Dunnet, first Tuesday in September, and last Tuesday in October.

THURSTABLE, a hund., co. Essex, contains the pars. of Goldhanger, Heybridge, Langford, Tollesbury, Tolleshunt d'Arcy, Major Tolleshunt, Knights Tolleshunt, Great and Little Totham, and Bishop's Wickham, comprising an area of 23,640 acres.

THURSTASTON, a par. and tnshp. in the lower div. of Wirrall hund., co. Chester, 5 miles N.W. of Great Neston, and 7 S.W. of Birkenhead. The village is situated on the river Dee. The par. includes the hmlts. of Grasby and Irby. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £242, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, has been recently rebuilt. The parochial charities produce about £31 per annum. A Sunday-school is held at the church. Colonel Clegg is lord of the manor.

THURSTON, a par. in the hund. of Thedwestry, co. Suffolk, 4 miles N.E. of Bury St. Edmund's, its post town, and 9½ from Stowmarket. It is a station on the Bury branch of the Great Eastern railway. Near the railway station is Thedwestry Hill. The soil is light, with gravel and sand pits. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £250. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, contains tablets of the Stedman, Bright, and Smith families, and two memorial windows of the Misses Blake. The parochial charities produce about £52 per annum. There are two schools and a Sunday-school. The principal residences are Nether Hall, Thurston House, and Thurston Cottage. W. C. Bassett, Esq., is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

THURSTONFIELD, a vil. in the tnshp. of Moorhouse, co. Cumberland, 5 miles W. of Carlisle.

THURSTONLAND, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirk-Burton, upper div. of Agbrigg wap., West Riding co. York, 5 miles S.E. of Huddersfield, its post town and 2½ from Holmfirth. The village, which is considerable, is situated on an eminence near the Stocks Moor station of the Sheffield and Huddersfield railway. There are several collieries and stone quarries. Weaving is carried on. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Ripon. The church, erected in 1810, was, until 1834, used by the Dissenters. There are National schools for both sexes, and a Sunday-school, endowed with an annuity of £35. Many Roman coins of the Lower Empire were discovered here in 1838.

THURTON, a par. in the hund. of Loddon, co. Norfolk, 8 miles S.E. of Norwich, its post town, 2 W. of Loddon, and 4 S.W. of Buckenham railway station. The village is situated on the road from Beccles to Norwich. Many Roman coins were discovered here in 1707, and upon opening several tumuli Roman urns were found. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £70. The church is dedicated to St. Ethelbert. The S. doorway is ornamented, and the windows have been filled with stained glass by the late Lady Beauchamp Proctor. The register dates from 1560. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. Sir W. B. Proctor, Bart., is lord of the manor.

THURVASTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Sutton-on-the-Hill, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 7½ miles N.W. of Derby. It is joined with Osleston to form a township.

THURVASTON, NETHER, a hmlt. in the par. of Longford, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 8 miles N.W. of Derby, near the river Dove.

THUXTON, or THURSTON, a par. in the hund. of Mitford, co. Norfolk, 3½ miles N.E. of Hingham, its post town, and 5½ from East Dereham. It is a station on the Wymondham and Dereham branch of the Great Eastern railway. The village is situated on the river Blackwater. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £260. The church is dedicated to St. Paul. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum.

THWAITE, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Muker and par. of Grinton, North Riding co. York, 1 mile N.W. of Muker, and 56 miles from York, in the moorland under Shunner Fell, and near the river Swale.

THWAITE ALL SAINTS, a par. in the hund. of South Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 4½ miles N. of Aylsham, its post town. The village is situated on an eminence near the river Bure. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £110, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The register dates from 1562. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Earl of Orford is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

THWAITES, a chplry. in the par. of Millom, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 4 miles from Broughton, in Lancashire, its post town, and 10 S.E. of Ravenglass. The chplry. includes the hmlts. of Duddon Bridge, Hall Thwaites, and Lady Hall. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £115, in the patron. of landowners. The church is dedicated to St. Anne. There is a Druidical temple at Swineside, about 2 miles from the church.

THWAITE ST. GEORGE, a par. in the hund. of Hartismere, co. Suffolk, 2 miles N. of Mendlesham, 4½ S.W. of Eye, and 5 E. of Finningham railway station. The village is situated on the road from London to Norwich, by way of Ipswich. Petty sessions are held monthly. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £270. The church, dedicated to St. George, has recently been restored. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. In 1832 Saxon silver coins were discovered here. Fairs are held on the 30th June and 26th November for cattle.

THWAITE ST. MARY, a par. in the hund. of Loddon, co. Norfolk, 4 miles N. of Bungay, its post town, and 12 S.E. of Norwich. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £200. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The register dates from 1538.

THWING, a par. in the wap. of Dickering, East Riding co. York, 8½ miles N.W. of Bridlington, its post town, and 10 N. of Driffield. The village is situated on the Wolds. The par. includes the hmlts. of Octon and Wold Cottage. At the latter place is an obelisk erected in 1799 in commemoration of a phenomenon which occurred in the month of December, 1795, when a meteoric stone of 56 lbs. weight fell from the sky and partly embedded itself in the earth. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £520, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains several monuments, including one to Archbishop Lamplugh, who was a native of this parish. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There are a parochial school, also chapels for Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists. Wold Cottage is the principal residence. Lord Londesborough is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

THWING-GARTH, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Lunedale, and par. of Romaldkirk, North Riding co. York, 10 miles N.W. of Barnard Castle, near the river Tees.

TIAQUIN, a bar. in co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland. It contains Castle Blakeney, Newtown, and Bellew, the pars. of Clonkeen, Kilkerrin, Killoscobe, and parts of those of Abbeyknockmoy, Ballymacward, Boyounagh, Killerein, Killimordally, Killosolan, Monivea, and Moylough.

TIBALDSTONE, a hund., co. Gloucester, contains the pars. of Ashton-under-Hill, Beckford, and Hinton-on-the-Green, comprising an area of 5,980 acres.

TIBBERAGHNY, or TIPHERAGHNY, a par. in the bar. of Iverk, co. Kilkenny, Ireland, 1 mile W.S.W. of Pilltown. The river Suir traverses the interior. The living is a rect. joined to Fiddown [which see]. The church is in ruins. There are remains of a castle supposed to have been founded by King John.

TIBBERMORE, or TIPPERMUIR, a par. in co. Perth, Scotland. It comprises the vils. of Hillyland and Ruthvenfield, or Huntingtower. It extends in length about 6 miles from E. to W., with a varying breadth of from 1 to 3 miles, and its northern boundary is traversed by the Pow brook and the river Almond. The land is chiefly fertile, and well wooded. The soil is various, and the predominant rock Old Red sandstone. The village is about 5 miles W. of Perth, on the river Almond, and is traversed by the N. and the S. roads from Perth to Crieff, the road from Perth to Muthil, and the Crieff branch of the Caledonian railway. It has given its name to the first battle fought between the Marquis of Montrose and the Covenanters, though the conflict occurred within the parish of Aberdalgie. This par. is in the presb. of Perth and synod of Perth and Stirling, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is about £265. The parish church was erected in 1632, and enlarged in 1810. There is a parochial school, and at Ruthven is a non-parochial school. A Carmelite convent formerly existed at Tullilum, and synods were held till 1460 by the bishops of Dunkeld, who resided here. The ancient castle of Huntingtower, once the seat of the Gourie family, was the place where James VI. was some time confined by the Earl of Gourie and other conspirators in 1582.

TIBBERTON, a chplry. in the par. of Edgmond, Newport div. of South Bradford hund., co. Salop, 4 miles N.W. of Newport. The village is situated on the river Mees. In the vicinity is a paper-mill. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £100, in the patron. of the Rector of Edgmond. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was rebuilt in 1842. There is a National school. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel.

TIBBERTON, a par. in the hund. of Duchy of Lancaster, co. Gloucester, 5 miles N.W. of Gloucester, its post town, and 4 N. of Oake-street railway station, on the South Wales line of railway. The village is situated on the Newent road, near the Hereford and Gloucester canal. The soil consists of a deep loamy clay, with a subsoil of marl. A stream called the Tibberton brook falls into the river Leddon in the adjacent parish of Rudford. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £350. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, contains several monuments. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There is a British school and a chapel for the Wesleyans. Tibberton Court is the principal residence. W. P. Price, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

TIBBERTON, a par. in the middle div. of Oswaldslow hund., co. Worcester, 4 miles S. of Droitwich, its post town, 4½ N.E. of Worcester, and 2 N. of the Spetchley railway station. The village is situated near the Worcester and Birmingham canal. Gloves are made. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Bredicot, in the dioc. of Worcester. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum, besides a poor's house. A schoolroom has been built, which opens into the church on the N. side.

TIBBINGTON. See TIPTON, co. Stafford.

TIBENHAM, or TIBBENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Depwade, co. Norfolk, 2 miles W. of Tivetshall railway station, and 14 S.W. of Norwich. The village is near the river Yare. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £335, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is old, with a tower surmounted at the angles by figures of the four Evangelists, and containing six bells. There is a chapel dedicated to St. Nicholas. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £70 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, and a chapel for the Primitive Methodists. Sir R. J. Buxton, Bart., and J. Petre, Esq., are lords of the manor.

TIBERTON, a par. in the hund. of Webtree, co. Hereford, 9 miles W. of Hereford, its post town, and 11 S. of Weobley. The village is situated on the main road from Hereford to Hay. The soil is sandy upon a subsoil of sandstone rock. The living is a cur., annexed to the vic. of Madley, in the dioc. of Hereford. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a modern structure, erected at the expense of the Rev. H. Lewarner. In the interior is a carved altar-piece representing the crucifixion. The parochial charities produce about £7 10*s.* per annum. There is a school supported by the Rev. H. Lewarner, of Tiberton Court, who is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

TIBOHINE, a par. in the bar. of Frenchpark, co. Roscommon, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. The surface is boggy. It contains Frenchpark, its post town, and Loughglynn [which see]. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. £289, in the patron. of the bishop.

TIBSHELF, a par. in the hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 4½ miles N.E. of Alfreton, and 3 E. of Stretton railway station. The village is situated on the road from Mansfield to Matlock. Many of the inhabitants are employed in frame-work knitting, and in the collieries. Nearly the whole of the parish is the property of St. Thomas's Hospital, by a grant of Edward VI. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £172. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The body was rebuilt in 1727, but the tower and chancel are much more ancient. There is a parochial school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The trustees of St. Thomas's Hospital, London, are lords of the manor.

TIBTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkburn, Bainton-Beacon div. of Harthill wap., East Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Great Driffield, and 1 mile from the parish church of Kirkburn. It is situated on the Wolds. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

TICEHURST, a par. and small town in the hund. of Shoyswell, rape of Hastings, co. Sussex, 9 miles S.E. of Tonbridge Wells, and 2 miles from the Ticehurst-road station on the Tonbridge Wells and Hastings branch of the South-Eastern railway. The par. includes the chplries. of Flimwell and Stonegate. The surface is undulating and well wooded. The town is situated on an eminence on the road from Tonbridge Wells to Rye and Hastings. In its immediate vicinity is Highlands, a lunatic asylum. The population of the parish in 1851 was 2,850, and in 1861, 2,758. Hops are extensively cultivated. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £350, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a tower containing a clock and six bells. It has two side chapels, and contains a pinnacled font. The register dates from 1559. There are besides district churches at Stonegate and Flimwell; the former, dedicated to St. Peter, was erected in 1838 at a cost of £1,100, defrayed by Mrs. Courthorpe of Whiligh, and the latter, dedicated to St. Augustine, was erected in 1839. The livings of both are perpet. curs. The Wesleyans and Baptists have chapels. There are National schools in connection with the several ecclesiastical districts, also a Sunday-school. Ticehurst Poor-law Union comprises 8 parishes or places, which also form a superintendent registry, but belongs to the Tonbridge Wells New County Court district. Fairs are held on the 4th May and 7th October.

TICHBORNE. See TITCHBORNE, co. Hants.

TICKENCOTE, a par. in the hund. of East, co. Rutland, 3 miles N.W. of Stamford, its post town, and 9 E. of Oakham. The village is situated on the road from London to York, and near the river Gwash. Tickencote is mentioned in Domesday Book as being held by the Countess Judith. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £138. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, was partially rebuilt in 1792 at the expense of Eliza Wingfield, the Saxon chancel being preserved. Stukeley describes it in his time as "the most venerable church extant," and says it "was the entire oratory of Prince Peada, founder of Peterborough Abbey." The principal residence is Tickencote Hall, a building of great antiquity. J. M. Wingfield, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

TICKENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Portbury, co. Somerset, 2 miles S. of the Nailsea station on the Bristol and Exeter railway, and 10 S.W. of Bristol. Clevedon is its post town. The village is situated on the declivity of a range of hills skirting the road from Bristol to Clevedon. On the summit of the hill above the village is Cadbury Castle, a double-ditched Roman camp. The soil is of various qualities, with a subsoil of limestone, which is extensively quarried. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £163, in the patron. of the Bishop of Worcester. The church, dedicated to St. Quiricus and Julietta, contains effigies of the Berkeley family, who resided at Tickenham Court, the ruins of which still exist. There is a National school for both sexes. The Plymouth Brethren have a chapel. Sir J. H. G. Smyth, Bart., is lord of the manor.

TICKENHURST, a hmlt. in the par. of Northbourne, hund. of Cornilo, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 3 miles S. of Sandwich.

TICKHILL, a par. and market town in the S. div. of Strafforth and Tickhill waps., West Riding co. York, 7 miles S. of Doncaster, and 4½ from Bawtry railway station. Rotherham is its post town. It is situated in a fertile valley, on the borders of Nottinghamshire, includes the tnshps. of Stancil, Wellingley, and Wilsick, and has the ruins of an Austin priory founded in the reign of Henry III. This manor was given by William the Conqueror to Roger de Buslis, who erected the castle, which with the honour came to King Stephen's brother, the Count d'Eu, and subsequently was held by the Viponts, John of Gaunt, &c., becoming again vested in the crown in the time of Henry IV. At the commencement of the Civil War, the castle, then considered a very strong fortress, was garrisoned for Charles I., but after a siege of two days was surrendered, and shortly after dismantled by order of parliament in 1646. The town consists of several broad streets, which intersect each other at right angles. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the corn-mills, and in malting, for which there are several extensive kilns. The population at the last census was 1,980. There is a market cross, erected in 1776. Tickhill was the birthplace of Thomas Milnes the sculptor. Manorial courts, leet and baron, are held annually. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £261. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains effigies of a knight and his lady, and an altar tomb of William de Estfield, the founder of the church, who died in 1386. The register dates from 1538. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum, besides almshouses for six poor persons. There are National and infant schools for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Independents have chapels. Market day is on Friday. A fair is held on the second Friday in October.

TICKLETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Eton, co. Salop, 2 miles S.E. of Church Stretton. The United Pack hounds are kennelled here.

TICKMACREVAN, a par. in the bar. of Lower Glenarm, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, including Glenarm, its post town. The parish extends along the shore of the Bay of Glenarm. The surface is mountainous, consisting of a productive soil with some bog and waste land. The town of Glenarm and Carnlough are within its limits. The village is much resorted to for sea-bathing. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Connor, val. £221, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected by the McDonnels in 1768, and was enlarged in 1822 by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, meeting-houses for Presbyterians and Wesleyans, and several public, private, and Sunday schools. The chief residence is Glenarm Castle. Limestone is largely exported, and iron ore, basalt, and coal are found. In this parish are the ruins of the old church, and of a monastic establishment, erected in 1465 by Robert Bisset.

TICKNALL, a par. in the hund. of Repton, co. Derby, 9 miles S. of Derby, its post town, and 4 N. of Church Gresley railway station. The village is situated on the road from Derby to Ashby-de-la-Zouch. Lime burning is carried on, and there are tramways for conveying the lime to various parts of the country. Market gardening, malting, and brewing are also carried on. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £250. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket, was rebuilt in 1842 at an outlay of £4,000, contributed chiefly by Sir G. Crewe, Bart. There are several charities, among which may be mentioned Charles Harpur's hospital, founded in 1771, for seven decayed housekeepers. There are an endowed school, founded in 1774 by Catharine Harpur, and rebuilt in 1825 by Sir G. Crewe, and a school for girls supported by Lady Crewe. The Wesleyans and Baptists have chapels. Sir J. H. Crewe, Bart., of Calke Abbey, is lord of the manor.

TICKTON-WITH-HULL-BRIDGE, a tnshp. in the par. and borough of St. John Beverley, East Riding co. York, 2 miles N.E. of Beverley, its post town. It is situated on the river Hull, and is chiefly agricultural. There are extensive linseed and bone-crushing steam mills at Hull-Bridge, and brick and tile kilns. The living is a cur. annexed to the perpet. cur. of Beverley Minster, in the dioc. of York. The church, dedicated to St. Paul, was erected in 1844. There is a National school for both sexes, at which a Sunday-school is also held. Tickton Hall and Tickton Grange are the principal residences.

TIDCOMBE, a quarter in the hund. of Tiverton, co. Devon.

TIDCOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Kinwardstone, co. Wilts, 7 miles S.W. of Hungerford. It includes the hmlt. of Fosbury. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £77, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. There is also the district church of Fosbury, the living of which is a perpet. cur. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes.

TIDDESLEY-HAY, a ext.-par. lib. in the E. div. of Cuttlestone hund., co. Stafford, 2 miles N.E. of Penkridge. This was formerly a royal chase, adjoining that of Cannock, but was granted by Elizabeth to the earls of Warwick and Leicester.

TIDDINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Albury, hund. of Bullingdon, co. Oxford, 4 miles S.W. of Thame, and 3 N.W. of Tetsworth. It is a station on the Oxford branch of the Great Western railway.

TIDDINGTON, a vil. in the par. of Alveston, co. Warwick, 1 mile N.E. of Stratford-on-Avon.

TIDENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Westbury, co. Gloucester, 2 miles N.E. of Chepstow, and 14 S.W. of Newnham. The village is situated at the extremity of the Forest of Dean, on the point between the rivers Wye and Severn, where Offa's Dyke ends. The par. includes the hmlts. of Sedbury, Bishton, Church End, Lancant, Straat, Wibdon, and Beachley. The Severn is here crossed by the Old Passage ferry, which forms the principal communication with South Wales. The living is a vic. with the cur. of St. Luke's annexed, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £441. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, or St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with a tower and six bells. There is also the district church of Beachley, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £16. The parochial charities produce about £22 per annum. There are three Church of England schools for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and the Independents a reading-room. The old Roman road, Akeman Street, crossed Sedbury in its course from Oldbury to Caerwent, and on the line of Offa's Dyke are several Roman and Danish camps, and the ruins of St. Tecla's chapel on a small rocky island, near the confluence of the rivers Wye and Severn. The Duke of Beaufort is lord of the manor.

TIDESWELL, a par., post and market town, in the hund. of High Peake, co. Derby, 3 miles N.W. of Great Rowsley, 7 N.W. of Bakewell, and 33 N.W. of Derby. It is situated in the moors on the road from Chesterfield to Manchester, and is watered by a rivulet which supplies the inhabitants with water. The par. includes the chplries. of Litton, Whestone, and Wormhill. It is a place of great antiquity, and was held by the crown in royal demesne at the time of the Domesday survey, but subsequently came to William Peveril, the Meverells, Cromwells, Eyres, &c., and belongs to the honour of Tutbury. It is said that the town derived its name from an ebbing well which still exists, but has long ceased to ebb. The land, comprising some of the most barren tracts in the county, is chiefly devoted to pasture. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the neighbouring cotton-mills, mining, weaving, and in agriculture. In the neighbourhood are Monsall Dale, Millers Dale, and Chee Tor. It is a polling place for the county elections, and a petty sessions town. A court leet and court baron occur twice a year. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £230, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is of the 14th century. The interior contains brasses and tombs, one of which is dated 1358, and a chancel screen. In 1829 the church was reseated, the old oak benches being destroyed. Efforts are now being made by the Rev. S. Andrew, the vicar, to restore this fine old church. Anciently there were chantry chapels in the transepts enclosed in carved oak screens. The old stalls in the chancel are much dilapidated. There is a district church at Wormhill, the living of which is a perpet. cur.* The parochial charities produce about £300 per annum, including an endowed grammar school, founded in 1560, and a National school.

The Independents, Wesleyans, Roman Catholics, and Primitive Methodists have chapels. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor. Market day is on Wednesday. Fairs are held on 24th March, 15th May, last Wednesday in July, second Wednesday in September, and 29th October for cattle, horses, and sheep.

TIDIFORD, a vil. and chplry. in the par. of St. Germans, co. Cornwall, 2 miles from St. Germans, on the Tidi, a branch of the river Lynher.

TIDMARSH, a par. in the hund. of Theale, co. Berks, 7 miles W. of Reading, its post town, and 1 mile S.W. of Pangbourne. The village is situated on a branch of the river Thames, near the Great Western railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £223. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, contains two old brasses. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum. The Park is the principal residence. J. Hopkins, Esq., is lord of the manor.

TIDMINGTON, a par. in the upper div. of Oswaldslow hund., co. Worcester, but locally in the Kington div. of Kington hund., co. Warwick, 1 mile S.E. of Shipston, its post town. The village is situated on the river Stour, and formed part of Tredington till 1720, when the rectory of the old parish was divided into three, forming the parishes of Tidmington, Shipston, and Tredington. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Shipston-upon-Stour, in the dioc. of Worcester. Tidmington Hall is the principal residence.

TIDPIT, a tythg. in the par. of St. Martin's, co. Wilts, 8 miles S.W. of Salisbury.

TIDWORTH, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Amesbury, co. Wilts, 2 miles S.W. of Ludgershall, and 8 from Amesbury, on a branch of the river Avon, near Chidbury Camp. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £266, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. The charities include Price's almshouses.

TIDWORTH, SOUTH, a par. in the hund. of Upper Andover, co. Hants, 8 miles N.W. of Andover, 3 S.W. of Ludgershall, and 15 from Marlborough, its post town. The par. includes the hmlt. of Hampshire Cross. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £379. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

TIERSHANAHAN, a vil. in the par. of Ballyheigo, bar. of Clanmaurice, co. Kerry, 15 miles N.W. of Tralee.

TIFFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Towcester, co. Northampton, 2½ miles N.E. of Towcester, its post town, and 3 S.W. of the Blisworth railway station. The village is situated on the old Roman Watling Street. Lord Southampton's hounds meet in this parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £275. The church is dedicated to St. John. There are some small charities. The Earl of Pomfret is lord of the manor.

TIGERTON, a vil. in the par. of Menmuir, co. Forfar, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Brechin, near Cruick Water.

TIKILLIN, a par. in the bar. of East Shelmaliere, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Wexford. The parish is traversed by the river Slaney, and includes the vil. of Castlebridge. The river is spanned by a bridge of American oak. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ferns, partly joined to Kilpatrick, and partly to Ardcolme. The church has long been in ruins. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this parish is united to that of Crossabeg. The principal seats are Percy Lodge, Killown, and Newtown Lodge. The remains of Deeps Castle are visible.

TILBERTHWAITE, a hmlt. in the par. of Hawkshead, co. Lancaster, 2 miles N.W. of Hawkshead-in-Yewdale, near Tilberthwaite Fells.

TILBROOK, a par. in the hund. of Stoddon, co. Bedford, 1½ mile N.W. of Kimbolton, its post town, and 8 miles E. of Higham-Ferrars. The village is situated in a valley. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £388. The church is dedicated to All Saints. Lord St. John is lord of the manor.

TILBURY, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Barstable, co. Essex, 3 miles N.E. of Gravesend, 5 E. of Grays, and 1 mile from the Low Street station, on the London, Tilbury, and Southend railway. It is situated in a marshy district on the bank of the Thames, opposite Gravesend. The South Essex hounds meet here. The village has an old seat of the Gossalyne family. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £558, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is an ancient structure, the tower of which was considerably damaged by the Dutch in the reign of Charles II. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a parochial school.

TILBURY-JUXTA-CLARE, a par. in the hund. of Hinckford, co. Essex, 4 miles N.W. of Castle-Hedingham. The living is a rect.* consolidated with that of Ovington.

TILBURY, WEST, a par. and small river port in the hund. of Barstable, co. Essex, 2 miles N.W. of East Tilbury, 16 S.E. of Romford, and 2 N.E. of the Tilbury railway station, in the adjoining parish of Chadwell. It is a steamboat station, and has steam-ferries to West Street, Gravesend, and Rosherville piers; also steam-communication with Southend, Sheerness, Margate, and Ramsgate, from the railway pier of the London, Tilbury, and Southend line. It is situated in a marshy district at the ferry over the Thames to Gravesend, a little above Hope Point. It is mentioned by Bede as Tillaburgh, and was the seat of the East Saxon diocese, founded by Bishop Cedda, or St. Chad, in the 7th century. It was selected by Henry VIII. as the site of a fort or blockhouse, and was strengthened by Elizabeth, who here harangued her troops in 1588, on the approach of the Armada. The fort was strengthened by Beckman for Charles II. in 1667, after the Dutch fleet had sailed up the Medway, and battered down the tower of East Tilbury church. There are still traces of Elizabeth's camp, the old water-gate and blockhouse, also barracks defended by large bastions, and a ditch covered by heavy batteries. It has a considerable garrison, and extensive military works are now in progress, both here and at East Tilbury. The village of West Tilbury is small, with a few new houses near the station for the accommodation of the railway officials. There is a mineral spring, and some holes or caves in the chalk called Danes' holes. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £558, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. James. The register dates from 1546. The living was once held by Archbishop Laud. There is an infant school.

TILDERSLEY. See TYLDESLEY, co. Lancaster.

TILEHURST, a par. in the hund. of Reading, co. Berks, 3 miles W. of Reading, its post town. The village is situated between the rivers Thames and Kennet. It formerly included the hmlt. of Theale, which has been constituted a separate par. by Act of Parliament. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure with a tower and seven bells. The interior contains a monument of Sir Peter Vanlore, who died in 1627, and some ancient brasses. The parochial charities produce about £37 per annum, besides almshouses for six widows of sixty years and upwards, belonging to the parishes of Burghfield and Tilehurst. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents have a chapel. Calcot House is the principal residence. Colonel Blagrave is lord of the manor.

TILEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Mintern Magna, co. Dorset, 2 miles N. of Cerne Abbas.

TILFORD, a tythg. in the par. of Farnham, co. Surrey, 3 miles S.E. of Farnham, on the river Wey, near the Bridge. It is joined with Culverlands.

TILGATE-FOREST, in the par. of Worth, hund. of Buttinghall, rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, 7 miles S.W. of East Grinstead. It is situated on the Brighton railway, and was the seat of Sugden, the lawyer. It forms part of St. Leonard's forest in the Weald.

TILL, a river of co. Northumberland, rises in the Cheviots, and after receiving the waters of the Glen, joins the Tweed at Tilmouth House.

TILLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Wem, Wem div. of North Bradford hund., co. Salop, 2 miles S.W. of Wem. It includes the hmlt. of Trench.

TILLEY DOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Appleshaw, co. Hants, 4 miles N.W. of Andover.

TILLICOULTRY, a par. in co. Clackmannan, Scotland. It comprises the vils. of Coalsnaughton and Devonside. The parish extends in length about 6 miles from S. to N., with a varying breadth of from 1 mile to 2½ miles, and is bounded by the Stirlingshire detached parish of Alva, by the Perthshire parishes of Blackford and Glevendon, and by the Clackmannanshire parishes of Dollar, Clackmannan, and Alloa. The surface is generally hilly and pastoral, comprising part of the Ochil hills; the greatest altitude reached being at Bencleuch, which rises 2,300 feet above sea-level. Coal and limestone abound and are extensively worked. Iron ore, granite, clay-slate, fire-brick clay, basalt, and mica also exist; and traces of copper, silver, lead, cobalt, arsenic, and sulphur are found. At Cuninghar is a Druid circle 60 feet in diameter, and traces of a fort at Castle Craig. The town is about 2 miles E. of Alva, and 9 N.E. of Stirling. It is connected by a branch railway with the Stirling and Dunfermline line at Alloa, and is situated on the river Devon, and on the road from Stirling to Kinross. It is the seat of an extensive woollen trade, and since 1821 the manufacture of shawls, plaids, and tartans has flourished. Several large mills have been erected, giving employment to many hands. There are branches of the Edinburgh and Glasgow bank, a savings-bank, and several institutions. The principal seats in the vicinity are Harvieston, Alva, Tillicoultry. This par. is in the presb. of Dunblane and synod of Perth and Stirling. The minister has a stipend of about £282. The parish church was erected in 1828. There are a Free church and United Presbyterian church, also Independent and Evangelical chapels; parochial, subscription, and other schools.

TILLINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Dengie, co. Essex, 14 miles S.E. of Maldon, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Burnham. The village is near the coast of the North Sea. The manor was given by Ethelbert, king of Kent, to the cathedral of St. Paul's. A large portion of the land was marsh, but is now well cultivated. The surface rises gradually from the marshes till it attains a considerable elevation. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £314, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has some old brasses. The register dates from 1562. The parochial charities produce £36 per annum, of which £20 go to Baker's almshouses. There is a National school. The Baptists have a chapel. The Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's are lords of the manor. Fairs are held on the 16th and 17th September.

TILLINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Rotherbridge, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 1 mile W. from Petworth, its post town. The village is on the main road to Midhurst, and is bounded on the S. by the Rother navigation. The parish is productive of fuller's-earth, and good building stone. The surface is hilly, and the soil fertile. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £740. The church was almost entirely rebuilt in 1837 by the late Earl of Egremont, and contains several monuments. The register dates from the reign of Elizabeth. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum, besides two almshouses for six persons, built from a bequest of the Styles family. There is a National school for both sexes. Lord Leconfield is lord of the manor. The late Rev. J. S. Clark, who wrote the "Life of Nelson," with whom he was at the battle of Trafalgar, was once rector of this parish.

TILLINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Burghill, hund. of Grimsworth, co. Hereford, 5 miles N.W. of Hereford, and 1½ mile N.W. of Burghill church.

TILLINGTON, an ext. par. place in the par. of St. Mary and St Chad, Stafford, S. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford, 1½ mile N.W. of Stafford.

TILMANSTONE, a par. in the hund. of Eastry, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 5 miles S.W. of Sandwich, its post town, and 7 N. of Dover. Prior to the Domesday survey this manor belonged to the see of Canterbury. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £196, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, contains several monuments. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The principal residence is Danes Court.

TILNEY ALL SAINTS, a par. in the hund. of Freebridge-Marsh-Land, co. Norfolk, 5 miles S.W. of Lynn, its post town, and 9 N.E. of Wisbeach. The village once formed a portion of the adjoining parish of Tilney Smeath. The soil is clay and sand, but generally fertile. The living is a vic.* annexed to that of Tilney St. Lawrence, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £280, in the patron. of Pembroke Hall, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a Norman structure, with a tower and six bells. The register dates from 1588. The parochial charities produce about £60 per annum. There is a National School for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

TILNEY-CUM-ISLINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Freebridge-Marsh-Land, co. Norfolk. See ISLINGTON.

TILNEY ST. LAWRENCE, a par. in the hund. of Freebridge-Marsh-Land, co. Norfolk, 6½ miles S.W. of Lynn, its post town. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Tilney All Saints, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was restored at the expense of Miss Mary Mann, of Lynn, in 1846. The parochial charities produce about £22 per annum. The Calvinistic and Primitive Methodists have chapels. The Queen is lady of the manor.

TILSHEAD, a par. in the hund. of Branch and Dole, co. Wilts, 10 miles S.E. of Amesbury, and 4 from South Lavington. Devizes is its post town. The village is on the road from Devizes to Salisbury, adjoining Salisbury Plain. There are several barrows in the Downs, which were once celebrated for great numbers of bustards; also an embankment designated Old Ditch. The soil is light and chalky. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £200. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket, has recently been restored and enlarged. There is a National School. Fossil sponge is found, and madrepores abound in the flint stones.

TILSOP, a tnshp. in the par. of Burford, hund. of Overs, co. Salop, 4 miles S.W. of Cleobury-Mortimer, on a branch of the river Teme.

TILSTOCK, a chplry. in the par. of Whitchurch, co. Salop, 2 miles S. of Whitchurch, its post town, and 7 from Wem. The village is situated on the road from Chester to Shrewsbury, and near the Ellesmere and Chester canal. The chplry. comprehends Whitchurch and Prees heaths, or common, crossed by the road from London to Birmingham. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £150, in the patron. of the Rector of Whitchurch. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, was rebuilt in 1834, by a bequest of Francis Earl of Bridgewater. The Wesleyans and Independents have chapels, and there is a National School for both sexes.

TILSTON, a par. in the higher div. of Broxton hund., co. Chester, 3 miles N. of Malpas, its post town, and 7 S. of Tattenhall. It comprises the tnshps. of Carden, Grafton, Horton, and Stretton. It is a meet for the Cheshire hounds. The Chester canal passes through the parish close to the village. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £333. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is old, and contains tablets to the Leche family. The parochial charities produce about £21 per annum, of which £16 go to the school. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels; a Sunday-school being held at the latter.

TILSTONE-FEARNALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Bunbury, first div. of Eddisbury hund., co. Chester, 2½ miles S.E. of Tarporley, its post town, and 1 mile N. of Bunbury, on the Crewe railway and Birmingham canal. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £90. The church, dedicated to St. Jude, was built in 1836, at an expense of £1,800, defrayed by J. Tolemache, Esq., who is lord of the manor, and principal landowner. The Hall is the principal residence.

TILSWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Manshead, co.

Bedford, 3½ miles N.W. of Dunstable, its post town. The village is near the ancient Watling Street. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £47. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains some old tombs and effigies. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. The executors of the late Sir E. P. Turner, Bart., are lords of the manor.

TILT, a stream co. Perth, Scotland, rises in Loch Tilt, and joins the Garry, near Blair Atholl.

TILTON, a par. in the hund. of East Goscote, co. Leicester, 11 miles E. of Leicester, its post town, and 3 miles N.E. of Billesdon. The par. includes the tnshps. of Halstead, Whatborough, and Marefield. There are traces of a Roman station at Howbank-hill. The Cottesmore hounds meet in this parish. Here was a hospital which Sir W. Burdett annexed to Burton-Lazars, in the reign of Henry II. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, was restored in 1854. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

TILTS, a hmlt. in the par. of Doncaster, N. div. of Strafforth wap., West Riding co. York, 3 miles N. of Doncaster. It is joined with Langthwaite.

TILTY, or TILTY ABBEY, a par. in the hund. of Dunmow, co. Essex, 3½ miles N.W. of Dunmow, its post town, and 3 miles S.W. of Thaxted. The village is on the river Chelmer. It was anciently called Tileteia, and had a White Abbey, founded in 1153, by Maurice Fitz-Jeffery, whose revenue was valued at £177 9*s.* 4*d., and the site given to the Audleys at the Dissolution. The ruins still remain near the church. The living is a don. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £100. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, once formed part of the abbey. It has an E. window, several carved stalls, and three brasses, bearing date from 1520.

TIMAHOE, a par. in the bar. of Clane, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Robertstown. Naas is its post town. The surface is boggy. The parish is crossed by the road from Kilcock to Kildare, and by the Grand canal. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kildare, val. with Ballynefagh, £300, in the patron. of the crown. There is no church, the Protestants attending divine worship at Ballynefagh. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this parish is united to that of Clane. There are three private schools.

TIMAHOE, a post-office vil. in the bar. of Cullenagh, Queen's co., prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 7 miles S.S.E. of Maryborough. It is situated on the road from Stradbally to Ballinakill. In the Roman Catholic arrangement the parish is united to that of Stradbally. There are a public school and a police station. This village derives its name from St. Mochoe, who founded a monastery here called Teach-Mochoe, of which there are traces. In 1642 General Preston was defeated here by Monk. Here are the ruins of Crosby Castle. Fairs are held on 5th April, 3rd July, and 18th October.

TIMBERLAND, a par. in the first div. of Langoe wap., parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 10 miles N.E. of Sleaford, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Kirkstead railway station. The par. contains the hmlts. of Martin and Thorpe Tilney. The village has navigation to the Witham. An Act was passed in 1839 for the more effectual drainage of the fen-lands. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £216. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. The chancel was re-erected in 1838. The register dates from 1565. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum, which go towards the support of the National school. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

TIMBERSCOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Carhampton, co. Somerset, 2½ miles S.W. of Dunster, its post town, and 5½ S. of Minehead. The village is situated in a valley, and is traversed by the turnpike road from Dunster to Dulverton. The subsoil consists of red sandstone and limestone, which are quarried. There are two chalybeate springs. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £170, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael and All Angels, is old, with a tower rebuilt in 1714, at the expense of Richard Elsworth, Esq., containing a clock and five bells. The interior contains a carved screen and some stained-glass windows. The register dates from 1656. The parochial charities produce about £197 per annum, of which £187 is the bequest of Richard Elsworth, left in 1714 for founding a school and two scholarships at Balliol College, Oxon, but the school-house was not built till 1824. A revel is held on the Sunday prior to the 10th October.

TIMBERTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Chirbury, co. Salop, 2 miles E. of Montgomery, near Offa's Dyke.

TIMBLE, GREAT, a tnshp. in the par of Fewston, lower div. of Claro wap., West Riding co. York, 5½ miles N.W. of Otley. The village is on the river Washburn. The tnshp. includes the hmlts. of Gillbeck and White Cragg. The soil is clayey, with a subsoil of clay and rock. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor.

TIMBLE, LITTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Fewston, West Riding co. York, near Great Timble.

TIMOGUE, a par. in the bar. of Stradbally, Queen's co., prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.S.W. of Stradbally, its post town. It is crossed by the road from Stradbally to Ballynakill, and is traversed by the river Straid. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. £119. In the Roman Catholic arrangement it is united to Stradbally. There is a National school. Timogue House is the principal residence.

TIMOLEAGUE, a par., post, and market town in the bars. of East Carberry and Ibane, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles E.N.E. of Clonakilty, and 193 from Dublin. The surface consists of productive soil. The parish is crossed by the road from Courtmacsherry to Clonakilty, and by the river Arigadeen, which falls into Courtmacsherry Bay. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ross, val. £254, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1810, by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, three public and two private schools, and a Sunday-school. The town contains a police station, dispensary, and indigent housekeepers' society. The chief trade is in agricultural produce, but weaving is also carried on. Here are the ruins of a Franciscan abbey founded by the McCarthys in 1302, the remains of O'Shaughnessy's Castle, which was destroyed by Lord Forbes in 1642, the ruins of a castle built by the Morils in 1206, and the ruins of a lepers' hospital. Market day is on Thursday. Fairs are held on the 28th March, 5th July, 21st August, and 6th December.

TIMOLIN, a par. in the bar. of East Narragh, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Ballitore is its post town. The parish is crossed by the road from Dublin to Carlow, and is traversed by the river Griese. It includes the vil. of Ballytore. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with four others, £272, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, a Friends' meeting-house, two public and three private schools. The principal residence is Griesemount. This place derives its name from an abbey founded by St. Moling of Ferns, and which had a castle attached, burnt by Lord Narragh in the time of King John. Limestone and sandstone are quarried. Fairs are held on Easter Monday and 28th June.

TIMOOLE, a par. in the bar. of Skreen, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.S.W. of Duleek. The river Nany Water traverses the interior. The living is joined to Duleek [which see]. The principal seat is Guilliamstown.

TIMPERLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Bowdon, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 1½ mile N.E. of Altrincham, its post town, and 1 W. of the Timperley station on the Manchester, South Junction, and Altrincham line of railway. The village is on the Bridgewater canal. There are market gardens and a stone quarry. The soil is chiefly clay, with a subsoil of marl. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £200, in the patron. of trustees. The church, dedicated to Christ, is modern, with a painted E. window by Wailes of Newcastle. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. There are an endowed school for boys, and a National school for girls, including infants, and at which a Sunday-school is also held. The Wesleyans have a chapel. Ridings Hall and Pickering Lodge are the principal residences.

TIMSBURY, a par. in the hund. of King's-Sombourn, co. Hants, 3 miles N. of Romsey, its railway station and post town, and 7 from Stockbridge. The village is on the Andover canal, which has a wharf here, and on the river Test. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £64. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

TIMSBURY, a par. in the hund. of Chew, co. Somerset, 8 miles S.W. of Bath station and its post town, and 7 S. of Keynsham railway station. The village is on the road between Bath and Wells, and near the Somerset coal canal, which commences at the south-western extremity of the parish. There are several coal-pits in the vicinity. The soil consists of rich loam, and is favourable to the growth of elm and ash timber. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £389, in the patron. of Balliol College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1825. There are a National school for both sexes, and a Sunday-school. The Independents, Baptists, and Wesleyans have chapels.

TIMWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Decuman, co. Somerset, 2 miles from Watchet.

TIMWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Thedwestry, co. Suffolk, 4 miles N.E. of Bury St. Edmund's, its post town. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Ingham, in the dioc. of Ely. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum.

TINAHELY. See TINEHELY, co. Wicklow.

TINCLETON, a par. in the hund. of Piddletown, co. Dorset, 5 miles E. of Dorset, its post town, and 3 N.E. of Moreton railway station. The village is on the river Frome. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £92. The church, dedicated to St. John, was erected in 1851 near the site of the old one, and contains tombs of the Baynards of Cliff. The register dates from 1610. There is a National school, supported by C. Porcher, Esq. Cliff House is the principal residence.

TINDALE, an extensive district of the Tyne valley, southern div. co. Northumberland, divided into four wards—East, North-East, North-West, and South, or Hexham.

TINEHELY, a post and market vil. in the par. of Kilcommon, bar. of Ballinacor, co. Wicklow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 24 miles S.W. of Wicklow, and 53 from Dublin. It is a station on the Shillelagh branch of the Dublin, Wicklow, and Wexford railway. It is situated beneath the Croghan mountains, on the river Greenisland, which is here crossed by a bridge. The village contains a police station and a dispensary. The manufacture of soap is carried on. The Wesleyans hold their meetings in the sessions room, and there is a public school. The principal residences are Town View and Ballicionangue. This town, which formerly belonged to the Earl of Stafford, but now to Earl Fitzwilliam, was destroyed by fire in 1798, and was soon afterwards rebuilt. Here are the ruins called Black Tom's Cellars, supposed to be the remains of the mansion of the Earl of Stafford. Market day is Wednesday. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday in January, 7th February, third Wednesday in March, second Wednesday in April, 8th May, 4th June, Wednesday after 24th June, third Wednesday in July, 7th August, first Wednesday in September, Wednesday after Michaelmas, 7th November, and third Wednesday in December.

TINGEWICK, a par. in the hund. of Buckingham, co. Bucks, 2¾ miles S.W. of Buckingham, its post town. The village was formerly a market town, granted in 1246 to the Abbey de Monte Rothomago, in Normandy, to which the manor had previously been given by the Finmores. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £359, in the patron. of New College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower, said to have been built by William of Wykeham, a brass to Erasmus Williams, once rector, bearing date 1608, and a stone over the central window in the S. battlement, bearing a curious inscription. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum. There are a National and Sunday-school.

TINGLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of West Ardsley, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N.W. of Wakefield. It is a station on the Gildersome branch of the Great Northern railway.

TINGRITH, a par. in the hund. of Manshead, co. Bedford, 4 miles S.E. of Woburn, its post town. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £176. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, contains a brass of R. Hogeson, bearing date 1611. It has recently undergone extensive alterations. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. The Misses Trevor are ladies of the manor and sole landowners.

TINGWALL, WHITENESS, and WEESDALE, a par. in the Mainland-of-Orkney, Orkney Islands, coast of Scotland. It comprises the vil. of Scalloway, and the islands of Linga, Oxna, and Irondray, lying betwixt Wadbuster, Laxforth, and Deal Voes on the E., and Weesdale, Stromness, and Ustaness Voes on the W. The parish extends in length from 18 to 20 miles, with an extreme breadth of 10 miles. It is so much indented by the voes, that no portion of it is more than two miles distant from the sea. The surface is irregular and hilly, but much of it has been reclaimed and cultivated. In the straths limestone is abundant. The village of Tingwall is about 4 miles N.W. of Lerwick. This par. is in the presb. of Lerwick and synod of Shetland. The stipend of the minister is about £263. There are two parish churches—viz., at Tingwall and Whiteness; the former was erected in 1788, and the latter in 1837. There is an Independent chapel at Scalloway, at which place a church was erected in 1842. At Weesdale, Whiteness, and Scalloway are Society's schools, and an Assembly's school at Tronday.

TINHEAD, a tythg. in the par. of Edington, co. Wilts, 4 miles N.E. of Westbury, and 1 mile N. of Edington.

TINNAHINCH, a bar., Queen's co., prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It contains the pars. of Castlebrack, Kilmanman, Rearymore, and Rosenallis.

TINNAHINCH, a vil. in the bar. of Lower St. Mullin's, co. Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is situated on the river Barrow, and is joined with Graiguenamanagh by a bridge. Here are the ruins of St. Michael's church and well, and the remains of Butler's Castle.

TINNAHINCH, a hmlt. in the par. of Rearymore, bar. of Tinnahinch, Queen's co., prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles E. of Clonaslees, near the bridge over the river Glenbarrow.

TINSLEY, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Rotherham, S. div. of Strafforth wap., West Riding co. York, 2½ miles S.W. of Rotherham, its post town, and 3½ N.E. of Sheffield. The village, which is of recent origin, is near the North Midland and Sheffield railways, and on the Sheffield and Rotherham canal, which joins the river Don a little below the village. Here are extensive collieries and steel rolling mills, and slate of an inferior quality is quarried. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £134. The church, dedicated to St. Laurence, is old, and was enlarged in 1838. It contains several old tablets and brasses. There are schools for both sexes, principally supported by Earl Fitzwilliam, who is lord of the manor.

TINTAGEL, or DUNDAGELL, a par. in the hund. of Lesnewth, co. Cornwall, 3 miles W. of Boscastle, its post town, and 6 N.W. of Camelford. The parish is situated near Tintagel Head and Creek on the Bristol Channel, by which it is bounded on the N. It comprises about 4,000 acres, and includes the disfranchised borough of Bossiney, and the vils. of Oldborough and Trevena. On the cliffs are traces of King Arthur's Castle, which came to the crown and was the occasional residence of several of the Norman kings, but subsequently became a state prison for the Duchy of Cornwall. Near the shore are slate quarries, in which are found those polygonal crystals called "Cornish diamonds." The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £220, in the patron. of the dean and canons of Windsor. The church, dedicated to St. Symphorian, has several stained windows, and was thoroughly restored in 1854. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans, Association Methodists, and Bible Christians have chapels. The Prince of Wales, as Duke of Cornwall, is lord of the manor. There were formerly two chapels-of-ease in the parish. A fair for cattle occurs at Trevena on the Monday following the 18th October.

TINTERN, a par. in the bar. of Shelburne, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N. of Fethard, its post town. The surface, which is boggy, in parts consists of productive soil. The parish is crossed by the road from Wexford to Duncannon Fort, and is traversed on the N.E. by the river Blackwater. It includes part of the harbour of Bannow Bay. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with Owenduff, £92. The church was built in 1818, partly by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this parish is the head of a union. There are public and private schools, and a police station. The chief residences are Tintern and Thorld, or Tallough. Here are the ruins of Tintern Castle, founded in 1200 by William Earl of Pembroke, the tower of which serves as a sea-mark. In the old chapel adjoining the castle is a monument to Sir Anthony Colclough, captain of the Band of Gentlemen Pensioners in the reign of Henry VIII. Fairs are held on 24th March, 12th May, 2nd October, and 11th November.

TINTERN ABBEY, a ruin in the par. of Chapel Hill, co. Monmouth, 3½ miles N. of Chepstow. See CHAPEL HILL.

TINTERN PARVA, a par. in the upper div. of Ragland hund., co. Monmouth, 4½ miles N. of Chepstow, and 8 from Monmouth. The village is on the river Wye, near Tintern Abbey. There are iron works. The living is a rect. in the dioc of Llandaff, val. £162. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is paved with fragments of monumental flagstones from Tintern Abbey. The parochial charities produce about £19 per annum.

TINTINHULL, a hund., co. Somerset, contains the pars. of Ilchester, Kingston, Montacute, Northover, Stoke-under-Hamdon, Thorne-Coffin, and Tintinhull, comprising 7,450 acres.

TINTINHULL, a par. in the hund. of the same name, co. Somerset, 4½ miles from Yeovil, its post town, and 2½ S.W. of Ilchester. The village is on the navigable river Ivil, and the ancient Fosse Way. The soil is clayey, with a subsoil of clay. Stock-Dennis, now a tything in this parish, was anciently populous. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £90. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, contains a brass of a priest bearing date 1464. General Arbuthnot is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

TINTWISTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Mottram-in-Longdendale, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 10 miles N.E. from Stockport, its post town. It is a station on the Sheffield and Manchester railway, and is situated on the western bank of the river Etherow, and is divided into the hmlts. of Tintwistle, Micklehurst, Arnfield, and Woodhead. The village is lighted with gas. There are cotton and woollen manufactories, and stone quarries. Here is situated the reservoir containing 400,000 cubic yards, for the supply of water to Manchester, 13 miles distant. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £200, in the patron. of trustees. The church, dedicated to Christ, is modern. There are National and British schools for both sexes, and a Sunday-school, in which the Tintwistle mechanics' institute is held, besides several other societies. The Independents and Wesleyans have chapels.

TINWALD, a par. in the district of Nithsdale, co. Dumfries, Scotland. It contains the vils. of Amisfield, Kirkland, and Townland, and part of the ancient par. of Trailflat. It extends in length about 5½ miles from S. to N., with an extreme breadth of 4½ miles, and is bounded by Kirkmahoe, Kirkmichael, Lochmaben, Torthorwald, and Dumfries. The surface is moderately flat, and was formerly wooded. Its northern part is watered by the river Ae. The prevailing rocks are greywacke and greywacke-slate. On Barshall Hill is a British fort. The parish is traversed by the road from Dumfries to Moffat. The village, which is about 4 miles N. of Dumfries, is situated on the Ae and Lochar Waters, and on the old Roman way to Brunswark. Paterson, the projector of the banks of England and Scotland, and of the Darien expedition, was born at Skipmire Farm in 1660. This par. is in the presb. and synod of Dumfries. The stipend of the minister is about £250. The parish church was erected in 1763. There are two parochial schools. The principal seats are Tinwald House, Amisfield, and Glenae.

TINWELL, or TYNWELL, a par. in the hund. of East, co. Rutland, 2 miles S.W. of Stamford railway station, its post town, and 91 from London. The village is at the confluence of the rivers Chater and Welland, which separate the county of Rutland from those of Northampton and Lincoln. The par. includes the hmlt. of Ingthorpe. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £303. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains tombs of the Cecils and of Hermanus Rainerus. There is a National school built in 1834, with a small endowment. The Marquis of Exeter is lord of the manor.

TIPNOAK, a hund., co. Sussex, contains the pars. of Albourne, Henfield, and Woodmancote, comprising an area of 9,090 acres.

TIPPEL, a stream of co. Northumberland, rises in Scots Coulthard Waste, and joins the South Tyne.

TIPPER, a par. in the bar. of North Naas, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles S.E. of Naas, its post town. It is crossed by the road from Naas to Blessington. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Rathmore, £317, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a public and two private schools.

TIPPERARY, an inland co. in the prov. of Munster, Ireland, is bounded N. by Galway and King's co., E. by King's co., Queen's co., and Kilkenny, S. by Waterford, and W. by Cork, Limerick, Clare, and Galway. It lies between 52° 12′ and 53° 9′ N. lat. and 7° 20′ and 8° 26′ W. long. Its greatest length from N. to S. is 70 miles, and from E. to W. 40 miles. The area is 1,659 square miles, or 1,061,731 acres, of which 843,887 are arable, 178,183 uncultivated, 23,779 under continuous plantations, 2,359 in towns, and 13,523 under water. The population in 1841 was 435,553, in 1851 it was 331,567, and in 1861 it had fallen to 249,106. The poor-law valuation in 1851 was £618,148, and the general valuation in 1861 was £670,525. The number of persons from this county who emigrated from Irish ports between May, 1851, and December, 1865, with the expressed intention of not returning, was 110,248, or 33 per cent. of the population at the former date. Previous to the English conquest the county seems to have been divided into the kingdoms of Thomond, or North Munster, and Desmond, or South Munster, the princes of each having alternately paramount rule over Munster. On the English invasion in 1172 Henry II., in person, received the submission of the native chiefs, and summoned a council at Cashel, where his authority was recognised by princes and prelates, but on his departure this submission was recalled, and the O'Briens, of Thomond, for a time successfully resisted Strongbow. In 1185 Theobald Walker, a follower of Prince John, obtained a grant of the lands near the Shannon, with the title of Chief Butler of Ireland, which became hereditary, and whence the family derives its name. In 1210 Tipperary was erected into a county by King John. In 1328 the sixth Chief Butler was created Earl of Ormond, and Edward III. granted to his son and successor, on his marriage with Elizabeth Bohun, granddaughter of Edward I., the royal privileges of the entire county, which were preserved to the family till the commencement of the last century. Frequent contests took place between the Butlers and the Geraldines, in the course of which the cathedral of Cashel was burned by the Earl of Kildare. The county was the scene of important military movements during the civil war of 1641, almost every stronghold having been at first seized by the Irish party, and subsequently reduced by Cromwell, when Clonmel, Cashel, and other places suffered severely. In the Jacobite wars Clonmel was abandoned by the Irish on the advance of William, after his victory at the Boyne in 1690.—The surface is varied, comprising large tracts of level country intersected by ranges of hills. The Devil's Bit range, separated by a narrow defile at Roscrea from the Slieve Bloom mountains, extends in a continuous line across the county in a S.W. direction to the neighbourhood of Borrisoleigh, and then branch into the Bilboa mountains to the S., and the Keeper mountains towards Newport, where they are immediately connected with the Slieve Phelim mountains of Limerick. The Devil's Bit range has in no place a basis of more than 4 miles, and generally reaches an altitude of 1,300 to 1,600 feet, but Keeper mountain rises to 2,278 feet, and Moher Slieve of the same group to 1,783 feet. The Slievenamuck mountains or Tipperary hills run in a narrow ridge from Limerick to the S. of Tipperary town, reaching an elevation of only 1,215 feet at their highest point. The Galtees extend from the S.E. corner of Limerick to the valley of the Suir, near Cahir, with a basis breadth of 5 miles. They rise steeply, and at places inaccessibly, on the N. side, but slope gently on the S. Their highest summit near Limerick county is 3,015 feet, while at other points they reach 2,636, 2,588, 2,378, 2,166, and 1,969 respectively. The Knockmiledown range runs parallel to the Galtees, and form the boundary with Waterford, to which county they chiefly belong, but they here rise to 2,150 feet. Along the E. of the county is a small group, of which Slievenaman, 2,364 feet high, is the most important point. The plain of Ormond, stretching from the Devil's Bit mountains to Lough Derg, is rich, and is abundantly watered by the Shannon and its tributaries, the most important being the Brosna, Nenagh, and Mulkear. The valley of the Suir, embracing the central and southern portions of the county, and forming the Golden Vale, is fertile, and is drained by that river with its numerous affluents, while the eastern districts are watered by the King's and Munster rivers flowing into the Nore. The lakes of the county are numerous, but small and unimportant, except Lough Derg, which separates it from Galway and Clare. The only communications by water are the Shannon and the Suir, which latter is navigable for large barges to Clonmel. The Great Southern and Western railway enters near Borris-in-Ossory, and passes Thurles and Tipperary, communicating with Dublin on the N. and Cork City on the S., and having a branch line by Roscrea and Nenagh, to Limerick city. The Waterford and Limerick railway runs through the S. of the county, passing Clonmel and Tipperary. The roads are numerous, and are kept in excellent order.—The level parts of the county belong to the great limestone field of Ireland. On the N. side of the Devil's Bit mountains, and about the Keeper and Bilboa groups, yellow sandstone and sandstone conglomerate prevail, and narrow belts of this formation are met with among the mountains in the S. and E. A considerable portion of the Galtees, Slievenamuck, and the S. side of the Devil's Bit ranges, and the greater part of the Keeper and Bilboa groups, consist of clay slate, graywacke, and graywacke slate; and a formation of old conglomerate, with red, purple, and grey clay slate prevails extensively in the Knockmiledown range, and is much met with among the Galtees and Slievenamuck. Coal is found on the eastern border, and thence to within a few miles of Cashel, with a small outlying district at Cashel, and one at Clonmel. The coal is of the nature of anthracite, or blind coal, and is an extension of the Kilkenny field. Copper is found at Hollyford, and zinc and lead mixed with silver at Silvermines and Shallee. The sandstone of Slievenamuck yields excellent flags, and from the Arra hills, near Lough Derg, slates are quarried equal to those of North Wales. The climate is temperate and healthy. The soil in the level parts is fertile, particularly in the Golden Vale, which is of calcareous loam, and in the district to the N. of the Devil's Bit range, comprising the baronies of Upper and Lower Ormond. Agriculture is principally attended to, but the importation of foreign corn has caused a change in this particular, while the rearing of cattle, and more particularly of sheep, has increased. In 1847, 319,334 acres were under crops, and in 1865 only 297,551 acres. The condition of the peasantry, though not satisfactory, has been considerably improved. Drainage has been carried out in many districts, and a better system of farming is adopted. The love of the soil, inherent in all Irishmen, seems specially so in the people of this county, and in 1760, and for many subsequent years, the Whiteboy disturbances, arising out of agrarian disputes, gave considerable annoyance to landowners, and so recently as 1862 the murder of two landlords is to be attributed to the same cause.—The county is partly in the dioceses of Lismore, Emly, and Killaloe, but chiefly in that of Cashel. In the Roman Catholic distribution it belongs principally to the archdiocese of Cashel and diocese of Emly, but also to the dioceses of Waterford and Lismore, and that of Killaloe. Of the population in 1861, 12,800, or 5·1 per cent., were members of the Established Church; 234,881, or 94·3 per cent., were Roman Catholics; and 1,425, or 0·6 per cent., belonged to other Christian denominations. The county returns four members to parliament; two for the county at large, constituency in 1864, 8,996; and one each for the boroughs of Cashel and Clonmel, constituencies respectively in 1866, 148 and 339. It is divided for civil purposes into North Riding and South Riding, the former consisting of the baronies of Ormond, Lower and Upper, Owney and Arra, Ikerrin, Eliogarty, and Upper Kilnamanagh; the latter of Slievardagh, Lower Kilnamanagh, Middlethird, Clanwilliam, East and West Offa and Iffa; and contains 193 parishes. The civil government is intrusted to a lieutenant and custos, a high sheriff, 31 deputy lieutenants, 6 resident and about 206 local magistrates. It belongs to the Leinster circuit. The assizes for the north riding are held at Nenagh, and for the south riding at Clonmel. Sessions are also held at Roscrea, Thurles, Carrick-on-Suir, Cashel, Clogheen, New Birmingham, Newport, Templemore, and Tipperary. The county belongs to the Cork, or south-western military district, and contains twelve military stations. It is divided into 9 Poor-law Unions, and there are 19 market towns. In 1863 there were 271 National schools, attended by 17,104 male and 18,046 female children, besides Church Education, private, and other schools. The principal seats in the county are, Cahir Castle, Earl of Glengall; Knocklofty, Earl of Donoughmore; Rathronan, Lord Gough; Dundrum, Lord Hawarden; Shanbally, Lord Lismore; Laughton, Lord Bloomfield; Kilboy, Lord Dunalley; Thomastown, Vicomte Chabot, besides numerous mansions of the resident gentry.—The county is rich in antiquities, chiefly of the mediæval period, the most interesting being those of Cashel, Roscrea, and Golden, with Holy Cross Abbey, a specimen of the Pointed style of architecture. Here are also the stalactite caverns, called the Mitchelstown Caves.

TIPPERARY, a par. and market town in the bar. of Clanwilliam, co. Tipperary, South Riding, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 23 miles N.W. from Clonmel, 56 N.W. from Waterford, and 27 S.E. from Limerick. It is situated on the river Arra, an affluent of the Suir, and has stations on the Great Southern and Western and the Waterford and Limerick railways. Its population in 1851 was 6,829, exclusive of 2,750 in the union and auxiliary workhouses which were in the town, but had fallen in 1861 to 5,872, inhabiting 975 houses. The town is old, and its name is said to be a corruption of Tipra-Rae, signifying "the wells of the plains." A castle was built here by King John, and a monastery for Augustinian friars, founded by Henry III., added to the importance of the place. The town was burned in 1329 by one of the O'Briens, but was quickly rebuilt. It is situated at the base of the Slievenamuck mountains, and almost in the centre of the Golden Vale, and, being on the direct road from Clonmel to Limerick, it is advantageously placed for improvement. It consists of one principal street, with smaller ones branching off at right angles, has lately been considerably improved, and is well lighted with gas. The care of it is vested in 21 town commissioners, including the chairman. It contains a handsome church, Roman Catholic chapel, and Presbyterian and Methodist meeting-houses. Quarter and petty sessions are held. A considerable business is done in corn, flour, and butter, and agricultural produce generally, which is sent for shipment to Waterford and Limerick. Thursdays and Saturdays are market days. Fairs are held on 5th April, 24th June, 10th October, 11th December, and on the second Tuesday of the other months in each year. The par. is in the dioc. of Cashel, and has a net income of £536, the patronage being vested in the bishop. The Poor-law Union extends over 179,988 acres, with a population in 1861 of 47,298.

TIPPERKERIN, a par. in the bar. of South Naas, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.W. of Ballymore-Eustace. The surface is hilly, including the mountain Sliveroe, which attains an elevation of 1,094 feet. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin, and in the patron. of the bishop. There are Danish raths at Sliveroe, Bishop's Hill, and Donode.

TIPPERLIN, a quondam vil. in the par. of St. Cuthbert, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, a quarter of a mile W. of Morningside.

TIPTON, or TIBBINGTON, a par. and manufacturing and mining district in the hund. of South Offlow, co. Stafford, 2 miles N. of Dudley, 9 N.W. of Birmingham, and 4¼ S.E. of Wolverhampton. The par. comprises several hmlts., Dudley Port, part of Greatbridge, Gospel Oak, Horseley Heath, Ocker Hill, Princes-end, Tipton, and Toll End. Its acreage is 3,020, and its population in 1861 was 28,870, being an increase of 3,998 since 1851. The return for 1861 includes 161 persons living in boats. The number of houses was 6,085. The prosperity of the parish is due to its minerals, coal and iron. Many mines are at work to supply the blast furnaces that abound in and around the parish. Large iron-works and foundries are engaged in working the iron. The manufactures are mostly heavy, as cables, anchors, pit chains, railway iron-work, engine-boilers, sheet, bar, and nail-rod iron, fenders and fire-irons, stove grates, spouts, pipes, palisades, &c. There are also brick and tile, nail, and file works, breweries, cement works, &c. Among the larger establishments may be mentioned those of the Bloomfield ironworks, the Staffordshire Anchor-Testing Company, the Summerhill ironworks, the Gospel Oak works, and the Horseley Heath works. The parish is a network of canals, and has water communication in all directions. Three lines of railway also facilitate its trade, viz., the Birmingham, Wolverhampton, and Wednesbury (London and North-Western), with four stations within the parish; the South Staffordshire (London and North-Western), one station; and the West Midland (Great Western), with two stations. The Birmingham and Dudley road traverses the parish, and is its main thoroughfare: at Dudley Port the road is spanned by the Royal Aqueduct, erected in 1836. The principal roads are lighted with gas, supplied from the Birmingham and South Staffordshire gasworks, Swan Village. The water comes from Lichfield, but there is a reservoir near Dudley. A board of health is established in the parish. The police-station and offices, erected 1864, are on Horseley Heath, near the parish church. Athletic sports are much in favour at Tipton, and there are footraces at the Britannia grounds almost weekly. The wake is held in August. Tipton is in the dioc. of Lichfield and archdeaconry of Stafford, and has four churches. St. Martin, the mother church, is val. £419; St. Paul's, val. £300, in the patron. of the incumbent of St. Martin's; St. John's, val. £40, in the patron. of the bishop; St. Mark's, val. £150. The Independents, Baptists, Methodist New Connexion, Primitive Methodists, and Wesleyans, have chapels. There are several National and other day and Sunday schools.

TIPTON, a vil. and chplry. in the par. of Ottery St. Mary, co. Devon, 2 miles S. of Ottery, on the river Otter.

TIRANASCRAGH, a par. in the bar. of Longford, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles S.S.W. of Eyrecourt. The surface consists of good land, with a small portion of bog. The parish is traversed by the river Shannon. The living is a rect. joined to Dononaughta. The principal residence is Ormond-view.

TIRANNY, a bar. in co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It contains Middleton, with portions of the pars. of Derrynoose, Eglish, Keady, and Tynan.

TIRAWLEY, a bar. in co. Mayo, Ireland, containing Ballina, Ballycastle, and the pars. of Addergoole, Ardagh, Ballynahaglish, Ballysakeery, Crossmolina, Doonfeeny, Kilbelfad, Kilbride, Kilcummin, Kilfian, Killala, Lackan, Moygawnagh, Rathreagh, Templemurry, and part of Kilmoremoy.

TIREE, or TYREE, an island belonging to the Argyleshire Hebrides, coast of Scotland, 2 miles S.W. of Coll, and 18 N.W. of Iona. It extends in length about 12 miles, with a mean breadth of 4 miles. The coast is indented with several rocky bays, but the surface is flat, with the exception of some hills towards the N., which rise from 200 to 300 feet. Reef plain is an expanse of verdure lying scarcely 12 feet above high water-mark, and called in Gaelic, Rioghachd har fo thuin, or, "the land below the waves." To the N.E. is a ferry to Gunna and Coll, and about 4 miles W. is Sceir mhor, or Duskere rock, where seals are caught. The island is watered by numerous streams, which form upwards of 20 fresh-water lochs, covering an area of about 600 acres. Game, rabbits, and sea-fowl are in abundance, the last especially at Ceanmharra cliffs, where there are many caves. On the summit of the cliff is St. Patrick's temple, measuring 26 feet by 11 feet, besides which are duns or forts, and ruined chapels. The prevailing rock is gneiss, with pink and green marble. The island is one of the most fertile of the Hebrides, but destitute of wood, and occasionally subjected to strong westerly winds. Many of its inhabitants are engaged in the rearing of cattle, and in poultry breeding, and till recently in the manufacture of kelp. The Duke of Argyle is sole landowner. Fairs occur on the Wednesday in May prior to Mull, on the Monday in August prior to Mull, and on the Wednesday in October prior to Mull.

TIRERAGH, a bar. in co. Sligo, Ireland, containing Ardnaree, Dromore-West, and the pars. of Castleconnor, Dromard, Casky, Kilglass, Kilmacshalgan, Skreen, Templeboy, and parts of Kilmoremoy.

TIRERILL, a bar. in co. Sligo, Ireland, containing Ballinafad, Collooney, Riverstoun, and the pars. of Aghanagh, Ballynakill, Ballysamaghan, Drumcolumb, Killadoon, Killerry, Kilmacallan, Kilmactranny, Kilross, Shancough, and Tawnagh, and part of Ballysadare.

TIR-EVAN, or IFAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Yspytty, hund. of Isaled, co. Denbigh, 8 miles S.E. of Llanrwst. It is situated on the river Conway, and had a hospital of the Knights of St. John.

TIRHUGH, a bar. in co. Donegal, Ireland, containing Ballintrae, Ballyshannon, and pars. of Donegal, Drumhome, and Kilbarron, and parts of Inishmacsaint and Templecarne.

TIRKEERAN, a bar. in co. Londonderry, Ireland, containing part of Londonderry and Muff, and the pars. of Clondermot, Lower Cumber, Faughanvale, and parts of Banagher and Upper Cumber.

TIRKENNEDY, a bar. in co. Fermanagh, Ireland, containing parts of the pars. of Cleenish, Derrybrusk, Derryvullan, Enniskillen, Magheracross, and Trory.

TIRLEY, a par. partly in the lower div. of Westminster and partly in that of Deerhurst, co. Gloucester, 4 miles S.W. of Tewkesbury, its post town, and 8 N.E. of Gloucester. The village is situated on the river Severn, which is crossed at Haw by a bridge connecting this parish with that of Deerhurst. The bridge, which is constructed of iron and stone, was completed in 1825, at an outlay of upwards of £24,000. The land is chiefly in pasture and meadow. The soil is a rich loam. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £407, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Matthew, is old, and the interior contains several monuments. The parochial charities produce about £80 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The Earl of Coventry is lord of the manor, and principal landowner.

TIRLLANERCH, a tnshp. in the par. of Corwen, co. Merioneth, 10 miles N.W. of Llanidloes. In this township are Nant Ysgolion fall, and an arched rock at Glyn Yal.

TIRRIL, a hmlt. in the par. of Barton, West Ward, co. Westmoreland, 3 miles S.W. of Penrith, and half a mile E. of Barton church. The village, situated in the vale of the Eamont, contains a brewery, and a Friends' meeting-house, with a burial-ground.

TIRYMYNACH, a tnshp. in the par of Llanbrynmair, co. Montgomery, 9 miles N.W. of Llanidloes.

TIRYMYNECH, a tnshp. in the par. of Guilsfield, co. Montgomery, 2 miles N. of Welshpool, within which borough it is situated. It formerly belonged to the monks of Strata Florida.

TISARAN, a par. in the bar. of Garrycastle, King's co., prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles W.S.W. of Cloghan. Ferbane is its post town. The surface is boggy. The parish is traversed by the Grand canal, and by the rivers, Shannon, Brosna, and Blackwater. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, val. £547, in the patron. of the bishop. The principal residence is Moystown House.

TISAXON, a par. in the bar. of Kinsale, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles W.N.W. of Kinsale, its post town. The river Bandon traverses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £78, in the patron. of the crown. The church has long been in ruins. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this parish is united to that of Kinsale. The principal residences are Teighsasson House, Ballywilliam, and Holyhill. Here are the ruins of White Castle, built in 1497 for the Roches.

TISBURY, an ancient town in the hund. of Dunworth, co. Wilts, 3 miles S.E. of Hindon, and 14 W. of Salisbury. It is a station on the Yeovil and Exeter section of the Great Western railway. This place, which is considerable, is situated in an agricultural district, watered by the river Nadder, a tributary of the Avon. It includes the pars. of East and West Tisbury, and the hmlt. of Wardour, whence the Lords Arundell of Wardour take their title. The original castle, of which there are still some remains, was built prior to the reign of Edward III., and was successively held by the families of St. Martin, Touchet, Audley, Willoughby-de-Broke, and subsequently by Sir John Arundell, whose son Thomas was created Lord Arundell of Wardour by James I. In the civil war, the castle was held for the king by Lady Blanche, but was taken by Sir E. Hungerford, on the 4th of May, 1643, after a week's siege; and committed by the parliament to the keeping of General Ludlow. In the course of the same summer, it was retaken by Lord Arundel and a party of royalists, dismantled, and the Roundheads dislodged. It remained in ruins for more than a century; but in 1776 the family of Arundel erected Wardour Castle, about a mile from the original site. This mansion is built on an eminence, and consists of a centre and two wings projecting in a curvilinear form. Incorporated with the mansion is a Roman Catholic chapel, containing many paintings. The village of Tisbury stands on the declivity of a hill overlooking the vale of the Nadder; and below it are the remains of a manor-house, formerly belonging to Shaftesbury Abbey, but now converted into a farmhouse; and near it is the church. The land is fertile and well cultivated. The great tithes have been commuted for a rent-charge of £880, besides 12 acres of glebe, and the vicarial for £440; besides which, £67 12s. is annually paid to the rector of Compton-Chamberlayne, and £50 to another impropriator. The living is a vic.* in the archdeac. and dioc. of Salisbury, val. £306. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is of the early part of the 13th century. In the interior are an old font, two brasses (the earliest of Lawrence Hyde), bearing date 1590, and monuments to the former Lords Arundell, over one of which is the helmet worn by the first Lord Arundell. In the churchyard is a yew-tree, 30 feet in circumference, and said to be thirteen centuries old. The register commences in 1563. The Independents and Wesleyans have chapels. The parochial charities produce about £100 per annum, applied towards the support of the schools, and apprenticing poor children. There are National and parochial schools for boys and girls, and a school supported by the Independents. The Poor-law Union of Tisbury comprises 20 parishes and townships, the union workhouse being situated at Wardour. It is also the seat of a superintendent registry, but belongs to the Shaftesbury New County Court district. Sir Nicholas Hyde, Chief Justice of the King's Bench and Lord Treasurer in the reign of James I., was born in Hatch House; and Sir John Davies, the lawyer and poet, was a native of the hamlet of Chisgrove.

TISCOFFIN, a par. in the bar. of Gowran, co. Kilkenny, Ireland, 4 miles N.N.W. of Gowran. Kilkenny is its post town. The surface is hilly, but the soil is productive. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. £142, in the patron. of the bishop. Here the Mac-Murroughs defeated the Earl of Ormond in 1362.

TISRARA, a par. in the bar. of Athlone, co. Roscommon, Ireland, 7 miles S. of Roscommon, containing Mount Talbot, its post town. The surface consists of a light soil, with some bog. The parish is traversed by the river Suck, and contains Mount Talbot. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, val. with two others, £111, in the patron. of the bishop. The principal residence is Mount Talbot. Limestone is quarried.

TISSINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Wirksworth, co. Derby, 4 miles N. of Ashbourne, its post town, and 9 S.W. of Winster. The village is situated on the road from Ashborne to Buxton, near Thorp Cloud and other cliffs which guard the entrance to the district of Dove Dale. In the vicinity are cotton mills on Bradbourn Brook, also a stone quarry. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £97. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is old, and surrounded by trees. A N. aisle was added in 1854, at the expense of Miss Fitzherbert, to whose family the church contains monuments. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum, of which sum £7 go to the support of Fitzherbert's school. Graves wrote part of his "Spiritual Quixote" here. Sir H. Fitzherbert is lord of the manor. At a little distance from the church are five wells or fountains, which are said anciently to have furnished the only supply of water for several miles round, and are still annually covered with flowers by the villagers on Holy Thursday.

TISTED, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Selborne, co. Hants, 5 miles S.W. of Alton. The village is situated on the road from Alton to Gosport and Portsmouth. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £350. The church is dedicated to St. James. There is a free school, erected in 1837, with an endowment of £50 per annum. J. Groves, the astronomer, was born here.

TISTED, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Bishop's-Sutton, co. Hants, 8 miles S.W. of Alton. The village is situated about a mile off the London and Gosport road. The surface is undulating, and the soil a flinty earth upon a substratum of chalk. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £60 in the patron. of Magdalen College, Oxford.

TITCHBORNE, a par. in the upper half of Fawley hund., co. Hants, 2¼ miles S.W. of New Alresford, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Winchester. The village is situated at the head of the river Itchin. This place gives name to the Titchbornes, who were located here prior to the Conquest. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Cheriton, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, contains tombs and effigies of the Titchborne family. There is a National school for both sexes, and a Roman Catholic school, supported by Sir James F. D. Titchborne, Bart. The principal residence is Titchborne House, which has a Roman Catholic chapel attached. It was rebuilt near the site of the old castle erected in Henry II.'s time, since which, 2*d.* on Ladyday has been given to every one who asks for it. The Bishop of Winchester is lord of the manor.

TITCHFIELD, a hund., co. Hants, contains the pars. of Rowner, Titchfield, and Wickham, comprising an area of 4,510 acres.

TITCHFIELD, a par. and small town in the Fareham div. of Titchfield hund., co. Hants, 2½ miles W. of Fareham station, 6 N.W. of Gosport, and 9 S.E. of Southampton. The par., which is bounded on the W. by the Southampton Water, is the largest in the county, containing 15,960 acres, and comprises the chplry. of Crofton, and the district church of Sarisbury, and the hmlts. of Hook, Stubbington, Swanwick, and Warsash. The town is situated in a valley on the road from Southampton to Portsmouth and Brighton. The river Aire runs by the town into the Solent. The town, once a market-town, had formerly a Premonstratensian abbey, founded in 1231 by Bishop Peter de Rupibus, the revenue of which at the suppression was valued at £280 19*s.* 10*d.*; and the site given by Henry VIII. to his Chancellor, Sir Thomas Wriothesley, who erected out of its materials the "righte statelie" house in which Charles I. found a temporary shelter after his escape from Hampton Court in 1647, and from which he was taken prisoner by Colonel Hammond, and conveyed to Carisbrooke Castle in the Isle of Wight. Lady Rachel Russell, wife of William Lord Russell, was born here in 1636. The building is now in a state of ruin, the entrance gateway being the only part standing. The principal residences are West Hill, of the Hon. Misses Baring; The Hook, of William Hornby, Esq.; Holly Hill, the seat of Captain Maxse; and Brooklands, of Spencer Smith, Esq. Titchfield gives the title of marquis to the Duke of Portland. The living is a vic., with the chplry. of Crofton annexed, in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £230, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is an ancient structure of various dates, the N. aisle of which was built by William of Wykeham. It contains a monument to Sir T. Wriothesley, portions of whose armour are yet preserved. The church has just been beautifully restored and enlarged, at the expense of the Hon. Misses Baring. There is also the district church of Sarisbury, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £120. The church is dedicated to St. Paul. There is also the church or chapel at Crofton of the Holy Rood. There are chapels for Independents at Titchfield and Swanwick, and National, infant, and Sunday schools. Fairs are held on the 14th May, 25th September, and on the second Saturdays preceding Ladyday, and 21st December.

TITCHMARSH, a par. in the hund. of Navisford, co. Northampton, 2 miles E. of Thrapston, its post town. The village is situated near the Peterborough railway. The soil consists of clay and gravel. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £782. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, or to St. Mary, contains monuments to the Pickering and Creed families. The parochial charities produce about £210 per annum, of which £165 belong to Pickering's and Boyd's almshouses. There is a National school for both sexes.

TITCHWELL, a par. in the hund. of Smithdon, co. Norfolk, 5 miles N.W. of Burnham-Market, and half-a-mile W. of Brancaster. The village is situated on the road from Lynn to Wells, near the coast, and contains the octagonal shaft of an ancient cross. The soil is alluvial and sandy, with a subsoil of chalk. In the vicinity are extensive salt marshes, reclaimed from the sea under an Enclosure Act obtained in 1786. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £410, in the patron. of Eton College. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The register dates from 1456. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum. There are National and Sunday schools. The lordship of the manor is vested in Magdalen College, Oxford.

TITESKIN, a par. in the bar. of Imokilly, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Cloyne, its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £217, in the patron. of the crown. The church has long been in ruins. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this par. is united to that of Cloyne. In the old churchyard are a holy well and a rough structure representing the crucifixion.

TITHECOT. See TYTHACOTT, co. Devon.

TITLEY, a par. in the hund of Wigmore, co. Hereford, 3 miles N.E. of Kington, and 3½ from Presteign. It is a station on the Kington branch of the Great Western railway. The village is situated on the river Arrow, near Wapley camp. There was formerly a Benedictine priory here, founded as a cell to Tyrone Abbey in France, but given by Henry V. to Winchester College. There are no vestiges of the priory except the moat that encompassed it. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £231, in the patron. of Winchester College. The church, rebuilt in the last century, has a stained window, and tombs of the Harleys of Eywood. There is a school for both sexes, endowed with the interest of £4,000, bequeathed by Elizabeth Greenly, of Titley Court, the principal residence.

TITLINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Eglingham, N. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 6½ miles N.W. of Alnwick.

TITSEY, a par. in the second div. of Tandridge hund., co. Surrey, 5½ N.E. of Godstone, its post town, and 7½ S.E. of Stoat's Nest railway station. The village is situated in meadows and hills under Botley Hill, which rises to the height of 880 feet above sea-level. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture, and in the quarrying of chalk for the making of lime. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £180. The church is dedicated to St. James. The old church was taken down and a new edifice erected in 1776, by Sir John Graham, who removed all the old monuments. There is a parochial school entirely supported by Mrs. Gower. G. W. Gower, Esq., is lord of the manor. The principal residence is Titsey Park.

TITTENHANGER, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Peter, hund. of Cashio, or lib. of St. Alban's, co. Herts, 3 miles S.E. of St. Alban's, and included in that borough. It is situated on a branch of the river Colne, and came to the Earl of Hardwick through the Blounts, who rebuilt the manorhouse in 1654, on the site of a seat of the Abbots of St. Alban's, which was given to Sir T. Pope, founder of Trinity College, Oxford, by Henry VIII.

TITTENLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Audlem, hund. of Nantwich, co. Chester, 7 miles S. of Nantwich.

TITTENSOR, a lib. in the par. of Stone, co. Stafford, 4 miles N.W. of Stone, on the river Trent, near the Grand Trunk canal.

TITTESWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Leek, N. div. of Totmonslow hund., co. Stafford, 2 miles N.E. of Leek.

TITTLESHALL-WITH-GODWICK, a par. in the hund. of Launditch, co. Norfolk, 5 miles N. of Great Dunham, and 6 S.W. of Fakenham. The living is a rect.* with those of Godwick and Wellingham annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £871. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains the mausoleum of the earls of Leicester, and an altar tomb and effigy in white marble to Sir E. Coke in his judicial robes, besides other monuments and effigies. The register dates from 1538. There is a district church, dedicated to St. Paul, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £100. The Baptists and Wesleyans have chapels. There is a National school, built in 1836. The charities consist of 36 acres given to the poor for fuel at the time of the enclosure of the parish.

TIVERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Bunbury, first div. of Eddisbury hund., co. Chester, 2 miles S. of Tarporley. The Chester canal passes in the vicinity, and a customary corn market is held at Four-lane Ends every Monday.

TIVERTON, a hund., co. Devon, contains the pars. of Calverleigh, Huntsham, Loxbear, Tiverton, and part of Uplowman, comprising an area of 23,960 acres.

TIVERTON, a par., market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, possessing exclusive jurisdiction, but locally in the hund. of Tiverton, co. Devon, 14 miles N.E. of Exeter, and 62 S.W. of Bristol. It is connected to the Great Western by a branch line of railway. It is an ancient, clean, and well-built town, occupying the slope of a hill at the confluence of the rivers Exe and Loman, and for this reason was called Twyfordton. At the time of the Domesday survey it was held by the crown, but was given by Henry I. to Richard, Earl of Devon, who built a strong castle here in 1106. It continued for many ages the head of a barony, and together with the lordship of the hundred and manor is now the property of Sir W. P. Carew, Bart. In 1200 the town received a charter for holding a market and three fairs, and in 1250 it was presented with a copious supply of water by Amicia, Countess of Devon, who diverted a stream called the Leat to flow through the town. About the middle of the 14th century the wool trade was introduced, and in 1500 the inhabitants were extensively engaged in the manufacture of baize, plain cloths, and kersies, which continued to flourish till 1612, when Tiverton was regarded as the chief manufacturing place in the West of England, but shortly after declined, owing to the devastations caused by the plague, and three destructive fires, which consumed the greater part of the houses, then built of wood and thatch. In 1731 the town was again partially burnt, and ten years after one-twelfth of the population was cut off by an epidemic fever. The town may now be said to be entirely rebuilt, and extends about a mile in length. The four principal streets are wide and well paved. The principal buildings are the townhall, with the police-station and mayoralty-room adjoining, containing portraits of George I., II., and III.; the new market-house, built in 1830 at a cost of £9,000; the borough gaol and house of correction, erected at a cost of £5,000; the union workhouse, built in 1838 at a cost of £10,000; a theatre, literary and scientific institution, reading and assembly rooms, two branch banks, and two bridges over the Exe and Loman, at the points where these rivers were formerly forded, the former bridge having recently been rebuilt. The cloth trade has long since declined, but there is a lace manufactory employing about 1,600 hands, and a bobbin net manufactory. A considerable carrying trade is done by means of the Tiverton branch of the Great Western canal, which terminates at the north-eastern end of the town. The town was incorporated by James I., and has returned two members to parliament since that period. Under the Municipal Reform Act it is included amongst those which hold commissions of the peace and quarter-sessions, and is divided into three wards, viz., West Exe, Loman, and Castle ward, and is governed by a mayor, who is returning officer, 6 aldermen, and 18 councillors, assisted by the borough magistrates and a recorder, with the style of "mayor and burgesses of the town and parish of Tiverton." The municipal revenue is about £2,000, and the borough limits co-extensive with those of the parish, which contains about 17,000 acres, and a population in 1861 of 10,447, but the population of the town quarter is 7,947. The parish was divided by Hugh Courtenay, Earl of Devon, about the end of the 13th century, into four quarters, called respectively Clare, Pitt, Priors, and Tidcombe quarters, and contains the vils. or hmlts. of Ashley, Bolham, Chettescombe, Chevithorne, Cove, Craze Loman, Manley, East and West Mere, Withleigh, and the extensive suburb of West Exe, principally inhabited by operatives. Tiverton Poor-law Union contains 27 parishes and townships. It is also the seat of New County Court and Superintendent Registry districts. The livings of the four quarters or portions are rects. in the archdeaconry and dioc. of Exeter, viz. Clare portion, with the cur. of Withleigh annexed, val. £459; Pitt's quarter, with the cur. of Cove annexed, £875; Priors' quarter, val. £341; and Tidcombe quarter, £750 and 90 acres of glebe. The parish church, dedicated to St. Peter, is 136 feet long by 82 wide, with a tower 110 feet high, a wooden lich-gate, and an elaborately-sculptured porch in the Decorated style. The oldest part of the building dates from 1073, but a considerable portion was rebuilt in the early part of the 16th century by John Greenway, an eminent clothier, who also erected the chapel bearing his name and the screen which separates the chancel from the body of the church. The S. font and porch, together with Greenway's chapel, were rebuilt in 1825, and the whole of the church has lately undergone a thorough restoration, at a cost of nearly £7,000. The picture formerly used as an altar-piece, but now hanging over the N. door, representing "the Deliverance of St. Peter from Prison," was painted and presented by the artist Cosway, who was a native of the town. The chapel-of-ease, dedicated to St. George, was built in 1733, nearly in the centre of the town. The roof and galleries are supported by Ionic pillars, and the E. window has a figure of St. Andrew in stained glass. In the suburb of West Exe is the district church of St. Paul, erected in 1854. There are also chapels-of-ease at Cove, Withleigh, and Chevithorne, a Roman Catholic chapel, about a mile W. of the town, and chapels belonging to the Baptists, Wesleyans, Independents, and Bible Christians. The free grammar school, founded in 1604 by Peter Blundel, is situated at Loman Green. Its income is about £1,000, with exhibitions to Oxford and Cambridge Universities. There are National and infant schools in St. Andrew's Street, three British schools, the charity school in Castle-street, founded in 1714 for 60 boys and 50 girls, which has an income from endowment of £350, also Comyn or Chilcot's free school with an endowment of £100. The parochial charities, including school endowments, produce about £3,000 per annum. There are several sets of almshouses, including Greenway's, in Gold-street, with a chapel attached, and Waldron's in Welbrook-street. The remains of the old castle stand on an eminence close to the Exe, and comprise the gatehouse, two towers, and parts of the S. and W. walls covered in ivy. Races take place in August on the Castle meadows. Market days are Tuesday and Saturday; and great markets for the sale of cattle and sheep are now held the second Tuesday in every month. Fairs are held on the second Tuesday after Whit-Sunday, and on Michaelmas day for cattle, horses, and sheep.

TIVERTON-TOWN, a quarter in the par. and hund. of Tiverton, co. Devon.

TIVETSHALL ST. MARGARET, a par. in the hund. of Diss, co. Norfolk, 5½ miles N.E. of Diss. It is a station on the Great Eastern railway. Scole is its post town. The village is situated on the road from London to Norwich, by way of Bury St. Edmund's. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is an ancient structure with a tower and nave, and carved oak roof and screen. The parochial charities produce about £24 per annum. The Society of Friends have a chapel. In the vicinity is an oak-tree measuring about 7 yards in circumference.

TIVETSHALL ST. MARY, a par. in the hund. of Diss, co. Norfolk, 5 miles N. of Scole, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Diss. It is a station on the Great Eastern railway. The village is situated on the high road from London to Norwich. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of St. Margaret, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £760. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum.

TIVINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Selworthy, co. Somerset, 3 miles W. of Minehead.

TIXALL, a par. in the S. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford, 4 miles S.E. of Stafford, its post town, and 2½ from the Colwich station, on the Trent Valley railway. The village is situated on the Worcester canal and the river Trent. On Tixall Heath are two barrows called "the King's and Queen's Lows." In the vicinity are stone quarries. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £200. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. There is a church school. A Roman Catholic chapel is attached to the Hall, rebuilt about 1780, and situated opposite the Elizabethan gateway of the old seat, which was erected in 1555. The Earl of Shrewsbury and Talbot is lord of the manor.

TIXOVER, a par. in the hund. of Wrangdike, co. Rutland, 7 miles N.W. of Stamford, its post town, and 7½ E. of Uppingham. The village is situated on the river Welland, close to the road from Wansford to Uppingham. This place is mentioned in Domesday book, at which time it was held by Cluny Abbey. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Ketton, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church is dedicated to St. Luke or to St. Mary Magdalene. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum, realised from poor's land. S. O'Brien, Esq., is lord of the manor.

TOATHMAIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Shap, co. Westmoreland, near Shap.

TOBER, a vil. in the bar. of Ballymoe, co. Galway, Ireland, 2 miles S. of Ballymoe. Fairs are held here on Whit-Monday and 26th October.

TOBER, a hmlt. in the bar. of Kilcoursey, King's County, Ireland, 3 miles N.W. of Clare. There is a police station in the village.

TOBER, a par. in the bars. of Upper and Lower Talbotstown, co. Wicklow, Ireland, 4 miles N.W. of Donard. The surface consists of a good soil. The living is a rect. with Dunlavin.

TOBERAHEENA, a vil. in the bar. of East Iffa and Offa, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Clonmel, on the river Suir. A fair is held on 2nd October.

TOBERCLARE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Rathconrath, co. Westmeath, Ireland, near Ballymore.

TOBERCURRY, a small post and market town in the par. of Achonry, bar. of Leyny, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 19 miles S.W. of Sligo, and 132 miles from Dublin. It contains a church, chapel, police station, barracks, and a dispensary. Petty sessions are held here. The town is the head of a new Poor-law Union. Market-day is on Monday. Fairs are held on 28th January, 25th March, 22nd May, 27th June, 15th August, 4th October, and 29th November.

TOBERFUDDER, a hmlt. in the bar. of Loughrea, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 6 miles N.N.E. of Gort.

TOBERMORE, a post-office vil. in the bar. of Loughinsholin, co. Londonderry, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Londonderry, and 118 from Dublin, on the river Moyola. Fairs are held on the 17th January, 13th February, 28th March, 31st May, 5th July, and 20th October.

TOBERMORY, a quoad sacra par. in the island of Mull, co. Argyle, Scotland. It comprises part of the quoad civilia par. of Kilninian. It extends in length about 6 miles, with a varying breadth of 2 miles, extending along the Sound of Mull, by which it is separated from Morven on the E., and from Ardnamurchan on the N. The town of Tobermory is about 3½ miles S.W. of Auliston Point, and 30 N.W. of Oban. It is situated on Tobermory Bay, in Mull Sound, opposite Calbe Island, and is a sub-port to Greenock. It was founded in 1788 by the British Fishery Company, and is a polling-place for the county. The harbour is safe, being protected by an island which stretches nearly across the entrance, and possesses two excellent quays. The new quay was begun in 1835 by Colonel Campbell, of Knock. The town has increased of late years, and the harbour is much frequented both by steamers and sailing vessels. Its chief commerce consists of the exchange of fish and cattle for manufactured and foreign goods. The sheriff substitute holds a court here once a week during session. In the vicinity is a loch—Mary's Lake—situated between two hills. This par. is in the presb. of Mull and synod of Argyle, and in the patron. of the crown. The minister has a stipend of about £120. The parish church was erected in 1827. There are besides a Free church, and a chapel for the Baptists, also a parochial school, Free Church school, Free Church Gaelic school, Queen Adelaide's School of Industry, and a Free church female school.

TOBERONOCHY, or TOBERONCHY, a vil. in the island of Luing and par. of Kilbrandon, co. Argyle, Scotland, 15 miles W. of Inverary.

TOBERREENDONY, a vil. in the bar. of Kiltartan, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles S.S.W. of Gort. It contains a police-station. Fairs are held on 12th July and 20th September.

TOBERSCANAVAN, a vil. in the bar. of Tirerill, co. Sligo, 2 miles S.E. of Collooney. It is situated on a small loch of the same name, and has several fairs.

TOCKENHAM, a par. in the hund. of Kingsbridge, co. Wilts, 3 miles S.W. of Wootton-Basset, its post town and railway station, and 86 from London. The village is situated on the road from London to Bath. The land is chiefly in pasture. The Great Western railway and the Wilts and Berks canal pass through the parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £283, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. John, contains memorials of the Buxton family. The parochial charities produce about £29 per annum.

TOCKETTS, a tnshp. in the par. of Guisborough, E. div. of Langbaurgh lib., North Riding co. York, 1½ mile N.E. of Guisborough. The surface is undulating, and the high lands command a view of the sea and the Cleveland hills. It had formerly an ancient chapel founded by the Tocketts, who resided here for several centuries. Captain T. Chaloner is lord of the manor.

TOCKHOLES, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. and hund. of Blackburn, co. Lancaster, 3½ miles S.W. of Blackburn, its post town, and 7 from Chorley. The village is situated near the Leeds and Liverpool canal, and the road from Blackburn to Manchester. In the valley of the Raddlesworth rivulet the soil is principally marl, but a considerable portion of the upland is in moorland. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the weaving of cotton and in the print-works. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150, in the patron. of the Vicar of Blackburn. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, was rebuilt in 1833. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school, at which a Sunday-school is also held. The Independents have a chapel. The representatives of the late E. Shorrock, Esq., are lords of the manor. It is supposed to have been the scene of a skirmish between the royalists and parliamentarians in the reign of Charles I., from the number of cannon-balls found here.

TOCKINGTON, LOWER, a tythg. in the par. of Almondsbury, co. Gloucester, 3½ miles S. of Thornbury.

TOCKINGTON, UPPER, a tythg. in the par. of Olveston, lower div. of Langley hund., co. Gloucester, 3 miles S.W. of Thornbury, close to Lower Tockington.

TOCKWITH, a tnshp. in the par. of Bilton, W. div. of the Ainsty of York, co. York, 5 miles N.E. of Wetherby, and 9 W. of York. The village is situated near the river Nidd and the Knaresborough and York railway. The soil consists of clay and gravel, with a mixed subsoil of clay and sand. The Wesleyans have a chapel, at which a Sunday-school is also held. A. Montague, Esq., is lord of the manor.

TODBER, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Rimmington, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of Clitheroe.

TODBERE, a par. in the hund. of Redlane, Sturminster div. of co. Dorset, 5 miles S.W. of Shaftesbury, its post town. It was formerly a chapelry in the parish of Gillingham. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Stower Provost, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church is old. The register dates from 1563. The Marquis of Westminster is lord of the manor.

TODBURN, a tnshp. in the par. of Long-Horsley,

W. div. of Morpeth ward, co. Northumberland, 7 miles N.W. of Morpeth, and 2 N.W. of Long Horsley.

TODDENHAM, a par. in the upper div. of Westminster hund., co. Gloucester, 3½ miles N.E. of Moreton-in-the-March, its post town, and 4 from Shipston-on-Stour. The village is situated on the river Stour and the ancient Fosseway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £500, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket. In the chancel are some canopied stalls. Sir Peter Pole, Bart., is lord of the manor. There is a national school.

TODDINGTON, a par. in the lower div. of Kiftsgate hund., co. Gloucester, 3½ miles N. of Winchcombe, its post town, and 7 E. of Aschurch station on the Bristol and Birmingham railway. The village is situated on the river Isborne, and on the high road from Tewkesbury to Stow. Toddington is mentioned in Doomsday book as being held by Herald, the father of John de Sudeley. The surface is in general flat, and the soil is of stiff clay. The living is a vic.,* with the perpet. cur. of Stanley Pontlarge annexed, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, was rebuilt in 1723, near the site of the old one; its interior contains nine figures of the apostles, 18 feet in height, brought from Hailes Abbey. The parochial charities consist of ten tons of coal distributed to the poor on New Year's Day, and two oxen at Christmas. Lord Sudeley is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

TODDINGTON, a par. and ancient market town in the hund. of Manshead, co. Bedford, 15 miles S. of Bedford, and 7 N. of the Dunstable railway station. This place was the scene of a battle between the Romans under Aulus Plautius and the Britons, in which the latter were defeated on Conger Hill. In the reign of Henry III. the manor, which was a free warren, was given to Sir Paulinus Peyvre, who rebuilt the ancient manor-house, and obtained for the inhabitants the privilege of a market. The manor-house, successively the residence of the Duke of Cleveland and of Thomas Wentworth, Earl of Stafford, was visited by Queen Elizabeth and James I., and was the place of concealment of the Duke of Monmouth after the battle of Sedgmoor. The town is situated on an eminence. It had formerly an hospital and a market-house, but these have long since disappeared. The straw plait manufacture is carried on to some extent. The population in 1851 was 2,438, and in 1861, 2,433. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £830. The church, dedicated to St. George, is a Gothic structure, ornamented with grotesque sculptures of various animals. The interior contains monuments to the Cheney and Wentworth families; among them is one to Henrietta, Baroness Wentworth, who is said to have died of grief, a few months after the execution of James, Duke of Monmouth, to whom she had been betrothed, and another to Lady Maria Wentworth. The Baptists, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have chapels, and there are six almshouses. Market day, formerly on Thursday, was changed to Saturday in 1316. Fairs are held on 25th April, first Monday in June, 2nd November, and 6th December.

TODHILLS, or TODHOLES, a vil. in the par. of Tealing, co. Forfar, Scotland, 6 miles N. of Dundee.

TODMORDEN, a market and post town in the par. of Rochdale, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 9 miles N.E. of Rochdale, and 12 W. of Halifax. It is a station on the eastern section of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway, where the Burnley branch turns off. This place, anciently called Todmaredene, or "the valley of the Foxmere," is situated in the vale of the Calder, near the Halifax and Rochdale canal, and on the Yorkshire border, where it extends into the parish of Halifax. The town is well built and lighted with gas, and is under the local government of a board of magistrates, with a police inspector and two constables. Petty sessions are held once a fortnight, and a county court once a month at the Odd Fellows' Hall. The population of the town in 1861 was 11,797, of which number the tnshp. of Todmorden, including the hmlt. of Walsden, contained 9,146 against 7,699 in 1851, the remainder were residents within the adjoining tnshps. of Langfield and Stansfield. The gas-works were erected in 1847, at an expense of £10,000, and a savings-bank in 1857; there are also a branch of the Manchester and Liverpool bank, a police station with lock-up, and several hotels. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the cotton mills, which trade includes various brafiches, as cotton spinning, fustians, velveteens, satteens, dimities, and calicoes; the manufacture also of worsted goods has been introduced, and there are foundries and machine works of great magnitude, these last chiefly engaged in supplying the extensive manufactories in the neighbourhood. Water, stone, timber, and coal are abundant, which add to the advantages of this as a manufacturing district. In addition to the numerous water-mills on the banks of the Calder, there are in the township several factories where the machinery is wholly propelled by steam; but hand-loom weaving is now extinct. In the adjoining township of Langfield stands a stone column, first erected in 1815, to commemorate the termination of the French war; but having fallen down, was subsequently re-erected by subscription, at an expense of about £300. The principal seats are Scaitcliffe, Todmorden Hall, Stansfield Hall, Centre Vale, and Ridge Foot. The Poor-law Union comprises 6 tnshps., but there is no union workhouse, the poor being relieved at their respective townships. The board of guardians meet at the Station House inn every Thursday. Two newspapers, the Todmorden Advertiser and Post are published in the town. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £300, in the patron. of the Vicar of Rochdale. The church is dedicated to Christ. The chancel has a painted E. window. It was erected in 1831, and stands by the old one, dedicated to St. Mary, which is used as a chapel-of-ease. There is also a new church at Walsden, which by a recent Act of parliament has been constituted a separate parish for ecclesiastical purposes. There are National schools, partially endowed, for both sexes, and other schools, designated Short-time schools, supported by the principal manufacturers. The Wesleyans, Calvinists, Unitarians, and New Connexion and Association Methodists have chapels. Market day is on Saturday, and on the first Thursday in each month for cattle. Fairs are held on the Thursday before Easter, and on the 27th September for cattle, &c.

TODRIDGE, a tnshp. in the par. of Hartburn, W. div. of Morpeth ward, co. Northumberland, 7 miles W. of Morpeth, and 2 W. of Hartburn.

TODWICK, a par. in the S. div. of Strafforth wap., West Riding co. York, 7 miles S.E. of Rotherham, its post town, and 10½ S.E. of Sheffield. The village is situated on the road from Sheffield to Worksop. There are quarries of good red grit-stone for building. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £121. The church is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul. The Duke of Leeds is lord of the manor.

TOEM, a par. in the bars. of Clanwilliam and Upper Kilnamanagh, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 10 miles N. of Tipperary. The surface is slightly mountainous, but has a good soil, with some extent of bog. It includes the vil. of Cappaghwhite, and is traversed by the road from Tipperary to Nenagh, and by the river Anycarthy. Copper ore is found in small quantities. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, and in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dilapidated. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, three public and two private schools, also a Sunday-school. There are traces of a cell belonging to the Abbey of Inchenemes, but which was granted to the Archbishop of Cashel by Queen Elizabeth. There is a medicinal spring in the vicinity.

TOFT, a par. in the hund. of Longstow, co. Cambridge, 6 miles S.W. of Cambridge, its post town, and 10 N. of Royston. The living is a rect.* with the vic. of Caldecote annexed, in the dioc. of Ely, val. £287, in the patron. of Christ's College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. There is a school for both sexes, which was built by the rector, and by whom it is supported.

TOFT, a tnshp. in the par. of Knutsford, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 2 miles S. of Knutsford, its post town.

TOFT, a hmlt. in the par. of Witham-on-the-hill, wap. of Bettisloe, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 2½ miles S.W. of Bourne.

TOFT, a hmlt. in the par. of Dunchurch, co. Warwick, 3 miles S.W. of Rugby, and half a mile S.W. of Dunchurch, on Dunsmore Heath.

TOFT-MONKS, a par. in the hund. of Clavering, co. Norfolk, 4 miles N.E. of Beccles, its post town, and 6 S.E. of Loddon. The village is situated on the road from Beccles to Yarmouth. Here was formerly a priory cell to Preaux Abbey, in France, founded in the reign of Henry I., and given by Edward VI. to King's College, Cambridge. The inhabitants, by an ancient charter, are exempt from serving on juries. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Haddiscoe, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret. The register dates from 1538. The parochial charities produce about £28 per annum, realised from town estate. The Masters and Fellows of King's College, Cambridge, are lords of the manor.

TOFT-NEXT-NEWTON, a par. in the N. div. of Walshcroft hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4½ miles S.W. of Market Rasen, its post town and railway station. The village is situated on the river Ancholme. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £240, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul.

TOFT-TREES, or TOFTS, a par. in the hund. of Gallow, co. Norfolk, 2 miles S.W. of Fakenham, its post town and railway station. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £200. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The register dates from 1760.

TOFT, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Grimshoe, co. Norfolk, 4½ miles N.E. of Brandon, its post town. The village is situated on the road from Thetford to Watton. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £110. The church is dedicated to St. Mary; its N. aisle and porch have been rebuilt. The interior has been restored, including the windows, which are of stained glass, and the altar piece consists of carved figures. There are also several monuments and brasses. There is a free school, supported by the Rev. A. Sutton, B.A.

TOGHER, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ferrard, co. Louth, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Dunleer.

TOGHERTY, a hmlt. in the bar. of Clare, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, near Tuam.

TOGSTONE, a tnshp. in the par. of Warkworth, E. div. of Morpeth hund., co. Northumberland, 11 miles N.E. of Morpeth, and 2½ S.E. of Warkworth. The soil consists of a strong loam. There is a colliery. Togstone Hall is the principal residence.

TOLESBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Marton, North Riding co. York, 5 miles N. of Stokesley. In the vicinity is Tolesby Hall.

TOLETHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Little Casterton, co. Rutland, 2 miles N. of Stamford, its post town, and 12 from Oakham. The village is situated on the river Gwash. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Little Casterton, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The principal residence is Tolethorpe House. There is a mineral spring.

TOLKA, a post-office vil. in the bar. of Castleknock, co. Dublin, Ireland, 2 miles N.N.W. of Dublin. It stands on the Tolka river, and has a lunatic asylum. Tolka Park and Tolka Lodge are the principal seats.

TOLLAND, a par. in the hund. of Taunton, co. Somerset, 4 miles N.E. of Wiveliscombe, its post town, and 10 from Taunton. The village is situated on the river Tone. The soil is clayey, with a subsoil of limestone, which is quarried. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £181. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The parochial charities produce about 5*s.* per annum. There are a school for both sexes, and a Sunday-school.

TOLLARD-ROYAL, a par., partly in the hund. of Cranborne, co. Dorset, but chiefly in the hund. of Chalk, co. Wilts, 8 miles S.E. of Shaftesbury, and 8 N.W. of Cranborne. Ludwell is its post town. The par. is apportioned into four farms, viz., Higher Farm, Lower Farm, Corner Farm, and Thorn Farm. In the parish is an old farm-house, called "King John's Hunting Seat," thought to be the remains of an ancient royal residence for hunting in Cranborne chase. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £467. The church, dedicated to St. Peter-ad-Vincula, has recently been restored. There is a National Sunday-school. Lord Rivers is lord of the manor.

TOLLCROSS, a post town in the pars. of Barony and Old Monkland, co. Lanark, Scotland, 3 miles S.E. of Glasgow, and 1 mile S.E. of Parkhead. The town is situated on the eastern road from Glasgow to Hamilton, and contains an United Presbyterian church, the Roman Catholic convent of Dalbeth, and the Clyde ironworks.

TOLLER, a station on the Bridport branch of the Wilts and Somerset railway, 2½ miles from Maiden Newton.

TOLLERFORD, a hund. in the Dorchester div. of co. Dorset, contains the pars. of East and West Chilborough, Chilfroon, Evershot, Frome St. Quintin, Frome Vauchurch, Maiden Newton, Melbury-Sampford, Rampisham, Toller-Fratrum, Winford-Eagle, and part of Toller-Porcorum; comprising an area of 14,880 acres.

TOLLER-FRATRUM, a par. in the hund. of Tollerford, Dorchester div. of co. Dorset, 1 mile from Maiden-Newton, its post town, and 6 miles S.E. of Beaminster. The village is situated on the river Frome. The par. includes the hmlt. of Frogmore. It was formerly held by the Brethren or Knights of St. John of Jerusalem. The living is a vic., with the cur. of Winford-Eagle annexed, in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £161. The church is dedicated to St. Basil.

TOLLER-PORCORUM, a par., partly in the hunds. of Beaminster, Redhone, and Tollerford, co. Dorset, 10 miles N.W. of Dorchester, its post town, and 8 N.E. of Bridport. It comprises the tythg. of Kingcombe. Large quantities of swine were formerly bred here, hence the distinguishing name of Porcorum, or Swine's Toller. There are chalk pits and stone quarries. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £180. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The register dates from 1671. The parochial charities produce about £33 per annum, of which £21 go to Browne's school, which also shares with the parish of Toller-Fratrum.

TOLLERTON, a par. in the S. div. of the wap. of Bingham, co. Nottingham, 4 miles S.E. of Nottingham, its post town, and 15 N.W. of Melton Mowbray. The village, which takes its name from Torlaston, an ancient proprietor in the reign of Stephen, is situated on a branch of the river Trent. The soil consists of a strong, stiff clay, with marl. The surface is in some parts hilly. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £435. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, suffered much in the civil wars, but has recently been nearly rebuilt. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. The principal residence is Tollerton Hall.

TOLLERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Alne, wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 4 miles S. of Easingwold, and 9¾ from York. It is a station on the North-Eastern railway. The village is situated near the banks of the small river Kyle, where, in 1815, part of an ancient vessel was discovered. There are brick and tile kilns, and flax and corn mills. The Wesleyans have a chapel, at which a Sunday-school is held. There is a day-school for both sexes. The soil is of various qualities, with a subsoil of clay. Sir G. O. Wombwell, Bart., is lord of the manor. A fair for the sale of sheep, cattle, &c., is held on the 15th August.

TOLLESBURY, a par. in the hund. of Thurstable, co. Essex, 9 miles S.E. of Kelvedon, its post town, and the same distance N.E. of Maldon. It is a fishing village, situated near South Fleet Creek, at the mouth of the river Blackwater. At the former place are extensive beds of oysters. A large portion of the land is marsh. It is a coast-guard station. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £484, in the patron. of trustees. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The register dates from 1564. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There is a National school, erected in 1853. The Independents have a chapel, with a burial-ground adjoining. A fair is held on the last Thursday and Friday in June.

TOLLESHUNT D'ARCY, a par. in the hund. of Thurstable, co. Essex, 7 miles S.E. of Kelvedon, its post town, and the same distance N.E. of Maldon. The village is situated near North Fleet Creek, and is bounded on the S.E. by the river Blackwater. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £130. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. In the N. aisle is D'Arcy's chapel. The register dates from 1560. The parochial charities produce about £26 per annum. J. G. Rebow, Esq., is lord of the manor. In the vicinity is an old moated seat of the D'Arcys.

TOLLESHUNT-KNIGHTS, a par. in the hund. of Thurstable, co. Essex, 5 miles S.E. of Kelvedon, its post town, and 9 N.E. of Maldon. The village, which is ancient, is situated on the Roman way from Maldon to Colchester. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £488, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains tombs of the Pateshall family, and the effigy of a Knight Templar, all much defaced. The register dates from 1650. There is also a district church at Tiptree Heath, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £150. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum. Near the manor-house of Barnewalden some Roman pavements were discovered.

TOLLESHUNT-MAJOR, or BECKINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of Thurstable, co. Essex, 7 miles S.E. of Kelvedon, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Maldon. The proper designation of the village is Tolleshunt-Malger. It has in the vicinity a brick-turreted gate of the old seat of the Beckinghams, who held the manor till 1636. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £150. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, contains some old tombs. The register dates from 1720. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. The Independents have a chapel.

TOLLYMORE, a demesne in the bar. of Upper Iveagh, co. Down, Ireland, 2 miles from Castlewellan, and 12 S.W. of Downpatrick, near Dundrum Bay, now the seat of Earl Roden.

TOLPUDDLE, a par. in the hund. of Piddletown, Dorchester div. of co. Dorset, 7 miles N.E. of Dorchester, its post town, and 7 N. of the Moreton railway station. The village is situated on the river Trent or Piddle. The par. comprises the hmlts. of Park and Southover. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £240, in the patron of Christ Church, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. John. The chancel was rebuilt in 1840. The register dates from 1649. The parochial charities consist of a share with the parish of Moreton. There is a National school, erected in 1857 at the expense of E. St. John, Esq., who is lord of the manor. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

TOLTINGTROUGH, a hund. in the lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, contains the pars. of Gravesend, Ifield, Luddesdown, Meopham, Milton, Northfleet, and Nursted; comprising an area of 13,110 acres.

TOMACHAR, a hmlt. in the par. of Port of Monteith, co. Perth, Scotland.

TOMBLANDS, a vil. in the par. of St. Decuman, co. Somerset, near Watchet.

TOMBRECK, a hmlt. in the par. of Weem, co. Perth, Scotland.

TOMDEELY, or DROMDEELY, a par. in the bar. of Connello, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland. The soil is good. The parish is traversed by the river Shannon.

TOMFINLOUGH, a par. in the bar. of Lower Bunratty, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing Bohererroan and New-market-on-Fergus. The surface consists mostly of a good soil, with some bog and waste land. The road from Six-mile Bridge to Ennis traverses the interior. There are traces of silver ore. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Kilfinaghty, £277, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is in ruins. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and several schools. Ballycar is the chief residence. Ralahine Castle still stands. Ancient earthworks are seen.

TOMGRANEY, a par. in the bar. of Upper Tulla, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing the post town of Scarriff (which see). The surface consists mostly of a good soil, with some bog. The parish is traversed by the road from Killaloe to Portumna, and is partly bounded by Scarriff Bay, on Lough Derg. Petty sessions are held occasionally. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. £341. The church is old, but has been recently repaired. There are three Roman Catholic chapels and two private schools. An abbey was founded here at an early period, which suffered from repeated attacks of the Danes, but was rebuilt about 1165. There are ruins of Tomgraney Castle. Limestone and granite occur, and lead ore has been traced. A fair is held monthly.

TOMHAGGARD, a par. in the bar. of Bargy, co. Wexford, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Bridgetown. The surface consists of good soil, and is well cultivated. The par. is crossed by the road from Wexford to Kilmore, and includes Tacumshin Bay. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with two others £350, in the patron. of the bishop. The church having long been in ruins, the Protestants attend divine worship at Kilturk. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and three public schools. The chief residence is Bargy Castle. St. Hune's well is within the parish. A feast is kept on the 26th July, being patron day.

TOMINTOUL, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of Kirkmichael, co. Banff, Scotland, 14 miles S.E. of Grantown, and 46 S.W. of Banff. The village is situated on the road from Grantown to Braemar and Aberdeen, overlooking the river Aven. It consists of one single street and a central square, most of the houses being one storied. Fairs are held on the last Thursday in July (old style), and on a Tuesday in May, August, September, October, and November.

TOMREGAN, a par. in the bars. of Lower Loughtee and Tullyhaw, cos. Cavan and Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, including Ballyconnell, its post town. The surface is mountainous, consisting generally of waste land. The parish is crossed by the road from Belturbet to Swanlinbar, and by the river Woodford. It contains the town of Ballyconnell (which see) and a part of Slieve Russell. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Kilmore, val. £478, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built about 1786 by Colonel Montgomery, and enlarged in 1820, partly by means of a loan and gift from the late Board of First Fruits. It stands on the road to Ballinamore and Forms. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, a meeting-house for Wesleyans, several public and two private schools. The principal residence is Ballyconnell House, on the river Woodford. Silver, iron, lead, coal, granite, and limestone are found. Several singular caves are to be seen in the mountains.

TONAGHTY, a par. in the bar. of Carra, co. Mayo, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 7 miles N. of Ballinrobe. The surface consists of good soil skirting the lake of Carcownaron. The par. includes the petty sessions town of Ballyglass (which see). The living is an imp. rect. and vic. The principal residences are Mount Pleasant and Towerhill.

TONBRIDGE, a lowey in the lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, contains the market towns of Tonbridge and Tonbridge Wells, also the pars. of Hadlow and Tonbridge, with part of Caple or Capel, comprising an area of 20,660 acres.

TONBRIDGE, or TUNBRIDGE, a par. and market town in the lowey of Tonbridge, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 15 miles S.W. of Maidstone, and 30 S.E. of London by road, or 41 by the London and South-Eastern railway, on which it is a junction station, where the branch line turns off for Tonbridge Wells and Hastings. The par. includes, besides the market town of Tonbridge, the chplrs. of Hildenborough and Southborough, and the greater part of the market town and watering-place of Tonbridge Wells. It derives its name from the Tun, one of the six streams of the Medway, which here unite, rendering the river navigable for barges of 40 tons. The manor anciently belonged to the archbishops of Canterbury, and at the time of the Domesday survey was held as part of the honour of Hadlow, or Haslow, by Richard Fitz-Gilbert, or Richard de Tonbridge, afterwards Earl of Clare. Under his protection the town rose into a place of importance, being defended by a strong castle, which was subsequently taken by William Rufus, and in the baronial wars by Prince Edward, son of Henry III., in which latter siege the town was burnt by the garrison. Prince Edward was entertained here on his return from the Holy Land, and granted certain immunities to the priory for canons of St. Augustine, founded in the reign of Henry I. by Richard de Clare, first Earl of Hertford. In 1295, Edward I. summoned the borough to return two members to parliament, and confiscated the castle on account of the rebellion of Hugh de Audley. It was afterwards given to the Staffords, who having forfeited it in the reign of Henry VIII., Queen Elizabeth gave it to the Careys. It is now in ruins, but a tower-gateway remains. The town, which occupies a gentle declivity, consists chiefly of one principal street, broad, and partially paved. It contains a townhall and market house, two branch banks, a savings-bank, literary and scientific institution, union poorhouse at Pembury, mechanics' institution, established in 1850, public library, and a stone bridge, built in 1775, besides four small ones over the several branches of the Medway, which here becomes navigable for barges, and has a spacious wharf, near the bridge, whence the timber brought from the Weald is sent down the Medway. There are also breweries, maltings, corn and gunpowder mills, an iron foundry, tannery, railway-carriage house and workshops, occupying a site of 10 acres adjoining the station, and numerous establishments for the manufacture of Tonbridge ware—as toys, dressing-cases, snuff-boxes, tea-chests, &c.—made out of holly, yew, cherry, and other woods. A considerable business is done in the general and carrying trades by means of the railway and the river Medway. The population of the parish in 1861 was 21,001, but of the town 7,147. It gives name to the hundred of Tonbridge, for which the sessions are held here on the second and last Tuesdays in every month. It is the head of a Poor-law Union, embracing 10 parishes, and of new County Court and superintendent registry districts. The surrounding country is fertile and well wooded, and hops are largely cultivated. The subsoil is Wealden clay and soft ragstone, interspersed with beds of secondary ironstone, which give rise to the chalybeate springs. About half a mile from the town, on the Wells road, is a chalybeate spring, as good as those at the Wells, but not much used. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, gross value about £1,000. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is old, with a tower and eight bells. In the interior are some monuments, including one to R. Children, by Roubiliac; and that of James Alexander, of Somerhill, a great benefactor of the town, who died in 1848. In addition to the parish church are the district churches of St. Stephen, Hildenborough, Southborough, and St. Thomas, the livings of which are all perpet. curs., varying in val. from £300 to £120. The church of St. Stephen, erected in 1852, is situated a little way out of the town, on the road to Tonbridge Wells (which see). There are chapels for Independents, Baptists, Wesleyans, and Free Methodists. The local charities include two sets of almshouses, and the endowment of the grammar school founded in 1553 by Lord Mayor Judde, who was a native of this town. The grammar school was lately rebuilt by the Skinners' Company, under whose management it is conducted, assisted by the advice of the warden and fellows of All Souls' College, Oxford. Its revenues now exceed £5,000, and it has 29 exhibitions to various colleges, tenable for four years. There are besides National, infant, and Sunday schools. The market is held on the first and third Tuesdays in each month, and a fair on the 11th October.

TONBRIDGE WELLS, a market town and watering place, chiefly in the par. of Tonbridge, as above, and partly in the pars. of Speldhurst in Kent and Frant in Sussex, 18 miles S.W. of Maidstone, and 36 S.E. from London by road, or 46 by the Hastings branch of the London and South-Eastern railway, on which it is a station. This town, which is situated in a healthy spot, has grown up since the reign of James I., when the medicinal properties of the Wells were first discovered by Dudley Lord North, whilst on a visit to Eridge Castle, the seat of the Earl of Abergavenny. The water is chalybeate, containing steely particles, marine salts, oily and ochreous matter, and a volatile vitriolic spirit. The Wells were visited by Queen Henrietta Maria, on the occasion of the birth of the prince, afterwards Charles II.; but there being then no houses within six miles, she was obliged to camp on the downs with her suite. They were frequently visited by Catherine of Braganza, wife of Charles II., by Queen Anne, and by her present Majesty in 1834, and again in 1849. The town has been much enlarged of late years, and there are numerous hotels and lodging-houses, assembly rooms, Calverley Park and Promenade, and the Wells House, situated near the centre of the town, with a portico or piazza in front, and approached by a parade 525 feet in length. The principal public buildings are the townhall, in the Calverley-road; a new market-house, built of Calverley sandstone; the corn exchange, formerly the theatre; a police station or sessions house; the infirmary and dispensary; the Victoria schools, founded in 1834 by the Queen and the late Duchess of Kent; a mechanics' institute; literary and scientific society, with museum and library of 2,000 volumes attached, a savings-bank and three branch banks. The boundaries of the town are Mount Sion, where the Presbyterians had a chapel; Ephraim, where the Baptists had theirs; Mount Pleasant or Calverley Park, and Bishop's Down. The oldest church is that of King Charles-the-Martyr, situated near the end of the Parade; the other churches are all modern. Trinity Church was built in 1827, at a cost of £12,000; Christ Church in 1841; St. John's Church in 1858; and St. James's Church, recently completed. The cemetery is situated on the London road. The population of the town in 1851 was 10,587, and in 1861, 13,807. It is governed under a local Act, and the town commissioners meet at the townhall. The principal industry carried on is the manufacture of Tonbridge ware. Tonbridge Wells is a polling-place for the western division of the county, and a petty sessions town, the magistrates holding their meetings at the townhall every Monday. A new County Court is held monthly. The horticultural society holds several exhibitions in the course of the year, and races take place annually in August, on a circular course of one mile 246 yards. A newspaper is published weekly on Friday. The principal seats in the vicinity are Eridge Park, of the Earl of Abergavenny; Bayham Abbey, of the Marquis of Camden; Tunbridge House, Frant, and further off the castles of Penshurst and Hever. In a valley adjoining Rusthall Common, about a mile from the town, are the Toad and other rocks, from 10 to 20 feet high, and remarkable for their singular shapes; and beyond these are the High Rocks, in Sussex. There are chapels for Roman Catholic, Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists, Baptists, and Countess of Huntingdon's Connexion. A Church of England proprietary school was established here in 1845; and there are Free, British, National, infant, and charity schools. Market day is Friday.

TONE, a river of co. Somerset, rises near Brompton Ralph, and joins the Parret at Borough Bridge.

TONEROE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Dunkellin, co. Galway, Ireland, 2 miles S.E. of Oranmore.

TONER'S-PUDDLE. See TURNER'S-PUDDLE, co. Dorset.

TONG, or TONGE, a par. in the hund. of Milton, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 1½ mile N.E. of Sittingbourne, its post town, and 5 miles N.W. of Faversham. It is situated in a marshy spot, and is centrally crossed by the old road from London to Dover. In the vicinity of the church is the site of Hengist's Castle, in which the Saxon chieftain is said to have surprised King Vortigern and his nobles. The land is fertile. At Pukeshall was anciently an hospital, dedicated to St. James. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £199. The church is dedicated to St. Giles. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. Chick's Court is the principal residence.

TONG, or TONGE, a par. in the Shiffnall div. of Brimstree hund., co. Salop, 3¼ miles S.E. of Shiffnall, its post town, and 2½ from Albrighton railway station. The village is situated near the river Werf, here formed by the union of two brooks, and on the road leading from Newport to Wolverhampton. The soil consists of strong loam upon a subsoil of white and red sandstone, which is quarried for building purposes. It is said that Charles II., before the Restoration, took refuge in a farm-house in this parish. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £83. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, originally belonged to the Abbey of Shrewsbury, but was purchased in 1410, and almost rebuilt by Isabel, relict of Sir Fulk Pembridge, who made it collegiate. The edifice is old, with a tower and six bells, independent of the great bell of Tonge, which was destroyed during the civil wars, but was recast in 1720, and lasted till 1848, when it cracked while tolling for divine service. The church has a groined roof, 8 stalls, a carved screen, several stained windows, a chantry chapel, and tombs of the Vernons and Pembridges, among which is the brass of Sir William Vernon, bearing date 1467. The parochial charities produce about £174 per annum, of which £45 belong to Harris and Pierrepont school, £5 to Sunday-schools, and £24 to almshouses. The principal residence is Tonge Castle, erected on the site of the old castle by George Durant, Esq., in the last century, which contains many valuable pictures and cabinets. The mansion has been recently purchased, together with the estate of Captain Durant, by the Earl of Bradford, who is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

TONG, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Birstall, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 6 miles S.W. of Leeds, its post town, and 5 S.E. of Bradford. It is a joint station with Birkenshaw on the Batley branch of the Great Northern railway. The village is situated in a hilly country abounding in coal and ironstone. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the woollen and worsted manufactories, and in the making of rope and twine. The tnshp. includes the hmlts. of Cutler Height, Tong Street, Ryecroft, Topshaw Moor, and Westgate Hill. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £300. The church is dedicated to St. James. There is also a district church at Tong Street, the living of which is a perpet. cur.* The parochial charities produce about £21 per annum, of which £3 go to Tempest's school. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans, New Connexion, and the Primitive Methodists have chapels. Tong Hall, the principal residence, was rebuilt by Sir G. Tempest in 1702. Colonel Tempest is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

TONGE, a tnshp. in the par. of Prestwich, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 1 mile S.E. of Middleton, its post town. It is a station on the Manchester and Leeds railway. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the silk mills. The village, with the hamlet of Alkrington, forms an ecclesiastical district, containing in 1861 a population of 5,029. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150, in the patron. of the Rector of Prestwich. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, was built by aid of the Parliamentary Commissioners in 1839.

TONGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Breedon-on-the-Hill, hund. of West Goscote, co. Leicester, 6 miles N.E. of Ashby-de-la-Zouch.

TONGE-WITH-HAULGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Bolton-le-Moors, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 1 mile N.E. of Bolton. It is situated between the rivers Croal, Tong, and Bradshaw, and extends to the confines of the townships of Great and Little Bolton. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the cotton and spinning mills, and in the bleach works and paper mills. A barrow was opened near the canal in 1821, in which was discovered a bronze spear and other relics of antiquity. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £160, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is modern. The parochial charities produce about £37 per annum. In this township is Hall-i'-th'-Wood, the ancient seat of the Starkie family, where Crompton completed his invention of the spinning "mule."

TONGHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Seal, hund. of Farnham, co. Surrey, 1 mile N.W. of Seal, and 3 miles N.E. of Farnham. It is a station on the Alton and Farnham branch of the South-Western railway. It is situated on the river Blackwater.

TONGLAND, a par. in the co. of West Kirkcudbright, Scotland. It comprises the vil. of Ringford, and the ancient parish of St. Michael's, Balnacross. It is of triangular form, and is bounded on the N. by Balmaghie, on the S.E. by the Dee, and on the S.W. by Twynholm. The surface towards the N. is rocky and moorland, with two iron springs. Bargatton Loch, a triangular sheet of water, lies on the N. Queen Mary rested on Queen's Hill, after her defeat at Langside in 1568. On Kirkconnel moor is a martyr's stone, also cairns and other remains in the vicinity. The village of Tongland, which is about 3 miles N. of Kirkcudbright, stands at the confluence of the rivers Tarf and Dee. It is intersected northward by the road from Kirkcudbright to the Glenkens and Ayrshire, and westward by that from Dumfries to Wigton. This par. is in the presb. of Kirkcudbright and synod of Galloway, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is about £158. The parish church, erected in 1813, stands on the tongue of land between the river, and near the ruins of a Premonstratensian priory, founded in the 12th century by the lords of Galloway. There are besides a Free church, a parochial school, and other schools.

TONGUE, a par. in co. Sutherland, Scotland. It comprises the vils. of Skianid, Torrisdale, and Kirkiboll. It extends in length about 20 miles from N.E. to S.W., with an extreme breadth of 12 miles, and is bounded by the North Sea and by the pars. of Farr, Eddrachillis, and Durness. The surface is hilly, attaining an altitude of 1,345 feet at Ben Hatig, 3,060 feet at Ben Hope, and 2,508 feet at Ben Laighal. The parish is watered by the rivers Borgie and Melness, with lochs Ullaboll, Laighal, Maddie, Slam, and numerous small lakes. The coast line extends about 10 miles, and is divided by the Kyle of Tongue, and indented by several small creeks and by Whiten Head, the principal promontory on this part of the coast. Off the shore lie Roan and Rabbit islands. The rocks consist chiefly of gneiss, mica schist, and black manganese. At Sculmony there is a sulphur spring. Seals frequent Fraisgill Cave, and fish abound in the neighbouring seas. In the woods are red deer, black game, eagles, hawks, and foxes. There is an extensive tract of moss land, which is cut for fuel. The village, which is about 42 miles N.W. of Dornock, is situated on the Kyle of Tongue, near Whiten Head, and was formerly called Kintail, signifying the "head of the sea." The parish is traversed by two main lines of road—one following the coast to Thurso, the other passing direct through the country of Golspie. This par. is the seat of a presb. in the synod of Sutherland and Caithness, and is in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is about £158. The parish church was erected in 1731, and restored in 1778. There are Free churches at Melness and Eriboll, also a parochial and two other schools, and a subscription library.

TONGUE END, a hmlt. in the par. of Bourne, co. Lincoln, 3 miles E. of Bourne.

TONTINE, a vil. in the tnshp. of Upholland, co. Lancaster, 4 miles S.W. of Wigan.

TOOLEY PARK, a hmlt. in the par. of Peckleton, hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 5 miles N.E. of Hinckley. It formerly belonged to the Earls of Leicester and the Boothbys.

TOOME, a post-office vil. in the par. of Duneane, bar. of Upper Toome, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 6 miles N.N.W. of Randalstown, and 128 miles from Dublin. At Toome Bridge is a station on the Cookstown branch of the Belfast and Northern Counties railway. It is situated between Lough Neagh and Lough Beg, on the river Bann, which is here crossed by a bridge. The village contains a police-station, where petty sessions are held. Fairs are held on the 20th April and 4th December.

TOOME, a par. in the bars. of Gorey and Scarawalsh, co. Wexford, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Gorey. The surface consists of tolerably good soil. It contains the post town, Camolin, and is traversed by the river Bann. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ferns, val. with two others, £526, in the patron. of the bishop. The principal residence is Norrismount. Here are the ruins of Ballinclare Church.

TOOME, LOWER, a bar. in co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It contains the par. of Kirkinriola and portions of Ahoghill and Duneane.

TOOME, UPPER, a bar. in co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It contains the pars. of Ballyscullion-Grange, Cranfield, Drummaul, Duneane, Slilvodan-Grange, and parts of Ahoghill, Antrim, and Ballyscullion.

TOOMORE, a par. in the bar. of Gallen, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, including Foxford, its post town. The surface is mountainous and rocky, but comprises a proportion of good soil. It is situated near Lough Cona, and is traversed by the river Moy. The living is a vic. united with Straid. The principal residence is Moorbrook. There are flagstone quarries and slight veins of iron. In 1798 this place was occupied by the French general Humbert.

TOOMOUR, a par. in the bar. of Corran, co. Sligo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 1 mile S.E. of Ballymote, its post town. The surface is mountainous and boggy. The living is a vic. joined to Emlaghfad. Mount Dodwell is the chief residence. There are ruins of churches at Tumore and Templevaney, and several curious caves at Kesh Hill.

TOOMYVARA, a post-office vil. in the bar. of Upper Ormond, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 27 miles N. of Cashel, and 88 from Dublin. It is situated on the road from Dublin to Limerick, and contains a police station and dispensary. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and a public school. In this parish are the ruins of a preceptory of Knights Templars, and the remains of Knockane and Blane castles. Fairs are held on 5th June, 23rd July, 29th September, and 3rd November.

TOORIG, a stream of co. Cork, Ireland, falling into Youghal Bay.

TOOTHOG, a tnshp. in the par. of Cwmyoy, hund. of Ewyaslacy, co. Hereford, 10 miles N.W. of Abergavenny.

TOOTING-GRAVENEY, a par. and post town in the W. div. of Brixton hund., co. Surrey, 7 miles S.W. from London. It is situated on the road from London to Brighton, through Reigate, and near the valley of the Wandle and the South-Western railway. It is mentioned in Domesday book. The village consists of two parts, viz., Tooting Proper and Upper Tooting. In the vicinity are some extensive nursery-grounds, and a common of about 50 acres. It has a police station of the V division. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £374. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, was rebuilt in 1833. In the interior is a tomb of Sir J. Hepdon, bearing date 1670. The register dates from 1555. The parochial charities produce about £39 per annum. There are National schools for both sexes, and an infant school of recent construction. W. J. Thompson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

TOOTING, UPPER, or TOOTING-BECK, a hmlt. in the par. of Streatham, E. div. of Brixton hund., co. Surrey, 6½ miles S.W. of London, and half a mile from the Balham station, on the London and Brighton and Crystal Palace and West End railways. There is a church in that part of the hamlet adjoining Balham Hill, built in 1806, with a painted E. window. There are schools at Balham.

TOPCLIFFE, a par. and tnshp. in the waps. of Birdforth and Hallikeld, North Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Thirsk, its post town, and 2¼ S. of Topcliffe-Gate railway station. The village is situated on the river Swale, and near the Great North of England railway. The par. includes Tishford, Martin-le-Moor, and 8 other tnshps. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of York, val. £600, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to St. Colomb. The interior contains a brass of Thomas de Topcliffe and wife, date 1391. In addition to the parish church are the district churches of Baldersby, Dishforth, Martin-le-Moor, and Skipton Bridge, the livings of which are all perpet. curs., varying in val. from £120 to £30. The parochial charities produce about £209 per annum, of which £92 go to Hartforth's free grammar school, and £6 to other schools. There are besides an infant school and a chapel for Wesleyans. Here are vestiges of the ancient seat of the Percys called Maiden Bower, where Henry, the fourth Earl of Northumberland, in 1489, and Thomas, seventh earl, in 1569, were mobbed by the populace, and where, in 1646, Charles I. was delivered up by the Scots to the parliamentary commissioners upon payment of £200,000. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday after 14th April, on the 17th and 18th July, called the Great Fair, and on 8th October.

TOPCLIFFE, a hmlt. in the par. of West Ardsley, West Riding co. York, 5 miles N.W. of Wakefield.

TOPCROFT, a par. in the hund. of Loddon, co. Norfolk, 5 miles N.W. of Bungay, its post town, and 6 E. of Forncett railway station. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £366, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret. The register dates from 1560. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum, realised from poor's land, &c. There are a National school and a Sunday-school. The Independents have a chapel and school. The Rev. W. J. Smith is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

TOPITT, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Clayton, West Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Barnsley.

TOPLEY, a vil. in the par. of Munslow, co. Salop, 8 miles N.W. of Ludlow.

TOPPESFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Hinckford, co. Essex, 8 miles N.W. of Halstead, its post town, and 4 N.W. of Sible Hedingham railway station. The village, which is situated near the Roman way to Colchester, existed in the Confessor's time. In 1800 many Roman antiquities were discovered at Bradfield farm. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £900, in the patron. of the crown. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, was built in 1519; there are some old tombs, and a brass bearing date 1514. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum. There is a National school. The Independents have a chapel. J. J. W. Clarke and S. Sampson, Esqs., are lords of the manor. A fair is held on the 20th of July.

TOPSHAM, a par., seaport, and market town in the hund. of Wonford, co. Devon, 4 miles S.E. of Exeter, and 5 N. of Exmouth. It is a station on the Exmouth branch of the Great Western railway. It is situated on the left bank of the river Exe at its junction with the small river Clyst, here crossed by a bridge, and on the direct road from Exeter to Exmouth. It was anciently called Apsham, or Apsom, and was for many years the port of Exeter, which city purchased the manorial rights of the Courtenays in 1778. Since the formation of the ship canal vessels can ascend to Exeter, and the shipping trade is now transferred to that city and to Exmouth. A good general business is still done in shipbuilding, ropemaking, the coasting trade, and shipping assurance clubs, which have lately been established. The quays, building yards, and bonding warehouses are principally the property of the town council of Exeter, and of Messrs. Holmans and Davys. The town consists chiefly of one street, extending about a mile along the bank of the Exe, and terminating in the strand at the lower end of the town. The streets are paved and lighted with gas. The parish includes, besides the town of its own name, the chplry. of Countess Weir. The soil is fertile, resting on a subsoil of red gravel and sandstone. The principal residences are Wear House, the seat of Sir J. T. B. Duckworth, Bart., M.P., Grove Field House, the Retreat, and Newport House. The living is a perpet. cur.,* val. £325, in the dioc. of Exeter, and in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, is on a cliff near the centre of the town, and was enlarged in 1794; in the interior are two monuments, by Chantrey, of the Duckworths. The Independents, Reformed Wesleyans, Wesleyans, and Unitarians have chapels, and the two last schools attached. There are National schools, partly endowed, and also a good museum of local antiquities and fossils belonging to F. W. L. Ross, Esq., of Broadway House, Fore Street, open to the public on Mondays. The charities produce about £250 per annum. Saturday is market day. A fair for pedlery is held on the Thursday preceding the 19th of July.

TOPSHAW MOOR, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Tong, West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Bradford.

TOR BAY, a spacious haven on the S. coast of co. Devon. It lies between Berry Head and Hob's Nose, under Tor Abbey, and is 3 miles broad by 3½ deep, with 6 to 9 fathoms water. Here William III. anchored in November, 1688.

TORBREX, a vil. in the par. of St. Ninian's, co. Stirling, Scotland, near Bannockburn.

TORBRIAN, a par. in the hund. of Haytor, co. Devon, 3½ miles S.W. of Newton Bushell, its post town. The village is near the South Devon railway. The subsoil abounds with limestone of excellent quality. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £286. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, has three sepulchral chapels, and contains a carved screen and pulpit, a piscina, old font, and porch ornamented with sculptured angels. In the churchyard is an ancient cross.

TORC, the middle lake of Killarney, co. Kerry, Ireland, lying under Torc Mountain, which rises 1,764 feet above sea-level, and gives name to a fall of 60 feet, formed by the Devil's Stream.

TORCROSS, a hmlt. in the par. of Stokenham, co. Devon, 4 miles S.E. of Kingsbridge. It is a coastguard station.

TORKINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Stockport, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 3½ miles S.E. of Stockport.

TORKSEY, a par. in the waps. of Lawress and Well, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 8 miles S.E. of Gainsborough, its post town, 3 N. of Newton-on-Trent, and 9 N.W. of Lincoln. The village is situated on the road from Gainsborough to Lincoln at the confluence of the Fosse Dyke with the river Trent at the ferry. The par. includes the hmlts. of Hardwick and Brampton. It is supposed to be the spot where Paulinus baptized his converts in 630, and where the Danes wintered in 873. At the time of the Domesday survey it was a large town containing 200 burgesses, and in Leland's time had two churches and an Austin priory founded by John, the site of which was given to the Hobbys. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £42. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, was partly rebuilt in 1821. The parochial charities produce about £13 per annum. There is a school for both sexes.

TORLETON, or TARLTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Coates, hund. of Crowthorne, co. Gloucester, 5 miles S.W. of Cirencester.

TORMARTON, a par. in the lower div. of Grumbalds Ash hund., co. Gloucester, 12½ miles N.W. of Chippenham, its post town, 4 E. of Chipping Sodbury, and 5½ S.E. of Yate railway station. The village is on the old coach road from Bath to Gloucester. Stone of excellent quality is quarried. The soil is loamy, with a subsoil of oolite. The living is a rec.,* with the vic. of Acton-Turville and the cur. of West Littleton annexed, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £800. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an old structure, and has been restored at the expense of the present rector. The interior contains a brass of great antiquity, and a tomb of the founder. There is a chapel-of-ease at West Littleton. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There are a mixed National school and an infant school. The Duke of Beaufort is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

TORMOHAM, a par. in the hund. of Haytor, co. Devon, 5 miles S.E. of Newton Bushel, and 8 S.W. of Teignmouth. It is situated on Tor Bay, and comprises most of the promontory, which, projecting eastward into the English Channel, divides Tor Bay from Babbicombe Bay. The parish of Tormoham anciently belonged to William de Briwere, whose youngest daughter conveyed it in marriage to the Mohuns, who subsequently sold it to the Ridgways, and in 1768 the Earl of Donegal again sold it to Sir R. Palk, grandfather of its present owner, Sir Lawrence Palk, Bart. The parish, which is about 3 miles long by 2 broad, includes the old vil. of Tor, or Tor Moham, and the watering-place and seaport of Torquay. The population in 1801 amounted to only 838, but in 1851 had increased to 11,474, and in 1861 to 16,419, of which number the greater part were in Torquay. Limestone is extensively quarried in the Park, Waddon and Haldon Hills near Torquay, and marble near Marychurch. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Cockington, in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £190. The church, situated 1 mile W. of Torquay, was thoroughly repaired in 1849. In the interior are an antique font, carved screen, and several monuments. In addition to the parish church, are St. Luke's chapel-of-ease, the district parish churches of St. John's Torquay, St. Mark's Torwood, with St. Matthias chapel-of-ease, and St. Mary Magdalen or Upton, situated on the high road between Tor and Torquay, and recently erected into a district parish. There is also the licensed proprietary chapel called Trinity Chapel, Torquay. The parochial charities produce about £30 per annum, exclusive of the infirmary. There are chapels for Roman Catholics, Wesleyans, Independents, Baptists, and Unitarians, National and infant schools. On a hill in this parish are the ruins of St. Michael's Chapel, also traces of a small chapel at Tor-Wood, built by Reginald de Mohun in 1251, and the remains of Tor Abbey, founded in 1196 by William de Briwere for Premonstratensian canons, but now forming part of the family mansion of the Cary family, which is situated in the south-western part of the parish. The parish comprises the two manors of Tor-Wood and Tor Abbey, the former the property of Sir Lawrence Palk, Bart., and the latter of R. S. S. Cary, Esq., who are proprietors of the whole of the land, with the exception of about 9 acres belonging to Lord Sinclair.

TORMORE, an islet on the coast of co. Donegal, Ireland, 10 miles W. of Ardara.

TOROGAY, an island of the Outer Hebrides, coast of Scotland, between North Uist and Bernera Islands.

TOROSAY, a par. in the district of Mull, co. Argyle, Scotland. This par., which is nearly 12 miles square, comprises the quoad sacra pars. of Salen and Kingalochspelvie. It is bounded on the N.E. and S. by the Sound of Mull, on the W. by the par. of Kilfinechen, and on the N.W. by the par. of Kilninian. Its surface for the most part is of a mountainous character, rising at Benmore to 3,097 feet above sea-level, and at Sugar-loaf Hill to 2,800 feet. The parish is watered by several small fresh-water lakes, among which are Lochs Bay, Spelvie, and Don. The prevailing rocks are trap, sandstone, and a coarse kind of limestone. The village, which is about 15 miles N.W. of Oban, is situated on Mull Sound and Loch Linnie, and has communication by a road along the E. and S. coasts, and by another traversing the interior. At Achnacraig is a ferry of 8 miles to Kirrera Island, and near the same spot are the ruins of Duart Castle. The par. is in the presb. of Mull and synod of Argyle. The stipend of the minister is about £172. The par. church was erected in 1783, and was restored in 1832. At Kinloch-Spelvie, and at Salen, are government churches, with the status of quoad sacra parish churches. At Torosa and Salen are Free church preaching stations. There are four parochial schools, besides other schools. The principal seats are Achnacroish House and Lochbury House. Three fairs are held on the farm of Fishenish in May, August, and October.

TORPENHOW, a par. in the hund. of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 7 miles S. of Wigton, its post town, 2½ N.W. of Ireby, and 3½ from the Leigate station on the Maryport and Carlisle line of railway. It is situated near the river Ellen, and about a mile to the E. of the Carlisle and Cockermouth turnpike road. The parish is divided into the four townships of Bewaldeth and Snittlegarth, Blennerhasset and Kirkland, Bothel and Threapland, and Torpenhow and Whitrigg. The soil is various, with a subsoil of limestone and gravel, and traces of coal. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £305, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has a curiously carved oak roof. The interior contains several old monuments. The parochial charities produce about £65, of which sum £50 go to the free school situated at Bothel. W. J. Charlton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

TORPHICHEN, a par. in the co. of Linlithgow, Scotland. It comprises a vil. of its own name, and that of Blackridge. It extends in length about 10 miles from N.E. to S.W., with an extreme breadth of 2½ miles; and is bounded by the pars. of Linlithgow and Bathgate. The surface rises at Cairn Naple 1,498 feet above sea-level. There are whinstone, limestone, and sandstone quarries; and iron, stone, and coal have been partially worked. Silver-ore has been found in the limestone, but not in sufficient quantities to be profitably worked. There are a paper-mill, two meal-mills, and a woollen-mill. The parish is traversed by the central road from Edinburgh to Glasgow, and by the road from Bathgate to Falkirk. The village is about 2½ miles N.W. of Bathgate, and 4½ S.W. of Linlithgow, both of which are railway stations. It is situated on the river Avon, and on the road from Bathgate to Falkirk. It is of irregular form and of great antiquity. In its vicinity are a lake covering 22 acres, and the ruins of a preceptory of the Knights of St. John, founded by David I., which had the privilege of sanctuary, and was granted, with the title of baron, to Sandilands, the last preceptor. There is a round camp on Boudane Hill, and there are Druid stones in the neighbourhood. This par. is in the presb. of Linlithgow and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The stipend of the minister is about £163. The parish church was erected in 1756. There are also a Free church, two parochial libraries, and a parochial school; and at Blackridge, in this parish, a Free church preaching station, and a parochial school. The principal seats are Wallhouse and Lochcote.

TORPOINT, a chplry. in the par. of St. Anthony, S. div. of East hund., co. Cornwall, 3 miles W. of Devonport. The village occupies a peninsula, formed by the Tamar, the Lynher, and St. John's Lake, abounding in fish. In the vicinity are many seats, of which Trematon Castle is the principal. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £130. There are chapels for Independents and Wesleyans. Sir C. Carew founded a free grammar-school here, and there is also a National school.

TORQUAY, a tnshp., chplry., seaport, market-town, and watering-place in the par. of Tor Moham, hund. of Haytor, co. Devon, 6½ miles S.E. of Newton-Bushell, and 12 N.E. of Dartmouth, of which it is a subport. It is a station on the Torquay branch of the South Devon railway, and has regular communication by steam-packet with Plymouth, Portsmouth, and Southampton. Torquay is of recent growth, having consisted at the end of the last century of only a few fishermen's huts. It is now a thriving watering-place, and is well-built, owing to the abundance of a sort of transition limestone or marble, which is easily quarried, and is susceptible of as fine a polish as the best Italian marble. This spot first attracted notice during the French war, when the officers and invalids belonging to the Channel Fleet were landed here to recruit their health, whilst the fleet anchored in Torbay. The town lies in a sheltered cove at the north-eastern extremity of Torbay, being built along the strand and up the acclivities of the hills which, on every side except the S., encircle it, giving to it an almost Italian climate, so that myrtles, fuchsias, aloes, citrons, &c., flourish in the open air. The lower part of the town, occupied chiefly by shops and business premises, is built round three sides of the small tidal harbour, which is about 500 feet long by 30 feet wide, and contains an area of about 8 acres. It has a quay and a pier, which is used also as a promenade. In this part of the town most of the streets are narrow and irregular; but on the slopes of the hills above are numerous terraces or tiers of marine villas, approached at either end by a winding road, and in other places by flights of steps, which also ascend to the upper tiers and the detached hills on either side. These latter are studded with houses surrounded by gardens, and often hidden in the luxuriant foliage of trees. Here are all the requisites for a watering-place, including a club, with billiard and reading-rooms attached, assembly-rooms, bank, several hotels, a literary and scientific institution, subscription and circulating libraries, a museum of geology and natural history, and public and private baths of all kinds. The principal public buildings are the Town-hall, in Lower Union-street, the Union-hall, also in Union-street, appropriated for public meetings, theatrical exhibitions, and popular lectures; the Torbay dispensary and infirmary, erected in 1850, and the new market-house, erected under an Act of Parliament obtained in 1849. The town is lighted with gas, and paved, and is now well supplied with water brought in iron pipes from springs in the neighbourhood. The sanitary regulations are under a local board of health, elected by the ratepayers. Petty sessions are held at the town-hall every Monday. Four guardians attend the Poor-law Board of Newton Abbott weekly. A little to the E. of the town on the Torwood road are the public gardens, comprising about 4 acres. Two weekly publications, called the Torquay Directory and South Devon Journal, and the Torquay Chronicle, are published in the town. The parish church of Tor Moham is situated about one mile W. of the town; and on the road between Tor and Torquay is the district parish church of Upton, erected in 1849. There are besides, in the town, two chapels of the Establishment—St. John's, at Montpelier-place, and Trinity Chapel, at Park-hill; a Free Episcopal church, recently opened, and chapels belonging to the Independents, Baptists, Wesleyans, and Unitarians. The Roman Catholics attend the chapel at Tor Abbey, the seat of R. S. S. Carey, Esq., situated in the south-western part of the parish. There are several dispensaries and charitable institutions, and National and other schools. In the limestone and marble quarries numerous fossil shells and madrepores, with remains of the extinct elephant and rhinoceros, are found, and on the beach a great variety of pebbles. Near the town is a curious cavern, called Kent's Hole. A regatta takes place annually in July or August. Market-days are Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. A fair is held on Easter Monday.

TORR, a hmlt. in the par. of Nettlecombe, co. Somerset, 3 miles S.W. of Watchet.

TORR, or BIGHOUSE, a hmlt. near Port Skerry, co. Sutherland, Scotland.

TORRANCE, an ancient par. in co. Lanark, Scotland, 7 miles S.E. of Glasgow. It is now joined to Kilbride.

TORRANCE, a vil. in the par. of Campsie, co. Stirling, Scotland, 2 miles W. of Kirkintilloch, and 3 S. of Lennoxtown. There are an established mission station, and a parochial school.

TORRAY, a vil. in the par. of Nigg, co. Kincardine, Scotland.

TORRE, a hmlt. in the par. of Tor Moham, hund. of Haytor, co. Devon, 1 mile from Torquay. It is a station on the Torquay branch of the South Devon railway.

TORRIDON, a sea-loch in the western div. of co. Ross, Scotland, near Gairloch. It is about 13 miles in length, and has a good herring fishery.

TORRINGTON, BLACK. See BLACK-TORRINGTON, co. Devon.

TORRINGTON, EAST, a par. in the W. div. of Wraggoe wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles N.E. of Wragby. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. with the vic. of Wragby united, £350. The church is dedicated to St. Michael.

TORRINGTON, GREAT, a par., market-town, and municipal borough, in the hund. of Fremington, co. Devon, 32 miles N.W. of Exeter, and 7 S.E. of Bideford railway station. It was anciently called Cheping Toriton, and before the Conquest was held by Editha, mother of Harold. The castle was in existence at the Norman conquest, and dismantled in the reign of Richard II. The manor came to Richard de Merton, subsequently to Margaret, Countess of Richmond and mother of Henry VII., who frequently resided here, and was given by Queen Mary to the Bassets. It now belongs to the Hon. M. Rolle. During the civil war the town changed hands several times, but was finally taken by Sir Thomas Fairfax for the parliament in 1646, when the church was blown up, and rebuilt in 1651. The castle site is now used as a bowling-green; and close by is a column, erected in commemoration of the battle of Waterloo. From the time of Edward I. to Edward III., the borough returned two members to parliament, but in 1368 petitioned to be relieved of the burden; it is, however, a polling-place for the northern division of the county. The town occupies an eminence near the banks of the river Torridge, by the side of which a canal, nearly five miles long, was cut in 1823 by the late Lord Rolle, to below Weare Gifford. There are bridges to Taddiport and Frithelstone, and a lofty stone aqueduct of five arches at Beam. The streets are partially paved, and lighted with gas. The population in 1851 was 3,308, and in 1861, 3,298. The public buildings are the town-hall, on arches; the new market-house, with hall above, erected by the town council in 1842; the union workhouse, built in 1837; a savings-bank, two branch banks, and literary and mutual improvement societies, each with library and reading-room. The woollen manufacture has become extinct, but the making of gloves and tanning is carried on. The town was first incorporated by Queen Mary, and, under the Municipal Act, is governed by a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors. The only municipal revenue arises from tolls, fairs, and markets. Petty sessions for the division are held every alternate Saturday, and for the borough every third Wednesday. The county-court sits alternate months. The poor-law guardians meet every other Saturday, and the Poor-law Union comprises 23 parishes. It is also the head of a superintendent registry district. Torrington gives name to a deanery in the archdeaconry and diocese of Exeter. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £162, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, was substantially restored in 1863. St. Giles-in-the-Wood, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £95, was originally a daughter church of Torrington, but is now a separate parish. There are chapels for Wesleyans, Independents, and Baptists, also National and blue-coat schools, the latter endowed with an income of about £50, by the late Lord Rolle, who also founded almshouses for ten poor persons. The parochial charities produce about £300 per annum. A cemetery, with lodge and chapels, has recently been formed without the town. Mr. Rolle's hounds hunt round here. Torrington gave title of earl to General Monk, and gives that of viscount to the Byngs. Market-day is on Saturday. Three fairs are held annually in May, July, and October. There is a large cattle market in March, and a monthly cattle market has been recently established.

TORRINGTON, LITTLE, a par. and tnshp. in the hund. of Shebbear, co. Devon, 2 miles S. of Great Torrington, and 8 S.E. of Bideford. It is situated on the river Torridge. The par. includes the hmlt. of Taddiport, and the manors of Taddiport and Little Torrington. The principal seats are Liney, of Mrs. Stevens, who is lady of the manor; and Cross, of Sir Trevor Wheeler, Bart. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £460, in the patron. of the trustees of Lord Rolle and others. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, contains several ancient monuments. There are a chapel-of-ease at Taddiport, and an infant school; and at Little Taddington there is a parochial school. The charities produce about £35 per annum.

TORRINGTON, WEST, a par. in the W. div. of Wraggoe wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3 miles N.E. of Wragby, its post town, and 4 N.E. of Snelland railway station. The living is a vic. annexed to the rect. of East Torrington, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The register dates from 1638. A free school has recently been erected. The Free and Reformed Methodists have each a chapel.

TORRISDALE, a vil. in the par. of Tongue, co. Sutherland, Scotland, 6 miles N.E. of Tongue, near the river Borgie, which flows into Torrisdale Bay.

TORRISHOLME, a hmlt. in the par. of Lancaster, hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 2 miles N.W. of Lancaster. The village is situated between Morecambe Bay and the river Lune.

TORRY, a vil. in the par. of Torryburn, co. Fife, Scotland.

TORRYBURN, a par. in the district of Dunfermline, co. Fife, Scotland. It comprises a vil. of its own name, and those of Torry Newmills, Crombie, and Crombie Point. It extends about 5 miles in length, with a varying breadth of from 1 mile to 2 miles, and is bounded by the Frith of Forth, by the Perthshire parish of Culross, and the Fifeshire parishes of Carnock and Dunfermline. The surface is diversified, with a good soil, and the land is in an excellent state of cultivation. Coal and sandstone and ironstone are productively worked—the former occurring in seams of from 2 to 11 feet in thickness. Here is a small harbour, and one at Crombie. The parish is traversed by the road from Dunfermline to Alloa, and is within easy access of the Stirling and Dunfermline railway, which has stations at Oakley and East Grange. The village is about half a mile E. of Newmills, and 4 W. of Dunfermline, and is situated on the Frith of Forth. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in weaving and salt-making, and some in the neighbouring ironworks of Oakley. This par. is in the presb. of Dunfermline and synod of Fife. The stipend of the minister is about £179. There are a Free church, parochial, and other schools. The principal seat is Torry House. A fair is held on the second Wednesday in July.

TORSAY, one of the Slate islands, co. Argyle, Scotland, 11 miles S.W. of Oban. It is situated between the islands of Seil, Shuna, and Luing, and is of an irregular oval form, varying from 1 mile to 3 miles in extent. The surface consists of a smooth hill, 200 feet high, clothed with verdure, and joined towards the W. by a ridge of lower altitude. It has communication with Luing island by means of a rocky bar not exceeding 100 yards in length, which can be crossed from ebb till half tide.

TORTEVAL, a par. in the Island of Guernsey, Channel Islands, 5½ miles S.W. of St. Peter's Port. It is situated in a hilly district at the western extremity of the island. Near the promontory of Prevôte Point is a cavern nearly 200 feet in length by 50 in breadth, called La Cave Mahie. The living is a rect. with that of Forest parish united, in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £150, in the patron. of the Governor of Guernsey. The church, dedicated to St. Philip, was erected in 1817, at a cost of £3,000.

TORTHORWALD, a par. in the district of Annandale, co. Dumfries, Scotland. It comprises the vil. of its own name, and those of Collin and Roucan. It extends in length about 6½ miles from S. to N., with a mean breadth of about 1 mile, and is bounded by the parishes of Tinwald, Lochmaben, Mouswald, Caerlaverock, and Dumfries. The greatest elevation is Beacon Hill. The western boundary is traced by Lochar Water, which separates this parish from that of Dumfries. The land is partly arable and partly moorland, but much of Locher Moss has recently been reclaimed. The prevailing rock is graywacke, and marl is abundant. In this parish are traces of two treble-ditched British camps, 90 feet in diameter, and a cairn and Druid stones on the moor. The parish is crossed by the roads from Dumfries to Lochmaben, and from Dumfries to Annan, and by the Glasgow and South-Western railway, which has a station at Racks, near Collin, but which is only used on Dumfries market-days. The village, which is about 4 miles E. of Dumfries, is situated on the river Locher, and on the road from Dumfries to Annan. Many of the occupants are employed in weaving. This par. is in the presb. and synod of Dumfries. The stipend of the minister is about £240. The parish church was erected in 1782, and enlarged in the years 1791 and 1809. There are parochial schools at Torthorwald and at Collin. Torthorwald gave title of baron to a son of the Regent Morton, of Torthorwald Castle, now in ruins.

TORTINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Avisford, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 2 miles S.W. of Arundel, its post town, and near the Ford railway station. The village is situated on the river Arun. Here was formerly an Austin priory, founded in the reign of King John by the Lady Alicia Corbet, which at the Dissolution possessed a revenue of £101 4*s.* 1*d.* General Wyndham's hounds meet at Tortington Common. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £158. The church has a painted E. window representing the four evangelists, inserted in 1835, and an old sculptured font.

TORTWORTH, a par. in the upper div. of Grumbald's-Ash hund., co. Gloucester, 4 miles W. of Wootton-under-Edge, its post town, and 2 W. of the Charfield station, on the Bristol and Birmingham railway. The village is situated on the Little Avon. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £428, in the patron. of Oriel College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, contains an old font and monuments of the Throckmorton family. It was restored in 1852. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum for the restoration of the church. In this parish is a gigantic chestnut-tree.

TORVER, a tnshp. in the par. of Ulverstone, hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 11 miles N. of Ulverstone, and 6 S.W. of Hawkeshead. It is a station on the Coniston branch of the Ulverstone and Lancaster and Furness Junction railway. The village is situated near Coniston Water. The land is rocky and barren. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £59. The parochial charities produce about £15, of which £8 go to the school founded by John Fleming in 1777. The manor is royal.

TORWOOD, a vil. in the par. of Dunipace, co. Stirling, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Bannockburn, near Torwood forest, in which Wallace lay concealed, and where Mr. Cargill excommunicated Charles II. and his court.

TORWOOD MOOR, a common in the par. of Dyrfesdale, co. Dumfries, Scotland, 3 miles S. of Lockerbie, and 9 N.E. of Dumfries. Here are the ruins of Malls Castle and other Roman posts.

TORWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Blyth, Hatfield div. of Bassetlaw wap., co. Nottingham, 2 miles E. of Blyth, and 5 N.W. of East Retford.

TORY, an island near Tory Sound, co. Donegal, Ireland. It is nearly 3 miles long by half a mile broad, and has a lighthouse and the remains of two abbeys, with a round tower.

TOSELAND, a hund., co. Huntingdon, contains the pars. of Abbotsley, Buckden, Diddington, Eynesbury, Fen Stanton, Godmanchester, Great Gransden, Hail Weston, Hemingford Abbots, Hemingford Grey, Hilton, Midloe, St. Neot's, Offord-Cluny, Offord-Darey, Great Paxton, Little Paxton, Southoe, Great Staughton, Tetworth, Toseland, Waresley, Yelling, and part of Papworth St. Agnes, comprising an area of 55,380 acres.

TOSELAND, a par. in the hund. of the same name, co. Huntingdon, 5 miles N.E. of St. Neot's, and 53 from London. The village is situated near the ancient Ermine Street. The surface, though elevated, is level, and the soil chiefly a strong clay. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Great Paxton, in the dioc. of Ely. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a Sunday-school, and the Wesleyans have a chapel.

TOSKERTON, an ancient par. of co. Wigton, Scotland, now joined to Stoneykirk.

TOSSIDE, or HOUGHTON CHAPEL, an ext.-par. place in the W. div. of Staincliff wap., West Riding co. York, 7 miles S.W. of Settle, its post town, and 11 N. of Clitheroe. It is situated on a branch of the river Ribble, and is joined with Sawley. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £90, in the patron. of the Vicar of Gisburn. The church is dedicated to St. Bartholomew.

TOSSIDE ROW, an ext.-par. place in the wap. of Staincliff, West Riding co. York, 8 miles S. of Settle.

TOSSON, GREAT and LITTLE, tnshps. in the par. of Rothbury, co. Northumberland, 2 miles S.W. of Rothbury. The village is situated on the river Coquet. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of cloth, and others in the lime quarries. The soil consists of loam and clay, with a subsoil of gravel. In the vicinity are remains of an old tower and a camp of Roman origin.

TOSTOCK, a par. in the hund. of Thedwestry, co. Suffolk, 1¼ mile W. of Elmswell railway station, and 7 miles E. of Bury St. Edmund's. The village is situated on the road from Bury to Ipswich. Here was formerly a mansion, once the residence of Lords North and Grey. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £210. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, contains some old carved benches for free seats, and has lately been thoroughly restored. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum, realised from poors' estate. P. Huddleston, Esq., is lord of the manor.

TOTHAM, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Thurstable, co. Essex, 3½ miles N.E. of Maldon, and 3 S.E. of Witham railway station. The par. includes the islet of Osey, in the Blackwater estuary. The surface comprises some elevated ground, including Beacon Hill, about 700 feet above sea-level, on the summit of which grows an elm-tree used by mariners as a landmark. On this hill a beacon was erected during the threatened invasion of England by Napoleon I. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £178. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The Wesleyans and Independents have chapels. There are a National school and six almshouses, the latter built in 1856 by W. Goodday.

TOTHAM, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Thurstable, co. Essex, 3 miles N.E. of Maldon, and 5 S.E. of Witham. The village is situated in a low district adjoining a creek of the river Blackwater, and near the seashore, where are some salt-works. The living is a rect. consolidated with that of Goldhanger, in the dioc. of Rochester, joint val. £615. The church is dedicated to All Saints. There are National schools, and free schools belonging to the Independents.

TOTHILL, a par. in the Marsh div. of Calceworth hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 6 miles N.W. of Alford, its post town, and 1¼ mile S.E. of the Anthorpe railway station. The South Wold hounds meet in this parish. Near the western boundary is a trout stream.

The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £173. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The register dates from 1608.

TOTLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Dronfield, hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 3 miles N.W. of Dronfield, and 3 S.W. of Sheffield. It is situated near the river Sheaf, on the road from Bakewell to Sheffield. There are several stone quarries and brick-kilns, and a thin seam of coal is wrought.

TOTMONSLOW, a vil. in the par. of Draycott-in-the-Moors, S. div. of Totmonslow hund., co. Stafford.

TOTMONSLOW, NORTH, a hund., co. Stafford, contains the pars. of Allstonefield, Blore, Cauldon, Caverswall, Cheddleton, Dilhorne, Grindon, Horton, Ilam, Ipstones, Oakover, and parts of Kingsley and Leek, comprising an area of 99,680 acres.

TOTMONSLOW, SOUTH, a hund., co. Stafford, contains the pars. of Alton, Bradley-in-the-Moors, Bramshall, Cheadle, Checkley, Croxden, Draycott-in-the-Moors, Ellastone, Gratwich, Kingston, Leigh, Mayfield, Rocester, Sheen, Uttoxeter, Waterfall, Wetton, and parts of Kingsley and Leek, comprising an area of about 69,930 acres.

TOTNES, a par., market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the hund. of Coleridge, co. Devon, 22 miles S.W. of Exeter, and 10 N.W. of Dartmouth, of which it is a subport. It is a station on the South Devon railway. The town, which is old, is situated on the slope of a hill on the left bank of the river Dart, about 10 miles from the sea, and opposite the suburb of Bridgetown, in the parish of Berry Pomeroy, which is connected with the town by a bridge erected in 1828, at a cost of £12,000. It is supposed by some to be the Ad Durium Amnem of the Roman writers on the Fosse Way to the W., and in ancient records is often written Totton, or Totonie. In the Saxon times it formed part of the royal demesne, and is described in Domesday book as having 95 burgesses within and 15 without the walls. The town was entered by four gateways, two of which, the N. and E., are still standing, and the one in the middle of the main street has been recently purchased by Lord Seymour for £1,000, and presented to the town for the use of the literary institute and library. After the Conquest the barony of Totnes was given by William I. to Judhael de Totneis, who founded here a Cluniac priory, as a cell to the Abbey of SS. Sergius and Bachus, at Angiers, and built the castle, once a formidable fortress, the only remains of which are the ivy-mantled ruins of the keep, a large circular pile, occupying an artificial mound of great elevation, and commanding a view of the town and surrounding country. The grounds around the ruins are laid out, and, through the liberality of the late Duke of Somerset, are open to the public as a promenade. Upon the banishment of Joel de Totneis the barony was given to Roger de Novant, and subsequently came to the De Braoses, Cantilupe, Zouch, Valletort, and Edgcumbe families, who sold it to Lord Edward Seymour, an ancestor of the present owner, but the manorial rights were purchased by the corporation. The borough has returned two members to parliament since the reign of Edward I. It has, however, been disfranchised for bribery by clause 8 of the present Reform Bill (1867), together with Lancaster, Reigate, and Great Yarmouth. Under the Municipal Act it is governed by a mayor, who is returning officer, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors. The municipal revenue is about £800. A commission of the peace, comprising seven borough magistrates, has been granted, but the borough has now neither recorder nor quarter sessions. Petty sessions for the Stanborough division of the county are held here fortnightly, and a county court monthly. The town consists chiefly of one main street, about three quarters of a mile in length, which commences at the bridge, and ascending the steep acclivity of the hill, stretches along the summit, commanding a prospect of the scenery of the Dart. Many of the houses are old, but are well built, and in the upper part of the town the upper stories project, being supported on columns. It has recently been improved and modernised, and many houses erected in the neighbourhood of the Plymouth road. The streets are paved and lighted with gas, and the houses supplied with water from springs, besides which a stream flows down either side of the main street. The principal buildings are the guildhall, an ancient structure near the church; a market house, erected in 1846; the exchange, or Church walk; borough gaol; assembly rooms, where balls, concerts, and theatrical representations take place; a mechanics' institute, with library of upwards of 1,000 vols.; the South Devon library, established in 1810; two branch banks, and Union poorhouse. The woollen manufacture, formerly carried on, has entirely declined, but a considerable business is done in the general trade, and in agricultural produce. The imports are coal, culm, and timber; and the exports corn, cider, fruit, and salmon, which last are taken in a weir a little above the town. The navigation of the Dart has recently been improved, vessels of 150 tons approaching near the bridge. The surrounding country is fertile, comprising part of the South Hams, or garden of Devonshire, and has numerous seats, the principal of which are Follaton House and Broomborough. The population in 1851 was 4,419, and the number of inhabited houses within the borough 728, but in 1861, while the houses had increased to 793, the population had fallen off to 4,001, showing a considerable change in the character of the resident population, many of whom were formerly seafaring men and fishermen. Just below the bridge, in the middle of the stream, is a small island recently laid out as a garden with walks, at the expense of the late Duke of Somerset. The rectorial tithes and glebe formerly belonged to Totness Priory, but are now the property of the Duke of Somerset. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. about £180, and in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is supposed to be of the date 1432. Bishop Lacey's effigy is introduced in the centre niche in the tower, with the legend, "I made this Tour." In the interior is a carved screen and an altar-piece of Grecian design. In the suburb of Bridgetown is the free church, built in 1835 by the late Duke of Somerset at a cost of £7,000, but never consecrated, and at present used as a Nonconformist place of worship; there are also chapels for Independents and Wesleyans, and a Roman Catholic chapel attached to Follaton House. The grammar school, founded in 1554, has an income from endowment of £60; there are also Taylor's bluecoat school, endowed with £45 per annum, besides National, British, and infant schools. Saturday is market day. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday in every month for cattle, and on the 12th May and 28th October. Races take place annually in August or September.

TOTNORE, a hund. in the rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex, contains the pars. of Beddingham and West Firle, comprising 6,660 acres.

TOTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Attenborough, S. div. of Broxtow hund., co. Nottingham, 5½ miles S.W. of Nottingham.

TOTTENHAM, a par. and populous suburban district of London, hund. of Edmonton, co. Middlesex, 5 miles N.E. of St. Paul's, London. The Great Eastern railway has two stations in the eastern division of the parish, one at Tottenham Hale, and the other at Northumberland Park; the Great Northern has a station in the western division at Wood Green. It is situated on the western bank of the river Lea, which separates it from the county of Essex. The parish, which is about 2½ miles in length and 16 in circumference, comprises High Cross, Lower, Middle, and Wood Green wards. Near Tottenham Green formerly stood a cross, commemorating that spot as one of the resting-places of the corpse of Queen Eleanor, and hence the appellation High Cross. Another account of the name is given in Hall's Notes of Tottenham. At a short distance from the high road is Bruce Castle, erected in the 17th century on the site of a castle once possessed and occupied by Robert Bruce, father of Robert King of Scotland, who presented the church and rectory to the canons of the Holy Trinity in the middle of the 12th century, but Henry VIII., after rebuilding the castle, presented the living to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's Cathedral, to whom it still belongs. The castle was also visited by Queen Elizabeth. One long street runs through the village. There are a police station, and several buildings erected by the London companies, as the asylum for aged fishmongers and poulterers, the printers' almshouses, and the drapers' college, founded in 1861 for the education of the sons of freemen of the Drapers' Company. The Alexandra Park is also situated in the village. The population in 1861 amounted to 13,240, of which 6,061 were in the ecclesiastical district of Holy Trinity, and 2,265 in that of St. Paul. The living is a vic.,* in the dioc. of London, val. £800, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, London. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient Gothic structure. It stands on a slight eminence about a quarter of a mile to the W. from the high road, and consists of a nave, chancel, and two aisles, with a vestry at the E. end, built and endowed by Lord Coleraine in 1696 as a mausoleum, and over the S. porch a priests' room, occupied for 40 years by Elizabeth Fleming. The church contains two painted windows, a font of the 15th century, ornamented with sculpture in Gothic panels, and the vestry, or saints' bell, formerly the alarm bell of the garrison of Quebec, but having been taken at the siege of that place in 1759 by General Townsend, and presented to the parish in 1801 by H. Jackson, Esq. In addition to the parish church are the district churches of Holy Trinity, St. Paul's, St. Ann's, Hanger Lane, and St. Michael's, Wood Green, the livings of which are perpet. curs. St. Ann's church was erected in 1861 at a cost of £12,000, defrayed by Fowler Newsam, Esq. There are chapels belonging to the Roman Catholics, Society of Friends, Independents, Baptists, Wesleyans, and several other dissenting congregations. The grammar school was founded by N. Reynardson in 1685, and subsequently further endowed by the Duchess of Somerset, on condition that the benefits of the institution should be extended to all children of the parish whose parents were not possessed of real property amounting to £20 per annum. There are besides a bluecoat school, established in 1735; a greencoat school in 1792; also National, infant, British and Foreign, Lancastrian, and various other educational establishments. An almshouse for eight persons, with a chapel annexed, was founded and endowed by N. Reynardson in 1685, and another by Balthasar Sanches, a Spaniard, who came to England with Philip II. of Spain as his confectioner, and is said to have been the first who exercised that trade in London. A new cemetery was opened in January, 1858, occupying five acres and containing two chapels.

TOTTENHAM PARK, a demesne of the Earl of Ailesbury, in Savernake Forest, co. Wilts, 5 miles S.E. of Marlborough. It was built by Lord Burlington as a hunting seat, and has a gallery of portraits.

TOTTENHILL, a par. in the hund. of Clackclose, co. Norfolk, 5 miles S.E. of Lynn, its post town, and 6 N.E. of Downham-Market. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £62, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Botolph. There is also the district church of Tottenham Park, the living of which is a perpet. cur. Mrs. Plestow is lady of the manor and chief landowner.

TOTTENHOE, or TATTNALL, a par. in the hund. of Manshead, co. Bedford, 2 miles W. of Dunstable, its post town, and 6 S.E. of Leighton Buzzard. The inhabitants are employed in the neighbouring stone quarries, and in the straw plait trade. On the N. side of the village passes the old Roman road Icknield Street, and on the Downs are traces of an ancient camp. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £120. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, is old. There is a Sunday-school, also a chapel for the Wesleyans. On the Downs, about half a mile W., are the remains of Tottenhoe Castle, overhanging the village of Stanbridge.

TOTTERDOWN, a suburb of Bristol, co. Gloucester, on the river Avon.

TOTTERIDGE, a par. in the hund. of Broadwater, co. Herts, 2 miles S.W. of Barnet railway station, and 1 mile W. of Whetstone, its post town. The village is lighted with gas from the Barnet gas works. The land is chiefly in pasture. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Hatfield Bishop's, in the dioc. of Rochester. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, was rebuilt in 1798. In the churchyard is a monument to the late Lord Cottenham, also a gigantic yew tree, supposed to be near 2,000 years old. The parochial charities consist of various small bequests. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents have a chapel. J. Lee, Esq., LL.D., is lord of the manor.

TOTTERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of North Lydbury, co. Salop, 2 miles S.E. of Bishop's Castle.

TOTTINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Wayland, co. Norfolk, 4 miles S.W. of Watton, its post town, and 8 N. of Thetford. The village is situated near the source of the river Wissey. The soil consists of light sand, which is liable to be drifted by the wind. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £89, in the patron. of the trustees of Chigwell free schools. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. The nave is separated from the chancel by a carved screen, the windows have delicate tracery, and a new E. window has been recently inserted. At the enclosure of the parish in 1774 about 60 acres were allotted to the poor.

TOTTINGTON, HIGH, or TOTTINGTON HIGHER END, a tnshp. in the par. of Bury, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 3½ miles N.W. of Bury, its post town, and 1 mile N. of Ramsbottom. It has stations at Stubbins and Ewood Bridge, on the East Lancashire railway. The village is situated near the railway. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the cotton mills. The tnshp. includes the vil. of Edenfield. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150, in the patron. of the Rector of Bury.

TOTTINGTON LOWER END, a tnshp. in the par. of Bury, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 2½ miles N.W. of Bury, its post town. It was given by Charles II. to General Monk, Duke of Albemarle. The tnshp., which contains numerous scattered hmlts., had a population in 1861 of 11,764. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the cotton mills and bleach works, which are extensively carried on. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150, in the patron. of the Rector of Bury. The church is dedicated to St. Anne. The dissenters have several chapels, and there is a school with a small endowment. Dr. Wood, the mathematician, was born here.

TOUCHEN, a div. in the par. and hund. of Bray, co. Berks.

TOUGH, a par. in the district of Alford, co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It extends in length about 5½ miles from N.E. to S.W., with an extreme breadth of 3 miles, and is bounded by the pars. of Keigh, Monymusk, Cluny, Midmar, Kincardine, O'Neil, Lumphanan, Leochel, and Alford. Its greatest altitude is Corrennie Hill, which rises 1,578 feet above the sea-level. The land in the uplands is, for the most part, arable, while the remainder affords excellent pasture. The soil is light and fertile. Magnesian limestone, hard claystone, porphyry, and primary trap occur, but the prevailing rocks are red granite and mica-slate. In the vicinity are a standing stone measuring 12½ feet in height, and 9½ in circumference, asserted by tradition to mark the grave of one of the sons of Macbeth; and several cairns and Druid stones, one of which crowns a hill designated Old-Kirk-of-Tough. The village is about 23 miles from Huntly, and 22 from Aberdeen, and is traversed by the road from Aberdeen to Strathdon, and by a branch of the Great North of Scotland railway from Kintore to Alford. This par. is in the presb. of Alford and synod of Aberdeen. The stipend of the minister is about £158. The parish church was erected in 1838. There are a Free church for this parish and that of Keigh, also an United Presbyterian church, a parochial school, and a subscription library. The principal seat is Tomly.

TOULSTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Newton-Kyme, upper div. of Barkstone-Ash wap., West Riding co. York, 1½ mile S.W. of North Kyme, and 2½ miles N.W. of Tadcaster. J. Brown, Esq. of Rossington Hall, near Doncaster, is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

TOVE, or TOW, a river of co. Northampton, joins the Ouse near Stoney Stratford.

TOVIL ST. STEPHEN, an ecclesiastical district in the par. and hund. of Maidstone, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 1 mile S. of Maidstone. The village is situated on the banks of the Medway. In the vicinity are an extensive oil mill and several paper mills. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £100.

TOWCESTER, a hund., co. Northampton, contains the pars. of Abthorp, Cold Higham, Gayton, Pattishall, Tiffield, and Towcester, comprising about 27,490 acres.

TOWCESTER, a par. and market town in the hund. of the same name, co. Northampton, 8½ miles S.W. of Northampton, 12 from Daventry, and 4 from the Blisworth station on the London and North-Western railway, with which it is connected by a short branch line. It is situated on the right bank of the river Tow or Tove, and on the line of the ancient Watling Street. The par. includes, besides the town of Towcester, the hmlts. of Caldecote, Handley, and Wood Burcote. It is believed by antiquaries to occupy the site of the Roman station Lactodurum. It was fortified by Edward the Elder with a stone wall, of which no traces now exist. It is mentioned in Domesday book as Tovecestre, and was then a place of importance. The town consists chiefly of one long street and two smaller ones, which are well paved and lighted with gas, under the direction of the feoffees of the charities of Archdeacon Sponne. The drainage has been recently improved, and the inhabitants are well supplied with water. The population in 1851 was 2,478, and in 1861, 2,715. There is a town-hall and police station, erected in 1852, a new bank, and a branch of the Northampton savings-bank. There are several maltings and one large brewery, but the principal industries are the manufacture of boots and shoes for exportation, and pillow lace. Petty sessions are held every alternate Tuesday, and a county court monthly. Towcester Poor-law Union comprises 23 parishes and townships. This living was held by Pope Boniface VIII. at the time of his election to the Papal throne in 1294. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £300, in the patron. of the Bishop of Lichfield. The church, dedicated to St. Laurence, is of the 11th century, with a tower 90 feet high at the W. end, containing six bells and clock with chimes. It was repaired in 1836, when improvements were effected in the interior, which has some oak carving, and an organ of foreign manufacture, the gift of George, Earl of Pomfret, in 1817, by whom it was purchased for £1,000. There are also several brasses and monuments, a painted E. window, and black letter books chained to an oaken stall. The Baptists, Wesleyans, Independents, and Johnsonians have each a chapel. The grammar school, founded in 1552, has an income from endowment of £65, and occupies the chantry-house, erected by Archdeacon Sponne in 1449. There are 22 boys on the foundation, the school is now in abeyance for a short time. A National school-house was erected in 1850, at a cost of £1,350. The charities belonging to the town are numerous, including six almshouses founded by Thomas Bickerstaff in 1650, which have recently been rebuilt. There are a book-club, theological library, and reading society. The principal seats in the vicinity are Easton House, of Sir T. Hesketh, Bart., once celebrated for its collection of paintings and statues, presented to the University of Oxford in 1756; Wakefield Lawn, of the Duke of Grafton; Whittlebury Lodge, of Lord Southampton; Sholebrook Lodge, and Park View. Market-day is on Tuesday. Fairs are held on 12th May and 29th October.

TOWEDNACK, a par. in the W. div. of Penwith hund., co. Cornwall, 2½ miles S.W. of St. Ives, its post town, and 6 N.E. of Penzance. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in mining and agriculture. In this parish are the Wheal Durla and Wreath Consol's mines. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Lelant-Ewing, in the dioc. of Exeter. The interior of the church contains some mural monuments. The Wesleyans have four chapels, and the Teetotal Methodists one. The Duke of Cleveland and W. B. Praed, Esq., are lords of the manor and principal landowners. A fair for the sale of cattle is held on the 26th of September.

TOWER-MOOR, a hmlt. in the par. of Thimbleby, co. Lincoln, near Horncastle.

TOWER-OF-LONDON, an ext. par. lib. in the Tower div. of Ossulstone hund., co. Middlesex. It comprises the Tower and part of the north-eastern suburbs of the metropolis, and is included in the metropolitan borough of the Tower Hamlets. [See article LONDON.]

TOWERSEY, a par. in the hund. of Ashendon, co. Bucks, 2 miles S.E. of Thame, its post town, and 9 S.W. of Aylesbury, on the borders of Oxfordshire. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, in the patron. of trustees. The church is dedicated to St. Catharine. There is a National school. The Baptists have a chapel. E. Griffin and P. Hicklin, Esqs., are lords of the manor.

TOWIE, a par. in the district of Alford, co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It extends in length about 8 miles from S.E. to N.W., with an extreme breadth of 5 miles, and is bounded by the pars. of Cabrach, Kildrummie, Cushine, Logie-Coldstone, Migrie, Strathdon, and Glenbucket. Most of the heights are smooth and covered with herbage, except in the S., where the hills have a bleak appearance, rising to an altitude of 2,000 feet above sea-level. The district is almost devoid of wood, except in the N.W., and the greater part of the land is devoted to pasture. There are numerous grain mills, and a saw-mill. The parish is traversed by the road from Strathdon to Aberdeen, and is intersected by the river Don, flowing from E. to W. This par. is in the presb. of Alford and synod of Aberdeen. The stipend of the minister is about £159. There are a parochial school and a subscription library.

TOWLER HILL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Cotherston, North Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Barnard Castle.

TOWN, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Crediton, co. Devon.

TOWN CLOSE, a lib. in the city of Norwich, co. Norfolk.

TOWN DENISON, a tythg. in the par. of North Petherton, co. Somerset, 2 miles S. of Bridgwater.

TOWNELEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Whalley, co. Lancaster, 1 mile S.E. of Burnley. It is a station on the Rose Grove and Todmorden branch of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. Towneley Hall, the seat of the Towneleys, is the principal residence.

TOWNGREEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Wymondham, hund. of Forehoe, co. Norfolk.

TOWN MALLING. See MALLING, co. Kent.

TOWN PART, an ext.-par. place in the borough and co. of Northampton.

TOWNSTALL, a par. in the hund. of Coleridge, co. Devon, 1 mile from Dartmouth, its post town, and 8 miles from Totnes. It is situated on the river Dart, and contains the hmlts. of Norton, Old Mill, Warfleet, and Ford. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Dartmouth, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church is dedicated to St. Clement.

TOWN-STREET, a tythg. in the par. of Woking, first div. of Woking hund., co. Surrey.

TOWN-YETHOLM, a vil. in the par. of Yetholm, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, on the left bank of Bowmont Water, opposite the vil. of Kirk-Yetholm. In 1834 a bridge was constructed connecting this village with that of Kirk-Yetholm. There are a Free church, United Presbyterian church, parochial school, and an endowed school. It has also a branch of the City of Glasgow bank, a public library, and a friendly society. The village is governed by a baron-bailie, appointed by Wauchope of Nid.

TOWTHORPE, a tnshp. in the pars. of Strensall and Wharram Percy, wap. of Buckrose, East Riding co. York, 9 miles N.W. of Great Driffield.

TOWTHORPE, a tnshp. partly in the par. of Strensall, lib. of St. Peter, and partly in that of Huntingdon, wap. of Bulmer, North Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of York, on the Scarborough railway and the river Foss.

TOWTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Saxton, upper div. of Barkstone-Ash wap., West Riding co. York, 2 miles from Saxton, and 2½ S. from Tadcaster. It is situated near the rivers Cock and Wharfe. Here Edward IV. defeated Henry VI. in 1461.

TOWY, or TEIVI, a river of cos. Cardigan and Carmarthen, rises under Tregaron Hill, in Loch Teivi, and after receiving the tributary streams of the Vechan, Camdwr, Dethia, Bran, Sawddwy, Cinnen, Cothi, and Guili, falls into Carmarthen Bay.

TOWYN, or TYWYN, a par., post, and market town in the hund. of Estimaner, co. Merioneth, 12 miles N. of Aberystwith, and 10 from Barmouth Ferry, with which it is connected by a short branch of the Aberystwith and Welsh coast railway. It is a bathing-place situated under the hills, near Cardigan Bay, opposite Sarn-y-Buch shoal. The par. includes Aberdovey, Cefnrhos, Cynfalfach, Faenol, and 7 other tnshps. The town is much resorted to for bathing. In the parish is a small harbour easy of access. The herring fishery is carried on to some extent, and lead, copper, and slate are productive. The soil is rocky. Much of the marshes have been reclaimed, and are now rich meadow and pasture. The ruins of Trebeni Castle are seen on the hills. The river abounds in salmon. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £224, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Cadvan. Near the church are the saint's old pillar cross, and a sulphur well. There is also the district church of Aberdowy, the living of which is a perpet. cur. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum, and almshouses for five poor widows, who receive an annuity of £4 each. There are the free schools of Lady Moyer and Corbet. The Independents and Calvinistic Methodists have chapels. Ynys-y-Maen-Gwyn, Bod-Talog, and Trefriw are the principal residences. Market day is on Friday. Fairs are held on the 16th March, 14th May, 17th September, and 18th November.

TOXTETH PARK, an ext.-par. lib. in the borough of Liverpool and hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 1 mile S.E. of Liverpool, of which it is a large suburb. The manor came from the crown to the Stanleys and Molyneuxs of Croxteth, and was disparked in 1591. [See LIVERPOOL.]

TOYD FARM, an ext.-par. place in the hund. of South Damerham, co. Wilts.

TOYNTON ALL SAINTS, a par. in the E. div. of Bolingbroke soke, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 1½ mile S. of Spilsby, its post town, and 3 miles W. of Firsby railway station. The village is situated on an eminence. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £243. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is old, with a tower and three bells. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, supported by voluntary contributions. The Wesleyans have a chapel. Lord Willoughby D'Eresby is lord of the manor.

TOYNTON, HIGH, a par. in the soke of Horncastle, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 1½ mile E. of Horncastle, its post town. The village is situated on the border of the Wolds, and on the road to Spilsby. The soil consists of flint and clay, with a subsoil of white clay. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Marehamon-the-Hill, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church, dedicated to St. John-the-Baptist, was re-built in 1772, and restored in 1850. It has three stained windows. The register dates from 1715. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

TOYNTON, LOW, a par. in the soke of Horncastle, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 1 mile N.E. of Horncastle, its post town. The soil is light, and the subsoil a whitish clay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £332. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, contains a sculptured font. The register dates from 1606. The Rolleston family owns the manor.

TOYNTON ST. PETER, a par. in the E. div. of Bolingbroke soke, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2 miles S. of Spilsby, its post town. The village adjoins that of Toynton All Saints. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £199. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The parochial charities produce about £6. The Wesleyans have a chapel and a day school. Lord Willoughby d'Eresby is lord of the manor.

TRABOLGAN, a par. in the bar. of Imokilly, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles S.W. of Cloyne, at the mouth of Cork Harbour.

TRACTON, a par. in the bar. of Kinalea, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles N.E. of Kinsale, its post town. The surface is good, and manured with sea sand. The parish is crossed by the road from Ringabella to Kinsale, and is bounded by Robert's Head and Ringabella Bay. It included Minane. There are slate quarries, and veins of lead have been found. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Cork, val. £97. The church, which stands on the site of the old abbey, was built in 1817 by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this parish is the head of a union, and contains two chapels. There are a public and two private schools. The principal residences are Ringabella, Gurtnagrenane, and Broomley. Here are the ruins of an abbey founded in 1224. The Earl of Shannon is the proprietor of the manor.

TRAETH DULAS, a creek on the north-eastern side of Anglesea.

TRAETH MAUR, a creek in Cardigan Bay, co. Carnarvon, near Tremadoc.

TRAETH-NELGAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Talley, co. Carmarthen, 9 miles N. of Llandilo-Fawr.

TRAFALGAR, the seat of Earl Nelson, co. Wilts, 4 miles S.E. of Salisbury. It was purchased by the nation of the Dawkinses, and presented to the family of the admiral in 1805.

TRAFALGAR INN, a hmlt. in the par. of Collessie, co. Fife, 2 miles N.E. of Auchtermuchty. A fair is held on the 21st of October.

TRAFFORD BRIDGE, and TRAFFORD MICKLE, tnshps. in the par. of Plemonstall, second div. of Eddisbury hund., co. Chester, 4 miles N.E. of Chester, near the river Mersey.

TRAFFORD, WIMBOLDS, a tnshp. in the par. of Thornton, second div. of Eddisbury hund., co. Chester, 6 miles N.E. of Chester.

TRAIAN GLAS, and TRAIAN MAWR, hmlts. in the par. of Llywell, hund. of Devynnock, co. Brecon, 11 miles W. of Brecknock, near the river Usk, under the Black mountains.

TRAILFLAT, a vil. in the par. of Tinwald, co. Dumfries, Scotland, 2½ mile N.E. of Lochmaben, and 6 N. of Dumfries. It is situated on the E. border of the parish, and was once a separate parish. Here are traces of the Roman road from Brunswick. In the vicinity is a bleach-field.

TRALEE, a par., seaport, market town, and parliamentary borough, and the county town of co. Kerry, Ireland, 62 miles S.W. from Limerick, and 20 N.W. from Killarney. It is the terminus of the Killarney branch of the Great Southern and Western railway. Its population in 1851 was 9,957, and in 1861 it was 10,309, inhabiting 1,331 houses. The town, which originated in a monastery founded here in 1243, originally belonged to the Desmonds, but on the death of the earl and the forfeiture of his property, it was given to Sir Edward Denny, whose family still possess it. It was anciently strongly fortified, but was twice partially destroyed by the rebels in 1641 and 1691. It is situated near the foot of a range of mountains, and about a mile from the bay of the same name. The site is so low that it is occasionally flooded during spring tides and freshets in the river Lee. The main streets are wide and well built, and the town is neatly kept. It returns one member to parliament, constituency in 1866, 253. Of the population in 1861, 1,016 were members of the Established Church, 9,126 were Roman Catholics, 74 were Presbyterians, and 88 were Methodists. The church is spacious, with a tower. There are two Roman Catholic chapels. The Presbyterians, Methodists, and Independents also have meeting-houses. The other public buildings are the county courthouse, gaol, and infirmary, the corn exchange, townhall, and barracks. On one side of the entrance to the courthouse is a monument in commemoration of the men of Kerry who fell during the Crimean war, and on the other of those who fell in India. The borough is under the management of 21 commissioners, the old corporation being extinct. It is the assize town for the county, and quarter and petty sessions are held. A considerable business is done in flour, grain, bacon, butter, and an extensive retail trade with the surrounding districts. The trade of the town is carried on by means of a canal about a mile in length, connecting it with the bay, and navigable by vessels of 400 tons; those of larger tonnage discharge at Samphire Island, about 8 miles from the town. In 1865 the number of sailing vessels registered as belonging to the port was 13, with an aggregate tonnage of 384 tons. The Poor-law Union comprises 39 electoral divisions. Market days are Tuesday and Saturday. Monthly fairs are held.

TRALEE-SPA, a vil. in the par. of Tralee, bar. of Trughanacmy, co. Kerry, Ireland, 2 miles W. of Tralee. It contains a medicinal spring.

TRALIG, a small loch, co. Argyle, Scotland, connected by the river Oude with Loch Melford.

TRALLONG, a par. in the hund. of Merthyr, co. Brecon, 5 miles W. of Brecknock, its post town, on the rivers Usk and Bran. In the vicinity is the British fort called Twyn-y-Gaer. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £59, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. David.

TRALLWMGOLLEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Welshpool, co. Montgomery, near Welshpool.

TRALLWYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llansaintffraid, co. Denbigh, 2 miles S.E. of Conway.

TRAMORE, a post and market vil. in the par. of Drumcannon, bar. of Middlethird, co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 6 miles S.W. of Waterford, and 104 from Dublin. It is the terminus of a short line of railway from Waterford, and is situated at the end of Tramore Bay. It contains a police-station, dispensary, hotel, and almshouse. Drumcannon church stands within the town. In the Roman Catholic arrangement it forms the head of a union. There are several schools. The principal residences are Tramore Lodge, Eastland, and Tramore House. The ship Sea Horse was wrecked in the bay in 1816. The bay is a bathing-place, and is sheltered by the headlands of Brownstown and Great Newtown. Here are the ruins of the Castle of Callen. Petty sessions are held every other Tuesday. Market day is Saturday. Fairs are held on 3rd May, 25th July, 1st October, and 1st November.

TRANENT, a par., co. Haddington, Scotland, comprising the small seaports of Cockenzie and Portseaton, and the vils. of Elphinstone and Meadowmill. The parish extends in length about 4½ miles from N. to S., with an extreme breadth of 3 miles, and is bounded by Edinburghshire, Prestonpans, the Frith of Forth, Gladsmuir, Pencaitland, and Ormiston. Its surface is undulating, nowhere exceeding an altitude of more than 300 feet above sea-level. The land for the most part is in a good state of cultivation. Its coast, about 2½ miles in extent, is generally flat, except near Cockenzie and Portseaton. Sandstone and trap are quarried to a considerable extent, and the coal mines have been worked ever since the discovery of coals in Scotland. The principal of the mines are situated at Tranent, Elphinstone, Birsley, and St. Germains, the seams varying from 5 to 9 feet in thickness. The parish is traversed by the roads from Edinburgh to North Berwick and Haddington, and by the North British railway, which has a branch of about 1 mile in length to the town of Tranent. This town, anciently called Travernent, occupies a spot on the Frith of Forth, about 1½ mile S.E. of Prestonpans, and 7 miles W. of Haddington. It chiefly consists of one street, irregularly built, running from W. to E., with another cross street diverging from it about the centre. There are a branch office of the City of Glasgow bank, and a manufactory for agricultural implements. This par. is in the presb. of Haddington, synod of Lothian and Tweeddale, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is about £320. The parish church was erected in 1801. There are also a Free church, a United Presbyterian church, parochial school, and a chapel-of-ease at Cockenzie. Half a mile below the town is Steill's hospital and school, erected in 1820, in which 140 poor children are educated free, and 10 receive clothing. Near the southern boundary of the parish is Elphinstone Tower, erected in the 14th century; and in another part of the parish are the ruins of Waterfallside Castle, Seton House, and the remains of a collegiate church. A country market is held in Tranent every Monday during harvest for hiring reapers.

TRANMERE, a tnshp. in the par. of Bebington, lower div. of Wirrall hund., co. Chester, half a mile S. of Birkenhead, its post town. It is a station on the Birkenhead, Lancashire, and Cheshire Junction railway. It is situated on the river Mersey at the ferry to Liverpool. The soil is clayey, with a subsoil of red sandstone. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, val. £150, in the patron. of the Rector of Bebington. The church, dedicated to St. Catherine, was erected in 1831, and contains a painting of the resurrection by Le Brun. There is also the new district church of St. Paul, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £200. There are National schools and two Sunday-schools. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have chapels. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. The Hall is situated near Higher Tranmere, and commands an extensive prospect over the Mersey. The old hall is converted into a farmhouse.

TRANWELL WITH HIGH CHURCH, a tnshp. in the par. of Morpeth, W. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 2 miles S.W. of Morpeth. The parish church is situated at the hmlt. of High Church.

TRAPHOLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Old Cleeve, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.E. of Watchet.

TRAQUAIR, a par. and vil. in the co. of Peebles, Scotland. It extends in length about 7½ miles from E. to W., with a breadth of about 5½ miles. The parish is bounded on the N. by the Tweed, on the W. by Peebles and Selkirkshire, and on other parts by Selkirkshire. Its surface is hilly, and in general wears a rocky and bleak aspect. Within its boundaries are the heights of Gumscleuch and Minchmoor, which rise 2,000 feet above sea-level; on the river Tweed the haughs lie from 400 to 500 feet above sea-level, but are not very extensive. The Quair water rises at the south-western extremity of the parish, and runs through its centre to the Tweed, receiving in its course numerous burns. A considerable quantity of land has been reclaimed for agriculture, but the greater part is still in unenclosed sheep-walks. The prevailing rocks are graywacke, with a dyke of porphyry which has long been used for curling stones. The parish is traversed by the turnpike road for about 15 miles, and communicates with Innerleithen by means of a wooden bridge across the river Tweed. The village of Traquair is 1½ mile S. of Innerleithen, and 6 S.E. of Peebles. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Quair and Tweed, and consists of a few scattered houses. In the vicinity are traces of hill forts or "chesters;" a few birches are all that remain of the "Bush aboon Traquair," once an extensive wood. This par. is in the presb. of Peebles and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is about £276. The parish church was erected in 1778, and was restored and improved in 1821. There is a parochial school. The principal seat is Traquair House.

TRAWDEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Whalley, higher div. of Blackburn hund., co. Lancaster, 2 miles S.E. of Colne, and 6 from Burnley, its post town. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in manufactures similar to those carried on in the neighbouring towns and villages. The tnshp. includes the hmlt. of Winewall, and was once forest. The soil consists of clay and rock, but the greater part is now under cultivation. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There is a National school for both sexes, at which a Sunday-school is also held. The Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Inghamites have chapels. The Duke of Buccleuch is lord of the manor.

TRAWSCOED, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanyre, co. Radnor, 5 miles S.E. of Rhayader, between the rivers Wye and Ython.

TRAWSFYNYDD, a par. in the hund. of Ardudwy, co. Merioneth, 12 miles N. of Dolgelly, and 9 from Harlech. Carnarvon is its post town. It is situated on the Sarn Helen Way, and on the river Maw, which here forms several cascades, called Pistylt-y-Cain and Mawddach falls, the former 150 feet and the latter 60 feet descent. There are several lakes, the largest of which is Rathlyn lake, abounding in trout. The parish comprises near 100 square miles. The land is chiefly in barren sheep-walks. Copper and lead exist. In the vicinity numerous relics of antiquity have been discovered, including Castel Prysor, a British or Roman fort, and an inscribed stone at Bedd Porus bearing date 1275. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £179, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Madryn. Bishop Lloyd was born here in 1600. There are schools for both sexes, one of which has a small endowment. The Calvinistic Methodists have a chapel.

TRAWSGOED, a hmlt. in the par. of Gwenddur, hund. of Talgarth, co. Brecon, 8 miles N.W. of Talgarth.

TRE-ABBOT, a tnshp. in the par. of Whitford, co. Flint, 3 miles N.W. of Holywell.

TREACHTAN, a small loch, co. Argyle, Scotland, near Glencoe. It is connected with Loch Leyen by the river Cona.

TREADDOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Hentland, co. Hereford, 4 miles N.W. of Ross.

TREADINGSTOWN, a par. in the bars. of Gowran and Shillelogher, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S.S.E. of Kilkenny. This parish is traversed by the river Nore, which is here spanned by Bennet's Bridge. The living is an impropriate rect. in the dioc. of Ossory. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this parish is united to that of Danesfort.

TREALS, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkham, hund. of Amounderness, co. Lancaster, 1 mile N.E. of Kirkham, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the Preston railway. The soil is heavy. The tnshp. includes the hmlts. of Roseacre and Wharles. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £100, in the patron. of the Vicar of Kirkham. The church, dedicated to Christ, was built in 1855 at the expense of the Earl of Derby, who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum.

TREATHNELGAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Talley, co. Carmarthen, 8 miles N. of Llandilo.

TREBAROG, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfairtalhaiarn, co. Denbigh, 8 miles N.W. of Denbigh.

TREBERT, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandair Waterdine, co. Salop, 3 miles N.W. of Knighton.

TREBOROUGH, a par. in the hund. of Carhampton, co. Somerset, 18 miles W. of Taunton, its post town, and 6 W. of Williton railway station. The village belonged in ancient times to Cleeve Abbey, and supplied that institution with fuel. There is an extensive blue slate quarry and several lime pits. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £137. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. In the churchyard is an old cross. There is a parochial school for both sexes. Sir W. Trevelyan, Bart., is lord of the manor.

TREBRODIER, a tnshp. in the par. of Bettws, co. Salop, 7 miles N.W. of Knighton, near the river Teme.

TREBRYS, a tnshp. in the par. of Yspytty, hund. of Isaled, co. Denbigh, 9 miles S.E. of Llanrwst, near the head of the river Clettwr.

TREBRYS FACH and TREBRYS FAWR, tnshps. in the par. of Llanrhaiadr-yn-Mochnant, co. Denbigh, 4 miles N.W. of Llanfyllin.

TRE BWLL, a tnshp. in the par. of Llansaintffraid, co. Denbigh, 2 miles S.E. of Conway.

TRECASTELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanarthney, co. Carmarthen, 6 miles S.W. of Llandilofawr, on the river Towy.

TRECASTLE, a ward in the par. of Llywell, co. Brecon, 10 miles W. of Brecknock. It is situated on the river Usk, and belongs to the Marquess Camden. There was formerly a castle, and on the confines of this ward is the Beacon Mountain, 2,594 feet in height.

TRECASTLE, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandilofawr, co. Carmarthen, near Llandilofawr, on the river Cennen, near Carrig-Cennen Castle, where Roman coins and other relics have been discovered.

TRE CEFEL, a tnshp. in the par. of Caron-ys-Clawdd, hund. of Penarth, co. Cardigan, near Tregaron at the Teivi bridge.

TRECHHGWYNNON, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanarthney, co. Carmarthen, 6 miles S.W. of Llandilofawr.

TRECILLA, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangarren, co. Hereford, 4 miles S.W. of Ross.

TRECLAS, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanarthney, co. Carmarthen, 6 miles S.W. of Llandilofawr. It contains the parish church, which is situated on the river Towy.

TRECLIFF, a lead mine in Mam Tor, co. Derby, near the Peak Cavern, celebrated for its fluor spar.

TRECOED, a tnshp. in the par. of Disserth, hund. of Colwyn, co. Radnor, 6 miles S.W. of New Radnor, near Maes Madoc.

TREDDERWENFAWR, a tnshp. in the par. of Llansaintffraid, hund. of Deythur, co. Montgomery, 4 miles E.N.E. of Llanfyllin.

TREDDYN, an ecclesiastical district in the par. of Mold, co. Flint, near Mold.

TREDEGAR, a market town in the tnshp. of Ushlawrcoed, par. of Bedwelty, co. Monmouth, 10 miles S.W. of Abergavenny. It has stations on the Abergavenny branch of the London and North-Western and Sirhowy Vale railways. It has grown up since the commencement of the present century, in consequence of the extensive iron works established in the vicinity by the Homfrays of Bedwelty House, now the property of the Tredegar Iron Company. The population in 1861 was above 9,380. The town consists chiefly of a central square, from which diverge four principal streets. It contains a townhall, market-house, branch bank, &c. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the neighbouring collieries and iron mines, and in the blast houses belonging to the Tredegar Iron Company. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, and in the patron. of the Incumbent of Bedwelty.

TREDERWEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandrinio, co. Montgomery, 5 miles N.E. of Welshpool.

TREDINGTON, a par. in the upper div. of Oswaldslow hund., co. Worcester, locally in Warwick, 2 miles N. of Shipston, its post town, and 9 from Stratford-upon-Avon. It is situated on the river Stour, and previous to 1833 included the tnshps. of Blackwell, Darlingscott, Armscott, and Newbold, but the two last were then formed into a distinct parish by Act of Parliament. The surface is generally level, and the soil partly sandy and partly clayey. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £539, in the patron. of Jesus College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Gregory. The parochial charities produce about £59 per annum, of which £50 go to Jordan's school.

TREDINGTON, a par. in the lower div. of Tewkesbury hund., co. Gloucester, 2½ miles S.E. of Tewkesbury, its post town, and 6½ N.W. of Cheltenham. The village is situated near the Gloucester railway. The surface is flat, and the soil consists of stiff clay. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £51, in the patron. of the bishop. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. Near the church is a pillar cross.

TREDOGAN, a vil. in the par. of Penmark, co. Glamorgan, 5 miles S.E. of Cowbridge.

TREDOUGHAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangarren, co. Hereford, 4 miles S.W. of Ross.

TREDUNNOCK, a par. in the upper div. of Usk hund., co. Monmouth, 3½ miles S. of Usk, its post town, and 4 from Caerleon, on the river Usk. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £208. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, contains an effigy in slate of a Roman soldier of the second legion, which was discovered near the foundation of the building. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum.

TREETON, a par. in the S. div. of Strafforth wap., West Riding co. York, 3½ miles S.E. of Rotherham, its post town, and 2 N. of Woodhouse railway station. It is a station on the North Midland railway. The par., which is bounded on the W. by the river Rother, includes the tnshps. of Brampton, Treeton, and Ulley. There are stone quarries, and an extensive flour mill mentioned in the Domesday survey. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of York, val. £674. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, contains many monuments and brasses. The register dates from 1677. There is also the district church of Ulley, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £50. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Duke of Norfolk is lord of the manor.

TRE EVAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangarren, co. Hereford, 4 miles S.W. of Ross. It is joined with Langston.

TREFDRAETH, a par. in the hund. of Maltraeth, co. Anglesey, 5 miles from Llangefni, its post town, and 3 N.W. of Newborough. It is situated near Maltraeth sands, and includes the hmlt. of Yard. The subsoil is productive of coal and stone. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Llangwyvan, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church, dedicated to St. Beuno, is erected on the site of one built in 1616. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. The Calvinistic Methodists have a chapel. Fairs are held on the 1st May, and on the 18th November.

TREFECCA, a hmlt. in the par. and hund. of Talgarth, co. Brecon, 8 miles S.W. of Hay, near the river Lynvi. On the Llangorse road is Trevecca House, founded in 1752 by Howel Harris, a disciple of Whitefield, for Calvinistic Dissenters.

TREFECHAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanynys, co. Denbigh, 3 miles N.W. of Ruthin.

TREFECHAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Nannerch, co. Flint, 6 miles N.W. of Mold.

TREFEDWYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Caerwys, co. Flint, 4 miles S.W. of Holywell.

TREF EGLWYS, a par. in the hund. of Llanidloes, co. Montgomery, 9 miles from Newtown, its post town, and 4 N. of Llanidloes. The village is situated on a branch of the river Severn. The par. contains the tnshps. of Bod-aioch, Dolgwyden, Thaes-tref-gomer, and Eskirieth, with Glyn-tref-naut. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the woollen manufacture. The living is a vic. in the dioc of Bangor, val. £103. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum. The Methodists have chapels.

TREFEILIW, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanrhaiadr-yn-Mochnant, co. Denbigh, 4 miles N.W. of Llanfyllin.

TREFEIRIG, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanbadarn Fawr, hund. of Geneur Glynn, co. Cardigan. It is situated near Aberystwith, and includes Penrhin Coch and Canol.

TREFERCLAWDD. a tnshp. in the par. of Oswestry, co. Salop, 2 miles S.W. of Oswestry.

TREFFGARN, a par. in the hund. of Roose, co. Pembroke, 5 miles N. of Haverfordwest, its post town, and 7 from Fishguard. The village is situated on the river Cleddy. The Ashdale hounds meet in this parish. It is said to have received the name of Treffgarn, signifying "rock town," from the limestone rocks by which it is surrounded. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £60. The Hall is the principal residence.

TREFFYNON, a vil. in the par. of Llanddausaint, co. Anglesey, 5 miles W. of Llanerchymedd.

TREFILAN, a par. in the hund. of Lower Ilar, co. Cardigan, 6 miles N.W. of Lampeter, its post town, and 12 from Aberayron. The village is situated on the river Ayron and the Sarn Helen Roman way. The par. includes the hmlt. of Talsarn, situated under Talsarn Hill, which has an elevation of 1,148 feet above sea-level. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £77, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Hilary, was rebuilt in 1806. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There are traces of a moated castle near the village. Fairs are held on 8th September, and 7th November.

TREFLACH, a tnshp. in the par. of Oswestry, co. Salop, 3 miles S.W. of Oswestry.

TREFLAN, a vil. in the par. of Llanbeblig, co. Carnarvon, near Carnarvon.

TREFLIS, a hmlt. in the par. of Llangammarch, hund. of Builth, co. Brecon, 8 miles S.W. of Builth, near the river Irvon.

TREF-LLYS, a par. in the hund. of Evionydd, co. Carnarvon, 18 miles from Carnarvon, its post town, and 2 from Criccieth. The village is on the coast. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Criccieth, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The Methodists have a chapel.

TREF LYNN, a tnshp. in the par. of Caron-ys-Clawdd, hund. of Penarth, co. Cardigan, 2 miles from Tregaron, near the river Teivi, on the Sarn Helen way.

TREFNANT, a tnshp. in the par. of Castle Caereinion, co. Montgomery, 4 miles S.W. of Welshpool, and 2 from St. Asaph. It is a station on the Rhyl and Denbigh branch of the Vale of Clwyd railway.

TREFNANTFECHAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Welshpool, co. Montgomery, 3 miles N.W. of Welshpool.

TREFNANY, a tnshp. in the par. of Meifod, co. Montgomery, 5 miles N.W. of Welshpool, on the river Einion.

TREFOLWERN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanbrynmair, co. Montgomery, 10 miles N.E. of Machynlleth.

TREFONEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Oswestry, co. Salop, 3 miles S.W. of Oswestry, its post town. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £85.

TREFONNEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Cefnllys, co. Radnor, 8 miles W. of New Radnor.

TREFOR, a tnshp. in the par. of Gyffylliog, co. Denbigh, 5 miles W. of Ruthin.

TREFOREST, a vil. in the par. of Llantwitvairdre, co. Glamorgan, 3 miles N.E. of Llantrisaint. It is a station on the Taff Valley railway.

TREFORIS, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Ishmael, co. Carmarthen, 3 miles N.W. of Kidwelly, on the river Towy.

TREFRAETH, a tnshp. in the par. of Ysceifiog, co. Flint, 5 miles W. of Flint.

TREFRION, a tnshp. in the par. of Towyn, co. Merioneth, near Towyn.

TREFRIW, a par. in the hund. of Nant Conway, co. Carnarvon, 2 miles N.W. of Llanrwst, its post town, and 10 from Aberconway. The village is situated in the vale of the Conway, which is navigable for small craft. Lead, zinc, and other minerals are found here. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Lanrhychwyn, in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £168, in the patron. of the Bishop of Llandaff. The church was built by Llewelyn in 1230. At lake Llyn Geirionydd lived Taliesin, the father of Welsh poets. Salmon, trout, and other fish are abundant in the streams and lakes. Fairs are held on the 12th May, 3rd September, and 7th November.

TREFROYAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanarthney, co. Carmarthen, 6 miles W. of Llandilo-fawr.

TREF-Y-COED, a hmlt. in the par. of Lampeter-

Pont-Stephen, hund. of Troedyraur, co. Cardigan, near Lampeter.

TREFYDD BYCHAIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanrhaidr-in-Kinmerch, co. Denbigh, 3 miles S.E. of Denbigh.

TREFYDD-BYCHARN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandegla, co. Denbigh, 5 miles N. of Llangollen.

TREGANOL, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanbedr-Dyffryn-Clwyd, co. Denbigh, 2 miles N.E. of Ruthin.

TREGANOL, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanwyddelan, co. Montgomery, 6 miles N.W. of Newtown.

TREGARE, a par. in the lower div. of Ragland hund., co. Monmouth, 6 miles S.W. of Monmouth, its post town, and 2 from Ragland. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Dingestow, in the dioc. of Llandaff. The church is old. The parochial charities produce about £24 per annum.

TREGARN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanddarog, co. Carmarthen, 6 miles S.E. of Carmarthen.

TREGARON, or TREF-GARON, a par. and market town in the hund. of Penarth, co. Cardigan, 9 miles N.E. of Lampeter, and 5 from Strata Florida. Carmarthen is its post town. It is a station on the Manchester and Milford railway. The town is situated on the river Berwyn, about a mile above its confluence with the Teifi. It contains about 800 inhabitants, and was once a corporate town and member of Cardigan borough, but was disfranchised in 1742 for corruption. The highest summit is Tregaron Hill, 1,747 feet above sea-level; and about two miles to the N. of the town is Maes-Myn, or "the Lake of the Field," where, says tradition, once stood Tregaron. Below the town is a spring, at which it is customary for young men and women to meet on Easter Sunday and present to each other a small white loaf, called "Bara-cân," and a draught of the water from the spring. In the surrounding district are many antiquities. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David, val. £156, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Caron, stands on an elevated spot close to the river Brenig, which is crossed at this place by a wooden bridge. In the churchyard are some old tombs and pillar stones. Market day is on Tuesday. Fairs are held on 15th to 17th March, and on the first Tuesday in May.

TREGAVETHAN, an ext. par. place in the W. div. of Powder hund., co. Cornwall, 3 miles N.W. of Truro.

TREGAYAN, a par. chplry. in the hund. of Menai, co. Anglesey, 2 miles N.W. of Llangefni, its post town. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Llangefni, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is dedicated to St. Caian. William-ap-Howel died here in 1587, 105 years old, and had forty-two children between eight and eighty-five years of age.

TREGCLE, a vil. in the par. of Llanfechell, co. Anglesey, 5 miles W. of Llanerchymedd.

TREGIB, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandilofawr, co. Carmarthen, 1 mile S.E. of Llandilofawr. It is situated on the river Towy and the Via Julia Montana.

TREGISKEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Mevagissey, co. Cornwall.

TREGONY, a par. and town in the W. div. of Powder hund., co. Cornwall, 3 miles from Grampound, and 10 S.W. of Bodmin. It is situated on the river Fal, which was once wide and deep, but is now obstructed by the accumulation of sand and rubbish. The original town, situated at the base of the hill on which the present is built, occupied the site of the Roman Cenio, or Voluba, and belonged to the Earl of Mortaigne at the time of the Domesday survey. The manor afterwards came to the Pomeroys, Boscawens of Tregothnan, and Bassets. The present town, which has been lessened in importance since the increase of Truro, consists of one principal street, forming part of the road from St. Austell to St. Mawes. It is a petty sessions town and decayed borough, having been incorporated by James I. in 1620, and returned two members to parliament from Edward I.'s time until disfranchised by the Reform Act. In the vicinity are traces of a castle, supposed to have been erected in the reign of Richard I. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the copper and tin works. The living is a rect. with the vic. of Cuby, in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £311. The church is dedicated to St. James. The parochial charities produce about £72 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Bible Christians have chapels. Fairs are held on Shrove Tuesday, 3rd of May, 25th July, 1st September, and 6th November.

TREGOYD, a hmlt. in the par. of Glasbury, hund. of Talgarth, co. Brecon, 3 miles S.W. of Hay. Tregoyd is the seat of Viscount Hereford.

TREGUSS, a hmlt. in the par. of Llancarvon, co. Glamorgan, 8 miles S.W. of Llandaff.

TREGYNIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llangathen, co. Carmarthen, 4 miles W. of Llandilofawr.

TREGYNON, a par. in the hund. of Newtown, co. Montgomery, 4 miles N. of Newtown, its post town, and 5 from Llanfair. It is situated on the Sarn Sws way, and includes the tnshps. of Aberhale, Llanfechan, and Pwllaw. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £87. The church is dedicated to St. Cynon. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum, and the inhabitants have the privilege of sending four persons to Bettws almshouse. The Calvinistic Methodists have a chapel.

TREHELIG, a tnshp. in the par. of Castle Caereinion, co. Montgomery, 3 miles S. of Welshpool, on the river Severn.

TREHENGWIN, a vil. in the hmlt. of Clawdd, co. Brecon, 12 miles S.W. of Builth.

TREIG WATER, a stream of co. Inverness, Scotland, rises under Ben Nevis, and passing through Treig Loch joins the Spean at Spean Bridge.

TREINGHILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanblethian, co. Glamorgan, 1 mile S. of Cowbridge.

TRELAN, ISSA, and UCHA, tnshps. in the par. of Ysceifiog, co. Flint, 5 miles W. of Flint.

TRELAVEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Mevagissey, co. Cornwall, 4 miles S. of St. Austell.

TRELEACH-AR-BETTWS, a par. in the hund. of Elvet, co. Carmarthen, 7 miles N.W. of Carmarthen, its post town, and 18 from Cardigan. It is a petty sessions town and considerable village, containing, in 1861, 1,456 inhabitants. In the vicinity is Crug-y-Dyrn, a cairn 180 feet in height, and 210 feet in circumference. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £143, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Teilo. The parochial charities produce about £137 per annum, which go to Davis's school. The Independents have a chapel.

TRELEGOED, a tnshp. in the par. of Cefnyllys, co. Radnor, 8 miles W. of New Radnor.

TRELEIGH, an ecclesiastical district in the par. of Redruth, hund. of Penwith, co. Cornwall, 1 mile from Redruth, and 8 miles S.W. of Truro.

TRE LLAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Whitford, hund. of Coleshill, co. Flint, 3 miles N.W. of Holywell.

TRELLAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Kerry, co. Montgomery, 2 miles S.E. of Newtown.

TRELLAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Bettws-yn-Rhos, co. Denbigh, 3 miles S.W. of Abergele.

TRELLECK, a par. in the upper div. of Ragland hund., co. Monmouth, 4½ miles S. of Monmouth, its post town, and 8 from Chepstow. The village is situated near Beacon Hill, on the road from Monmouth to Chepstow, and has a mineral spring. The par. contains the chplry. of Trelleck Grange, and is so called from a group of monoliths near the village, supposed to be the remains of some Druidical monument. In a garden close by is a tumulus 450 feet in circumference, said to be the spot where the earls of Clare had a castle, but is more probably a barrow raised over the bodies of the Britons slain here by Harold, as recorded on the pedestal of an ancient sundial near the churchyard gate. The living is a vic.* annexed to that of Penalth, in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £430. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. There is also the district church of Trelleck Grange, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £74. The parochial charities produce about £67, of which £43 go to Babington's school, &c.

TRELLECK GRANGE, a chplry. in the par. of Trelleck, upper div. of Ragland hund., co. Monmouth, 8 miles from Monmouth, its post town, and 15 from Newport.

TRELLYNIAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Cilcen, hund. of Coleshill, co. Flint, 4 miles N.W. of Mold.

TRE LLYS, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfechan, co. Montgomery, 2 miles E. of Llanfyllin.

TRELLYWELYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Rhuddlan, co. Flint, near Rhuddlan.

TRELOGAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanasaph, co. Flint, 6 miles N.W. of Holywell.

TRELYDAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Guilsfield, co. Montgomery, 2 miles N. of Welshpool.

TRELYSTAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Worthin, hund. of Cawrse, co. Montgomery, 3 miles S.E. of Welshpool, its post town, and 6 from Montgomery.

TREMADOC, a small market in the par. of Ynyscynhaiarn, co. Carnarvon, 7 miles from Beddgelert, and 15 S. E. of Carnarvon. It stands on the western side, and a little above the Traeth Mawr, a tract of land reclaimed from the sea in 1809 by the late Mr. Maddocks, of Tanyrallt, who also built the town. It is regularly laid out in the form of a square, and contains a market-house, assembly rooms, hotel, commercial branch bank, and a church. Vessels of 300 tons can lie in the bay, and the mineral railway from Festiniog brings down vast quantities of slate to be shipped at the rising little port of Porthmadoc. The river Glasllyn, which is crossed by a bridge at the further extremity of the great sea wall, has been deepened, and its banks protected by dykes. This undertaking was effected by Mr. Maddocks, at the cost of £100,000, to protect the drowned lands within the Traeth, but it has not been entirely successful. There is a quay and breakwater at Porthmadoc. Market day is on Friday. Fairs are held on 6th March, Easter Monday, 14th May, 20th August, 25th September, and 12th November.

TREMAIN, a par. in the hund. of Trodyraur, co. Cardigan, 4 miles N.E. of Cardigan, its post town, and 8 from Newcastle-in-Emlyn. It is situated on the river Arberth. In this parish is the Llêch-yr-Ast stone. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £65.

TREMAINE, a par. in the N. div. of East hund., co. Cornwall, 8 miles N.W. of Launceston, its post town, and 12 S.W. of Camelford. The village is situated on the river Attery, about two miles from the old road from Camelford to Launceston. The soil is clay, with a subsoil of slate. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Egloskerry, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church is dedicated to St. Winwaloes. There are Church schools and a Sunday-school. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

TREMEIRCHION. See DYMEIRCHION, co. Flint.

TRE-MOSTYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Whitford, co. Flint, 3 miles N.W. of Holywell. It is situate on the Holyhead railway and river Dee, and is a subport to Chester.

TRENCH, a tnshp. in the par. of Ellesmere, co. Salop, 2 miles N.W. of Ellesmere. At Trench Crossing is a station on the Shropshire Union railway.

TRENDLE, a tythg. in the par. of Pitminster, co. Somerset, 4 miles S. of Taunton.

TRENEGLOS WITH WARBSTOW, a par. in the hund. of Lesnewth, co. Cornwall, 10 miles W. of Launceston, its post town, and 8 N.E. of Camelford. It belongs to Braddon of Tregleath. It is on the road from Launceston to Camelford. The surface is hilly, and the soil clayey, with a subsoil of slate. On the moors are a three-circled encampment, and a barrow at Warbstow. The living is a vic.* annexed to that of Warbstow, in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £187. The church is dedicated to St. Werburgh. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum, realised from land at Tretfligh. There are National and Sunday schools at Warbstow. J. Braddon, Esq., is lord of the manor.

TRENHOLME, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Whorlton, North Riding co. York, 4 miles S.W. of Stokesley.

TRENINICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Gorran, co. Cornwall, 6 miles S.E. of St. Austell.

TRENT, the third river in England, rises under Mole Cop in Biddulph Moor, co. Stafford, about 155 miles from the sea, and after receiving the tributary streams of the Sow, Blithe, Tame, Mees, Dove, Derwent, Soar, Erewash, Lene, Dovebeck, Greet, Devon, and Idle, joins the Humber at Alkborough. It is subject at its mouth to the "eagre," or bore, like the Severn, and is navigable as far as Gainsborough, to which place the tide comes up, being 25 miles from the sea, but barges can ascend as high as Burton-on-Trent.

TRENT, a par. in the hund. of Horethorne, co. Somerset, 4 miles N.W. from Sherborne, its post town, and 3 N.E. of Yeovil railway station. The village is bounded on the S. by the river Yeo. The soil is alluvial and sandy loam, with a subsoil of strong clay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £433, in the patron. of Christ Church College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, contains a carved screen, several stained windows, and monuments to the Wyndham family. The parochial charities produce about £24 per annum, besides 4 almshouses built and endowed by Mrs. Turner. There are a free school with an annuity of £120, a National school for both sexes, and a Sunday-school. H. D. Seymour, Esq., M.P., is lord of the manor and principal landowner. A fair is held on the Monday following the 26th August.

TRENT, a hmlt. in the par. of Sawley, hund. of Morleston, co. Derby, 7 miles S.E. of Derby. It is a junction station on the Midland railway.

TRENTHAM, a par. in the N. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford, 3 miles from Stoke-on-Trent, its post town, and 4 S.E. of Newcastle. It is a station on the North Staffordshire railway. This place is situated on the rivers Trent and Grand Trunk canal. The par. includes the chplry. of Blurton and the tnshps. of Butterton, Clayton-Griffith, Hanchurch, Hanford, and Trentham. It was formerly extensive, being divided into three parishes by Act of Parliament in the 58th year of George III. It is the site of a nunnery founded by King Ethelred, and given to St. Werburgh, his sister, as abbess. In the reign of Henry I. Randal, Earl of Chester, converted the nunnery into an Austin priory, the revenue of which at the Dissolution was £121 3*s.* 2*d., when the site was given to the Brandons. There are extensive brick and tile works. The village, which is large and well built, contains a savings-bank and police station. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £113. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1842 by the Duke of Sutherland. The register dates from 1558. There is also the district church of Butterton, the living of which is a perpet. cur., and a chapel-of-ease at More Heath. The parochial charities produce about £81 per annum, of which £20 go to Lady K. Leveson's school, now united with the parochial school. The principal residence is the Hall.

TRENTISHOE, a par. in the hund. of Braunton, co. Devon, 5 miles from Combarton, and 8½ N.E. of Ilfracombe. The village is situated in a valley near the coast of the Bristol Channel. Here is the celebrated Hedden's Mouth. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £118. The church is dedicated to St. Peter.

TREPARK, a tnshp. in the par. of Giffylliog, co. Denbigh, 5 miles W. of Ruthin. It includes Bont-Uchil.

TREPRENAL, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanymynech, co. Salop, 5 miles S. of Oswestry.

TRERDRE, a tnshp. in the par. of Caerwys, co. Flint, 3 miles S.W. of Holywell.

TRER GARTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandegla, co. Carnarvon, 2 miles S.E. of Bangor.

TRERHIWARTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangynog, co. Montgomery, 6 miles N.W. of Llanfyllin.

TRER LLAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandegla, co. Denbigh, 8 miles W. of Wrexham.

TRERLLAN, ISSA, and UCHA, tnshps. in the par of Llanfechan, co. Montgomery, 3 miles E. of Llanfyllin.

TRESCOE, an island in the Scilly Islands, co. Cornwall, 2 miles N.W. of St. Mary's. The principal village is called Dolphin. It has a good anchorage at New Grimsby. There are traces of a priory cell, and of Old and Oliver's Castles, where Asker and Blake formed intrenchments for the purpose of capturing St. Mary's Island, the last retreat of the adherents of King Charles I. This island measures about 2 miles in length by 1 mile in breadth. The land is generally fertile. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Exeter. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas.

TRESCOTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Tettenhall, co. Stafford, 4 miles S.W. of Wolverhampton. It is joined with Pirton.

TRESHAM, a tythg. in the par. of Hawkesbury, upper div. of Grimbald's-Ash hund., co. Gloucester, 6 miles S.W. of Tetbury, and 3½ S.E. of Wotton-under-Edge. It is joined with Killcott.

TRESHINISH, a group of the Hebridean Isles, 2 miles W. of Mull. They consist of 5 small islands situated opposite Treshinish Point, and extend from 4 to 5 miles in length from N.E. to S.W. Their coasts are rocky, rising in cliffs of from 40 to 50 feet in altitude, The islands are uninhabited, and chiefly in pasture, the two largest being Cairnbug and Cairnbug-beg; on the former are remains of a Norwegian fort, garrisoned by the Macleans in 1715.

TRESLOTHAN, an ecclesiastical district in the par. of Camborne, co. Cornwall, 10 miles S.W. of Truro. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £140.

TRESMEER, a par. in the N. div. of East hund., co. Cornwall, 7 miles N.W. of Launceston, its post town, and 9 E. of Camelford. The village is situated on the old road from Launceston to Camelford, near the river Attery, which bounds the parish on the N. The soil consists of a dark loam, with a subsoil of slate and clay. There are stone quarries and mines of manganese, but the latter are not at present worked. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £105. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. There are chapels for Wesleyans and Bible Christians. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor. A fair is held on 20th July.

TRESSICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Hentland, co. Hereford, 4 miles N.W. of Ross.

TRESWELL, a par. in the South-Clay div. of Bassetlaw wap., co. Nottingham, 5 miles S.E. of East Retford, its post town, and 10 S. of Gainsborough. The eastern end of the parish adjoins the Trent marsh. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £254, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of York. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, was restored in 1855. There is a free school for both sexes, and a chapel for the Wesleyans. The Rev. C. Eyre is lord of the manor.

TRE TALYASIN, a vil. in the par. of Llancynfelin, co. Cardigan, 6 miles N.E. of Aberystwith.

TRETILLA, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangarren, co. Hereford, 5 miles S.W. of Ross.

TRETIRE-WITH-MICHAEL-CHURCH, a par. in the lower div. of Wormelow hund., co. Hereford, 5½ miles W. of Ross, its railway station and post town, and 8 N. of Monmouth. The village is situated on a branch of the river Wye, and on the Ross and Abergavenny road. The soil is of a sandy and loamy nature, with a subsoil of rock. The living is a rect.* annexed to that of Michael Church, in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £182. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1856. There are several old tombs in the churchyard, and a sun-dial of great antiquity. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a free school supported by the Rev. J. Webb. Sir H. Hoskyns, Bart., is lord of the manor.

TRETOWER, a parcel in the par. of Llanfihangel-Cwmdû, hund. of Crickhowell, co. Brecon, 3 miles from Crickhowell, its post town, and 9 from Talgarth. It is situated on the Rhiangoll, a branch of the river Usk.

In the vicinity are Gaer Camp, on the Via Julia, the Vaughans' old seat, and a ruined castle. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David, val. £64. The church is dedicated to St. John the Evangelist.

TREVALGA, a par. in the hund. of Lesnewth, co. Cornwall, 1½ mile N. of Boscastle, its post town, 3 miles W. of Tintagel, and 4½ N.W. of Camelford. The village is situated in a wild spot on the Bristol Channel. It was held at the time of Domesday survey by Robert Earl of Mortaigne. The surface is hilly and the soil various. Slate abounds and is worked to some extent. In this parish is Nathan's waterfall. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £146, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to St. Petrock. A Sunday-school is held at the church. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

TREVARRICK, a hmlt. in the par. of Gorran, co. Cornwall, 3 miles S.E. of Tregony.

TREVEAR, a hmlt. in the par. of Gorran, co. Cornwall, 5 miles S. of St. Austell.

TREVEDID, a tnshp. in the par. of Meifod, co. Montgomery, 6 miles N.W. of Welshpool.

TREVENA, a vil. in the par. of Tintagel, co. Cornwall, 5 miles N.W. of Camelford. It is joined with Bossiney.

TREVERBYN, a parochial chplry. in the par. of Cwmdû, hund. of Powder, co. Cornwall, 3 miles from St. Austell. It was constituted a separate parish in 1846, under the Church Endowment Act. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £160, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is dedicated to St. Peter.

TREVERWARD, a tnshp. in the par. of Clun, co. Salop, 4 miles N. of Knighton.

TREVES, a vil. in the par. of Llan-ganna, co. Glamorgan, 3 miles N.W. of Cowbridge.

TREVET, a par. in the bar. of Ratoath, co. Meath, Ireland, 2 miles N. of Dunshaughlin, and 18 from Dublin. The village occupies the site of a monastery founded in the 10th century, and rebuilt by Hugh de Lacy. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath united with Kilbrew [which see].

TREVETHAN, a par. in the upper div. of Abergavenny hund., co. Monmouth, 7 miles from Usk, and 1 mile from Pontypool. It is situated near the Brecon and Monmouthshire canals and the river Afon Llwyd. The par. contains the tnshps. of Aberyschan, Pontnewydd, and Pont-y-pool, the last being a polling place for the county and a petty sessions town. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the collieries, limepits, and extensive iron-works, chiefly at Pont-y-pool [which see]. The surface is hilly, the highest point being Mynydd-Maen, which has an elevation of 1,531 feet above sea-level. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, and in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Caduca, or Cadocus, was restored in 1847, besides which there is an additional church erected in 1832. There are also the district churches of Abersychan and Pontenwydd, the livings of which are perpet. curs., val. £150 each. There are chapels for the Independents and Wesleyans.

TREVIL, a hmlt. in the par. of Aberystwith, co. Monmouth, 1½ mile from Tredegar, and 11 miles N.W. of Pont-y-pool. It is a station on the Tredegar and Abergavenny branch of the London and North-Western railway. It is situated near the source of the river Ebw-y-fawr.

TREVILLE, an ext. par. place in the upper div. of Wormelow hund., co. Hereford, 6 miles N.W. of Ross.

TREVINE, or TREFINE, a vil. in the par. of Llanrian, co. Pembroke, 8 miles S.W. of Fishguard, near the coast. In the vicinity is Longhouse cromlech of four stones, the one on the summit measuring 16 feet in length.

TREVOR, ISSA, and UCHA, tnshps. in the par. of Llangollen, co. Denbigh, 3 miles N.E. of Llangollen, its post town. It is a station on the Ruabon and Llandrillo branch of the Great Western railway. The village is situated on the Ellesmere canal and the river Dee, under Castel Dinas Bran. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £87.

TREWAELOD, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanasaph, co. Flint, 7 miles N.W. of Holywell.

TREWALCHMAI, a parochial chplry. in the hund. of Llyfon, co. Anglesey, 6 miles W. of Llangefni, and 10 from Bangor. It contains the hmlts. of Cemas-Coed and Gwalchmai. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of Heneglwys, in the dioc. of Bangor. The church is dedicated to St. Mordeyrn. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum.

TREWARLET, a hmlt. in the par. of Lezant, co. Cornwall, 2 miles S. of Launceston.

TREWEN, a par. in the N. div. of East hund., co. Cornwall, 5 miles S.W. from Launceston, its post town, and 11 from Camelford. The village is situated on the river Inny. The manor was formerly held by St. German's Priory. The South Petherwin hounds meet in this parish. The substratum abounds in slate and limestone, the latter being extensively worked at Trenalt. The living is a vic. annexed to that of South Petherwin, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. There is a National school for both sexes at Trenalt. Fairs are held on 1st May and 10th October.

TREWERN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanrhaiadr-yn-Mochnant, co. Denbigh, 4 miles N. of Llanfyllin.

TREWERN, a quarter in the par. of Nevern, co. Pembroke, 2 miles N.E. of Newport.

TREWERN, a tnshp. in the par. of Buttington, co. Montgomery, 3 miles N.E. of Welshpool, within which borough it is included. It is situated on the Montgomery canal and the river Severn.

TREWERN WITH GWYTHLA, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanvehangel-Nantmellan, co. Radnor, 4 miles N.W. of Radnor. It is situated among the hills.

TREWERYN, a stream of co. Merioneth, rises near lake Treweryn-Bwlch-y-Buarth, and falls into Loch Bala.

TREWHITT, HIGH AND LOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Rothbury, W. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 4 miles N.W. of Rothbury, and 14 S.W. of Alnwick. The village is situated on a branch of the river Coquet. The soil consists of clay and light loam, with a subsoil of clay. The principal residence is Trewhitt House.

TREWICK, a tnshp. in the par. of Bolam, W. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 6½ miles S.W. of Morpeth, on the river Blythe.

TREWYLAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llansaintffraid, hund. of Deythur, co. Montgomery, 6 miles N. of Welshpool, on the river Vyrnwy. There are ruins of a British fort.

TREWYN, a tnshp. in the par. of Corwen, co. Merioneth, 9 miles N.E. of Bala, and 2 from Corwen, near the river Dee, under Berwyn Mountain.

TREWYN-BODLOWYDD, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanedilan, co. Denbigh, 7 miles N.W. of Llangollen.

TREWYTHAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandinam, co. Montgomery, 6 miles N.E. of Llanidloes.

TRE-Y-DRE, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanrwst, co. Denbigh, 2 miles from Llanrwst, and 17 S.W. from Denbigh, near the river Conway.

TREYFORD. See TWEYFORD, co. Sussex.

TRE-Y-LLAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangynog, co. Montgomery, 6 miles N.W. of Llanfyllin.

TRIGG, a hund., co. Cornwall, contains the pars. of Bodmin, Blisland, St. Breward, Egloshayle, St. Endellion, Helland, St. Kew, St. Mabyn, St. Minver, St. Teath, Temple, and St. Tudy, comprising an area of 63,020 acres. It gives name to two deaneries in the archdeaconry of Cornwall and dioc. of Exeter.

TRILL, a tythg. in the par. of Axminster, co. Devon, 2 miles S.W. of Axminster.

TRILLICK, a post and market vil. in the par. of Kilskerry, bar. of Omagh, co. Tyrone, Ireland, 7 miles S.W. of Fintona, and 113 from Dublin. It is a station on the Irish North-Western railway. The town is on the road from Enniskillen to Omagh, and contains a police station and dispensary. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, and meeting-houses for Wesleyans and Methodists. The Archdalls, of Trillick Lodge, have been proprietors of this place since the reign of James I. The ruins of Mervyn Castle are visible. Petty sessions are held every other Monday. Market day is Tuesday. Fairs are held on the 14th of each month.

TRIM, an inland market and municipal town, and the county town of Meath, Ireland, 27 miles N.W. from Dublin, and 11 S.W. from Navan. It is situated on the river Boyne, and is connected by a short branch line with the Dublin and Meath railway. Its population in 1851 was 1,905, and in 1861 it was 2,068, inhabiting 369 houses. The town is old, and was formerly of considerable importance. It belonged to the De Lacys, who built a strong castle, which was rebuilt in 1220. The town was the scene of many stirring events, and was repeatedly destroyed by fire. Parliaments were held there from time to time, and a mint was established in 1469. It was successively occupied by royalists and parliamentarians in the civil war of Charles I., and was abandoned to Cromwell in 1649. Of the population in 1861, 233 were members of the Established Church, and 1,791 Roman Catholics. The town contains many good houses. The streets are paved. The parish church was rebuilt in 1802, but the old ivy-covered tower yet remains. There is a Roman Catholic chapel. There is a school of the Incorporated Society of Dublin in the town, besides National schools. The county courthouse, gaol, and fever hospital are at Trim, which is the assize town. There are in the town a brewery, tannery, and several flour mills. The government is administered under the Towns Improvement (Ireland) Act of 1854, by a council consisting of nine commissioners, including the chairman. The remains of Trim Castle consist of a triangular walled enclosure, with circular flanked towers, and a large and lofty keep in the centre. On the left bank of the river is the Yellow Tower, a portion of St. Mary's Abbey, which was built in the 13th century, and opposite to it is Talbot Castle, where the Duke of Wellington was educated. A Corinthian column, surmounted by a statue of the duke, was erected in 1817 at the south-western extremity of the town. Dangan Castle, where he spent his early life, is about four miles distant. The Poor-law Union comprises twenty electoral divisions. Market day is on Saturday. Fairs are held once a month.

TRIMDON, a par. in the S. div. of Easington ward, co. Durham, 6½ miles from Ferry Hill, its post town, and 8 S.E. of Durham. It is a station on the Hartlepool and Ferry Hill branch of the North-Eastern railway. The village is situated on the summit of a hill. The soil is a strong clayey loam, upon a substratum of limestone. There is a colliery which affords employment to many of the inhabitants, and some large specimens of lead ore have been found, but no mine has yet been opened. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £180. The church is dedicated to St. Cuthbert, or to St. Mary Magdalene. There is a parochial school, and a school at Trimdon Grange. Major-General Beckwith is lord of the manor. A lectureship was endowed about 1730 by John Smith, with £21 5*s.* a year.

TRIMINGHAM, a par. in the hund. of North Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 6 miles from North Walsham, its post town, and 5 S. of Cromer. The parish has suffered much from the encroachments of the sea. There is a small extent of heath and waste land. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £140, in the patron. of the Duchy of Lancaster. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, was formerly dependent on Brankholm Abbey. The register dates from 1558. There is a National school for both sexes. Lord Suffield is lord of the manor.

TRIMLEY ST. MARTIN, a par. in the hund. of Colneis, co. Suffolk, 8 miles S.E. of Ipswich, its post town, and 8 S. of Woodbridge. The village is situated between the rivers Orwell and Deben. The par. includes Stratton Hall and Grimston Hall, now a farm-house. The latter was once the seat of Thomas Cavendish, the first English circumnavigator, who was born here. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £600. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, is situated in the same churchyard with that of Trimley St. Mary. It was built by Thomas de Brotherton, natural son of Edward I., and has the mausoleum of the Barker family. The walls of the burial-ground were repaired with the stones of Felixton Castle and priory, said to have been a Roman station; but the sites have long been lost by encroachment of the sea.

TRIMLEY ST. MARY, a par. in the hund. of Colneis, co. Suffolk, 8½ miles S.E. of Ipswich, its post town, and 9 S. of Woodbridge. The village adjoins that of Trimley St. Martin. The parish is bounded on the W. by the river Orwell. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £470, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has recently been restored. It has a painted E. window, inserted by the widow of the late E. Julian, Esq. This church and that of St. Martin are both situated in the same churchyard. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum, realised from land. There are day and Sunday schools for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The Duke of Hamilton is lord of the manor.

TRIMPLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Kidderminster Foreign, co. Worcester, 3 miles N.W. of Kidderminster.

TRINAFOUR, a hmlt. in the par. of Blair-Atholl, co. Perth, Scotland, 10 miles W. of Blair-Atholl. It is situated in Glen Erochkie, on the road from Dalnacardoch to Kenmore. A fair for the sale of horses is held on the third Tuesday in March, old style.

TRING, a par., post, and market-town in the hund. of Dacorum, co. Herts, 5 miles N.W. of Berkhampstead, and 7 S.E. of Aylesbury. Two miles from the town is a station on the London and North Western railway. It is situated near the Grand Junction and Wendover canals, which have large reservoirs here, and on the ancient Icknield way, on the Chilterns. The par. contains the hmlts. of Wilstone and Long Marston. Tring is mentioned in Domesday book as Treung, and was then held by Robert d'Eu, but was subsequently given by King Stephen to Feversham Abbey, and by Henry VIII. to the Norths, from whom it came to the Peckhams, Guys, Gores, and Smiths of Sutton. The town principally consists of two streets, which are well paved and lighted with gas. The population of the parish in 1861 was 4,841, and, of the town, 3,130. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the silk mills, straw plait, and the manufacture of canvas. There are a bank, mechanics' institute, market-house, belonging to the lord of the manor, and a commercial hall. Courts leet and baron are held. The living is a perpet. cur., in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £300, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is later English, with a carved timber roof, and contains monuments of the Gores and Andersons of Prudley. It has recently been handsomely restored. The register dates from the middle of the 16th century. There is a chapel-of-ease at Long Marston in this parish. The parochial charities produce about £87 per annum. There are National schools for both sexes, and the Baptists have a chapel. Near the village is the mansion of Tring Park, built by Charles II. for Nell Gwynn. Robert Hill, the learned tailor, was born here in 1699. Near Northcote Hill a Roman helmet was found whilst digging for the Grand Junction canal. Market-day is on Friday. Fairs are held on Easter Monday and on old Michaelmas Day.

TRINITY, a par. in the Isle of Jersey, Channel Islands, 4 miles N.E. of St. Helier. The village is situated near Bouley Bay, and contains Cross, and part of "Cæsar's Wall." The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £120, in the patron. of the governor of the island.

TRINITY COLLEGE, an ext. par. place, in the University of Cambridge.

TRINITY COLLEGE CHURCH, a par. in the city and co. of Edinburgh, Scotland.

TRINITY-GASK, or TARNTY, a par. in the eastern district of co. Perth, Scotland. It comprises the three pars. of Kinkell, West Gask, and Chapelhill; extends 5 miles in length by about 3 in breadth, and is bounded on the N. by Madderty, on the E. by Gask, on the S. by Auchterarder and Blackford, and on the W. by Muthill and Crieff. The surface is moderately even, and, for the most part, well cultivated, and diversified with wood. The old Roman road, paved with stones, runs for a mile along the highest part of the parish. There are springs and several streams abounding in trout and salmon. The village of Trinity-Gask, which is about 7 miles S.W. of Perth, is situated on the river Earn, and is within easy access of several stations on the Scottish Central and Crieff railways. At Kinkell a bridge crosses the river Earn, connecting the two sections of the parish, which is traversed by the road from Perth to Muthill, and by that from Crieff to Auchterarder. This par. is in the presb. of Auchterarder and synod of Perth and Stirling. The stipend of the minister is about £150. The parish church was erected about 1770. There are also an United Presbyterian church, situated at Kinkell, and a parochial school. Millearn House and Colquhalzie House are the principal seats.

TRINITY, HOLY AND UNDIVIDED, a par. in the city and co. of Chester.

TRINITY ISLAND, an islet in Lough Key, co. Roscommon, Ireland.

TRINITY-WITHOUT, a par. in the city and co. of Waterford, Ireland. See WATERFORD.

TRIPPLETON, a tnshp. in the par. of Leintwardine, co. Hereford, 6 miles W. of Ludlow. It is on the river Teme, and is joined with Whitton.

TRISSIENT, a hmlt. in the par. of Margam, co. Glamorgan, near Aberafon.

TRISTA, an ancient par. in the Shetland Islands, coast of Scotland, now joined to Fetlar.

TRISTERNAGH, a townland in the bar. of Moygoish, co. Westmeath, Ireland, 2 miles E.N.E. of Ballinacarrigy. There are ruins of Tristernagh Abbey.

TRITLINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Hebburn, W. div. of Morpeth ward, co. Northumberland, 5 miles N.E. of Morpeth, and 2½ N.E. of Hebburn. The village is on the river Line. There is a school. The soil consists of clay and gravel. Tritlington House is the principal residence.

TRIVILLE, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Upper Wormelow, co. Hereford.

TRODDA, an island in the par. of Kilmuir, Isle of Skye, Scotland, 2 miles N. of Aird Point.

TROEDYRAUR, a hund., co. Cardigan, contains the pars. of Aberporth, Bangor, Bettws Evan, Blaen-Porth, Brongwyn, Henllan, Llandy-friog, Llandygwidd, Llanfair-Orllwyn, Llanfair-Tref-Helygon, Llangoedmore, Llangunllo, Llechryd, Mount, Penbryn, Tremain, Troedyraur, Verwick, and parts of Dihewid, Kilie Ayron, Lampeter-pont-Stephen, and Llanerch Ayron.

TROEDYRAUR, a par. in the above hund., co. Cardigan, 3 miles N.E. of Newcastle-Emlyn, and 11 from Cardigan. The village is situated on a branch of the river Teifi. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David, val. £268, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, was erected in 1795. The Methodists have a chapel. Troedyraur House and Alderbrook Hall are the principal residences. There are traces of a Roman way passing Crûg Mawr.

TROFARTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Bettws-yn-Rhos, co. Denbigh, 3 miles S.W. of Abergele.

TROMANN, a vil. in the bar. of Athlone, co. Roscommon, Ireland, 3 miles S. of Roscommon.

TROMIE WATER, a stream, co. Inverness, Scotland, flows through Glen Tromie, and joins the Spey at Kingussie.

TRON, a par. in the city of Glasgow, co. Lanark, Scotland. See GLASGOW.

TRON CHURCH, a par. in the city and co. of Edinburgh, Scotland. See EDINBURGH.

TRONDRAY, an island in the par. of Tingwall, Shetland Isles, coast of Scotland, 6 miles S.W. of Lerwick. It extends about 3 miles in length from N. to S., with an extreme breadth of about 2 miles.

TROON, a post town and thriving seaport in the par. of Dundonald, co. Ayr, Scotland, 6 miles N. of Ayr, and 9 S.W. of Kilmarnock. It is a station on the Glasgow and Kilmarnock railways, and is situated on the promontory of Troon, near Lady Island Rock. It is a bathing-place, and a subport to Irvine, and is the sole property of the Duke of Portland, to whose patronage the town owes its present prosperity. The promontory consists of a belt of rock extending 1½ mile into the sea, with a mean breadth of about 2 furlongs, resembling a large segment of a circle. Although a subport to Irvine, it carries on the principal trade of that port, and bids fair to become one of the most important seaports on the W. coast of Scotland, having an extensive bay and a secure harbour. It has two superior dry docks for repairing vessels, large storehouses, a light-house, and ship-building yards, also a rope and sail manufactory. The pier is 800 feet in length, and the lights which were put up in the years 1827 and 1848 are visible at a distance of 9 and 6 miles. From the extremity of the harbour directly to Kilmarnock runs the railway, on which coal is conveyed for shipment to Ireland. In the town are a branch office of the Union Bank, a savings-bank, 4 insurance agencies, several hotels and lodging-houses for the accommodation of visitors in the bathing season, and a gas company. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the coasting trade and in the fisheries. Salmon and rabbits are in abundance. Troon is in the presb. of Ayr, and in the atron of the communicants. There are a chapel-of-ease, a Free church, United Presbyterian church, and a Free church school, subscription school, and other schools.

TROQUEER, a par., co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland. It is situated on the eastern border of the county, and comprises Maxwelltown, a burgh of barony, and a suburb of Dumfries. The par. extends in length about 8½ miles, from College Loch on the N. to the mouth of New Abbey-Pow on the S., with an extreme breadth of 4½ miles, and is bounded on the N. by Terrigles, on the E. by the river Nith, which separates it from Dumfriesshire; on the S. and S.W. by New Abbey, and on the W. by Lochrutton. The prevailing rocks are mica-slate. This par. is in the presb. and synod of Dumfries, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is about £353. The parish church is situated about a mile S. of Maxwelltown, near the river Nith. There are a Free church, chapel-of-ease, also a Free church school, and an endowed school at Maxwelltown. The principal seats are Kirconnel, Cargen, Mabie, Dalscairth, Goldielea, Terraughty, Carruchan, Cargenholm, and Mavis Grove.

TRORY, a par. in the bars. of Lurg, Magheraboy, and Tirkennedy, co. Fermanagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles N. of Enniskillen, its post town. The surface consists of a good soil, with a small proportion of bog. The parish is traversed by the river Erne, which is here crossed by a bridge, built in 1817. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Clogher, val. £177, in the patron. of the Incumbent of Devenish. The church was built in 1778. There is a meeting-house for Wesleyans, five schools, and a Sunday-school. The chief residence is Rockfield.

TROSLEY, or TROTTERSCLIFFE, a par. in the hund. of Larkfield, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 9 miles W. of Maidstone, its post town, and 2 N.E. of Rotham. The village, situated at the foot of the chalk hills, was given by King Offa to Rochester Priory in 788, and subsequently came to the Bishops of Rochester, whose palace was built here in 1185 by Bishop Granville. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £332, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, has been restored and modernised. There is an endowed National school. At a farm in the vicinity Druidical stones, British coins, copper swords, and other relics of antiquity have been discovered.

TROSTON, a par. in the hund. of Blackbourn, co. Suffolk, 3 miles N.W. of Ixworth, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Bury St. Edmund's. Several barrows exist on the heath. The surface is flat, and the soil light and sandy. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £332, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. Troston Hall was formerly the seat of Capel Lofft, the friend of Bloomfield and Kirke White, whose uncle Capel, the editor of Shakspeare, was born here in 1713.

TROSTREY, a par. in the upper div. of Usk hund., co. Monmouth, 2½ miles N.W. of Usk, its post town, and 6 from Pont-y-Pool. The village is situated on the road from Usk to Abergavenny, near the eastern bank of the river Usk. Salmon are caught by a weir on the river, which rose 22 feet above the usual level on the 16th February, 1795. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £72. The church is dedicated to St. David. There are a few small charities.

TROSTRIE, a small loch in co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 5 miles N.W. of Kirkcudbright.

TROTHY, a stream of co. Monmouth, rises at Blaen Trothy, and joins the Wye near Monmouth.

TROTTERNISH, a district of the Isle of Skye, co. Inverness, Scotland.

TROTTERSCLIFFE. See TROSLEY, co. Kent.

TROTTON, a par. in the hunds. of Dumpford and Easebourne, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 4 miles S.W. of Midhurst, within which borough it is included. The village is situated on the river Rother. The par. includes the hmlt. of Dumpford and the chplry. of Tuxlith or Milland, bordering on Hampshire. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Tuxlith annexed, in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £296. The church, dedicated to St. George, contains a brass of Lady Camoys, bearing date 1310, and a double canopied monument of brass and Sussex marble to Lord Camoys and wife, bearing date 1424. There is also a chapel-of-ease at Milland.

TROUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Stapleton, ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 9 miles N.E. of Longtown, and 13 from Brampton.

TROUGH, a bar., co. Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It contains the par. of Donagh and a portion of Errigal Trough.

TROUGHEND WARD, a tnshp. in the par. of Elsdon, S. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 7 miles N.E. of Bellingham.

TROUP, a vil. in the par. of Gamrie, co. Banff, Scotland, 9 miles N.E. of Banff, on the coast near Troup Head Cliffs.

TROUTBECK, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Windermere, ward of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 4½ miles S.E. of Ambleside, and 2 from Windermere, its post town. It is a station on the Cockermouth, Keswick, and Penrith railway. The village is situated on the Troutbeck rivulet, which flows through a vale to Calgarth on Windermere. It was given by Charles I. to the Philipsons of Crook Hall. In the neighbourhood are extensive quarries of blue slate. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £43, in the patron. of the Rector of Windermere. The church, dedicated to Jesus, was erected in 1562, and restored in 1828. The parochial charities are small. There are an endowed school for boys, at which a Sunday-school is held, and a girls' school. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor.

TROUTBECK WATER, a stream of co. Westmoreland, rises in Milburn Fells, and joins the Crawdundle at Newbiggen.

TROUTSDALE, a tnshp. in the par. of Brompton, Pickering Lythe, North Riding co. York, 10 miles W. of Scarborough, and 5 from Snainton. It includes the hmlt. of Longdale End. In the vicinity are stone quarries. H. Hill, Esq., is lord of the manor.

TROWAY, a tnshp. in the par. of Eckington, hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 2½ miles E. of Eckington, and 5½ N.E. of Chesterfield. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the manufacture of sickles and saw handles, and in the neighbouring collieries. It is supposed to have been once a Roman settlement.

TROWBRIDGE, a par. and post and market town in the hund. of Melksham, N. division of Wilts, 103 miles from London, 10 S.W. from Devizes, 9½ N.W. from Warminster, and 32 N.W. from Salisbury. It is a station on the Great Western railway. It is situated on a rocky eminence near the river Biss, across which is a stone bridge, and about a mile from the Kennet and Avon canal. The par. contains the tythgs. of Studley, Staverton, and Little Trowle, the two last of which are mentioned in Domesday book. It was anciently a royal manor, and had a castle at Courthill with seven towers, which Stephen took from Humphrey de Bohun, who held it for the Empress Matilda. This castle was rebuilt by John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, but having fallen into decay, its site was given by Henry VIII. to Sir Edward Seymour, in whose possession it remained until the marriage of Lady Frances Seymour, daughter of Algernon, 7th Duke of Somerset, with the Marquess of Granby, afterwards Duke of Rutland, from whose family it was purchased by Thomas Timbrel. It is now in the possession of William Stancomb, Esq., who purchased it from the widow of the late Thomas Timbrel, since which he has built a very fine market-house at a cost of nearly £5,000. The town is irregularly built, and the streets are narrow and ill-constructed, except the main thoroughfare, which is spacious. It is paved, lighted with gas, and supplied with excellent water. The stone cross in the marketplace, which stood here in Leland's time, was removed in the early part of the present century. There are two banks, a savings-bank, police-station, and court-hall. Petty sessions are held on the first Wednesday in every month, and a county court every two months. The town is under the management of a local board and town commissioners. The manufacture of woollen cloth was introduced at an early period, and must have soon become a thriving branch of trade, as Camden mentions that Trowbridge was then famous for the clothing trade: the articles made are kerseymeres, tweed, and broadcloth. The population of the parish in 1861 was 10,487, and of the town 9,626. The living is a rect.,* with the cur. of St. Stephen's annexed, in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £600. The church, dedicated to St. James, is old, with a square tower at the W. end, containing eight bells; it has been restored at an outlay of about £8,000. There are fragments of ancient painted glass in some of the windows, and attached to the eastern ends of the aisles are two private chapels. In addition to the parish church are the district churches of Trinity, Studley, and Staverton, the livings of which are perpet. curs., varying in val. from £230 to £110. Trinity church was erected in 1838 at the W. end of the town. The parochial charities produce about £285 per annum, besides several almshouses. There are National and British schools for both sexes, including infants. The Independents, Wesleyans, Presbyterians, and General and Particular Baptists have chapels. Market days are Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. An annual fair is held on the 5th August and two following days.

TROWELL, a par. in the S. div. of Broxtow wap., co. Nottingham, 5¾ miles W. of Nottingham, its post town, and 2 N. of Stapleford railway station. The village is at the foot of a declivity near the Nottingham canal and river Erewash, which separates it from Derbyshire. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £440. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, has been restored at the expense of Lord Middleton, who is lord of the manor. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. There are a National and a free school.

TROWLE, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Bradford, co. Wilts, near Bradford.

TROWSCOED, a tnshp. in the par. of Carno, co. Montgomery, 7 miles N. of Llanidloes.

TROWSCOED, a tnshp. in the par. of Guilsfield, co. Montgomery, 3 miles N. of Welshpool.

TROWSE-MILLGATE, a hmlt. in the par. of Trowse, city of Norwich, co. Norfolk, 1½ mile S.E. of Norwich.

TROWSE, NEW, a vil. in the par. of Lesmahagow, co. Lanark, Scotland, 6 miles S.W. of Lanark.

TROWSE-NEWTON, a par. in the hund. of Henstead, co. Norfolk, 1 mile S.E. of Norwich, its post town, and 9 miles from Loddon. It has stations on two branches of the Great Eastern railway. The village is situated on the bank of the river Yare. This par. includes the hmlts. of Trowse-Millgate, Carrow, and Brecondale, which are within the county of the city of Norwich, and is bounded on the N. by the river Yare. Trowse Hall, the ancient seat of the priors of Norwich, is now a farm dwelling. From Crown Point a view is obtained of the city of Norwich, with the village of Thorpe and the rivers Wensum and Yare. The living is a vic., with that of Lakenham annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £361, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew.

TROY, MITCHEL. See MITCHEL TROY, co. Monmouth.

TROY TOWN, a hmlt. in the par. of Piddletown, co. Dorset, 3 miles N.E. of Dorchester.

TRUBLEY, a par. in the bar. of Lower Deece, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles E.N.E. of Trim. The surface consists of a good soil, and is traversed by the river Boyne. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Meath, joined to Trim. Here are the ruins of Cassock Castle, the halting place of Cromwell after the attack on Drogheda.

TRUDOX HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Nunney, co. Somerset, 4 miles S.W. of Frome. There is a ruined chapel.

TRUGHANACMY, a bar. in co. Kerry, prov. of Kerry, Ireland. It contains the pars. of Ballincuslane, Ballymacelligott, Balynahaglish, Ballyseedy, Brosna, Castleisland, Clogherbrien, Dysert, Fenit, Kilgarrylander, Kiltallagh, Nohaval, O'Brennan, Ralass, and Tralee, and portions of Armagh, Ardfert, Currans, Kilcolman, Killeentierna, and Killorglin.

TRUIM, a stream of co. Inverness, Scotland, rises in Drumnachter Forest, and joins the Spey near Pitmain.

TRULL, a par. in the hund. of Taunton, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.W. of Taunton, its post town and railway station. The village is on the high road from Taunton to Honiton. The soil is fertile, upon a substratum of red marl. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £98. The church is dedicated to All Saints. There is a school for both sexes, at which a Sunday-school is also held. R. Mattock, Esq., is lord of the manor.

TRUMISGARY, a quoad sacra par. in the par. of North Uist, Outer Hebrides, Scotland. It extends in length about 17 miles, with an extreme breadth of 12 miles. It belongs to Inverness, and is in the presb. of Uist, synod. of Glenelg, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is about £120. The parish church was erected in 1829, and is a government one. There is a Free church.

TRUMPFLEET, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirk Sandall, West Riding co. York, 6 miles N.E. of Doncaster, on the river Don.

TRUMPINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Triplow, co. Cambridge, 2 miles S. of Cambridge, its post town. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the river Cam, near the Cambridge railway. The soil is loamy and gravelly. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £241, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, or to SS. Mary and Michael, contains a monumental brass of Sir Roger de Trumpington as a crusader, cross-legged in chain armour, bearing date 1289, also an eight-sided font and several stained-glass windows. The register dates from the middle of the 16th century. There is a National school for both sexes. Several Roman vases, urns, and pateræ have been discovered at Dam Hill. The principal residences are Anstrey Hall and Trumpington Hall, in the latter of which Anstrey, who wrote the poetical "Bath Guide" was born in 1724.

TRUNCH, a par. in the hund. of North Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 3 miles N.E. of North Walsham, its post town, and 17 from Norwich. The village is near the coast. There is an extensive malting and brewing establishment. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £350, in the patron. of Catherine Hall, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Botolph, contains an old font and a brass. The Methodists have a chapel. The Rev. T. Jarrett is lord of the manor.

TRURO, a seaport, market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, in the W. div. of Powder hund., co. Cornwall, 11 miles N. of Falmouth, and 21 S.W. of Bodmin. It is a station on the Cornwall and West Cornwall railway. Truro, which is first mentioned in the 12th century under the name of Triueru, occupies the point of land between the two small rivers Kenwyn and Allen, at the head of Truro Creek, a branch of Falmouth Harbour. This river or creek at spring tide swells into a lake 2 miles in length, and of sufficient depth to be navigable for vessels of 100 tons burden, giving to the town the advantages of a capacious port. It is supposed to have obtained its first charter of incorporation about 1130, which was confirmed by Queen Elizabeth in 1589, and has returned two members to parliament since the year 1294, the mayor being the returning officer. The borough was formerly limited to the parish of St. Mary, but since the improvement Act obtained in 1794, comprises the whole town, extending into the parishes of St. Clement's and Kenwyn. By the municipal Act it is now divided into two wards, and is governed by a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 18 councillors. Within the present century it has greatly increased in size and prosperity, and is considered the largest and neatest town in Cornwall. The population of the borough in 1851 was 10,733, and in 1861, 12,000. The streets are well paved, lighted with gas, and regularly built. The principal public buildings are the townhall, a modern structure in the Italian style; the market-house, also recently erected; the borough gaol, a police-station, union workhouse, assembly rooms, theatre, savings-bank, the Cornish Bank, the county infirmary, a dispensary; the Royal Cornwall Institution and Museum, established in 1818, containing a collection of Cornish minerals, birds, and antiquities; the county library, containing 3,000 volumes; and Cornish Horticultural Society; there are also the lying-in institution, humane society, and a granite column, erected to the memory of the two Landers, the famous African explorers, who were natives. Public rooms are about to be built near the eastern bridge, together with a large room for the reception of the library belonging to the Bishop of Exeter, which he has presented to the clergy of Cornwall. The trade of the town, which is considerable, is chiefly connected with the mining interest. Large quantities of tin ore are run into bars and ingots for exportation to the Mediterranean and India, and copper ore is exported to Swansea to be smelted, while coals, iron, and timber are largely imported for consumption in the mines, one of which, the East Huel Rose, is close to the town. Crucibles of a superior quality are made at Calenick, near Truro. The coinage of tin was a privilege enjoyed by this town as early as the reign of John; the process is still carried on only here and at Penzance. The court of the Vice-Warden of the Stanneries is also held here quarterly. The Easter quarter sessions and petty sessions for the western division of Powder are held at the townhall, also county courts monthly. The Poor-law Union of Truro comprises 24 parishes and townships. Two weekly newspapers, the Royal Cornwall Gazette and the West Briton and Cornwall Advertiser are published on Thursday. The archdeacon's visitations are held here. The living of St. Mary's is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £150. The church of St. Mary, situated in High Cross, is a gothic structure of white granite, erected in 1518, with a tower and spire 125 feet high, erected in 1769. In the interior are several monuments. The old altar-piece representing Moses and Aaron has been lately removed, and a Caen-stone reredos, carved and illuminated, placed in its stead. The organ is one of the finest in the W. of England. There are also the parish churches of St. Clement's and Kenwyn, situated out of the town, besides the district churches of St. George, in Carvedras, St. John's, in Lemon-street, and St. Paul's, in Tregoles-road, all of which are modern. The Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists, Baptists, and Independents have chapels. There are a grammar school, with a small endowment and two exhibitions of £30 per annum to Exeter College; a mining school, held at the Royal Institution; a central school on Dr. Bell's plan; also National, Sunday, and infant schools in connection with the several churches. The diocesan female training college is a modern structure situated at the eastern border of the town, near St. Paul's Church. The local charities include a hospital or almshouse for ten widows, founded by Henry Williams in 1631. Near the town is an eminence called Castle Hill, where formerly stood a castle of the earls of Cornwall, but which was in ruins before Leland's time. Besides the brothers Lander, Foote the comedian and Polwhele the historian were born here. Market days are Wednesday and Saturday, the former chiefly for grain. Fairs are held on 5th March, 14th May, 19th November, and 8th December.

TRUSHAM, a par. in the hund. of Exminster, co. Devon, 2 miles N.W. of Chudleigh, its post town, and 9 S.W. of Exeter. The village, which is small and straggling, is situated near the river Teign. The soil consists of light loam upon a subsoil of stone brash. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £160. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, contains a carved screen. The parochial charities produce about £35 per annum, which go to the widows' almshouses. There is a free school with a small endowment. Sir L. T. Paulk, Bart., is lord of the manor.

TRUSLEY, a par. in the hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 7 miles W. of Derby, its post town, and 5 N. of Tutbury railway station. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £129. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was rebuilt on the site of an earlier one in 1717. There is also the district church of Long Lane, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £80.

TRUSTHORPE, a par. in the Marsh div. of Calceworth hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 7½ miles N.E. of Alford, its post town, and 16 S.E. of Louth. The village is situated on the coast. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £212. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, was rebuilt in 1842, and has an E. window of stained glass. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels. T. Alcock, Esq., is lord of the manor.

TRUSTION, a stream of co. Merioneth, joins the Dee below Cynwyd, after forming a cascade of 60 feet.

TRWSTYWELIN, a tnshp. in the par. of Berriew, co. Montgomery, 4 miles N.W. of Montgomery.

TRYDDYN, a chplry. in the par. and hund. of Mold, co. Flint, 2 miles from Mold, its post town. It is situated on Offa's Dyke. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the iron and coal mines. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of St. Asaph, val. £140, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

TRYSULL, a par. in the S. div. of Seisdon hund., co. Stafford, 5 miles S.W. of Wolverhampton, its post town, and 7½ N.W. of Dudley. The village is situated near the Birmingham canal, on the river Smeston. The par. includes the hmlt. of Seisdon, which gives name to the hundred. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Wombourne, in the dioc. of Lichfield. The church is dedicated to All Saints. There is a National school for both sexes.

TUAM, a par., post, and market town, episcopal city, and municipal borough, in the bars. of Ballymoe, Clare, and Dunmore, co. Galway, and prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 19 miles N.E. of Galway, and 120 W. of Dublin. It is the terminus of a short branch line of railway from the Midland Great Western, and is situated on the Harrow an affluent of the river Clare. The population in 1851 was 4,938, and in 1861, 4,565, occupying 875 houses. An abbey was founded on the present site of the town in 487, which early in the 6th century was made a cathedral; houses were quickly built around it; and the town which sprang up was dedicated to St. Jarlath, the first bishop, whose remains were preserved in the cathedral. It was destroyed by fire, with its castle and all its churches, in 1244. The present town occupies a low and flat, but salubrious, part of the country. It consists of a small square, with several straggling streets leading from it. St. Mary's Cathedral is small, and stands on the W. of the town; it is also the parish church, and is a mixture of the Saxon and Gothic styles of architecture, the former predominating. It is intended as far as possible to restore its former magnificence. The Roman Catholic Cathedral, which is of recent erection, occupies a raised site on the E. of the town, is of cruciform shape, with a tower and six turrets at the angles of the building, and is one of the finest Roman Catholic churches in Ireland. The interior is in keeping with the exterior. There are also in the town St. Jarlath's Roman Catholic College, three National schools, and a free school of the Tuam Diocesan Education Society, a market-house, court-house, bridewell, and union workhouse. The bishop's palace is at the N.E. of the town, and the residence of the Roman Catholic archbishop adjoins his cathedral. The trade is principally for the supply of the surrounding country. There is a grain market, with flour mills, tanneries, and a brewery. The town has been placed under the Towns' Improvement (Ireland) Act, 1854, and its condition is attended to by fifteen commissioners, including the chairman. Quarter and petty sessions are held here. Of the population, in 1861, 263 were members of the Established Church, 4,295 were Roman Catholics, and 7 were Presbyterians. The diocese of Tuam, with which are joined Achonry and Killala, belongs to the province of Armagh, and is the largest in Ireland, comprising most of the county of Galway, a large portion of Mayo, and parts of Roscommon, Sligo, and King's County. It includes 60 benefices. The income of the see, exclusive of charges and deductions, is £4,039. Tuam was an archbishopric from 1152 till 1839, when, under the provisions of the Church Temporalities Act, the archiepiscopal jurisdiction ceased, and the see became suffragan to the Archbishop of Armagh. In the Roman Catholic distribution it still remains an archiepiscopal province, comprising the dioceses of Achonry, Clonfert, Elphin, Galway, Kilmacduagh and Kilfenora, and Killala. Market days are Wednesday and Saturday. Fairs are held on 10th March, 10th May, 4th July, 11th September, 20th, 21st, and 22nd October, 10th November, and 15th December.

TUBBRID, a par. in the bar. of Iverk, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles E.S.E. of Pilltown, its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Fiddown £830, in the patron. of the bishop. The church has long been in ruins. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this parish is united to that of Moncoin. There are a day and Sunday schools.

TUBBRID, a par. in the bar. of West Iffa and Offa, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles S.S.W. of Cahir, its post town. The surface is mountainous, but has a productive soil, with some little bog. The parish is crossed by the road from Cahir to Clogheen. The Galtee mountains and the river Suir are near its limits. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lismore, val. with two others £466, in the patron. of the bishop. There are ruins of three churches within this parish, which in the Roman Catholic arrangement is united to that of Ballylooby or Whitechurch. There are several public and three private schools, and a police station. The principal residences are Scart House and Carrigataha. The ruins of Ruscoe Castle are here. Dr. Geoffrey Keating, the historian, was born here.

TUBBRIDBRITAIN, a par. in the bar. of Crannagh, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Freshford, its post town. It is crossed by the road from Freshford to Urlingford. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. with Aghoure, £704, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, and a public and a private school. The chief residence is Gore's Grove. There are ruins of an ancient castle.

TUBNEY, a par. in the hund. of Ock, co. Berks, 4 miles N.W. of Abingdon, its post town. The soil consists of sand and limestone. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £120, in the patron. of Magdalen College, Oxford.

TUCKENHAY, a hmlt. in the par. of Cornworthy, co. Devon, 4 miles N.W. of Dartmouth.

TUCKERTON, a hmlt. in the par. of North Petherton, co. Somerset, 2 miles S. of Bridgwater.

TUCKING-MILL, an ecclesiastical district in the par. of Camborne, hund. of Penwith, co. Cornwall, 10 miles S.W. of Truro.

TUCKING-MILLS, a hmlt. in the par. of Compton Dando, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.W. of Keynsham.

TUCKTON, a tythg. in the par. of Christchurch, lib. of Westover, co. Hants, near Christchurch.

TUDDENHAM, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Mitford, co. Norfolk, 8 miles N.W. of Norwich. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the road from Norwich to Mattishall. The living is a vic., annexed to that of Honingham, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains a sculptured figure of a Knight Templar, several monuments, and an E. window representing the Descent from the Cross. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel. There are National schools, built in 1841 by Lord Bayning, for this and the adjoining parish of Honingham. At the enclosure of the parish 24 acres were allotted to the poor for fuel.

TUDDENHAM, NORTH AND WEST, a par. in the hund. of Mitford, co. Norfolk, 5 miles S.E. of East Dereham, its post town. Tuddenham Hall, formerly the seat of the Skippe family, is now a farmhouse. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £716. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel.

TUDDENHAM ST. MARTIN, a par. in the hund. of Carlford, co. Suffolk, 3 miles N.E. of Ipswich, its post town, and 6 from Woodbridge. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £112. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, contains a font bearing date 1363. The parochial charities produce about £27 per annum.

TUDDENHAM ST. MARY, a par. in the hund. of Lackford, co. Suffolk, 3½ miles S.E. of Mildenhall, its post town, and 3 N. of Higham railway station. The village is on an eminence. A large portion of the land is in heath. In the vicinity are the ruins of an ancient abbey. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £284. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The register dates from 1563. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a free school for both sexes, founded and endowed by John Cockerton in 1723, which has recently been rebuilt. The Baptists have a chapel.

TUDELEY, a par. in the hunds. of Washlingstone and Twyford, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 2 miles S.E. of Tonbridge, its post town, and 12 from Maidstone. The village is on the South-Eastern railway. A portion of the land is in hop-grounds. There are mineral springs, having the same properties as those of Tonbridge Wells. The old seat of the earls of Westmoreland is now a farmhouse. The living is a vic., annexed to that of Capel, in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £238. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was rebuilt in the last century on the site of an earlier one.

TUDERLEY. See TYTHERLEY, co. Hants.

TUDHOE, a tnshp. in the par. of Brancepeth, in the S.E. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 4 miles N.E. of Bishop Auckland, and 5 S.W. of Durham.

TUDWORTH, a hmlt. in the par. of Hatfield, West Riding co. York, 2 miles S. of Thorne.

TUDY, ST., a par. in the hund. of Trigg, co. Cornwall, 6 miles N. of Bodmin, its post town. The village, which is considerable, formerly belonged to the family of Nicolls, of Penrose, from whom it came to the Kekewicks. The substratum abounds in slate and porphyry. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £700, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church contains monuments and effigies of the Nicolls family. Dr. R. Lower, the physician, and his brother, Sir William, the dramatist, were born at Tremere, in this parish. The principal residence is Hengar. Fairs are held on 20th May and 14th September.

TUESLEY, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Godalming, co. Surrey, 1 mile S.W. of Godalming.

TUFFLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Mary-de-Lode, middle div. of Dudstone hund., co. Gloucester, 2 miles S.W. of Gloucester, within which city it is included. It is on the Gloucester and Bristol railway.

TUFTON, a par. in the hunds. of Wherwell and Evingar, co. Hants, 1 mile S.W. of Whitchurch, its railway station and post town. The village is situated on the river Test. The surface is hilly, with a subsoil of chalk and gravel. The living is a perpet. cur., annexed to that of Bullington, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The Earl of Portsmouth is lord of the manor.

TUGBY, a par. in the hunds. of East Goscote and Gartree, co. Leicester, 7 miles N.W. of Uppingham, its post town, and 12 S.E. of Leicester. The village is situated near the river Eye. The par. contains the lib. of Keythorpe. The surface, which comprises some of the highest land in England, is chiefly in pasture, with a clayey soil. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of East Norton annexed, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £284. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket, has recently been restored. The parochial charities produce about £86 per annum. There are day and Sunday schools. The Wesleyans have a chapel. Keythorpe Hall is the principal residence. Lord Berners is lord of the manor.

TUGFORD, a par. in the lower div. of Munslow hund., co. Salop, 10 miles N.E. of Ludlow, its post town, and 9 S.E. of Church-Stretton. The village is situated on a branch of the river Corve. The par. includes the tnshp. of Baughcott. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, and in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Catherine. The charities consist in Clinton's bequest of £100, the interest of which is given to ten widows annually. C. Pemberton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

TUGHALL, a tnshp. in the par. and N. div. of Bambrough ward, co. Northumberland, 8½ miles N.E. of Alnwick, and about the same distance S.E. of Belford. It is situated near the coast. The Duke of Northumberland is lord of the manor.

TULLA, an islet in Loch Menteith, co. Perth, Scotland.

TULLA, a small loch and river, co. Argyle, Scotland, near the head waters of the river Orchy.

TULLA, LOWER, a bar. in co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It contains the pars. of Clonlea, Killaloe, Killokennedy, Killuran, Kilseily, Kiltenanlea, O'Briensbridge, and Ogonnelloe.

TULLA, UPPER, a bar. in co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It contains Scariff, the pars. of Feakle, Kilnoe, Moynoe, Tomgraney, and Tulla, and a portion of Inishcaltra.

TULLA, a par., post and market town in the bar. of Upper Tulla, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 10 miles E. of Ennis, and 127 miles from Dublin. The surface is mountainous, rising to a height of 1,064 feet, in some places consisting of a good soil, and has a large proportion of bog. It is crossed by the road from Ennis to Killaloe. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. £264, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1812, partly by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are two Roman Catholic chapels and five private schools. The principal seats are Maryfort, Kiltanon, and Newlawn. The town contains a court-house, dispensary, police-station, and bridewell. Here are the ruins of an abbey and Druidical remains. Limestone is quarried, and veins of lead occur. Petty sessions are held every other Thursday. Market day is on Thursday. Fairs are held on 25th March, 13th May, 15th August, 30th September, and 7th December.

TULLABRACKY, a par. in the bars. of Coshma and Smallcounty, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Bruff, its post town. The surface consists of good soil. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. £369, in the patron. of the bishop. There were two churches, now in ruins. The principal residence is Rockbarton, situated near Cahir Guillamore, the old seat of Viscount Guillamore.

TULLAGH, a par. in the bar. of East Carbery, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Skibbereen, its post town. The surface is rocky, but comprises some good pasture land. It includes Abbeystrand, Baltimore, with Baltimore Harbour, and Innishorkin Island. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Ross, val. £258, in the patron. of the bishop. The church at Baltimore was built in 1818, partly by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are two Roman Catholic chapels and two public schools. The chief residences are Baltimore Castle and Baltimore House. Stone and slate are quarried. The ruins of the old church and of Baltimore and Ardagh castles are in the vicinity.

TULLAGHAN, a vil. in the par. of Rosclogher, co. Leitrim, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 3 miles N.N.W. of Kinlough.

TULLAGHAN BAY, a creek at the embouchure of the river Owenmore, co. Mayo, Ireland, 5 miles E. of Blacksod Bay.

TULLAGHANBROGUE, a par. in the bars. of Crannagh and Shillelogher, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.W. of Kilkenny. The living is a rect. joined to Inchiologhan (which see). The principal residence is Desart Court, the seat of the Earl of Desart.

TULLAGHANOGE, a par. in the bar. of Upper Navan, co. Meath, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Athboy. The living is a cur. united with Trim. The chief residence is Clifton Lodge, the seat of the Earl of Darnley, who is proprietor with Lord Sherborne.

TULLAGHER, a vil. in the bar. of Ida, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of New Ross.

TULLAGHERIN, a par. in the bar. of Gowran, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.S.W. of Gowran. The living is a vic. joined to Kilfane (which see). Castlefield House is the chief residence. There are the ruins of a tower standing 70 feet high, and the remains of two churches and three castles.

TULLAGHGORE, a par. in the bar. of Upper Dunluce, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, adjoining Ballymoney.

TULLAGHMELAN, a par. in the bar. of West Iffa and Offa, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles W.S.W. of Clonmel. The river Suir traverses the parish. The living is a rect., val. with Molough, £185, in the patron. of the bishop. The chief residence is Knocklofty, the seat of the Earl of Donoughmore.

TULLAGHOBEGLY, a par. in the bar. of Kilmacrenan, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 10 miles S.W. of Dunfanaghy. Strabane is the post town. It is traversed by the rivers Clady, and Gweedore, and contains Cloghaneely and the islands of Torry, Inishbofin, Inishbeg, Inishdooey, Innishsirrer, Inishmeane, and Gola, also the loughs Nacung, Dunlewy, and Altan. The Bays of Ballyness and Greedore, and Bloody Foreland Point, form parts of its boundary. The Errigal mountains, which lie partly within this parish, rise to the height of 1,396 feet. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Raphoe, value £265, in the patron. of the bishop. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, a public and five private schools. The chief residences are Cashel and Dunlewy. Marble is quarried, and lead and iron are found in small quantities. The ruins of a church and burial-ground, and of a monastic establishment founded by Tully O'Bigley, are to be seen here. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday, the last Thursday, and the last Monday in each month.

TULLAGHORTON, a par. in the bar. of West Iffa and Offa, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland. Clogheen is its post town. The par. is crossed by the road from Clonmel to Cork, and by the river Tar. It contains Clogheen and part of the Knockmealdown mountains, one spur of which, called the Sugar Loaf, rising to the height of 2,144 feet. Limestone is quarried, and lead and silver ore have been found. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lismore. There are a Roman Calholic chapel and two private schools. The chief residences are Parson's Green and Ballyboy. The ruins of Castle Grace and Ballyboy Castle, formerly the property of the Desmonds, are in this parish.

TULLAHOUGHT, a par. in the bar. of Kells, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Kilmaganny. It includes the vil. of Kilmacoliver. The living is an impropriate rect. in the dioc. of Ossory. There are a Roman Catholic chapel (situated at Kilmacoliver), and two private schools. The principal residence is Kilmacoliver House. At Ormond slate is quarried of good quality. There are ruins of two churches and of a castle.

TULLAMAINE, a par. in the bar. of Shillelogher, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Callan, to which it is annexed.

TULLAMAINE, a par. in the bar. of Middlethird, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles W. of Fethard. Limestone is extensively quarried. The living is a suspended rec. in the dioc. of Cashel, in the patron. of the bishop. The church has long been in ruins. There are a National and two private schools. The chief residence is Tullamaine Castle.

TULLAMORE, a par., market, municipal, and county town of King's County, Ireland, 57 miles S.W. of Dublin. It is a station on a branch of the Great Southern and Western railway. It is situated on the Tullamore river, which flows into the Clodagh, a branch of the Brosna. Its population in 1851 was 4,928; 1861 it was 4,797, occupying 872 houses. Up to the close of the last century it was but a small place, being then accidentally destroyed by fire; it was rebuilt by the Earl of Charleville, the proprietor of the soil. In 1830 the county business was transferred to it from Philipstown, which had previously been the capital, and it quickly increased in importance. It is situated in an oasis in the Bog of Allen; is of cruciform shape; the houses are well built, and the streets wide. It has been placed under the Towns' Improvement (Ireland) Act, 1854, and municipal affairs are attended to by 15 commissioners, including the chairman. The town is the chief shipping station upon the Grand canal, which affords water communication with Dublin and the Shannon. A considerable business is done in corn and other provisions; there are two breweries, a distillery, and two tanneries in the place. The parish church of St. Catherine is about a quarter of a mile from the town. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and two Methodist meeting-houses. Besides the National schools, there are a free school founded by Lord Charleville, and one under the Baptist Irish Society of London. There are a new courthouse, a gaol, the county infirmary, and the workhouse. The assizes for the county are held here, also quarter and petty sessions. The demesne of Charleville Forest, the seat of the Earl of Charleville, extends to the town. Within a quater of a mile of the town are the ruins of Shragh Castle, an old fortalice, built in 1588 by an English officer in Queen Elizabeth's army. The Poor-law Union of Tullamore comprises 29 electoral divisions. Tuesday and Saturday are market days. Fairs are held on 19th March, 16th May, 10th July, 13th September, 21st October, and 13th December.

TULLAROAN, a par. in the bar. of Crannagh, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles from Freshford, its post town. The parish is bordered on the W. by the river Munster. There is a police station. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, joined to Callan. The church has long been in ruins. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this parish is united to that of Freshford. There are six private schools. The chief residence is Tullaroan House. This parish was anciently comprised in Grace's country. Coal in small veins is found. There are ruins of Grace Chapel, founded by the family of the Graces, also Danish raths at Courtstown and Rathely-Grace. A fair is held on 28th August.

TULLIALLAN, a par. in the district of Western Perth, co. Perth, Scotland. It comprises Kincardine, a burgh of barony, and the vil. of Longannat. The parish extends in length about 2¾ miles from S. to N., with an extreme breadth of nearly 2½ miles, and is bounded on the S.W. and S. by the Frith of Forth, and on the other sides by the pars. of Culross and Clackmannan. Its surface has a gentle slope from the northern boundary to the Forth, in which direction it is screened by rising grounds and plantations. The coastline is about 3¾ miles in extent, being moderately even from the western boundary to the New Pans, but in the extreme E. it is rocky and bare, and in parts covered by the tide. Excellent coal and ironstone abound, and at Longannat sandstone of good quality is extensively worked. The land for the most part is well cultivated; there are about 500 acres of wood. The village of Tulliallan is about 2 miles S.E. of Clackmannan, and is situated at the top of the Frith of Forth, near the ferry to Higgin's Neuk. It has great facility of communication by railway and by river steamer at Kincardine. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the fisheries. This par. is in the presb. of Dunblane and synod of Perth and Stirling. The stipend of the minister is about £259. The parish church was erected in 1833. There are a Free church, United Presbyterian church, also a parochial school, subscription library, and other schools. The principal seat is the Castle, near which is the ruined wall of the castle of the Blackadders.

TULLIBARDINE, a vil. in the par. of Muthill, co. Perth, Scotland, 3 miles S.E. of Muthill, and 6½ from Crieff. It is a station on the Crieff Junction branch of the Caledonian railway. Its principal attraction is Tullibardine Castle, from which the Duke of Atholl takes the title of Marquis.

TULLIBODY, a vil. and ancient par. in the co. of Clackmannanshire, Scotland, 2½ miles W.N.W. of Alloa, and 3 N.W. of Clackmannan, near the rivers Forth and Devon. There is a Free church, also the ancient parish church erected about the 12th century, which stands a little N. of the village. In 1559 the roof of the latter was taken off by the French under D'Oysel to form a bridge over the Devon when retreating before the English, but about the middle of last century the building was re-roofed and converted into the mausoleum of the Abercromby family.

TULLICH, a par. in the district of Kincardine O'Neil, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 2 miles N.E. of Ballater. It is situated on the river Dee, and is joined with Glenmuick.

TULLIEBOLE, a par. in the cos. of Kinross and Perth, Scotland, 4 miles W. of Kinross. It is situated near the river Devon, and is joined with Fossoway.

TULLIG, a vil. in the bar. of Moyarta, co. Clare, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles W.N.W. of Carrigaholt, near Tullig Point. The famine of 1848 entirely depopulated this village.

TULLOCH, a vil. in the city and co. of Perth, Scotland, 2 miles N.W. of Perth. It is the place where potatoes were first introduced by an Irish gentleman named Christie. There are bleach and print works, which are said to have been the earliest established in Scotland.

TULLOCH, an ancient par. in co. Aberdeen, Scotland, now united to Glenmuick.

TULLOMOY, a par. in the bars. of Ballyadams and Stradbally, Queen's co., prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.S.E. of Stradbally. Maryborough is its post town. The river Straid traverses the interior, and the Slievemargy mountains rise to a height of 1,079 feet. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. £334, in the patron. of the bishop. The principal residence is Tullomoy House. There are some ancient remains known as Piper's Pit, the Asses' Manger stone, and a Druidical altar.

TULLOW, a post and market vil. in the pars. of Fennagh and Tullowphelim, bar. of Rathvilly, co. Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 8 miles N.W. of Carlow, and 48 from Dublin. The parish is traversed by the road from Carlow to Newtownbarry, and by the river Slaney, which is here crossed by a bridge built in 1767. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. £463. The church was erected in 1831. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, several public and two private schools. The principal residences are Coppenagh, Castlemore, Tullow Lodge, Newstown, and Rathglass. The chief trade is in corn. Tullow Castle was defended by Colonel Butler in 1650 against the army of the Parliament, but afterwards it was taken by Colonel Hewson and Colonel Reynolds. A monastic establishment was founded here by Simon Lumbard and Hugh Tallon in 1315, the temporalities of which were presented to the Earl of Ormond at the Dissolution. The Butler family take their title of viscount from this place. There are still ruins of Grace's Castle, erected by a member of that family, who were descended from Raymond le Gros. Market-days are Tuesday and Saturday. Fairs are held on 21st April, 10th July, 29th October, and 21st December.

TULLOWCREEN, a par. in the bar. of Idrone, co. Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Leighlinbridge. The river Barrow traverses the interior. The living is an impropriate rect. in the dioc. of Leighlin. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this par. is united to that of Leighlinbridge (which see).

TULLOWMAGIMMA, a par. in the bars. of Carlow and Forth, co. Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.S.E. of Carlow, its post town. The surface consists of a well-tilled soil, and is crossed by the road from Leighlinbridge to Tullow. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. with Staplestown, £314, in the patron. of the bishop. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and a public school. The principal residences are Castletown, Racroge, and Kilballyhue.

TULLOWPHELIM, a par. in the bar. of Rathvilly, co. Carlow, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, containing the market town of Tullow (which see).

TULLY, a hmlt. in the bar. of Ballinahinch, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 7 miles N.N.E. of Clifden. It is situated in Connemara, and contains a police station near Tully Lough, on the coast.

TULLY, a par. in the bar. of Rathdown, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S. of Kingstown. Monkstown is its post town. The surface consists of fertile soil, and is traversed by the river Loughlinstown. The Three Rock mountains lie near its limits. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Dublin, joined to Monkstown. The ancient church, built by the Danes, is in ruins. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, a public and one private school. The chief residences are Rockville, Glen Druid, Cabinteely, and Leopardstown. There are ruins of the castles of Carrickmines and Murphystown; also some Druidical remains. Firestone and granite are quarried at Murphystown, and in this parish are the Cabinteely and Carrick mines.

TULLY, a par. in the bars. of Kilcullen and Offaly, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles S.E. of Kildare. The parish contains a great proportion of bog, and is crossed by the road from Dublin to Castle-Dermot. The Curragh of Kildare is near its limits. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this parish is united to those of Kildare and Rathargan. The chief seats are Maddinstown House and Tully House. Here was formerly a commandery of the Knights Hospitallers, and there are ruins of a monastic establishment, the chapel of which still stands. This parish was the residence of General Sarsfield in James I.'s time.

TULLY, a bay in Lough Erne, co. Fermanagh, Ireland, 1 mile N. of Churchill. On the shore overlooking the bay is Tully Castle, a demesne of the Marquis of Ely.

TULLYALLEN, a par. in the bars. of Ferrard, co. Louth, and Upper Slane, co. Meath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. Drogheda is its post town. The surface consists of a well-cultivated soil. The parish is crossed by the road from Drogheda to Ardee, and is traversed by the river Boyne. A portion of the town of Drogheda is within its limits. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £148. The church was erected in 1817, partly by means of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, four public schools, and a police-station. The principal residences are Townley Hall, Beaulieu, and Newton. The weaving of coarse linen is carried on. An obelisk has been erected on a rock about two miles from Drogheda, the first stone being laid in 1736 by Lionel, Duke of Dorset, to mark the spot where the battle of the Boyne took place. The Marquis of Drogheda is proprietor of this place.

TULLYCANNA, a vil. in the bar. of Bargy, co. Wexford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 4 miles from Tagmon. It contains a police-station.

TULLYCORBET, a par. in the bars. of Cremorne and Monaghan, co. Monaghan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 2 miles N. of Ballybay, its post town. The surface consists of a good soil, with a small portion of bog. The parish includes Loughs Cardoc and Corfin, besides several minor lakes. The chief produce is flax, rye, and wheat. The manufacture of linen is carried on to some extent. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Clogher, val. £410, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1831 by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this parish is the head of an union. There are three meeting-houses for Presbyterians, and two public and five private schools. The principal residence is Mullan House.

TULLYFERN, a par. in the bar. of Kilmainham, co. Donegal, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing Milford and part of Rathmelton. It is traversed by the river Lennan, and is bordered by Lough Swilly and Mulroy Bay. The inhabitants are employed in linen weaving and agriculture. The surface is boggy, and abounds in lakes. The living is a rect., now joined to Tullyaghnish. Ballyarr is the chief residence.

TULLYGARVEY, a bar. in co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It contains the pars. of Drung, Kildrumsherdan, and parts of Annagh, Drumgoon, and Lara, comprising 59,903 acres.

TULLYHAW, a bar. in co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It contains the pars. of Killinagh and Templeport, and parts of Drumreilly, Kinawley, and Tomregan, with the towns of Ballyconnell and Swanlinbar.

TULLYHOG, a post-office vil. in the bar. of Dungannon, co. Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles S.S.E. of Cookstown, and 106 from Dublin. It is crossed by the road from Stewartstown to Coleraine. The village contains a police-station and several schools. Here are the ruins of the priory of Donarisk, founded by one of the O'Hagans in 1294, and of a fortress, where the Earl of Tyrone encamped after his defeat by the English, in the reign of Elizabeth. Fairs are held four times a year.

TULLYHUNCO, a bar. in co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland. It contains the pars. of Kildallan, Killashandra, and Scrabby.

TULLYLEASE, a par. in the bars. of Duhallow and Kilmore, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 7 miles N.N.E. of Newmarket. Drumcollogher is its post town. The parish is crossed by the road from Newcastle to Kanturk, and is traversed by the river Allua. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Cloyne, val. £127, in the patron. of the bishop. The Protestants attend worship at Tullylease House. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this parish is united to that of Freemount. There is a private school. The chief residences are Tullylease House and Bellagh. In this parish are the ruins of a priory, founded by MacGriffin, for canons of the order of St. Augustine.

There are quarries of brownstone and flagstone, also traces of coal. Fairs are held on 1st March, 29th April, 29th June, and 24th October.

TULLYLISH, a par. in the bar. of Lower Iveagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing Gilford, its post town. The par. is traversed by the river Bann and the Newry canal, and contains the vils. of Banford and Gilford. The manufacture of linen yarn and thread is carried on, and there are extensive bleach-grounds and chemical works. Petty sessions are held in the village. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dromore, val. £336, in the patron. of the bishop and crown alternately. The church was built at Banford in 1698, and has since been enlarged. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this parish is the head of a union. There are meeting-houses for Friends and Presbyterians, also several public and twelve private schools. The principal residences are Tullylish House, Gifford Castle, Milltown, and Banville. Formerly this place was in possession of the Maginnises. In 1772 a band of rebels attacked Gifford Castle, which was bravely defended by Sir R. Johnstone, Bart., and in 1641 many Protestants were drowned in Lough Kernan, which is in the neighbourhood. There are ruins of a monastic establishment at Tullyhoa, also of several fortresses. Several fairs are held annually.

TULLYNAKILL, a par. in the bar. of Lower Castlereagh, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles S.S.E. of Comber, its post town. The surface consists of a fertile soil, and is crossed by the road from Downpatrick to Belfast. It contains Ardmillan, which stands on Lough Strangford. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Down, val. £155, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1825 by means of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. There is a private school. Limestone is quarried. There are ruins of the old church, rebuilt in 1636.

TULLYNAWOOD, a small lough in co. Armagh, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Keady.

TULLYNESSLE AND FORBES, an united par. in the district of Alford, co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It extends in length about 7 miles, with a breadth of 4 miles, and is bounded on the N. by the pars. of Leslie, Clatt, and Rhynie; on the E. by Keigh; on the S. by Alford; and on the W. by Auchindoir. A small section of the southern boundary is detached by the river Don, which here receives numerous streams, and traverses nearly the whole of the southern boundary. The Esset, a large brook, is at times subject to overwhelming floods. The surface is hilly, rising in some parts to an altitude of 1,300 feet above sea-level, and for the most part is in pasture. The prevailing rocks are granite, gneiss, limestone, and mica-slate, which are quarried to some extent. The village, which is about 2 miles N. of Alford, is situated on the river Don, and is traversed southward by the road from Huntly to Kincardine O'Neil, and westward by that from Aberdeen to Strathon. It possesses great facility of communication, and is within easy access of a station on the Alford branch of the Great North of Scotland railway. A short distance from the river Don, adjoining the hmlt. of Mongarry, is the site of General Bailie's encampment prior to his defeat by Montrose in 1645. The parish abounds in game, roe, and deer. This par. is in the presb. of Alford and synod of Aberdeen. The stipend of the minister is about £222. The parish church was erected about 1840. There is a parochial school. Whitehaugh House is the principal seat.

TULLYNISKAN, a par. in the bar. of Dungannon, co. Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Dungannon, its post town. The surface is hilly, but consists of a good soil. The parish is crossed by the road from Dungannon to Stewartstown, and contains part of Coal Island. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, val. £384, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was built in 1792, and subsequently enlarged by means of a gift from the late Board of First Fruits. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and several schools. The chief residences are Lisdhue, Bloomhill, and Drumreagh. The manufacture of fire-bricks and pots for horticultural purposes is carried on to a great extent, large quantities being sent to London, Liverpool, and other towns. Here are coal mines. Ducart, the great engineer, lived here, and superintended the erecting of bridges and aqueducts for the Board of Inland Navigation.

TULLYRUSK, a par. in the bar. of Upper Massereene, co. Antrim, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Crumlin. Lisburn is its post town. The surface is mountainous. The parish is crossed by the road from Lisburn to Antrim. The manufactures of linen and cotton are carried on. Divis Mountain stands near its limits. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Connor, val. with Glenavy £285. The church has long been in ruins. There are four private and two Sunday schools. The principal residence is Knockairn. There are several Danish raths.

TULLYVERY, a vil. in the bar. of Dufferin, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, near Kellyleagh.

TULLYVIN, a post-office vil. in the bar. of Tullygarvey, co. Cavan, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles W.S.W. of Cootehill. Tullyvin House is the principal residence. A fair is held on the 4th May.

TULM, an island in the par. of Kilmuir, district of Skye, Scotland, near Trottenish Point, on the N.W. coast of Skye.

TULSK, a post-office vil. in the bar. of Ogulla, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 11 miles N. of Roscommon, and 101 from Dublin. This place was once a parliamentary borough returning two representatives before the Union, and contains a police-station, where petty sessions are held weekly. O'Connor Roe built a castle here in 1406, which was garrisoned in 1499 by the Earl of Kildare. Here are the ruins of two monastic establishments, one erected by O'Connor Roe, and the other by the O'Dowells and O'Connors. Fairs are held on 31st March and 18th November.

TUMBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Revesby, W. div. of Bolingbroke soke, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2 miles N.W. of Bolingbroke.

TUMBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby-upon-Bain, S. div. of Gartree wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 2 miles N.E. of Tattershall. It is situated on Horncastle canal and the river Bain. Sir J. Hawley is lord of the manor. There is a chapel for Wesleyans.

TUMMEL, a river and small loch, co. Perth, Scotland, rises in Loch Rannoch, and joins the Gay at Logierait.

TUMNA, a par. in the bar. of Boyle, co. Roscommon, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles N. of Carrick-on-Shannon. Leitrim is its post town. The surface consists of a good soil, with some bog. The parish is crossed by the road from Carrick-on-Shannon to Boyle, and is traversed by the rivers Boyle and Shannon. Battlebridge is within its limits. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Elphin, value £115, in the patron of the bishop. There are a Roman Catholic chapel and a public school. The chief residences are Cootehall, Hughestown, and Woodbrook. The manufacture of woollen and cotton goods is carried on here to some extent, and limestone and building-stone are quarried. There are ruins of a church and of a monastic establishment founded by the O'Connors.

TUNBRIDGE. See TONBRIDGE, co. Kent.

TUNDERGARTH, a par. in the district of Annandale, co. Dumfries, Scotland. It extends in length about 12 miles, with a varying breadth of from 1 to 2 miles, and is bounded on the N.W. by the pars. of St. Mungoe, Dryfesdale, Hatton, and Corrie; on the N.E. by Westerkirk; on the S.E. by Langholm, Middlebie, and Hoddam; and on the S.W. by St. Mungo. The surface is moderately even, the two principal summits being Crive and Grange Fell, which rise about 900 feet above sea-level. The land is chiefly in pasture, supporting numerous flocks of Cheviot sheep and black cattle. The interior is watered by numerous streams falling into Milk Water, which traces the greater part of the W. boundary. The predominant rocks are graywacke, mica-schist, clay slate, and greenstone. There are also traces of lead and antimony. In the vicinity are many small entrenched camps and other antiquities. The village of Tundergarth is about 3 miles E. of Locherby, and within easy access to that station on the Caledonian railway. It is situated on Milk Water, near the Roman way to Brunswark Hill. Here was formerly an old castle of the Johnstones. This par. is in the presb. of Lochmaben and synod of Dumfries. The stipend of the minister is about £166. The parish church was erected about 1770. There is a parochial school. The principal seats are Grange, Scroggs, and Gibsons.

TUNLEY, a tythg. in the par. of Bisley, co. Gloucester, 3 miles E. of Stroud.

TUNNYQUIN, a hmlt. in the bar. and co. of Roscommon, Ireland, near Tulsk.

TUNSTALL, a par. in the hund. of Milton, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 1 mile S.W. of Sittingbourne, its post town, and 9 miles S.E. of Chatham. The land is partly in hop-grounds and woodland. The soil is loamy, with an admixture of flints, and rests upon a substratum of chalk. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £479, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The children of this parish have the privilege of being taught at the school of Sittingbourne. E. Mores, the antiquary, was born here in 1730.

TUNSTALL, a par. in the hund. of Lonsdale South of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 4 miles N.E. of Hornby railway station, and 3½ S. of Kirkby-Lonsdale, its post town. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Greta and Lune, and contains the tnshps. of Leck, Tunstall, Burrow, and Cantfield. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £332. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, was restored in 1850. The register dates from 1620. There is also the district church of Leek, the living of which is a perpet. cur.,* val. £80. There is an endowed school. Thurlow Castle and Burrow Hall are the principal residences. R. T. North, Esq., is lord of the manor.

TUNSTALL, a par. in the hund. of Walsham, co. Norfolk, 4 miles N. of Reedham railway station, and 3 S.E. of Acle, its post town. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £80, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, is in ruins, the chancel, which has been recently restored, being alone used. The register dates from 1577.

TUNSTALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Adbaston, N. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford, 3 miles W. of Eccleshall.

TUNSTALL, a par. in the hund. of Plomesgate, co. Suffolk, 7½ miles N.E. of Woodbridge, its post town, and 5 from Orford. It contains the hmlt. of Dunningworth. Much of the land is in heath. In the vicinity are some clay and sand pits. The living is a rect. with that of Dunningworth annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £352. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. There is a free school, and the Baptists have a chapel.

TUNSTALL, a par. partly in the middle div. of Holderness wap., and partly within the lib. of St. Peter's, East Riding co. York, 8 miles E. of Hedon, and 6 N. of Patrington. Holderness is its post town. The village is situated on the coast of the German Ocean. The soil is chiefly clay. Upwards of 100 acres have been submerged by the encroachments of the sea within the present century. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £52, in the patron. of the Succentor of York Cathedral. The church is dedicated to All Saints. Colonel Grimston is lord of the manor.

TUNSTALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Catterick, wap. of East Hang, North Riding co. York, 2 miles S.W. of Catterick, its post town, and 4 S.E. of Richmond. Tunstall Whin is a meet for the Bedale hounds. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Catterick, in the dioc. of Ripon. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, was erected in 1847, at an expense of about £900, defrayed by voluntary contributions. There is a parochial school for both sexes, with a small endowment. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

TUNSTALL, a tnshp., post and market town, in the par. of Wolstanton and parliamentary borough of Stoke, N. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford, 1½ mile from Longport railway station, and 4 miles N. of Newcastle-under-Lyne. It is a station on the North Staffordshire railway. This place, which is a considerable modern town, is situated in the Potteries, on the Grand Trunk canal, at a short distance from the Hare-Castle tunnel, which is two miles in length. It includes the tnshps. of Oldcott, Tunstall, and Ranscliff, and of late years has made rapid strides, the population in 1811 having been only 1,677, and in 1861, 11,207. Its staple manufacture is that of earthenware and porcelain, but bricks and tiles are largely made, and there are extensive iron foundries, chemical works, and collieries. The streets are well-built, paved, and lighted with gas. There are a bank, savings-bank, court-house, or townhall, literary institute, and market-place. The town is governed by a chief constable, appointed at the manorial court, with subordinate constables. The living is a perpet. cur.* with the cur. of St. Mary's annexed, in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £260. The church, named Christchurch, was erected in 1832 by the Parliamentary Commissioners, at an expense of £4,000. There is also another church, dedicated to St. Mary, recently erected. There are National and Sunday schools for both sexes. The Dissenters of various creeds have chapels. R. Sneyd, Esq., is lord of the manor. Market days are on Saturday and Monday. The wakes take place on the third Sunday in July.

TUNSTALL, a hmlt. in the par. of Great Ayton, wap. of Langbaurgh, North Riding co. York, 4 miles N.E. of Stokesley.

TUNSTALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Bishop-Wearmouth, N. div. of Easington ward, co. Durham, 2½ miles S.W. of Sunderland. The substratum abounds in limestone, containing fossils and iron-ore. There are vestiges of a Druidical temple.

TUNSTEAD, a hund. in co. Norfolk, contains the pars. of Ashmanhaugh, Bacton, Barton Turf, Beeston St. Lawrence, Bradfield, Crostwright, Delham, Edingthorpe, Felmingham, Honing, Horning, Hoveton (SS. John and Peter), Irstead, Neatishead, Paston, Ridlington, Ruston Sco, Sloley, Smallburgh, Swafield, Tunstead, North Walsham, Westwick, Wilton, and Worstead, comprising an area of 35,400 acres.

TUNSTEAD, a par. in the above hund., co. Norfolk, 6 miles S.W. of Stalham, 10 N.E. of Norwich, and 3 N.E. of Coltishall, its post town. The living is a vic. with the cur. of South Ruston annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £286. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains a sculptured font, a piscina, three canopied stalls, and a carved screen. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The Hall is the principal residence.

TUNSTEAD, an ecclesiastical district in the chplry. of Newchurch-in-Rossendale, par. of Whalley, co. Lancaster, 3 miles S.E. of Haslingden, and 15 N.W. of Manchester, on the river Irwell, near the borders of Rossendale Forest.

TUNWORTH, a par. in the upper half of Basingstoke hund., co. Hants, 3½ miles S.E. of Basingstoke, its post town, and 6 S.W. of Winchfield. The soil is fertile, upon a substratum of chalk. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £150. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has been thoroughly restored, with the addition of two painted windows.

TUOGH, a par. in the bar. of Owneybeg, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Pallas Grean. Limerick is its post town. The surface is mountainous, and consists of a capital soil, with a small proportion of bog. The par. is traversed by the river Mulkear, and contains the hill of Cappamore. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Emly, val. with Abingdon £720, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is in ruins. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, and several public and four private schools. The chief residences are Tower Hill and Castle Garde. Fairs are held several times during the year.

TUOGHCLUGGIN, a par. in the bar. of Coonagh, co. Limerick, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles E.N.E.

of Pallas Grean. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Emly, united to Cullen.

TUOSIST, a par. in the bar. of Glenarought, co. Kerry, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles W.S.W. of Kenmare, its post town. The surface is wild and rocky, with much bog and numerous lakes. The Caha mountains form its limits on the S.E., and the river Kenmare traverses the interior. It contains the harbours of Ardgroom and Kilmakilloge. At Hungry Hill the mountains rise to a height of 2,249 feet. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ardfert and Aghadoe, val. with Kenmare £341, in the patron. of the crown. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this parish is the head of a union. There are two public schools. The principal residence is Deireen. The manufacture of coarse flannel is carried on. Here are the ruins of the church at Kilmakilloge, and the remains of Ardea Castle, which was a station for supplies to the Spaniards in 1602. Trout abound in all the lakes, and at Lough Quinlan are several floating islands. The Marquis of Lansdowne is proprietor of the land.

TUPGILL, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Coverham, North Riding co. York, 2 miles S.W. of Middleham.

TUPHOLME, a par. in the W. div. of Wraggoe wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 7 miles S. of Wragby, its post town, 10 W. of Horncastle, and 2 from the Southrey station on the Great Northern railway. In this parish are traces of a Premonstratensian abbey, founded by Alan and Gilbert de Neville in the reign of Henry II. At the Dissolution the revenue was valued at £119 2*s.* 8*d.*, and the site given to the Heneages. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Middle Rasen Drax, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. R. Vyner, Esq., is lord of the manor.

TUPSLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Hampton Bishop, hund. of Grimsworth, co. Hereford, 1½ mile S.E. of Hereford, its post town, and 2½ miles N.W. of Hampton Bishop.

TUPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of North Wingfield, hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 3½ miles S.E. of Chesterfield, on the Derby railway. Tupton Hall is the principal residence.

TURBOTSTOWN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Moyashel, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles W.N.W. of Mullingar. Turbotstown House is the chief residence.

TURFHOLM, a vil. in the par. of Lesmahago, co. Lanark, Scotland. It is joined with the village of Abbeygreeve.

TURKDEAN, a par. in the hund. of Bradley, co. Gloucester, 2 miles N.W. of Northleach, its post town, and 12 N. of Cirencester. The village is situated on a branch of the river Windrush, near the Fosse Way. The par. includes the hmlt. of Aldsworth. The surface is undulating, and the soil consists of stone brash. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £208, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities produce about £35 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. H. E. Waller, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

TURLOUGH, a par. in the bar. of Carra, co. Mayo, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Castlebar, its post town. Loughs Cullin and Conn, which are connected by a pontoon bridge, are within its limits. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Tuam, val. £92, in the patron. of the incumbent of Castlebar. The church is in ruins. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, meeting-houses for Wesleyans and Presbyterians, eight public schools, and a police station. The principal residences are Turlough Park and Turlough Cottage. There is a round tower in good preservation. Black marble and limestone are quarried. Fairs are held on 9th May, 13th June, 24th August, and 8th December.

TURNASTON, a par. in the hund. of Webtree, co. Hereford, 10¼ miles S.W. of Hereford, its post town, and 7 N.W. of Pontrilas railway station. The village is situated on the river Dore. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £73. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. W. S. Wood, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

TURNBERRY CASTLE, a ruined stronghold in co. Ayr, Scotland, 5 miles N. of Girvan. It is situated on the coast, and once belonged to the lairds of Carrick.

TURNDITCH, a chplry. in the par. of Duffield, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 9 miles from Derby, its post town, and 3½ W. of Belper. The village is situated on an eminence near a branch of the river Derwent. The living is a perpet. cur., in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £63, in the patron. of the Vicar of Duffield. The church is dedicated to All Saints. There are a National school for both sexes, and Sunday and infant schools belonging to the Independents. The Primitive Methodists and Independents have chapels. Green Bank House is the principal residence. Sir Richard Paul Godrell, Bart., is lord of the manor.

TURNER'S HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Waltham, co. Herts, 1½ mile N.W. of Waltham Cross.

TURNER'S PUDDLE, a par. in the hund. of Hundredsbarrow, co. Dorset, 1 mile S.W. of Bere Regis, and 7½ miles N.W. of Wareham. Dorchester is its post town. The village is situated on the river Trent or Piddle. The living is a rect. with the vic.* of Affpuddle annexed, in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £210. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. H. Frampton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

TURNHAM GREEN, a vil. in the par. of Chiswick, co. Middlesex, 7 miles S.W. of St. Paul's, and 4 from Richmond. It is situated near the river Thames, on the great western road. On the S. side of the Green are the Horticultural Society's Gardens. The Earl of Essex encamped here in 1642, and Waller in 1643. There are traces of the old Roman way from Staines, and many Roman coins were discovered here in 1731. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of London, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is named Christchurch. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

TURNHILL, an ext. par. place in the wap. of Pickering Lythe, North Riding co. York.

TURNMOOR, a small loch, co. Dumfries, Scotland, near Lockerbie.

TURNWORTH, a par. in the hund. of Cranborne, co. Dorset, 5 miles N.W. of Blanford, its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £160, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has been recently restored at the expense of W. P. Okeden, Esq., who is lord of the manor. Turnworth House is the principal residence.

TURRIFF, a district in co. Aberdeen, Scotland, containing the pars. of King-Edward, Monquhitter, Auchterless and Fyvie. It extends in length about 22 miles, with an extreme breadth of about 13 miles.

TURRIFF, a par. and burgh of barony, co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It is situated on the N.W. border of Aberdeenshire, adjoining Banffshire, and gives name to a considerable district comprehending the parishes of Auchterless, King-Edward, Fyvie, and Monquhitter, which surround it on the remaining sides. The parish extends in length about 7½ miles, with an extreme breadth of 5½. It is drained by the river Deveron, which flows along its Banffshire boundary, and by the burn called Turriff, which, entering from Monquhitter, runs through the centre of the parish to the Deveron below Turriff. The surface includes a large extent of upland pasture. The prevailing rocks are graywacke in the western, and Old Red sandstone in the eastern portion of the parish, with considerable beds of graywacke-slate, and clay-slate, which are extensively quarried for paving and roofing. About three-fourths of the land are under tillage, and the remainder pasture and waste, with 50 acres of moss. The town of Turriff, anciently written Torra, is on the right bank of the Turriff burn, about half a mile above its junction with the Deveron, and on the road from Banff to Aberdeen, from the former of which it is distant 10 miles to the S.E. or 11 by the Banff, Macduff, and Turriff branch of the Great North of Scotland railway, on which it is a station. The houses are substantial, and most of them have gardens attached. The town contains a townhall, a public library, several branch banks, and an ancient cross in the principal street. The population has rapidly increased of late years, and in 1851 numbered 1,693. The principal manufactures carried on are the spinning of linen yarn and bleaching, weaving of woollen and linen cloth by hand-loom, and the dyeing of woollen and silks. The par. is the seat of a presbytery in the synod of Aberdeen. The minister's stipend is about £250. The parish church was built in 1794, and enlarged in 1830. There are a Free Church, and an Episcopalian chapel, and four non-parochial schools. Sheriff small-debt courts are held in March, June, September, and December, and fairs on fixed days in each month, with the exception of March, July, and September.

TURTON, a chplry. in the par. of Bolton, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 4 miles N. of Bolton, its post town, and near the Chapel-town and Oaks railway stations. It is situated on the Roman way to Manchester, and is bounded by two rivulets tributary to the Irwell. Many of the inhabitants are employed in cotton mills, dyeing, bleaching, and print works. There are also numerous stone quarries. The land is principally in pasture. At a farm called Turton Tower is an ancient structure of four stories, formerly the residence of the Chethams, Orrells, and Greames, but now a farmhouse. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £161. The church, dedicated to St. Ann, has a stained E. window, and was built in 1840. The parochial charities produce about £31 per annum. There are day and Sunday schools for both sexes. The Independents, Presbyterians, and Unitarians have chapels. J. Kay, Esq., is lord of the manor. A fair is held on the 4th and 5th September for cattle and horses.

TURVEY, a par. in the hund. of Willey, co. Bedford, 9 miles N.E. of Newport Pagnell, its post town, and 4 E. of Olney. The village is situated on the road from Northampton to Bedford, near the river Ouse, which here divides the cos. of Beds and Bucks. The manufacture of pillow lace is carried on. The soil consists of gravel and stony clay. There are quarries of limestone and stone for building. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £365. The church, dedicated to All Saints, has recently been enlarged and restored, with the addition of an organ, at an expense of about £1,000. In the interior are three brasses and tombs of the Mordaunts. The charities are extensive. There are National and infant schools, also chapels for the Independents and Wesleyans. Turvey Abbey, the seat of C. L. Higgins, Esq., who is lord of the manor, is the principal residence.

TURVEYBRIDGE, a hmlt. in the bar. of East Balrothery, co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Swords. The principal residence is Turvey, the seat of Lord Trimlestown.

TURVILLE, a par. in the hund. of Desborough, co. Bucks, 7 miles from Henley, its post town, and 8 from High Wycombe. The soil is clay upon a substratum of limestone. The river Ouse rises near this place. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £107. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There is a free school, mainly supported by Lady Lyndhurst. Turville Park is the principal residence. The manor of Turville was once held partly by St. Alban's Abbey, and afterwards by the Botelers. Many coins of Vespasian, Trajan, and other Roman emperors have been found here. J. Bailey, Esq., is lord of the manor.

TURWESTON, a par. in the hund. of Buckingham, co. Bucks, 1 mile from Brackley, its post town, and 6 miles from Buckingham. The village is situated near the river Ouse. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £300, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There are day and Sunday schools.

TUSHIELAW BURN, a stream, co. Selkirk, Scotland, joins the Ettrick. On its banks are the ruins of Tushielaw Tower.

TUSHINGHAM-CUM-GRINDLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Malpas, higher div. of Broxton hund., co. Chester, 3 miles S.E. of Malpas, near the Ellesmere canal. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chester, in the patron. of the Rector of Malpas. The chapel is dedicated to St. Chad. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel. The trustees of the late D. Vaudrey, Esq., are lords of the manor.

TUSKAR, a cluster of rocks, off the coast of Wexford, Ireland, 5 miles S.E. of Greenore Point.

TUSKAR, a reef at the mouth of the river Ogmore, co. Glamorgan.

TUSMORE, a par. in the hund. of Ploughley, co. Oxford, 4 miles N.W. of Bicester, its post town, and 5 from Brackley. It is a meet for Mr. Drake's hounds. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £15, in the patron. of trustees. There is no church. Tusmore Hall is the principal residence.

TUTBURY, a par. and post town in the N. div. of Offlow hund., co. Stafford, 4½ miles N.W. of Burton-upon-Trent, and 8 S.E. of Uttoxeter. It is a station on the North Staffordshire railway. It is a decayed market town situated in Needwood Forest, on the river Dove. In the Saxon times it was a Mercian fort, and after the Norman conquest was given by William the Conqueror to Henry de Ferrars, who built the priory and castle, and in whose family it remained till Robert de Ferrars, joining Simon de Montfort, Earl of Leicester, in his rebellion against Henry III., forfeited it in 1250, when the king bestowed it on his second son Edmund, Earl of Lancaster. In consequence of the rebellion of Thomas Earl of Lancaster against Edward II., it again reverted to the crown in 1332, when the castle was allowed to go to ruins, but was rebuilt by John of Gaunt upon the ancient site in 1350 for his wife Constance. Upon the death of John of Gaunt it passed to his son, afterwards Henry IV., the honour and castle of Tutbury, with other properties, thus becoming attached to the crown in right of the Duchy of Lancaster. Its jurisdiction extends over a great portion of Staffordshire, and into several of the adjoining counties. This castle was for some time the place of confinement of Mary Queen of Scots, and at the commencement of the civil war it was garrisoned for Charles I., who resided here in 1643, but it succumbed to the parliamentary forces under Colonel Brereton in 1646, and was shortly afterwards dismantled by order of Parliament. The ruins occupy the site of the lofty mount overlooking the valley of the Dove, and comprise the gateway and part of the walls and towers, surrounded by a deep dry moat. In 1831 upwards of 100,000 coins of Edward I., Edward II., Henry III., Alexander III. of Scotland, with some of Irish and foreign mints, were discovered in the Dove, supposed to have been lost by Thomas Earl of Lancaster, in his retreat from Tutbury Castle in 1322; they are now in the British Museum. The town, situated on the W. bank of the river Dove, which is crossed by a modern bridge, was at an early period erected into a free borough, and possessed many privileges. On the river are extensive corn and cotton-spinning mills, and there is a large manufactory for making and cutting glass. The population in 1861 was 1,982. The country between Tutbury and Needwood Forest abounds in alabaster. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £290. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, was once a part of the Benedictine priory founded in 1080 as a cell to the Abbey of St. Peter-super-Divam, in Normandy. The church is now under restoration. The parochial charities produce about £650 per annum, of which £438 go towards apprenticing poor children, and to other charitable uses. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have chapels. There are National and free schools, and an infant school. Berkley Lodge, Needwood House, and East Lodge are the chief residences. The Queen is lady of the manor. Ann Moore, the impostor, who professed to live without food, resided here. Fairs for cattle, horses, &c., are held on the 14th February, 15th August, and 1st December.

TUTNALL and COBLEY, hmlts. in the par. of Tardebigg, Alchester div. of Barlichway hund., co. Worcester, formerly in Warwickshire, 2 miles S.E. of Bromsgrove, on the Birmingham railway and canal.

TUTTINGTON, a par. in the hund. of South Erpingham, co. Norfolk, 2 miles E. of Aylsham, and 12 from Norwich. The village is situated near the river Bure. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £124, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul.

TUXFORD, a par., post and market town in the South Clay div. of Bassetlaw wap., co. Nottingham, 7 miles S.E. of East Retford, and 13½ N.W. of Newark. It is a station on the Great Northern railway, and is situated on a branch of the Trent, and on the Great North road. The town is well built and lighted with gas. There are a corn exchange, malt-houses, corn mills, and brick kilns. Hops are grown in the neighbourhood. The population, which is on the decline, numbered only 1,034 in 1861. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £260, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, had formerly a chantry or college, founded by John de Longvillers in Edward III.'s time. In the interior are effigies of a knight and his lady, and some stained glass windows. The parochial charities produce about £64 per annum. There are an endowed National and infant schools. The Independents and Wesleyans have chapels. The Duke of Newcastle is lord of the manor. Market day is Monday. Fairs are held for cattle, sheep, and pigs on the 12th May and 2nd October, and for hops on 25th September.

TWAMBROOKS, a tnshp. in the par. of Great Budworth, hund. of Norwich, co. Chester, a quarter of a mile E. of Norwich.

TWEED, the Tueda of the Romans, a large river forming part of the boundary between England and Scotland. It rises in Tweeds Well under Hart Fell, in co. Peebles, the ancient name of which was Tweeddale, and after receiving the tributary waters of the Talla, Biggar, Lyne, Manor, Eddleston, Leithen, Quair, Ettrick, Gala, Leader, Teviot, Till, and Whitadder, falls into the German Ocean opposite Berwick lighthouse. The tide ascends as high as Norham Castle, and the river has a salmon fishery, once worth £15,000 a year, but recently much reduced, being now scarcely worth £4,000.

TWEEDMOUTH, a par. and seaport town in the hund. of Islandshire, co. Northumberland, formerly in Durham, 1 mile from Berwick-upon-Tweed, of which it forms a suburb, and 13 miles from Coldstream. It is a junction station on the North-Eastern railway, where the Kelso branch turns off. The town, which is considerable, is situated on the southern bank, and at the mouth of the river Tweed, over which is a bridge connecting it with Berwick. The streets are irregularly built, and well lighted with gas. There are extensive steam flour and saw mills, iron foundries, a brewery, &c. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the salmon fishery. The soil is a rich loam. It is a petty-sessions town. The par. includes the tnshps. of Ord, Spittal, and Tweedmouth. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £150, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, was built in 1783, and enlarged in 1841. In the churchyard is a gravestone to Thomas Bell, of Spittal, who died in 1791, aged 105, and a tombstone to James Stuart, a famed Border character, who died at the age of 115 years. There is a National school for both sexes, at which a Sunday-school is held; there are also a Free Scotch Church, and a chapel for the church of Scotland. An extramural cemetery was constructed in 1857, in which two chapels have been erected. The corporation of Berwick are the lords of the manor. A feast is held on the third Sunday in July.

TWEEDSMUIR, a par. in co. Peebles, Scotland. It extends about 8 miles in length by the same in breadth, and is nearly a circle. It is bounded by the counties of Dumfries and Lanark, and by the parishes of Drummelzier and Megget. The surface is hilly, rising at Hart Fell 2,790 feet above sea-level, and at Broad-Law 2,740 feet, being the loftiest mountains in the S. of Scotland, and having near its summit a perennial spring, designated Geddes' Well. The hills are of gentle ascent, frequently boggy on their summits, and their sides are clothed in verdure, affording excellent pasture for sheep. Gameshope, which is about 600 feet in diameter, is considered the loftiest lochlet in the S. of Scotland, and abounds in trout. In the vicinity are ruins of castles or border towers, &c. The village, which is about 15 miles S.W. of Peebles, and 36 from Edinburgh, is situated at the head of the river Tweed, to which the Frind, Talla, and several smaller burns flow. It formed parts of Drummelzier parish till 1643. This par. is in the presb. of Peebles and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale, and in the patron. of St. Mary's College, St. Andrew's. The stipend of the minister is about £275. The parish church was erected in 1648. There is a parochial school.

TWEMLOW, a tnshp. in the par. of Sandbach, hund. of Northwich, co. Chester, 5 miles N.W. of Congleton, and 5 N.E. of Middlewich. It is situated near the Manchester and Birmingham railway and the river Dane. It is a meet for the Cheshire hounds.

TWERTON, a par. in the hund. of Wellow, co. Somerset, 1½ mile S.W. of Bath, its post town. It is a station on the Great Western railway. The village is situated on the river Avon, near the suspension bridges. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the woollen and carpet manufacture; there are also numerous tanneries. In the vicinity are quarries of lias limestone, containing ammonites and other fossils. The gaol of the city and borough of Bath stands in this parish, and the house where Fielding, the novelist, resided. The soil is clayey. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £395, in the patron. of Oriel College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, and recently rebuilt, has an old tower and six bells. The register dates from 1538, but is not perfect. There is a parochial school for both sexes, at which a Sunday-school is held. The Wesleyans, Baptists, Primitive Methodists, and Swedenborgians have chapels.

TWEYFORD, a par. in the hund. of Dumpford, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 6 miles from Petersfield, its post town, and 5 S.W. of Midhurst. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Elsted, in the dioc. of Chichester. The new church is dedicated to St. Peter, the old one being disused. The register dates from 1728.

TWICKENHAM, a par. and suburb of the metropolis in the S.W. postal district, hund. of Isleworth, co. Middlesex, 1 mile W. of Richmond, 3 miles S.W. of Brentford, and 9 S.W. of St. Paul's Cathedral. It is a junction station on the Windsor section of the London and South-Western railway, where the Thames Valley branches off. Its ancient name was Twittanham, Twicknam, and Twit'nam, referring to its situation between two streams or brooks that flow into the Thames at either end of the village, which occupies a site on the road from London, through Isleworth to Hampton Court. It has long been considered one of the most beautiful spots in the vicinity of the metropolis, with its romantic scenery, enlivened by the windings of the Thames and embellished with seats and villas. In the middle of the river, nearly opposite the village, is the island of eight acres, called Twickenham Ait, with the Eel-pie House, rebuilt in 1830, and now containing an assembly-room 50 feet by 15, much resorted to by anglers and pleasure parties. On the shore overlooking the island is Strawberry Hill, once the residence of Sir Horace Walpole; and a little further on, at the southern extremity of the village, is Pope's villa and grotto, recently divided into several villa residences. The par. includes the hmlt. of Whitton, where are Whitton Park, formerly the seat of the Duke of Argyle the naturalist, now of Miss Gostling; and Kneller Hall, built by Sir Godfrey Kneller, but recently enlarged and used by Government, first as a training school for workhouse schoolmasters, and now under the patronage of H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge as a seminary for regimental bandmasters. The population in 1861 was 8,077, of which 3,985 are in the ecclesiastical district of the Holy Trinity. The parish abounds in market gardens, orchards, and fertile meadows. In the vicinity are oil and gunpowder mills. Many buildings of late years have been erected near Richmond-bridge, and it is expected that a new chapel-of-ease will be erected in Cambridge Park. The City of London Carpenters' almshouses is a modern structure in ten compartments. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of London, val. £717, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1715, with a tower of more ancient date. There are monuments of many eminent persons, including a tablet to Pope, erected at the expense of Bishop Warburton, and another to Mrs. Clive, the actress. In addition to the parish church are the district churches of Holy Trinity at Twickenham Green, and St. Philip and St. James at Whitton, the livings of which are perpet. curs. There is also a proprietary chapel belonging to the Rev. W. Webster, situated in Montpelier-road. There are several parochial schools for boys and girls and infants throughout the parish. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Baptists have chapels. There is a literary and scientific institution, with library and reading-rooms. The principal seats are Fulwell Lodge, Orleans House, and Strawberry Hill. Fairs are held on Holy Thursday and the 9th and 10th August.

TWIGMORE, a hmlt. in the par. of Manton, E. div. of Manley hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5 miles W. of Glandford-Brigg, and 5 N. of Kirton-in-Lindsey.

TWIGWORTH, a hmlt. in the pars. of St. Mary-de-Lode and St. Catherine, upper div. of Dudstone hund., co. Gloucester, 2½ miles N.E. of Gloucester, its post town, and 8 S.W. of Tewkesbury. It adjoins the township of Longford, and is intersected by the high road from Gloucester to Tewkesbury. It enjoys all the privileges of a parish, and is included within the borough of Gloucester. The soil consists of a black mould upon a subsoil of gravel. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £80, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Matthew, was erected in 1842. There is a National school for both sexes.

TWINEHAM, a par. in the hund. of Buttinghill, rape of Lewes, co. Sussex, 5½ miles S.W. of Cuckfield, its post town, and 5 W. of Burgess Hill railway station. The village is situated on a branch of the river Adur, and on the road from London to Brighton by way of Hickstead. The land is partly in common. The soil is chiefly clay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £350. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. J. Wood, Esq., is lord of the manor and chief landowner.

TWINELL, ST., a par. in the hund. of Castlemartin, co. Pembroke, 3 miles S.W. of Pembroke, its post town. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £150, in the patron. of the bishop and canons. The church is dedicated to St. Deiniol.

TWINING, a par. in the lower div. of Kiftsgate hund, co. Gloucester, 2 miles N.E. of Tewkesbury, its post town, and 5 from Upton. The village, which is considerable, is situated on the road from Gloucester to Worcester, between the rivers Severn and Avon, and near the ferry over the latter river. The land is partly in common. There is a camp at Towbury, near which many Roman coins have been found. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £180, in the patron. of Christ Church, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene. The parochial charities produce about £25 per annum. There are National schools for both sexes and a Sunday-school. Showborow, Puckrup Hall, and the Manor House, are the principal residences. Miss Maxwell is lady of the manor.

TWINSTEAD, a par. in the hund. of Hinckford, co. Essex, 4½ miles S. of Sudbury, its post town, and 5 N.W. of Bures railway station. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £250, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The principal residence is the Hall, an ancient moated manorhouse, which has been partly modernised.

TWISLETON, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Ingleton and par. of Bentham, West Riding co. York, 9 miles N.W. of Settle.

TWISTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Whalley, higher div. of Blackburn hund., co. Lancaster, 5 miles N.E. of Clitheroe railway station, under Pendle Hill. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the cotton-mills. The Duke of Buccleuch is lord of the manor.

TWITCHEN, a par. in the hund. of South Molton, co. Devon, 6 miles N.E. from South Molton, its post town, and 4 from North Molton. The village is situated on the border of the county, adjacent to Exmoor Forest. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of North Molton, in the dioc. of Exeter. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, was rebuilt in 1844. It has a painted E. window. There is a day school for both sexes. The Wesleyans have a chapel at the Mills. Lord Poltimore is lord of the manor.

TWIVERTON. See TWERTON, co. Somerset.

TWIZELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Norham, hund. of Norhamshire, co. Northumberland, formerly in Durham, 9½ miles S.W. of Berwick, and 2 from Norham. It is a station on the Kelso branch of the North-Eastern railway, and is situated at the confluence of the rivers Tweed and Till. The manor came through the Riddells and Selbys to the Blakes. The Castle is an unfinished, castellated mansion of the Blakes, seated on a rocky precipice, and near it is Tilmo' House, the present residence of the family. In the vicinity are St. Helen's well, an ancient chapel, and a camp.

TWIZELL, a tnshp. in the par. of Morpeth, W. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 5½ miles S.W. of Morpeth, on the river Blyth.

TWNAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanelian, co. Denbigh, 5 miles S.W. of Abergele.

TWO-MILE-BORRIS, a par. in the bar. of Eliogarty, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland. It contains Littleton, its post town (which see). A tributary of the river Suir traverses the interior. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Cashel, val. with three others £905, in the patron. of the bishop. There are ruins of three churches and three castles.

TWO-MILE-BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the bar. of Decies-without-Drum, co. Waterford, Ireland, 2 miles S.W. of Dungarvan. Fairs are held on 25th July and 18thOctober.

TWO-MILE-BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the bar. of East Iffa and Offa, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles E.N.E. from Clonmel.

TWO-MILE-HOUSE, a hmlt. in the par. of Basford, co. Nottingham, 2 miles N.W. of Nottingham.

TWRCELYN, a hund., co. Anglesea, contains the pars. of Amlwch, Bodewryd, Coedana, Llanallgo, Llandyfrydog, Llaneilian, Llaneugrad, Llanfihangel-Tre'r-Beirdd, Llanwenllwyfo, and Penrhos-Lligwy. It gives name to a deanery in the archdeaconry and dioc. of Bangor.

TWRCH, a stream, co. Brecon, rises under Talsarn Hill, on the Carmarthen border, and joins the Tawe below Ystradnglais.

TWYCROSS, a par. in the hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 5½ miles N.E. of Atherstone, its post town, and 5 W. of Market Bosworth. The village is situated on the road between Ashby-de-la-Zouch and Atherstone. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £130. The church, dedicated to St. James, is a structure of the 14th century, with a tower and three bells. It has an eastern window, with stained glass of the 13th century, presented by Sir Wathen Waller, Bart., and other windows, the gift of the late Queen Adelaide, brought from France. There is a national school for both sexes. Earl Howe is lord of the manor.

TWYFORD, a hund. in the lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, contains the pars. of West Farleigh, Hunton, Nettlestead, East Peckham, Teston, Wateringbury, and Yadling, comprising an area of 16,450 acres.

TWYFORD, a par. in the lower half of Fawley hund., Winchester div. of co. Hants, 3¼ miles S. of Winchester, its post town and railway station. The village is situated on the river Itchin, and the Itchin navigation, near the line of the London and South Western railway. This place came from the Seymours to the Mildmays of Dogmersfield, and here was the Roman Catholic seminary in which Pope was educated. In the vicinity is Shipley House, an old mansion, where Dr. Franklin wrote his life whilst on a visit to Dr. Shipley. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £213, in the patron. of Emanuel College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has several stained glass windows, and has been recently restored. The interior contains a bust of Bishop Shipley, by Nollekens. In the churchyard is an extraordinary yew-tree. Twyford House, Brambridge House, Shawford House, and Twyford Lodge, are the principal residences.

TWYFORD, a par. in the hund. of Buckingham, co. Bucks, 7 miles S. of Bicester, its post town, and 6½ S.W. of Buckingham. It is a station on the Great Western railway, where the Henley branch turns off. It is situate on a branch of the river Ouse, and contains the hmlts. of Charndon and Poundon. The river here divides this co. from that of Oxfordshire. The London and North Western railway passes through the parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £725, in the patron. of Lincoln College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains several monuments. There is a National school, and the Independents have a chapel. Lady Wenman is lady of the manor.

TWYFORD, a hmlt. and tnshp. in the par. of Colsterworth, wap. of Beltisloe, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, half a mile S. of Colsterworth, and 4 miles S.W. of Corby, on the river Witham.

TWYFORD, a par. in the hund of East Goscote, co. Leicester, 6 miles S.W. of Melton Mowbray, its post town, and 12 N.E. of Leicester. The village is situated on a branch of the river Wreak. The par. includes the hmlt. of Thorpe Satchville. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Hungerton, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. The parochial charities produce about £34 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel and a school.

TWYFORD, a par. in the hund. of Eynesford, co. Norfolk, 1 mile W. of Foulsham, and 4 miles N. of Elmham railway station. The village is situated near the river Wensum. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £148. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is situated in the grounds of Twyford Hall. The Hall is the principal residence. Colonel Packe is lord of the manor.

TWYFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Compton Abbas, co. Dorset, 2 miles S.W. of Shaftesbury.

TWYFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of West Felton, co. Salop, 4 miles S.E. of Oswestry.

TWYFORD ABBEY, an ext. par. place in the Kensington div. of the hund. of Ossulstone, co. Middlesex, 7 miles N.W. of St. Paul's, London, and 2 from Acton. It is situated near the viaduct of the London and North Western railway, on the Paddington Canal and the river Brent. It is mentioned in Domesday Book as Tveverde, and was then held by St. Paul's Cathedral, but came to William de Cranford in 1114, and subsequently to the Philpots, Cholmeleys, and Willian, who rebuilt the abbey on the old site. Attached to the abbey is a private chapel with tombs of the Moyles, and Bold, the poet.

TWYFORD AND STENSON, a chplry. in the par. of Barrow-upon-Trent, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby, 6 miles N.E. of Burton, its post town, 5 S.W. of Derby, and 2 N.E. of Willington railway station. It is situated on the river Trent, near the Grand Trunk canal. The chplry includes the tnshp. of Stenson. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Barrow, in the dioc. of Lichfield. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. There is a National school for both sexes, erected in 1842 on a site of land presented by Sir George Crew, Bart., who is lord of the manor.

TWYNHOLM, a par. co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, comprising a vil. of its own name. The par. extends in length about 9¾ miles, with an extreme breadth of about 2½ miles, and is bounded on the N. by Balmaghie, on the E. by Tongland, on the S.E. by the river and estuary of the Dee, which separates it from Kirkcudbright, on the S. by Borgue, and on the W. by Borgue and Girthon. The surface is undulating, and is watered by the streams Whinnion, Glengape, and Trostie, abounding in fish. The prevailing rocks are whinstone and granite. In the vicinity are the ruins of Campston Castle, two duns, five moats, and the gallows hill. There are flax and woollen mills. The parish is traversed by the road from Dumfries to Port Patrick, and is within easy access of the Galloway railways. The village of Twynholm, which is about 3 miles N. of Kirkcudbright, and 6 S.E. of Gatehurst, is situated in a glen at the confluence of the rivers Tarf and Dee, near the head of Kirkcudbright Bay. This par. is in the presb of Kirkcudbright and synod of Galloway. The stipend of the minister is about £242. The parish church was erected in 1818. There are a parochial school and two other schools.

TWYWELL, a par. in the hund. of Huxloe, co. Northampton, 6 miles from Kettering, its post town, and 2 S.W. from Thrapston. It is a station on the Kettering and Cambridge branch of the Midland railway. The village is situated on the road from Wellingborough to Thrapston, at a short distance to the W. of the river Nene. The soil is chiefly clay. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £280. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. The Duke of Buccleuch is lord of the manor.

TYBRITH, ISSAF, and UCHAF, hmlts. in the par. of Llanrwst, co. Denbigh, near Llanrwst.

TYBROUGHTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Hamer, hund. of Maylor, co. Flint, 5 miles N.W. of Whitchurch, and 6 from Ellesmere, on a branch of the river Dee.

TYDD ST. GILES, a par. in the hund. of Wisbeach, Isle of Ely, co. Cambridge, 5 miles N.W. of Wisbeach, its post town, and 6 from St. Mary Sutton. The preparation of woad for dyeing is carried on. The construction of the Bedford Level canal, which is 100 feet wide and 30 feet deep, has greatly improved the quality of the land. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Ely, val £653, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Giles. The parochial charities produce about £80 per annum. There is an endowed school, and the Independents have a chapel.

TYDD ST. MARY, a par. in the wap. of Elloe, parts of Holland, co. Lincoln, 6 miles N.W. of Wisbeach, its post town, and 3 S. of Long-Sutton. It is a station on the Peterborough and Lynn branch of the Midland railway. The village is situated on the river Nene, near the southern border of the county, adjoining the Isle of Ely. It is traversed from E. to W. by the South Holland drain, which empties itself into the Nene. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £1,108, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The living was once held by N. Breakspear, who was elected to the papal throne as Pope Adrian IV. The parochial charities produce upwards of £100 per annum. There are a free school for boys and a National school for both sexes, including infants. In connexion with the church are two mission houses, respectively situated at Tydd Cote and in the Fen, and at the latter is a day and Sunday school. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have chapels.

TYDDYN-PRYDD, a tnshp. in the par. of Welshpool, co. Montgomery, near Welshpool.

TYDWEILIOG, a par. in the hund. of Dinlaen, co. Carnarvon, 9 miles W. of Pwllheli, its post town, and 5 from Neven. The village is situated near Carnarvon Bay. The living is a perpet. cur., in the dioc. of Bangor, val. £80. The church is dedicated to St. Cwyvan. The Methodists have a chapel.

TYERSALL, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Pudsay, West Riding co. York, 2 miles E. of Bradford.

TYERS HILL, a hmlt. in the par. of Darfield, West Riding co. York, 7 miles N. of Rotherham.

TYFARNHAM, a par. in the bar. of Corkaree, co.

Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles N.E. of Mullingar. Rathowen is its post town. The surface consists of good grazing land. The parish is crossed by the road from Multifarnham to Castlepollard, and is traversed by the river Gaine. Loughs Dereveragh and Owhel bound it on two sides. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Meath, val. with Leyny, £67. In the Roman Catholic arrangement this parish is united to that of Rathconnell, or Turin. There are two private schools. The chief residence is Knockdrin Castle, the seat of Sir R. Levinge, Bart.

TYLDESLEY-CUM-SHAKERLEY, a tnshp. and ecclesiastical district in the par. of Leigh, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 10 miles N.W. of Manchester. It is a station on the Manchester and Preston section of the London and North-Western railway, where the Leigh and Bolton branches turn off. This township, which has recently increased in wealth and population, contained in 1861, 6,029 inhabitants, the greater part of whom are engaged in the cotton and silk mills, and in the neighbouring collieries, which are considerable. In 1827 the township was separated from Leigh and erected into a distinct parish, as regards ecclesiastical affairs, but in other respects may still be considered a part of the town of Leigh (which see).

TYLN, a hmlt. in the par. of Hayton, co. Notts, 2 miles N. of Great Retford, on the river Idle.

TYLON, a vil. in the par. of Llandwrog, co. Carnarvon, 4 miles S.W. of Bangor.

TYNAGH, a par. and post town in the bars. of Leitrim and Longford, co. Galway, prov. of Connaught, Ireland, 5 miles W.N.W. of Portumna. The parish is crossed by the road from Portumna to Loughrea. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Clonfert, joined to Doneira. The church was built in 1702. There are a Roman Catholic chapel, one public and three private schools. The principal residences are Pallas, Flower Hill, and Killeen. Here are the ruins of Pallas Castle, formerly a monastic establishment founded by Birmingham, Baron of Athenry. Lead in small veins is found. Fairs are held on 27th March, 31st August, and 11th December.

TYNAN, a par. and post town in the bars. of Armagh and Tiranny, co. Armagh, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 7 miles W.S.W. of Armagh, and 89 from Dublin. It is a station on the Belfast and Omagh railway. The surface consists of good soil with a small proportion of bog. The parish is situated near the Ulster canal, and is crossed by the road from Armagh to Monaghan. It contains Middleton and Killyeagh. The town contains a dispensary and police station. The Tynan river here meets the river Blackwater. The cultivation of flax is successfully carried on. There are ruins of two castles and remains of a curious stone cross, built into the wall of the church. Limestone and freestone are quarried. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Armagh, value £790, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church was built in 1784, and enlarged in 1822 by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, two meeting-houses for Presbyterians, several public, and three private schools. The chief residences are Tynan Abbey, the seat of Sir J. M. Stronge, Bart., Fellows Hall, and Woodpark.

TYN-CELIN, a tnshp. in that of Aberwheeler, co. Denbigh, 4 miles N.E. of Denbigh.

TYNDAETHWY, a hund., co. Anglesey, contains the pars. of Beaumaris, Llanbedr-Gôch, Llanddyfnan, Llandysilio, Llanfair Mathafarn-Eithaf, Llanfair-Pwllgwyngyll, Llangoed, Llansadwrn, Penmynydd, Pentreath, and parts of Llanddona, Llandegfan, Llanfaes, Llanfihangel-Tyn Sylwy, Llaniestyn, and Penmon.

TYNDRUM, a vil. in the par. of Killin, co. Perth, Scotland, 12 miles E. of Dalmally, and 48 W. of Perth. It is situated in Strath Fillan, at the head of the river Dochart, near Dalrigh, or King's Field.

TYNE, a large river of the N. of England in two streams, distinguished as the North and South Tyne; the former rises under the Cheviot hills in co. Northumberland, and the latter under Cross Fell in Cumberland; but the two rivers uniting their streams at Hexham, flow through the High-Level Bridge at Newcastle, past Shields to Tynemouth, and fall into the North Sea, after a course of about 60 miles. The principal tributaries of the North Tyne are the Reed, Devil's Beck, and Derwent, and of the South Tyne, the Nent, Tippal, and Allen, all which occasionally overflow their banks, as in the severe floods of 1771 and 1815.

TYNE, a river of cos. Edinburgh and Haddington, Scotland. It rises in Tyne-Head, under Stob Hill, and after a course of 26 miles, falls into the North Sea at Tynningham.

TYNEFAL, a vil. in the par. of Aberdaron, co. Carnarvon, 13 miles S.W. of Pwllheli.

TYNEHAM, a par. in the hund. of Hasilor, co. Dorset, 6 miles S.W. of Wareham, its post town, and 5 W. of Corfe Castle. The village is situated at the western extremity of the Isle of Purbeck, near Worbarrow Bay, in the English Channel. There was anciently a chapel at Povington, a hamlet near Lulworth, and another dedicated to St. Margaret at North Egleston; also an alien priory, subordinate to Bec Abbey, in Normandy, which at the suppression was given by Henry VI. to St. Anthony's Hospital, in London, and subsequently came to the Dean and Chapter of Westminster. On the coast is a circular battery for the defence of Worbarrow Bay. Limestone is quarried, and there are veins of Purbeck marble and some gypsum. The living is a rect., annexed to that of Steeple, in the dioc. of Sarum. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was enlarged and restored in 1835. The principal residence is Tyneham House. Flowers-barrow, an ancient encampment, is situated in this parish.

TYNEMOUTH, a par., sea-port, and bathing-place, giving name to a municipal and parliamentary borough, of which the town and suburbs of North Shields form the principal portion, locally in the E. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland. The Newcastle and North Shields section of the Blyth and Tyne railway extends nearly to the baths at the village of Tynemouth, where it has a station. This parish, which is bounded on the S. by the river Tyne, and on the E. by the German Ocean, is of great extent, occupying the south-eastern section of the county, locally termed Tynemouthshire. It abounds in coal, ironstone, and magnesian limestone, and contains the tnshps. of Chirton, Cullercoates, Monkseaton, Murton, Preston, Tynemouth, Whitley, and the town of North Shields [which see]. The village of Tynemouth, situated about 1 mile E. of Shields, occupies a promontory at the mouth of the Tyne, jutting out into the sea and overlooking the sheltered bay called Prior's Haven, to which many visitors resort during the season for the enjoyment of sea-bathing. It is supposed to be the Penbal Crag of the ancient Britons, and has traces of a Roman fort, and the picturesque ruins of Tynemouth Priory, originally founded by Edward, the Saxon king of Northumbria, in 625, and afterwards rebuilt with stone by Oswald in the 8th century. Of this structure there are still remains, consisting chiefly of an arch and the eastern part of the church, which was made parochial at the Dissolution, and so continued till 1657, when, having become ruinous, a new parochial church was built at North Shields. Near the ruins of the priory is a lighthouse with a revolving light, and a magazine of military stores, adjoining which at the E. end of the village is a small fort called the Spanish Battery, occupying a peninsula of rocks at the mouth of the Tyne. This fortress was defended by the Earl of Newcastle during the civil war of Charles I., but was eventually captured in 1645. In 1672 Clifford's fort was constructed, and in 1758 barracks were erected for 1,000 men, but have since been converted into dwelling-houses, which now constitute Percy Square. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £298. The parish church, dedicated to St. Oswin, is situated at North Shields. In addition to the parish church are the district churches of Trinity St. Saviour's, Cullercoats, Low Town, and Percy, the livings of all which are perpet. curs., val. about £200 each. The church, or chapel-of-ease situated in the village of Tynemouth, is modern. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is an infant school. The Poor-law Union of Tynemouth comprises 25 parishes or townships.

TYNLAN, a tnshp. in the par. of Llandegley, hund. of Cefnllys, co. Radnor, 5 miles N.W. of New Radnor.

TYNLON, a vil. in the par. of Bangor, co. Carnarvon, near Bangor.

TYNNINGHAM, a par., co. Haddington, Scotland, 2 miles N.E. of Linton, and 5¼ N.W. of Dunbar. The village, which is old, is situated on the river Tyne, near Whiberry Head, and is celebrated for its richly wooded grounds, planted in the commencement of the 18th century by the Earl of Haddington. The principal seat is Tynningham House. There are still some ruins of the old church built on the site of St. Baldrid's church, founded in the 6th century, which belonged to the Bishop of St. Andrew's, and had the privilege of a sanctuary. Tynningham Flats is a sandbank at the river's mouth.

TYNREFAL, a hmlt. in the par. of Aberdaron, co. Carnarvon, 13 miles S.W. of Pwllheli.

TYNRON, a par. in the district of Nithsdale, co. Dumfries, Scotland. It extends in length 9½ miles from S.E. to N.W., with an extreme breadth of 3½ miles, and is bounded on the W. by Kirkcudbrightshire, and on the other sides by the pars. of Penpont, Keir, and Glencairn. The surface is hilly, its greatest altitudes being Lamgarrock and Coremilligan hills, which rise 1,800 feet above sea-level. The soil is generally sandy, and the predominant rock graywacke, but clay slate also exists and was formerly worked. The Doon of Tynron, a pyramidal hill, towering up on the peninsula formed by the rivers Skarr and Shinnel, forms a striking feature in the landscape, and has on its summit traces of a fort. The village of Tynron-Kirk, which is about 2 miles N. of Minniehive and 3 from Penpont, is situated on the rivers Shinnel and Skarr, and on the Minniehive road. This par. is in the presb. of Penpont and synod of Dumfries. The stipend of the minister is about £234. The parish church was erected in 1837. There is a parochial school.

TYNYFORDD, a vil. in the par. of Llanybythir, co. Carmarthen, 4 miles S.W. of Lampeter.

TYREE. See TIREE, co. Argyle.

TYREE AND COLL, an united par. in the Argyleshire Hebrides, coast of Scotland. See COLL.

TYRELLA, a par. and post-town in the bar. of Lecale, co. Down, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, 5 miles S.S.W. of Downpatrick, and 91 from Dublin. The surface consists of a good soil. The parish is bounded on the S. by Dundrum Bay, and contains the Cow and Calf Rock. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Down, val. £124, in the patron. of the crown. There are two Roman Catholic chapels, a public, two private, and one Sunday school. The chief residence is Tyrella House. There is a curious cave, discovered in 1832, constructed of uncemented stones, over which are a number of flagstones.

TYRESCOB, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandilo-fawr, co. Carmarthen, near Llandilo-fawr, on the river Towry.

TYRICOED, a tnshp. in the par. of Kinnerley, co. Salop, 10 miles N.W. of Shrewsbury.

TYRIE, a par. in the district of Buchan, co. Aberdeen, Scotland. It comprises the quoad sacra par. of New Pitsligo. It extends in length about 7½ miles, with an extreme breadth of 3½ miles, and is bounded on the N. by Aberdour and Pitsligo, on the N.E. by Fraserburgh, on the E. by Rathen and the detached districts of Aberdour and Fraserburgh. The surface is diversified with hill and dale, and there are several mineral springs. A large portion of the land has been reclaimed, and is now in a good state of cultivation. The predominant rock is granite. The village, which is about 3 miles S.E. of Aberdour, is situated on the Gonor and Tyree rivers, and is traversed by the roads from Fraserburgh to Turriff, and from Peterhead to Banff. Many of the inhabitants are employed in weaving. This par. is in the presb. of Deer and the synod of Aberdeen. The stipend of the minister is about £158. The parish church was erected about 1800, near the site of one built in 1004 by the Thane of Buchan.

TYRLEY. See BLOORE-IN-TYRLEY, co. Stafford.

TYRONE, an inland co., prov. of Ulster, Ireland, is bounded N. by Londonderry, E. by Lough Neagh and Armagh county, S. by Monaghan and Fermanagh; and W. by Fermanagh and Donegal. It lies between 54° 19′ and 54° 57′ N. lat., 6° 35′ and 7° 56′ W. long. Its greatest length from E. to W. is 60 miles, and from N. to S. 46 miles. The area, which includes a portion of Lough Neagh, is 1,260 square miles, or 806,640 acres, of which 450,826 acres are arable, 311,867 acres are uncultivated, 11,981 acres under plantations, 710 acres in towns, and 31,796 acres under water. The population in 1841 was 312,956, in 1851 it was 255,734, and in 1861 it was 238,500. The number of inhabited houses in 1861 was 44,577; of uninhabited, 1,842; and 70 were in course of building. The Poor Law valuation in 1851 was £366,010, and the general valuation in 1861 was £419,023. The number of persons from this county who emigrated from Irish ports, with the expressed intention of not returning, between May, 1851, and December, 1865, was 52,221, or 20 per cent. of the population at the former date.—The county seems to have been originally peopled by the Scoti, who occupied most of the inland regions, and afterwards formed the kingdom of Cineal Eoghain or Tyr-oen, now written Tyrone. From the earliest times it was the chief seat of the family of O'Neill, many of whom ruled over the entire island. O'Neill assisted Roderick O'Connor in his attempt to drive the English from Dublin; his successor, however, attended the court and acknowledged the authority of King John. The O'Neills assisted Edward Bruce in his attempt to conquer Ireland, but were faithful to Richard II. when he landed in the country. They received the title of Earl of Tyrone from Henry VIII. During Elizabeth's reign they revolted in consequence of alleged grievances, and joined a league of the northern chieftains against the English. They seized and occupied nearly the entire of Ulster, defeated Sir H. Bagnall, the English marshal, at Dungannon, and resisted and baffled the Earl of Essex. Lord Deputy Mountjoy, who succeeded him, compelled them to submit; and in the reign of James I., when the English and Scotch settlements in Ulster took place, Tyrone was divided into districts and given to "undertakers," who undertook to form settlements or colonies. This gave a considerable impulse to progress, but the county was actively concerned in the disturbances succeeding 1641, which checked the spirit of improvement. Dungannon was seized by Phelim O'Neill, who, in 1646, defeated the English and Scots at Benburb, cutting off 3,000 men, and thus established his temporary supremacy in Ulster, which, however, Cromwell quietly put an end to in 1649.—In the war of the Revolution, the army of James fell back upon Strabane after raising the siege of Londonderry. The surface is for the most part hilly, rising to the N. into the mountain-ranges of Donegal and Londonderry, and to the S. into those of Monaghan, Cavan, and Fermanagh. The county lying between these principal chains is to a great extent moorland, diversified by the hills and mountains which rise, now in isolated peaks, and now in groups, to elevations varying from 1,000 to 2,200 feet, while between them rich valleys are occasionally met. This district is flanked by the plain of Lough Neagh gradually sloping towards the E. to the borders of the lake, and S. to the Blackwater, which drains this part of the county, the N. of this plain being watered by the Ballinderry, which, after a course of 26 miles, falls into Lough Neagh. The Blackwater, 46 miles in length, is navigable from the Lough to Charlemont, a distance of 8 miles, and is there joined by the Ulster canal. The Tyrone canal also, 5 miles long, connects this river with the collieries at Coalisland. The north-western districts belong to the basin of the Foyle, and are drained by it and its affluents. The lakes are numerous but unimportant, except Lough Neagh, of which 27,355 acres belong to this county.—The Irish North-Western railway enters the county near Trillick, and runs N. past Omagh to Strabane, and on to Londonderry; the Portadown, Dungannon, and Omagh Junction railway connects the Irish North-Western, and the Ulster lines, and a branch of the Belfast and Northern Counties railway passes north of Lough Neagh to Cookstown. The roads are well laid off, and are kept in good order. The principal are the Dublin and Londonderry road, passing by Aughnacloy, Omagh, Newtownstewart, and Strabane; and the Armagh and Coleraine road, by Moy, Dungannon, and Cookstown.—The elevated mountain district occupying the N.W. of the county is of mica slate, or Old Red sandstone formation, while granite is to be found in the north-eastern parts. The great central parts are of Old Red sandstone, or sandstone conglomerate, which extends southwards into Fermanagh. Carboniferous limestone occupies a considerable portion of the S. There is a small coal-field about Dungannon and Coalisland, which supplies a quickly burning coal, resembling that of Ayrshire. The seams are thicker than in other districts in Ireland, but the yield has not equalled the expectations formed, and though the mines are still worked, the amount raised is not considerable. Marble is quarried in the neighbourhood of Monaghan, and potter's clay about Coalisland. Traces of lead, copper, and iron are also found.—The soil in the lower land is fertile, the hilly parts afford good pasturage for cattle, and much of the central district is reclaimed moor or bog, but a great deal may yet be done towards improvement by judicious drainage. Wheat and barley are little grown, oats being the staple crop. Potatoes and flax are also attended to.—The county is partly in the diocese of Clogher, but principally in those of Armagh and Derry, in the distribution of the Roman Catholic as well as of the Established Church. In 1861, 52,016, or 21·8 per cent. of the population belonged to the latter Church; 134,716, or 56·5 per cent., were Roman Catholics; 46,568, or 19·5 per cent. were Presbyterians, and 5,200, or 2·2 per cent., belonged to other denominations. The county returns three members to Parliament—two for the county at large, constituency in 1864, 8,421; and one for Dungannon borough, constituency 177. It is divided for civil purposes into eight baronies—Clogher, Dungannon, Lower, Middle, and Upper Omagh, East and West, and Strabane, Lower and Upper, and contains 46 parishes. The government is entrusted to the lieutenant and custos, the high sheriff, 24 deputy lieutenants, and about 112 magistrates. It belongs to the N.W. circuit. The assizes are held at Omagh, and petty sessions at 20 other towns. The county gaol, county infirmary, and district lunatic asylum are at Omagh, where there is also a barrack station. The county is within the Dublin military district. It is divided into 7 Poor-law Unions and 28 dispensary districts. There are 25 market-towns. The principal seats are Stuart Hall, Earl of Castlestuart; Barons Court, Marquis of Abercorn; Dungannon Park, Hon. W. S. Knox; Ballygawley House, Sir J. M. Stewart; Fecarry Lodge, Sir B. B. M'Mahon; Lissan, Sir N. A. Staples; besides numerous residences of the gentry of the county. The antiquities are not numerous, and are generally confined to the ruins of monasteries and ancient castles, none of which are of much importance. The Marquis of Waterford is Baron Tyrone in the peerage of Great Britain.

TYRRELL'S HALL, a hmlt. in the par. of Willingale Doe, co. Essex, 7 miles N.W. of Chelmsford.

TYRRELLSPASS, a post-office vil. in the pars. of Newtown and Clonfad, bar. of Fartullagh, co. Westmeath, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It is situated near Gallows Hill, and contains Clonfad church, a chapel, a school, savings-bank, police station, barracks, and a dispensary. The chief residences are Toor Hall and Cornahir. This village was anciently a market town. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of cotton. Here are the remains of Tyrrell's Castle, erected to secure the passage to the town. Fairs are held on 17th May and 17th December.

TYRRINGHAM-WITH-FILGROVE, a par. in the hund. of Newport, co. Bucks, 2 miles N.W. of Newport-Pagnell, its post town, and 4 from Olney. The village is situated on the river Ouse. The living is a rect.,* annexed to that of Filgrove, in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £398. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The principal residence is Tyrringham House, built on the site of the old one, which was the seat of the Tyringhams prior to the Conquest. The lawn faces the river, over which is a modern stone bridge.

TYR-ROSSER, or TIR RHOS HIR, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandebie, co. Carmarthen, 4 miles S.W. of Llandilo-fawr.

TYRY. See TIREE, co. Argyle.

TYRYBRENIN, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandilo-talybont, co. Glamorgan, 4 miles N.E. of Loughor.

TYR-Y-MYNACH, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfihangel-Geneur-Glynn, hund. of Geneur-Glynn, co. Cardigan, 4 miles N.W. of Aberystwith. It includes Bow Street, Pengarn, and Rhydpennan.

TYSOE, a par. in the Kington div. of Kington hund., co. Warwick, 4½ miles S.E. from Kineton, or Kington, its post town, and 10 from Banbury. The par. is divided into Upper and Lower Tysoe, and includes the hamlet of Westcote. The village is situated opposite the hill on which is cut the figure of a horse, 50 feet in length, in the red sandstone rock, and which gives to the adjacent low lands the name of the Vale of Red Horse. It is supposed to commemorate the act of the Earl of Warwick, the king-maker, in killing his horse on Palm Sunday, the day of the battle of Towton, in 1461, on the anniversary of which it has been customary for the country people to assemble for the purpose of cleaning the figure from whatever has grown upon it in the course of the year, which is locally termed "scouring the horse." The living is a vic.,* with the rect. of Compton-Wynyates, in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £266. The church is dedicated to St. John or to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £150 per annum. There is a National school, and the Wesleyans have a chapel. The Marquis of Northampton is lord of the manor.

TYTHACOTT, or TITHECOT, a hmlt. in the par. of Buckland Brewer, co. Devon, 5 miles N.W. of Torrington.

TYTHBY, a par. in the S. div. of Bingham wap., co. Nottingham, 2 miles N.W. of Bingham, its post town, and 10 S.E. of Nottingham. The village is situated on a branch of the river Smite, at the western extremity of the vale of Belvoir, and near the Grantham canal, here crossed by the Fosse road. The par. includes the tnshp. of Cropwell Butler. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £102. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, was restored in 1824. In the chancel is a monument to the Chaworth family.

TYTHEGSTON, a par. in the hund. of Newcastle, co. Glamorgan, 4 miles S.W. of Bridgend, its post town. It is situated on the Bristol Channel, and contains the hmlts. of Upper and Lower Tythegston. The subsoil is productive of coal and ironstone. In the vicinity is a cromlech. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Llandaff, in the div. of Llandaff. The church is dedicated to St. Tudwg.

TYTHERINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Prestbury, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 1 mile N.E. of Macclesfield, its post town. The village is on the high road to Stockport, near the Macclesfield branch of the Manchester and Birmingham railway. The soil is clayey, with a subsoil of clay and sand. T. Brocklehurst, Esq., is lord of the manor.

TYTHERINGTON, a par. in the hunds. of Thornbury and Henbury, co. Gloucester, 4 miles W. of Wickwar, its post town, 3 S.E. of Thornbury, and 4½ S.W. of Charfield. It contains the hmlt. of Itchington. The village is situated near the Gloucester and Bristol road. The soil is loamy, with a subsoil of limestone.

The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £300. The church is dedicated to St. James. There is a Sunday-school, supported by the vicar. Mrs. P. Morris and H. Hardwick, Esq., are lady and lord of the manor, and chief landowners.

TYTHERINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Heytesbury, co. Wilts, 1 mile S.E. of Heytesbury, and 4 miles S.E. of Warminster. This place forms the corps of a prebend in the collegiate church of Heytesbury. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Sarum, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. James.

TYTHERLEY, or TUDERLEY, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Thorngate, co. Hants, 7 miles S.W. of Stockbridge, and 2 from the Dunbridge railway station. The Roman road from Winchester to Salisbury passed through this parish under Danebury Hill, near which are many barrows and tumuli. The principal residence is Tytherley House, the seat of General Yates. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £50. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, contains two effigies of priests with crosses, and several monuments to the Gifford and Rolle families. There is an agricultural school called Queenwood Farm, occupying the extensive buildings formerly known as Harmony Hall, where Robert Owen tried his socialistic experiment; also a free school with an income of £200 per annum, founded by Sarah Rolle in 1736. Sir Francis Goldsmid is lord of the manor and principal proprietor.

TYTHERLEY, or TUDERLEY, WEST, a par. in the hund. of Thorngate, co. Hants, 7½ miles S.W. of Stockbridge. It adjoins the above, and includes the extra parochial district of East and West Buckholt. The land is chiefly woodland and arable. The soil is clay upon a substratum of chalk. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £361. The church was rebuilt in 1832. There is a National school. The principal seat is Norman Court House, the residence of Thomas Baring, Esq., M.P., who is lord of the manor. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum, being the endowment of six almshouses.

TYTHERTON, EAST, a tythg. in the par. of Bremhill, co. Wilts, 3 miles N.W. of Calne.

TYTHERTON-KELWAYS, a par. in the hund. of Chippenham, co. Wilts, 2 miles N.E. of Chippenham, of which it is a tything. There is no village, only a few farmhouses. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Chippenham, in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol.

TYTHERTON-LUCAS and STANLEY, tythgs. in the par. and hund. of Chippenham, co. Wilts, 3 miles E. of Chippenham.

TYTHROP, a lib. in the par. of Kingsey, hund. of Lewknor, co. Oxford.

TYVOURNEY, a vil. in the bar. of Corkaquiny, co. Kerry, Ireland, 5 miles S.W. of Ventry, on Dingle Bay.

TYWARDREATH, a par. in the E. div. of Powder hund., co. Cornwall, 5 miles N. of St. Austell, its post town, 4 N.W. of Fowey, and 1¼ mile S.E. of St. Blazey. The village is situated on Tywardreath Bay, under Greber Head, on the coast of the English Channel. The par. includes the hmlt. of Parr. Petty sessions for the district are held on the first Monday in every month at the Porcupine Inn. In the vicinity are traces of the chapel, &c., of a Benedictine cell to Angiers Abbey, in France, founded by William Earl of Mortaigne, and refounded by William de Cardenham in 1190. This house continued till the Dissolution, when its revenue was valued at £123, and the site given to the Seymours. The substratum is productive of granite and tin ore. Many Roman coins of the Lower Empire have been discovered here. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Tregaminion annexed, in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £135. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, contains several old tombs and a granite font. There is a chapel-of-ease erected by Mr. Rashley about half a mile from his seat, Menabilly House, also a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Bible Christians have chapels. A horticultural exhibition, called the "Rural Gardens' Exhibition," is held in July, and a cattle fair is held on the 10th June.

TYWYN, ISAF, and UCHAF, a tnshp. in the par. of Abergele, co. Denbigh, 2 miles W. of Abergele.

U

UBBERLEY, a tnshp. in the par. of Bucknall, N. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford, 2 miles N.E. of Stoke-upon-Trent.

UBBESTON, a par. in the hund. of Blything, co. Suffolk, 6 miles N.W. of Yoxford, its post town, and 6 S.W. of Halesworth railway station. The village is situated on the river Blythe. The soil is heavy, with a subsoil of clay. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £315. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The register dates from 1555. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. Lord Huntingfield is lord of the manor.

UBLEY, a par. in the hund. of Chewton, co. Somerset, 9 miles N.W. of Wells, 11 from Bristol, its post town, and 8 from Yatton railway station. The village is situated on the N. side of the Mendip hills, on the turnpike-road from Bath to Weston-super-Mare. Lead ore is worked by the Mendip Hills Mining Company. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £178. The church is dedicated to St. Bartholomew. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There are a day school for both sexes, and a chapel for the Wesleyans. T. Somers, Esq., of Mendip Lodge, is lord of the manor.

UCHAF, a hund., co. Carnarvon, contains the pars. of Aber, Dwygyfylchi, Llanllechid, Llandegni, and Llanfair-fechan, and is the property of the crown.

UCHA-PEN-ISA and UCHA-PEN-UCHA, tnshps. in the par. of Dwygyfylchi, co. Carnarvon, 2 miles W. of Conway.

UCHAYNDRE, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanbadarn-fawr, hund. of Geneur Glynn, co. Cardigan, near Aberystwith.

UCHELDRE, a tnshp. in the par. of Bettws, co. Montgomery, 4 miles N.E. of Newtown.

UCHELDRE, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfawr, co. Merioneth, 1 mile N.E. of Bala.

UCHLLAWRCOED, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanwnog, co. Montgomery, 6 miles N.W. of Newtown.

UCHMYNYDD, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanaber, co. Merioneth, near Barmouth.

UCHMYNYDD, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanykil, co. Merioneth, 2 miles from Bala.

UCHYGARREG, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Machynlleth, co. Montgomery, 2 miles from Machynlleth, and 32 W. of Montgomery.

UCKERBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Catterick, wap. of Gilling East, North Riding co. York, 3½ miles N.E. of Catterick, 5 W. of Richmond, and 1 mile from Scorton railway station, on a branch of the river Swale. The Countess of Tyrconnel is lady of the manor.

UCKFIELD, a par. and post town in the hund. of Loxfield-Dorset, rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex, 8 miles N.E. of Lewes. It is a station on the London, Brighton, and South Coast railway, near the river Ouse, on the main road from Lewes to Tunbridge Wells. It is a polling-place for East Sussex, and was formerly a market town. Petty sessions are held every fortnight at the Maiden's Head hotel. The town is lighted with gas, is well supplied with water, and under the control of a local board of health. A savings-bank was established in 1816; there are also two observatories in the parish. The Poor-law Union comprises 11 parishes, the poor-house being at Ridgewood. A good trade is done in corn, the exchange being held at the Maiden's Head hotel. Malting and brewing are carried on, and there are brick and tile kilns. The land is partly in hop-gardens. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £315, in the patron. of the Archbishop of Canterbury. The church, dedicated to the Holy Cross, contains a stone pulpit and font, several tablets, and a brass to John Fuller, bearing date 1610. The parochial charities produce about £21 per annum, of which £10 go to Saunders's school. There are National schools and a grammar school. The Baptists and Wesleyans have chapels. Fairs for cattle are held on the 14th May and 29th August.

UCKINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Atcham, co. Salop, 5 miles S.W. of Wellington.

UCKINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Elmstone Hardwicke, lower div. of Deerhurst hund., co. Gloucester, 2½ miles N.W. of Cheltenham, its post town.

UDDINGSTONE, a vil. in the par. of Bothwell, co. Lanark, Scotland, 4 miles N.W. of Hamilton, and 6 S.W. of Airdrie. It is a station on the Clydesdale branch of the Caledonian railway. The village, which is on the river Clyde, near Bothwell Castle, is celebrated for the manufacture of agricultural tools. There is a Free church school.

UDDINGTON, a vil. in the par. of Douglas, co. Lanark, Scotland, 7 miles S.W. of Lanark.

UDIMORE, a par. in the hund. of Gostrow, rape of Hastings, co. Sussex, 3 miles S.W. of Rye, its post town, and 3½ N.W. of Winchelsea. The village is situated on the road from Rye to Battle, near the Breda Channel, a branch of the river Rother. The surface is undulating and well wooded. The land is partly in hop-grounds and marsh. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £100, in the patron. of trustees. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The register dates from 1598.

UDNY, a par. in the district of Ellon, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, 4 miles S.W. of Ellon. It is about 5 miles square, and is bounded on the N.W. by Bourtee and Tarves; on the N. by Tarves; on the N.E. by Ellon and Logie-Buchan; on the E. by Foveran and Belhelvie; on the S. by New Machar; and on the S.W. and W. by Fintray. The surface is undulating, and abounds with granite and limestone quarries. This parish was formed out of the parishes of Ellon, Logie-Buchan, Tarves, and Foveran, in 1597. It is traversed by the roads from Newburgh and Aberdeen, and by the Formartine and Buchan section of the Great North of Scotland railway, on which it is a station. This par. is in the presb. of Ellon and synod of Aberdeen. The stipend of the minister is about £217. The parish church was erected in 1821. There are several schools. In the vicinity are the ruins of Drumbrake. The principal seats are Pitmedden House, Pittrichie House, and Tillygreig. Fairs are held in March, on the Tuesday after 25th May, and on the Tuesday after 21st November.

UFFCULME, a par. in the hund. of Bampton, co. Devon, 5 miles N.E. of Cullompton, its post town, and 3 N.W. of the Tiverton Junction station on the Bristol and Exeter railway. It is a decayed market town, situated on the river Culme. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the flannel manufacture, but the serge trade, formerly carried on, has declined. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £350, in the patron. of the Prebend of Uffculme, cathedral of Salisbury. The church is dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin. The parochial charities produce about £70 per annum. There is a grammar school, founded in 1701 by Nicholas Ashford, who endowed it with about £50 per annum, also National and infant schools for both sexes. The Independents and Baptists have chapels. Bradfield House is the principal residence. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday after Good Friday, on 29th June, and on the second Wednesday in September.

UFFINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Shrivenham, co. Berks, 5 miles S.E. of Great Farringdon, its post town, and 7 from Wantage. It is a station on the Great Western railway. The village is situated at the foot of White Horse Hill, on the Wilts and Berks canal. Baulking and Wolstone, formerly hamlets, are now separated from Uffington, and form distinct and independent parishes. At the steepest part of White Horse Hill, near the summit, is cut the rude figure of a white horse, 314 feet in length, and galloping. It has been supposed to commemorate a victory gained by Alfred over the Danes. On the summit of the hill is a British encampment, called Uffington Castle, surrounded by a double vallum, the inner one very high, and measuring 700 feet from E. to W., by 500 broad. To the westward of the encampment is a tumulus, called Wayland Smith's Cave. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £340. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a very fine specimen of Early English architecture, with an octagon tower, which took the place of the spire, destroyed by lightning in 1750. There is also a district church at Baulking-cum-Wolstone, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £78. The parochial charities produce about £50 per annum, belonging to Saunders's school. There is a girls' National school, supported by voluntary contributions. The Baptists have a chapel. The Earl of Craven is lord of the manor, and takes from this place the title of viscount.

UFFINGTON, a par. in the wap. of Ness, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 2 miles E. of Stamford, its post town, and 6 from Market Deeping. It is a station on the Midland railway. The village is situated on the river Welland. At Newstead was an Austin canonry, founded by Will. de Albini, in the reign of King John, and valued at the Dissolution at £42. Stone is quarried here. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £837. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has some ancient stained glass. The parochial charities produce about £70 per annum, of which £20 go to Earl Lindsay's school, and £40 to Warrington's almshouses for 10 women.

UFFINGTON, a par. in the Albrighton div. of co. Salop, 3 miles N.E. of Shrewsbury, its post town. The village is situated on the Shrewsbury canal and the river Severn. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £59. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. Pimley House is the principal residence. Here are the ruins of Haghmond Abbey.

UFFORD, a par. in the lib. of Nassaburgh, or soke of Peterborough, co. Northampton, 4 miles S.E. from Stamford, its post town, and 8 from Peterborough. The village is situated on the river Welland, which occasionally inundates the lower grounds. The par. includes the hmlt. of Ashton and the chplry. of Bainton. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Bainton annexed, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £480, in the patron. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. The Hall is the principal residence. The Roman road from Castor to Lincoln passes a little to the E.

UFFORD, a par. in the hund. of Wilford, co. Suffolk, 2 miles N.E. of Woodbridge, its post town, and the same distance S.E. of Wickham Market. The village is situated on the river Deben, which occasionally inundates the adjoining lands. The par. includes the hmlt. of Sogenhoe. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £376. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains a brass of R. Ballett, bearing date 1598, an ancient font with a cover, and tombs of the Woods of Loudham. There was anciently a chapel-of-ease at Sogenhoe, but long since demolished. There are some small charities and a school supported by the rector. The Earls of Suffolk took their names from this place.

UFFORD, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Crediton, co. Devon, 3½ mile S.W. of Crediton.

UFTON, or UFTON-NERVET, a par. in the hund. of Theale, co. Berks, 7½ miles S.W. of Reading, its post town. The village is situated on the river Kennet. The par. has included the hmlt. of Ufton-Greys since 1442, previously a distinct parish. The surface is hilly, and much of the land is in common. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £426, in the patron. of Oriel College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The church of Ufton-Greys has long been in ruins. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum, derived from fuel allotment. There is a partly endowed free school. R. B. de Beavoir, Esq., of Englefield, is lord of the manor.

UFTON, a par. in the Kenilworth div. of Knightlow hund., co. Warwick, 2½ miles W. of Southam, its post town, and 1 mile from Harbury railway station. The village is situated on an eminence. The Warwickshire hounds meet in this parish. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £200, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has been restored. There is a school of recent erection.

UGBOROUGH, a par. in the hund. of Ermington, co. Devon, 3 miles E. of Ivybridge, its post town, and 1½ mile S.W. of Kingsbridge railway station. The village is situated on the road from Plymouth to Exeter, and near the South Devon railway and the river Erme. The soil is loamy, with a subsoil of slate and limestone, which are quarried. A lead mine was opened at Filham. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £260, in the patron. of the Grocers' Company. The church, standing upon an eminence, contains a Norman font and some old screen work. At Ivybridge is a district church, and at Earlscombe was formerly a chapel. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, at which a Sunday-school is also held. The Independents and Baptists have each a chapel. Admiral Sir J. Kempthorn was born at Widdiscombe in 1620. Sir W. P. Carew, Bart., is lord of the manor. A cattle market is held on the fourth Monday of every month.

UGFORD, a tythg. in the. par. of South Newton, co. Wilts, 2 miles N.W. of Wilton.

UGGESHALL, a par. in the hund. of Blything, co. Suffolk, 1 mile N.W. of Wangford, its post town, and 5 miles N.W. of Southwold. In the vicinity are sand and clay pits. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Sotherton, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £614. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes.

UGGLEBARNBY, a chplry. and tnshp. in the par. of Whitby, lib. of Whitby-Strand, North Riding co. York, 4 S.W. of Whitby, its post town, and 1½ mile S. of the Sleights railway station. The par. includes the hmlt. of Iburndale, and is intersected by the stream called Little Beck. The manor formerly belonged to Whitby Abbey, and at the Dissolution came into the possession of the Archbishop of York. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Eskdaleside, in the dioc. of York. The church was erected in 1137 by Nicholas, abbot of Whitby. The charities produce about £12 per annum.

UGGSCOMBE, a hund. in the Dorchester div. of co. Dorset, contains Dorchester, also the pars. of Abbotsbury, Little Bredy, Chilcombe, Fleet, Kingston Russell, Langton Herring, Litton Cheney, Portisham, Puncknowle, Swyre, Winterbourne Steepleton, and part of Hawkchurch, comprising an area of 24,290 acres, exclusive of Dorchester.

UGHILL, a vil. in the chplry. of Bradfield, West Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Sheffield.

UGIE, a small river, co. Aberdeen, Scotland, rises in two springs near New Deer, and falls into the sea at Peterhead.

UGLAS, UPPER and NETHER, two rivulets, co. Dumbarton, Scotland, falling into Loch Lomond.

UGLEY, a par. in the hund. of Clavering, co. Essex, 5½ miles N. of Bishop-Stortford, its post town, and 2 N.W. of the Elsenham railway station. The village is situated near the Cambridge railway, and on the high road from London to Newmarket. The land is partly in common. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £202, in the patron. of Christ's Hospital. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. On the S. side of the chancel is a chapel belonging to Bollington Hall. The parochial charities produce about £16 per annum. There is a National school. The principal residences are Ugley Hall and Oxford House.

UGTHORPE, a tnshp. in the par. of Lythe, E. div. of Langbaurgh lib., North Riding co. York, 7 miles W. of Whitby, and 4 N.W. of Lythe. A church was erected in 1856. The Roman Catholics have a chapel.

UIDHAY, a small island, one of the Outer Hebrides, coast of Scotland.

UIG, a par. in the district of Lewis, cos. Ross and Cromarty, Scotland. It comprises Uig and Carloway, with the islands of Vinavore, Big and Little Bernara, and Pabbay, besides many other islets in Loch Roag. It extends in length about 22½ miles from N.E. to S.W., with an extreme breadth of 17¼ miles. The district of Uig proper is bounded on the N. by the ocean and Carloway, on the E. by Stornoway, on the S. by Harris and Loch Reasort, and on the W. by the Atlantic Ocean. The surface chiefly consists of low, barren, heathy hills and flat moors, watered by numerous small lakes, the principal of which is Loch Langavat, 9½ miles in length. The coast, which is about 60 miles in extent, is flat and indented with bays abounding in cod, ling, dog-fish, coal-fish, and lobsters, for which last it is much frequented by English vessels. The village of Uig stands on Uig Bay, between lochs Reasort and Shawbost. Many of the inhabitants of the neighbouring hamlets and villages are employed in the fisheries. In the vicinity is Calarnish Druid temple, consisting of a circle of 12 stones, 7 feet in height, and a centre one of 13 feet, with three exterior lines of 3 stones each, and to the N. a double line of 6 each for the entrance. Traces of a nunnery exist at Melista, and of a circular fort at Carlaway, with a wall of 30 feet in height. This par. is in the presb. of Lewis and synod of Glenelg, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is about £158. The parish church was erected in 1829. There are two free churches, respectively situated at Uig and Carlaway. There are a parochial and five other schools.

UIG, a vil. in the par. of Snizort, island of Skye, Scotland, 5 miles from Kingsburgh, and 30 N.W. of Broadford, near Uig Loch.

UII. See KNOCK, Western Isles, coast of Scotland.

UIST, the central district of the Outer Hebrides, co. Inverness, Scotland. It is situated between the sound of Harris on the N., and the Barra group on the S., and is separated into North Uist and South Uist parishes. The presb. to which it gives name includes four quoad civilia parishes, and two quoad sacra parishes in the synod of Glenelg.

UIST, NORTH, a par. and island in co. Inverness, Scotland. It comprises the quoad sacra par. of Trumisgary, the vils. of Carinish and Lochmaddy, and the islets of Boreray, Orinsay, Balishear, Grimsay, Heisker, Illary, Kirkibbost, Morgay, Ronay, and Vallay. It extends in length about 17 miles from E. to W., with a breadth varying from 3½ to 13¼ miles. The parish is bounded on the N.W. by the Atlantic Ocean, on the N.E. by the Sound of Harris, on the S.E. by the Little Minch channel, and on the S.W. by a narrow and shallow strait, which is fordable at a place called the N. strand. The surface is flat in the interior, comprising a large extent of rock, bog, and barren waste, the highest point being Ben Croaghan, in the W., which rises 1,500 feet above sea-level. On the E., at lochs Maddy and Enort, are excellent harbours. The prevailing rocks are gneiss and slate, and bog iron is found 15 miles W. of Skye. At Lochmaddy is a packet station, and had formerly a considerable trade in kelp, &c. The par. is in the presb. of Uist and synod of Glenelg, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is about £158. The parish church was erected in 1764. At Trumisgarry are a Free church and a quoad sacra church with a parliamentary endowment. There are a parochial school, and several others.

UIST, SOUTH, a par. in co. Inverness, Scotland. It extends in length about 22 miles from N.N.W. to S.S.E., with an extreme breadth of about 7¾ miles, and is bounded on the N. by a strait which separates it from Benbecula, on the E. by the Little Minch, on the S. by a sound of from 5 to 8½ miles in breadth, and on the W. by the Atlantic Ocean. The surface is flat towards the W., and boggy in the centre, with hilly pasture in the E. The highest summit is Mount Hecla, which rises nearly 3,000 feet above sea-level, and is the place where Charles Edward, the Pretender, was secreted in 1746. The island contains a considerable number of lakes and islets. There is an abundance of fish and game. The parish of South Uist is about 7 miles S. of North Uist, and comprises the islands of Benbecula, Eriskay, and Flodda. In the vicinity are ruins of Danish forts and Druidical circles. This par. is in the presb. of Uist and synod of Glenelg, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is about £281. The parish church was erected in 1838. There are also two mission churches, named Boisdale and Eriska, two Free church preaching stations, besides other places of worship. There are a parochial school and several other schools.

ULCEBY, a par. in the Wold div. of the hund. of Calceworth, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3 miles S.W. of Alford railway station, its post town, and 5 N.E. of Spilsby. The village is situated on the road from Alford to Boston, near the Wolds. The par. contains the hmlt. of Fordington. The surface is undulating, and the upper lands command a view of the German Ocean. The living is a rect.,* with the cur. of Fordington annexed, in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £600. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was rebuilt in 1826. The parochial charities consist of some cottages. Captain Mansell is lord of the manor.

ULCEBY, a par. and post town in the N. div. of Yarborough wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 7 miles S.E. of Barton, and 8 N.E. of Glanford Brigg. It is a station on the Manchester and Lincoln railway, where the line to Great Grimsby turns off. The village is situated on the Wolds. The par. includes the hmlt. of Ulceby Skilter, at which place is the railway station. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £316, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has lately been restored. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum, which go to the National school. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. The Earl of Yarborough and another are joint lords of the manor.

ULCOMBE, a par. in the hund. of Eyhorne, lathe of Aylesford, co. Kent, 6 miles N.E. of Staplehurst, its post town, and 4 N. of the Headcorn railway station. The village is situated in the Weald. The soil is loamy, with a subsoil of gravel and Kentish ragstone. There are hop-grounds. The parish is intersected by several small streams that fall into the Medway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £379. The church, dedicated to All Saints, originally belonged to the priory of Christ Church, Canterbury, from which it was wrested in the Danish wars, but restored in 941; in 1220 it was made collegiate by Archbishop Langton, and afterwards became a rectory. The present building has recently been restored. The interior contains old brasses and monuments to the St. Leger and Stringer families, and a more recent one to the Marquess and Marchioness of Ormond. The register dates from 1560. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. There is a National school. The principal residence is Ulcombe Place, the ancient residence of the St. Legers.

ULDALE, a par. in the ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 9 miles S.W. of Wigton, its post town, and 6 S.W. of Hesket Newmarket. The village is situated close to Ireby, at the head of the small river Ellen, which, falling over rocky precipices, forms a cascade termed White Water Dash. The par. contains the hmlts. of Aughertree, Longlands, and Orthwaite. Coal, freestone, limestone, and peat abound. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £151. The church is on the road to Ireby, a short distance from the village. It was rebuilt in 1730. The parochial charities produce about £62 per annum, of which £47 go to Caldbeck's free grammar school. General Wyndham is lord of the manor. A sheep fair is held on the 29th August.

ULEY, a par. in the upper div. of Berkeley hund., co. Gloucester, 2¼ miles N.E. of Dursley, its post town, and 4 S. of the Frocester railway station. The village is situated among the hills, on the turnpike-road leading from Berkeley to Stroud and Cheltenham. There is an iron foundry. In the vicinity is Uley-Bury, a double-ditched camp of above 30 acres, where coins of Antonine and other Roman emperors have been discovered. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Gloucester, val. £157. The church, dedicated to St. Giles, contains several monuments. There are day and Sunday schools for both sexes. The parochial charities produce about £8 yearly. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Baptists have chapels. A feast is held on the first Sunday in September.

ULGHAM, a par. chplry. in the E. div. of Morpeth ward, co. Northumberland, 5½ miles N.E. of Morpeth, its post town, and 2 S. of the Widdrington railway station. It is situated on the Line Water, and is formed of the three tnshps. of Ulgham, Ulgham Grange, and Stobswood. In the centre of the village is the ancient market-cross. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect. of Morpeth, in the dioc. of Durham. The church, dedicated to St. John, has been recently re-erected, at the expense of the rector. There is an endowed parochial school. The Earl of Carlisle is lord of the manor.

ULLAPOOL, a quoad sacra par., cos. of Ross and Cromarty, Scotland. It extends in length about 25 miles, with an extreme breadth of 12 miles, and lies within the quoad civilia par. of Loch Broom, comprising all the portion of that parish N. of the greater Loch Broom. The seaport and fishing village of Ullapool is about 35 miles N.W. of Dingwall, and 30 N.E. of Poll Ewe. It is situated on the Ullapool river, which flows 9 miles W., through lochs Drowach and Auchall, to Ullapool harbour, in Loch Broom. The village was founded in 1788, under the auspices of the British Fishing Society, but the herrings having left this coast, the trade has greatly declined, and many of the houses are in a half-ruinous condition. It possesses a spacious harbour, and there is a quay for the use of vessels, some of which sail regularly to Portree and Stornoway, in Lewis. A justice of the peace court is held quarterly, for the recovery of small debts. The par. is in the presb. of Locharron, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is about £120. The church was erected in 1829. There is also a Free church. The parochial school is about 9 miles from the village.

ULLARD, a par. partly in the bar. of St. Mullins, co. Carlow, and partly in the bar. of Gowran, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles S.E. of Goresbridge. Borris is its post town. It lies on the river Barrow, and is traversed by the road from Carlow to New Ross. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Leighlin, val. £255, in the patron. of the bishop. The church has been rebuilt. There are a police station, remains of a castle and church, and an ancient burial-ground. The parish is united to Graigue in the Roman Catholic arrangement.

ULLENHALL, a chplry. in the par. of Wootton-Wawen, Henley div. of Barlichway hund., co. Warwick, 2 miles N.W. of Henley-in-Arden, its post town, and 12 from Birmingham. It includes the hmlts. of Botley and Apsley. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Wootton-Wawen, in the dioc. of Worcester. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £50 per annum, of which £2 go to a school.

ULLESKELF, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby-Wharfe, upper div. of Barkstone-Ash wap., West Riding co. York, 3½ miles S.E. of Tadcaster, and 1 mile from Kirkby. It is a station on the North-Eastern line of railway. The village is situated on the S. bank of the river Wharfe, over which the York and North Midland railway is carried by a viaduct. There is a boys' school, supported by Lord Londesborough. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

ULLESTHORPE, a hmlt. in the par. of Claybrooke, hund. of Guthlaxton, co. Leicester, 3 miles N.W. of Lutterworth. It is a station on the Midland railway. There are chapels for Baptists and Independents.

ULLESWATER, the largest of the lakes, after Windermere, in the lake district, on the borders of Westmoreland and Cumberland. It is situated at the river Eamont's head, at an elevation of 460 feet above sea-level. Its greatest length is 9 miles, from Dunmallet

Camp, near Pooley, to the village of Patterdale, at the head of the lake, and its extreme breadth is 2 miles, but the average does not exceed 1 mile, and in parts it is only a quarter of a mile broad. It varies in depth from 5 to 35 fathoms, and its shape is zigzag, the shores being rugged and wild. The echoes on its banks repeat five or six times, and its surface presents during the prevalence of southerly winds a spotted appearance called the "keld."

ULLEY, a tnshp. in the pars. of Treeton and Aston, S. div. of Strafforth wap., West Riding co. York, 4 miles S.E. of Rotherham, and 3 N.E. of Woodhouse railway station. To the S. is Turnshaw Quarry. The Old Hall is now a farmhouse. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £50. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. There are National schools for both sexes. Sir C. Wood is lord of the manor.

ULLID, a par. in the bar. of Iverk, co. Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Mullinavat. It is near the banks of the river Blackwater, and includes the wood of Ballinaboley. The living is a vic. united to Poleroan, joint val. £216, in the patron. of the bishop. It is united to Kilmacow in the Roman Catholic arrangement.

ULLINGSWICK, a par. in the hund. of Broxash, co. Hereford, 6 miles S.W. of Bromyard, its post town, and 5 E. of Dinmon railway station. The village is situated in a vale near the turnpike-road leading from Bromyard to Hereford. The land is partly in hop-ground. The living is a rect.,* with the cur. of Little Cowarne annexed, in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £369, in the patron. of the Bishop of Worcester. The church has a stained-glass memorial window. There is a school for both sexes.

ULLINISH, an island in the par. of Kilmuir, district of Skye, co. Inverness, Scotland. It is situated in Loch Bracadale, and has the ruins of a place of refuge erected by Hugh Macdonald in the reign of James VI.

ULLOCK, a tnshp. in the par. of Dean, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 5 miles S.W. of Cockermouth, and 1½ mile from Dean. It is a station on the Whitehaven, Cleator, and Egremont railway, and contains the hmlts. of Pardshaw and Dean Scales; at the former of which are a chapel for Wesleyans and a Friends' meeting-house.

ULNES-WALTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Croston, hund of Leyland, co. Lancaster, 5½ miles N.W. of Chorley, and 1 mile from Cocker-Bar station on the East Lancashire line of railway. The village is situated near the river Lostock. At a farm in the neighbourhood are traces of a religious house.

ULPHA, a chplry. in the par. of Millom, ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 9 miles S.E. of Ravenglass, and 3½ from Broughton-in-Furness railway station. It is situated on the river Dudden, near Hard Knot and Wrynose fells, where is a stone marking the boundaries of the cos. of Cumberland, Westmoreland, and Lancaster, from the latter of which it is divided by the ancient one-arched stone bridge, which here spans the river. In the chplry. are extensive blue slate quarries and copper mines; but the works of the latter have been some time suspended; iron and zinc are also known to exist. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture and the mines. The soil consists of peat, gravel, and red loam upon a subsoil of stone. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £49, in the patron. of the Vicar of Millom. The church, dedicated to St. John, contains an old stone font. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. A Sunday school is held at the church, and there is a parochial school for both sexes. The Baptists and Wesleyans have each a chapel, and the former a school. The Earl of Londsdale is lord of the manor. A fair for sheep and cattle is held on the last Friday in August.

ULPHA, a tnshp. in the par. of Beetham, ward of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 3 miles W. of Milnthorpe, and 11 S.W. of Kendal. It is situated on the northern side of the estuary of the river Kent, and is joined with Meathop.

ULRA, a stream of co. Mayo, Ireland, rises under Maumakeogh mountains, and falls into the sea near Ballycastle.

ULROME, a chplry. in the pars. of Skipsea and Barmston, N. div. of Holderness wap., East Riding co. York, 5½ miles S.E. of Burton Agnes railway station, and 7 S. of Bridlington. Hull is its post town. The village is situated near the coast of the North Sea. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, val. £74.

ULSHAW BRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of East Witton, wap. of West Hang, North Riding co. York, 2 miles S.E. of Middleham.

ULSTA, a vil. in the par. of Lerwick, Mainland, Shetland Isles, coast of Scotland, on Bessay Sound.

ULSTER, the most northerly of the four provinces into which Ireland is divided, lies between 53° 45′ and 55° 25′ N. lat., 50° 25′ and 8° 50′ W. long. Its greatest length from E. to W. is 130 miles, and from N. to S. 107 miles. Its area is 8,555 square miles, or 5,475,438 acres, of which, 3,407,539 are arable, 1,764,370 uncultivated, 79,783 under plantations, 8,790 in towns and villages, and 214,956 under water. Its population in 1841 was 2,386,313; in 1851, 2,011,791; and in 1861, 1,914,236. The number of houses in 1861 was 368,871, of which 351,654 were inhabited, 16,415 were uninhabited, and 802 were in course of construction. The Poor-law valuation in 1851 was £3,277,191, and the general valuation in 1861 was £3,830,040. The number of persons from this province who emigrated from Irish ports with the expressed intention of not returning, between May, 1851, and December, 1865, was 436,354, or 18 per cent. of the population at the former date.—Ulster was one of the five provinces or kingdoms into which Ireland was originally divided. It was the stronghold of the O'Neils, who had their chief seat in the county of Tyrone. Part of the province having been conquered by John De Courcy, one of the leaders in the Anglo-English invasion, he assumed the title of Earl of Ulster. Upon his death the title descended to the De Burgh and Mortimer families, and from the latter to the Dukes of York, who merged it in the crown of England. The estates were given to Hugh de Lacy. The O'Neils and other native chieftains having repeatedly broken out in opposition to English rule, and extensive forfeitures having taken place in Londonderry, Donegal, Tyrone, Fermanagh, Cavan, and Armagh, these counties were re-modelled, divided, and planted with English settlers, under the direction of James I. These settlers received the name of "undertakers," from their engagement to form settlements or colonies, and were partly selected from among the Irish, but the large majority were English and Scotch. Grants of considerable districts, especially in Londonderry, were made to the twelve chief companies in London, James considering them best suited for the establishment of a Protestant colony.

ULSTON, a vil. in the par. of Jedburgh, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 3 miles from Jedburgh.

ULTING, a par. in the hund. of Witham, co. Essex, 3 miles from Maldon, its post town, and 4 from Witham railway station. The village is situated on the river Chelmer. The soil is fertile and the land well cultivated. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £164, in the patron. of Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to All Saints. R. Nicholson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

ULVA, an island and quoad sacra par., one of the Hebrides, co. Argyleshire, Scotland. It is situated between Lochs Tua and Na-Keal, off the W. coast of Mull, and E. of Gometra island. It extends in length about 4½ miles from E. to W., with a breadth of about 2 miles. Its surface abounds in basaltic columnar rocks, some of which rise from 1,300 feet to 1,400 feet in altitude. The arable parts of the island are near the shore, while those more inland are devoted to pasture and sheep-walk. Here is the old seat of the Macquairies. The quoad sacra par. comprises, besides the island of Ulva, the islets of Gometra, Little Colonsay, and Staffa, with part of Mull, forming part of the quoad civilia pars.

of Kilninian and Kilmore. The church was built in 1827, and is a government one.

ULVERSCROFT, an ext. par. place in the hund. of West Goscote, co. Leicester, 8 miles N.W. of Leicester, and 6 S.W. of Mountsorrel. It is situated in Charnwood Forest. At a farm in the vicinity are the chapel and ruins of an Austin priory, founded by Robert Blanchmains, Earl of Leicester, in 1130, which at the Dissolution was valued at £101 3*s.* 10*d.*

ULVERSTONE, an extensive par. in the hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, in the co. Palatine of Lancaster, comprises the town and hmlts. of Ulverstone, which may be termed the capital of Low Furness, and contains the parish church and the district church of Holy Trinity, and the chplries. or churches of Egton-cum-Newlands, Lowick, Blewith, Torver, and Coniston; also the tnshps. of Osmotherly, abutting on the town, Mansriggs at a short distance, and Satterthwaite a little further from it. The parish is a very large one, extending from Coniston on the N. to that of Urswick on the S., measuring in its length about 17 miles. It is bounded on the E. by the beautiful shores of Coniston lake and the river Crake flowing out of it as far as the sands at Greenodd, a small port on the estuary; westward by the parishes of Pennington and Urswick. It is said to have derived its name from Ulpha, a Saxon lord, and in old records is written Olvestona. In 1127 it was conferred on the powerful abbey of Furness, in the neighbourhood, by Stephen, afterwards King of England. From the monastery it came into the possession of Gilbert, who had succeeded to the barony of Kendal. The whole parish contains a population of 11,440 souls, of which 7,392 live within the limits of the town and hamlets. It is one of the numerous polling places for the election of members of parliament in North Lancashire. Petty sessions are held here weekly every Thursday. In 1795 a canal was constructed by Rennie, in communication with the tidal waters flowing into the bay, but the railways N. and S. have rendered this in a great measure useless, more especially since the opening of Barrow as a large seaport. The parish church is dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin, and a district one to the Holy Trinity. Within the last few years the parish church has been wholly rebuilt, with the exception of the old tower and a Norman arch in the south-western end, at an outlay of many thousand pounds. The windows on the S. side, as well as those on the eastern and western ends, have been filled with stained glass, executed by various artists. The windows in the E. and W. ends are memorials of Mr. Benson Harrison, and the wife and daughter of Mr. Denny. The clerestory windows, 14 in number, are the gift of the Rev. Canon Gwillyn. Those on the S. side are in memory of the late Mr. Roper, the late Rev. W. H. Fell, Colonel and Mrs. Wage, Messrs. John and James Jackson of Ulverston, and to Colonel and Mrs. Braddyll, their sons and daughters; the windows on the E. end are placed there by the tradesmen of Ulverstone, to the memory of the same family; the other window in the W. is in testimony of the value in which the parishioners hold the Rev. Canon Gwillym, who has laboured among them for more than 33 years. The whole of the windows on the N. side are the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Schneider. The church, as restored, ranks among the finest in North Lancashire. It possesses a fine organ, having fifty stops and three rows of keys, contributed in a great measure by the present honorary organist, Mr. Daniel. The district church of Holy Trinity was erected about forty years since. Ulverstone is one of the polling places for North Lancashire, and the petty sessions are held in the magistrates' office, in Union-street, on Thursdays, and other days when found requisite for the administration of justice. There are two banks, that of Messrs. Wakefield, Crewdson, Kendal, and a branch of the Lancaster Banking Company, also a well-supported savings-bank. Some years back there was an extensive trade carried on in checks and linens, gingham and calico, and fine cotton twist was manufactured and sent to the E. during the cotton famine. This latter trade was wholly suspended, it has now been renewed with every prospect of success, and will employ when in full work nearly a hundred hands. There is also a manufactory lately established at Rosshead, an old established spade manufactory, and a tannery at Bragley Brook. At Barrow are extensive iron and steel works where railway wheels and bars are made. The town is lighted with gas and supplied with water from the high grounds. The houses are principally of stone, covered with a dash of lime and small gravel, and, though not regularly arranged, are well and substantially built. There is a National school for girls and boys, with certificated master, mistress, and pupil teachers, and an infant school, with certificated mistress and four pupil teachers, and Sunday schools. There is likewise an endowed grammar school. The Wesleyans, Independents, and Roman Catholics have schools and chapels, which are well attended. A meeting-house for Quakers is situated at Swarth Moor, the residence of their founder, George Fox. The rated value of the property in the township of Ulverstone is £24,424. On the E. side of the town rises the hill of Hoad, on the summit of which a tower was erected in 1850 by public subscription to perpetuate the successful career of the late Sir John Barrow, a native of Dragley Beck, a village near this town, who rose to the highest post in the admiralty by his zeal, ability, and perseverance. The Poor-law Union contains 27 parishes or places, and the house is situated in the Gill. The Duke of Buccleuch is lord of the manor. Fairs are held in Ulverstone on the Tuesday before Easter Sunday for cattle and the hiring of servants, on Whit-Thursday for pedlery and hiring of servants, on the first Thursday after the 23rd October for the same purposes, on the first Thursday after 11th November for hiring servants, on the Tuesday preceding the first full week in January for horses, and fortnightly, on every alternate Monday, for fat and lean cattle and sheep. Conishead Priory, erected nearly on the site of the old monastic building by the late Colonel Braddyll, is in the immediate neighbourhood of the town, and was for a long number of years the residence of that family, but has recently passed into the hands of Henry W. Askew, Esq. It is much admired for the beauty of its situation, and has been called the Mount Edgcombe of the North.

ULWELL, a hmlt. in the pars. of Swanage and Studland, co. Dorset, 4 miles S.E. of Corfe Castle.

UMGALL-GRANGE, a par. in the bar. of Upper Belfast, co. Antrim, Ireland, 5 miles N.W. of Belfast, on the road to Antrim.

UNCLEBY, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirby-under-Dale, East Riding co. York, 6 miles N. of Pocklington.

UNDERBARROW WITH BRADLEY FIELD, a tnshp. in the par. and ward of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 3 miles W. of Kendal, its post town, and 7 N. of Milnthorpe. The village is situated on the river Ure, which joins the Kent at Whitbarrow House. The tnshp. includes the hmlts. of Nook and Bradley Field. There are maltings and corn mills. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £96, in the patron. of the Vicar of Kendal. The parochial charities are small. There is a parochial school for both sexes. The Earl of Lonsdale is lord of the manor.

UNDERCLIFF, a rugged terrace, formed by successive landslips, facing the sea at the back of the Isle of Wight, co. Hants. It is about 6 miles long, from Dunnose Cliff to Black Gang Chine, by half a mile wide, being sheltered on the N. and N.E. by a range of cliffs which rise from 100 to 300 feet high. It includes Bonchurch, Ventnor, Steephill, St. Lawrence, Mirables, Knowle, and Niton, and commands a succession of fine sea views. It is a favourite resort for invalids on account of its mild climate.

UNDERCLIFFE, a hmlt. in the par. of Bradford, West Riding co. York.

UNDERDITCH, a hund., co. Wilts, contains Salisbury, and the pars. of Stratford-under-the-Castle, Wilsford, and Woodford, comprising an area of 6,180 acres.

UNDERMILBECK, a tnshp. in the par. of Windermere, ward of Kendal, co. Westmoreland, 8 miles N.W. of Kendal, and a quarter of a mile from Windermere. It is situated on Windermere lake, and includes the hmlts. of Bowness, Lindreth, Stores, and Winster. In the village is a bobbin manufactory.

UNDERSKIDDAW, a tnshp. in the par. of Crosthwaite, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 6 miles N.N.W. of Keswick, close to Skiddaw.

UNDERWOOD, a hmlt. in the par. of Selston, N. div. of Broxtow wap., co. Nottingham, 2 miles S.E. of Selston, and 10 N.W. of Nottingham.

UNDY, a par. in the lower div. of Caldicott hund., co. Monmouth, 7 miles S.W. of Chepstow, and the same distance from Caerleon, its post town. The village is situated near the coast of the Bristol Channel. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Llandaff, val. £183, in the patron. of the dean and chapter.

UNERIGG WITH ELLENBOROUGH, a tnshp. in the par. of Dearham, ward of Allerdale-below-Derwent, co. Cumberland, and 1½ mile S.E. of Maryport.

UNIONHALL, a post-office vil. in the bar. of East Carbery, co. Cork, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 5 miles E. of Skibbereen. It is situated on the W. shore of Glandore Harbour, and has a landing-stage. There are a police station, at which petty sessions are held fortnightly, a dispensary, and two or three schools. Corn is exported. The parish church is in the vicinity.

UNST, a par. in the Orkney and Shetland islands, Scotland. It comprises the most northerly of the Shetland Isles, including Unst, Uya, Balta, and many smaller islands, as the Skerries, off Skaw Head, and the Outstack rock, being the most northerly point of the British Isles. It is of an oblong form, extending from N.N.E. to S.S.W.; in length about 11½ miles, with a mean breadth of about 3½ miles. The coast is rocky, and is indented by bays and creeks. In the W. and N. the headlands sometimes reach an altitude of 400 feet. On an outlying conical rock 201 feet in height was erected in 1858 a tower 50 feet high, which serves as a lighthouse, 4 miles from Burra Fiord. The surface is moderately even, compared with that of the other Shetland islands, and abounds in hilly pasture. Its greatest altitude is at Saxaforth Hill, which rises 938 feet above sea-level, and in the Vallafield range, on the W., the cliffs rise 700 feet, but the spray sometimes dashes over them. The prevailing rocks are gneiss, serpentine, chlorite slate, and diallage rock. The principal minerals are amianthus, asbestos, hydrate of magnesia, and chromate of iron found in the serpentine. Seals and otters frequent the coast, which abounds with kittiwakes, the large skua gull, and other sea-fowl; shells, coral, sponges, and pebbles. The soil is fertile, and a considerable portion of land is under cultivation. There is an abundance of game, and the rare snowy owl and the swan are sometimes seen. Limestone is burnt and quarried for manure. There are traces of Scandinavian burghs and Picts' houses. The courts of Shetland were held at Crossfield prior to their removal to Tingwall. The principal seats are Belmont, in the vicinity of Uyla Sound, and Buness, near the head of Balta Sound. The village of Unst is about 2 miles N.E. of Yell. Many of its inhabitants are employed in the fisheries and in framework knitting. This par. is in the presb. of Burravoe, and synod of Shetland. The stipend of the minister is about £248. The church was erected in 1827. There are a Free church, Independent and Methodist chapels, and a parochial school and library.

UNSTONE, a tnshp. in the par. of Dronfield, hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 1 mile S.E. of Dronfield.

UNSWORTH, a chplry. in the par. of Oldham-cum-Prestwich, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 2½ miles S.E. of Bury, its post town, and 6 N.E. of Manchester, on the river Roach. The soil consists of clay and peat. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150, in the patron. of the Rector of Prestwich. The church, dedicated to St. George, was rebuilt in 1842, and has a stained E. window. There is an endowed National school, at which a Sunday-school is held. The Independents, Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. A fair is held on the last Monday in July.

UNTHANK, an ancient par., co. Elgin, Scotland, now joined to Duffus.

UNTHANK, a tnshp. in the par. of Skelton, ward of Leath, co. Cumberland, 5 miles N.W. of Penrith.

UNTHANK, a tnshp. in the par. of Alnham, N. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 6 miles N.W. of Rothbury.

UNTHANK, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Holwick, and par. of Ronald Kirk, North Riding co. York, 10 miles N.W. of Barnard Castle, and 11 N.E. of Brough, near High Force Fall, on the river Tees.

UNY LELANT. See LELANT, co. Cornwall.

UPAVON, a par. in the hund. of Swanborough, co. Wilts, 4 miles S.W. of Pewsey, and 9½ S.E. of Devizes. The village is situated on the road from Devizes to Andover, near the river Avon. It was formerly a market town, under a charter granted by Henry III. to Peter de Mauley, and in the reign of Edward I. Hugh Despencer procured a charter of free warren. Here was a Benedictine priory, a cell to Fontanelle Abbey, in France, founded in Henry I.'s time, and given at the suppression by Henry VI. to Ivychurch priory in exchange for lands in Clarendon Park. About a mile to the westward, on Upavon Hill, are remains of a small entrenched camp, with a prætorium, called Casterley, and intersected from N. to S. by a broad fosse. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £125. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was the priory church, rebuilt in the reign of Henry VII. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Particular Baptists have chapels. R. Alexander, Esq., is lord of the manor. A pleasure fair is held on the 29th October.

UPCHURCH, a par. in the hund. of Milton, lathe of Scray, co. Kent, 5 miles N.W. of Sittingbourne, its post town, and 5½ S.E. of Chatham. The village is situated near Otterham Creek, on the river Medway, where is a small quay. In the Salterns many relics of Roman antiquities have been discovered. Nearly half of the land is in salt marsh, and part of the remainder orchards and hop-grounds. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £243, in the patron. of All Souls' College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, was built in 1300. The register dates from 1632. There is a National school. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum.

UPEND, a hmlt. in the par. of Kirtling, co. Cambridge, 4 miles S.E. of Newmarket.

UP-EXE, a tythg. in the par. of Rewe, hund. of Hayridge, co. Devon, 6 miles S.W. of Cullompton.

UPHALL, a par. in the co. of Linlithgow, Scotland. It contains the vil. of its own name and that of Broxburn. It extends about 4 miles in length from E. to W., with an extreme breadth of about 3 miles, and is bounded on the E. and S. by Edinburghshire, and on other sides by the pars. of Livingston, Ecclesmachan, Linlithgow, and Kirkliston. The surface is undulating, its greatest altitude being about 400 feet above sea-level. The land is fertile and well cultivated. The substratum abounds in coal, sandstone, ironstone, lime, marl, chalk, brick, potter's clay, and fuller's earth. The parish is traversed by the Union canal, the centre road from Edinburgh to Glasgow, and by the Edinburgh and Bathgate railway, which has a station here. The village is about 5 miles S.E. of Linlithgow, 13 from Edinburgh, and about 1 mile from the Winchburgh station, on the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway. It is situated on a branch of the river Almond. This par. is in the presb. of Linlithgow and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The stipend of the minister is about £269. The church contains tombs of Lord Chancellor Erskine and his brother, and a bell bearing date 1441. There are besides a Free church and parochial and other schools. The principal seats are Kirkhill House, Amondell House, Houston House, and Middleton House.

UPHAM, a par. in the hunds. of Meon Stoke and Bishop's-Waltham, co. Hants, 3 miles N.W. of Bishop's-Waltham, its post town, and 6 E. of Bishopstoke. It includes the hmlt. of Woodcote. The Hambledon hounds meet in this parish. In the vicinity are some brick kilns. In 1849 tiles, pottery, and other antiquities, were discovered on the site of a Roman villa, 120 feet by 36. Part of the land is in common, downs, and woodland. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £420, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is old, with a tower covered with ivy. At Durley is a chapel-of-ease. There is a National school for both sexes. The Methodists have a chapel. The poet, Dr. E. Young, was born at the rectory in 1681, and died in 1765, and the mother of Bishop Heber was also born here. Belmore House is the principal residence.

UPHAM, UPPER and LOWER, tythgs. in the par. of Aldbourn, co. Wilts, 5 miles N.E. of Marlborough.

UPHAY, a tythg. in the par. of Axminster, co. Devon, near Axminster.

UPHILL, a par. in the hund. of Winterstoke, co. Somerset, 2 miles W. of Weston-super-Mare, its post town, and 7 N.W. of Axbridge. The village is situated on Uphill Bay, in the Bristol Channel, at the mouth of the river Axe. The soil consists of loam and clay, with a subsoil of clay. Building stone is quarried. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £300. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, was erected in 1843; a memorial window has been inserted to the poet Bowles. The old church stands on the summit of a hill a little to the S. of the village. There are a parochial school for both sexes, and a Sunday-school. Uphill House and Uphill Castle are the principal residences. T. T. Knyfton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

UPHOLLAND, a tnshp. in the par. of Wigan, hund. of West Derby, co. Lancaster, 4 miles S.W. of Wigan, its post town, and 1 mile N.W. of Orrell railway station. The village, which is situated on the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway, is well built and lighted with gas. In the vicinity are fire-brick works, slate and stone quarries, and collieries. The tnshp. includes the hmlts. Roby Mill, Hall Green, and Tontine. Here are traces of a college, or Benedictine priory, founded by Sir Robert de Holland in 1319. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £190, in the patron. of the Rector of Wigan. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas-à-Becket, once belonged to the priory. The charities produce about £110 per annum. There are two National schools and an endowed grammar school, at which a Sunday-school is held. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. Holland Grove is the principal residence. Lord Skelmersdale is lord of the manor. A cattle and horse fair is held on Easter Monday.

UPLAMOOR, a vil. in the par. of Neilston, co. Renfrew, Scotland, 3½ miles S. of Neilston.

UPLEADON, a par. in the hund. of Botloe, co. Gloucester, 3 miles N.E. of Newent, its post town, and 8 N.W. of Gloucester. The village is situated on the river Leadon. There are some flour mills on the site where extensive iron forges were formerly worked. The soil consists of red loam. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £80, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. There is a National school for both sexes. The Rev. R. Hodges, M.A., of Little Barrington, Oxfordshire, is lord of the manor.

UPLEADON, a hmlt. in the par. of Bosbury, co. Hereford, 4 miles N.W. of Ledbury.

UPLEATHAM, a par. in the E. div. of Langbaurgh lib., North Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Guisborough, its post town. The par. includes the hmlt. of Redcar. It was once held by Siward the Dane, and came to Hugh Lupus, and to the Bruces and Fauconbergs of Skelton. The soil is clayey, alternated with rich loam. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £80, in the patron. of the archbishop. The old church stands about a mile distance from the village, the churchyard being still used for interments. The new church, situated in the centre of the village, was built in 1836 at an expense of £450. There are schools for both sexes, and a Sunday-school, built by Lord Zetland and supported by Lady Zetland. The principal residence is the Hall, the seat of the Earl of Zetland, who is lord of the manor.

UPLOWMAN, a par. in the hund. of Tiverton, co. Devon, 4½ miles N.E. of Tiverton, its post town. The village is situate on the river Loman, near the Western canal. The par. includes the hmlt. of Whitnage. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £601. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The parochial charities produce about £10 per annum. There is a school for both sexes. The Rev. S. Pidsley, B.A., is lord of the manor.

UPLYME, a par. in the hund. of Axminster, co. Devon, 1 mile N.W. from Lyme Regis, its post town. The village is at the eastern extremity of the county. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of woollen cloth, and others in the stone quarries. A Roman bath and tesselated pavement have been discovered near the village. There are extensive beds of blue and white lias. The soil is of various qualities, with a subsoil of chalk and limestone. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £386. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, was restored about 1852. There is a National school for both sexes. The Baptists and Wesleyans have each a chapel. Rhode Hill House is the principal residence. The Hon. R. Talbot, Esq., is lord of the manor.

UPMINSTER, a par. in the hund. of Chafford, co. Essex, 3½ miles S.E. of Romford, its post town, and 6 N. of Purfleet steamboat pier. The village is situated near the Great Eastern railway, on the river Ingerburn. The par. includes the hmlts. of Corbetstye and Harton. The manor was held at the Conquest by the Engaines, from whom it came to the Esdailes, of Gaines Hall. There is a mineral spring. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £960. The church, dedicated to St. Laurence, has recently been rebuilt. The interior contains a brass of G. D'Ewes, bearing date 1591. The register dates from 1543. The church was once held by Dr. Derham, the author of "Physico-Theology." There are a National and a British school. The Independents have a chapel.

UP-NATELY. See NATELY, UP, co. Hants.

UPNOR CASTLE, a moated fortress on the river Medway, co. Kent, 2 miles N. of Chatham. It was built by Queen Elizabeth in 1560, and in 1677 successfully resisted the further progress of the Dutch squadron under De Ruyter, which had taken Sheerness. See CHATHAM.

UPOTTERY, or UP-OTTERY, a par. in the hund. of Axminster, co. Devon, 5 miles N.E. of Honiton, its post town, and 12 from Taunton. The village is situated on the river Otter. The par. includes the tythgs. of Rawridge and Smeatharp. There are some brick and tile kilns. The soil consists of clay, marl, and fox mole, with a subsoil of clay, marl, and gravel. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £392, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £28 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, at which a Sunday-school is also held. Viscount Sidmouth is lord of the manor. An annual cattle fair is held on the Wednesday before Lady-day.

UPPERBY, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Cuthbert, ward and co. of Cumberland, 2 miles S.E. of Carlisle, its post town, and 11 from Wigton. The village is situated on the river Petterill, and on the Lancaster railway. Damask and linen are made. In the vicinity is a flour mill, and alabaster is worked. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £140, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The site of the church was the gift of Mr. Fawcett.

UPPERCHURCH, a par. in Upper Kilnamanagh bar., co. Tipperary, Ireland. There are ruins of a castle and some cromlechs. At Knock-a-village is a mountain

1,216 feet high. The living is an impropriate rect. and vic.

UPPERCROSS, a bar., co. Dublin, prov. of Leinster, Ireland. It includes the pars. of Ballyfermot, Cruagh, Crumlin, Drunnagh, Palmerston, Tallaght, and parts of Clondalkin, Donnybrook, Esker, Rathfarnham, St. Catherine's, St. James', St. Nicholas Without, and St. Peter's.

UPPER-GREEN, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Allerton, par. of Bradford, West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.W. of Bradford. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the neighbouring collieries and factories.

UPPER-KEITH, a vil. in the par. of Humbie, co. Haddington, Scotland, 3¼ miles S. of Pencaitland, in the Vale of Keith Water.

UPPERTHIRD, a bar. in the northern div. of co. Waterford, prov. of Munster, Ireland, containing the pars. of Clonagam, Dysert, Fenoagh, Guilcogh, Kilmoleran, Mothel, Rathgormuck, and parts of Killaloan, Kilmeadan, Kilsheelan, Rossmire, and St. Mary's Clonmel, with the village of Portlaw, together comprising 77,089 acres.

UPPERTHORPE, a vil. in the par. of Haxey, co. Lincoln, 6 miles N.W. of Gainsborough, and 3 S.W. of Epworth.

UPPERTHORPE, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Nether Hallam, par. of Sheffield, West Riding co. York, 2 miles W. of Sheffield.

UPPERWHITTON, a vil. in the par. of Hownham, co. Roxburgh, Scotland, 3 miles S. of Morebattle.

UPPERWOODS, a bar. in Queen's County, Ireland, contains the par. of Offerlane, comprising 48,927 acres.

UPPINGHAM, a par., post and market town in the hund. of Martinsley, co. Rutland, 4 miles N.W. of Seaton railway station, and 6½ S. of Oakham. It is on the road from London to Melton Mowbray, and from Stamford to Leicester, and near the Midland railway. The river Welland passes about 3 miles from Uppingham, which was formerly held by the Montforts, Beauchamps, Cecils, Greys, and other eminent families, and was the place where the county standard was kept in Henry VII.'s time. The town consists chiefly of one long street, forming a square in the centre. The houses include several good shops and inns. It is well paved and lighted with gas, and the inhabitants are supplied with water from a spring in the upper part of the town. It contains two banks and the union poorhouse. Castle Hill is 1 mile distant on the Leicester road. In the neighbourhood are several limestone quarries. The ext. par. district of Beaumont Chase, once part of Leighfield forest, is about 1½ mile from the town, and is the property of the Earl of Gainsborough. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £661, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, contains tombs of the Faulkners, &c. The parochial charities produce about £53 per annum, exclusive of Archdeacon Johnson's College for decayed tradesmen. The Free Grammar School, where Archbishop Manners Sutton, and Lord Chancellor Manners, and other persons of distinction were educated, was founded in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, since which period the funds have considerably increased. There is a National school for both sexes. The Poor-law Union of Uppingham comprises 45 parishes. The Earl of Gainsborough is lord of the manor. Market day is on Wednesday. Fairs are held on 7th March and 7th July for cattle.

UPPINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Alderbury, hund. of Cawise, co. Montgomery, 8 miles N.E. of Welshpool.

UPPINGTON, a par. in the Wellington div. of South Bradford hund., co. Salop, 4 miles S.W. of Wellington, its post town, and 8 from Shrewsbury. The village is situated under the Wrekin. The living is a don. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £70. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. The Duke of Cleveland is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

UPSALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Kilvington, wap. of Birdforth, North Riding co. York, 5 miles N.E. of Thirsk railway station, and 8 S.E. of Northallerton. Here are traces of the Mowbrays' castle.

UPSALL, a tnshp. in the par. of Ormsby, E. div. of Langbaurgh lib., North Riding co. York, 3 miles W. of Guisborough. The Rev. W. W. Jackson is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

UPSETLINGTON, a vil. in the par. of Ladykirk, co. Berwick, Scotland, 5 miles N.E. of Coldstream, on the river Tweed, near Norham Castle.

UPSHIRE, a hmlt. in the par. of Waltham Abbey, hund. of Waltham, co. Essex. It is situated near Waltham Abbey, and is within the northern metropolitan postal district.

UPSLAND, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirklington, hund. of Hallikeld, North Riding co. York, 6 miles N. of Ripon. It is joined with Kirklington.

UPTON, a chplry. in the par. of Blewberry, hund. of Moreton, co. Berks, 7 miles from Wallington, its post town, and 3 from Didcote railway station. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Blewberry, in the dioc. of Oxford. The Wesleyans have a chapel. There are day and Sunday schools.

UPTON, or OVERCHURCH, a par. and tnshp. in the lower div. of Wirrall hund., co. Chester, 4 miles S.W. of Birkenhead, its post town, and 8 N.W. of Great Neston. The village was once a market town, and had two annual fairs for cattle. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £60. The church is designated Overchurch. There is a National school for both sexes, at which a Sunday-school is held. There is also a free lending library, supported by William Inman, Esq., of Upton Hall, who is lord of the manor. A court leet and baron is held annually.

UPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Mary-on-the-Hill, lower div. of Broxton hund., co. Chester, 2 miles N. of Chester, its post town, and 10 from Great Neston. It is situated on the Birkenhead, Lancashire, and Cheshire Junction railway, and contains the county pauper lunatic asylum, accommodating about 300 patients. In the neighbourhood are extensive nursery-grounds. The living is a cur. annexed to the rect. of St. Mary-on-the-Hill, in the dioc. of Chester. There is a National school for both sexes.

UPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Prestbury, hund. of Macclesfield, co. Chester, 1½ mile N.W. of Macclesfield.

UPTON, a par. in the hund. of Leightonstone, co. Huntingdon, 6 miles N.W. of Huntingdon, its post town. The village is situated near the Roman way Ermine Street, on the Great North road. From Standgate Hill a view is obtained over the Fens, with Peterborough minster and Wittleseymere in the distance. The living is a rect.,* with that of Coppingford consolidated, in the dioc. of Ely, val. £160. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, has an old font. J. W. Heathcote, Esq., is lord of the manor.

UPTON, a par. in the hund. of Well, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5 miles S.E. of Gainsborough, its post town, and 10 from Kirton-in-Lindsey. The par. includes the tnshp. of Koxby. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £131. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The register dates from 1567. The parochial charities produce about £41 per annum. There are a National school for both sexes, and a chapel for Wesleyans. Sir C. Anderson is lord of the manor.

UPTON, a par. in the hund. of Walsham, co. Norfolk, 2 miles N. of Acle, its post town, and 11 W. of Yarmouth. This parish, which is bounded on the N. by the navigable river Bure, is joined with Fishley for parochial purposes. Above half the land is marsh, part of which is cultivated. The living is a vic. annexed to that of Ranworth, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret. The register dates from 1556. There are National schools for both sexes, and a chapel for the Primitive Methodists. J. Waters, Esq., is lord of the manor.

UPTON, a par. in the hund. of Nobottle-Grove, co. Northampton, 2 miles W. of Northampton, its post town, and 10 from Daventry. The village is near the North-Western railway and the river Nene. There are some traces of a castle built by Simon de St. Liz. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect. of St. Peter, in the dioc. of Peterborough. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. Upton Hall, the seat of the Tramwells since the reign of Henry VII., contains a hall painted by Artan, and several eminent portraits. Captain L. S. Vernon is lord of the manor.

UPTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Headon, wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Nottingham, 3 miles N. of Tuxford. It was formerly a separate parish.

UPTON, a par. in the lib. of Southwell, wap. of Thurgarton, co. Nottingham, 2½ miles N.E. of Southwell, its post town, and 5½ W. of Newark. The village is situated near the high road from Southwell to Newark. There are brick and tile kilns, corn mills, and starch works. The Southwell union poorhouse is situated in this parish. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £91, in the patron. of the Chapter of Southwell. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. The parochial charities produce about £72 per annum, of which £5 go to the free school. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The principal residence is Upton Hall.

UPTON, a par. in the hund. of Williton, co. Somerset, 7 miles W. of Wiveliscombe, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Dulverton. The village is situate on the Watchet and Minehead road, and on the river Haddow, a tributary of the Exe. The soil is clayey, with a subsoil of shellet rock and clay. There are stone quarries. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £50. The church is dedicated to St. James. There are an infant school and a chapel for the Bible Christians. The Earl of Carnarvon is lord of the manor.

UPTON, a par. in the middle div. of Dudstone hund., co. Gloucester, 3 miles S.E. of Gloucester, its post town, and 8 from Cheltenham. The village is situated on the road between Gloucester and Painswick. At a little distance from the village, on Painswick Beacon, is a Roman camp. The soil is chiefly a strong clay, but in some parts it is sand, stone brash, or gravel. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £175, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, was restored in 1850, when the chancel was rebuilt. It contains a stone font and a monument to Sir T. Snell, bearing date 1754. The parochial charities produce about £18 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes, partly endowed by the late Dowager Viscountess Downe. The Wesleyans have a chapel. Bowden Hall, St. Bridge House, St. Leonard's Court, and Prinknash Park are the principal residences. This last was formerly the seat of the abbots of Gloucester, one of whom, Abbot Parker, here entertained Henry VIII. The chapel has been restored by James Acker, Esq.

UPTON, a chplry. in the par. of Castor, lib. of Peterborough, co. Northampton, 6 miles from Peterborough, its post town, and 2 N.E. from Wansford. The village is situated on the river Nene, which frequently inundates the adjoining meadows. There are stone quarries. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Peterborough, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, has been recently restored at the expense of the Bishop of Peterborough.

UPTON, a tythg. in the par. of Hawkesbury, upper div. of Grumbald's-Ash hund., co. Gloucester, 8 miles S.W. of Tetbury.

UPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Little Hereford, hund. of Wolphy, co. Hereford, 3 miles S.W. of Tenbury.

UPTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Bexley, lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, co. Kent, 2 miles S.W. of Dartford.

UPTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Worth, hund. of Eastry, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent.

UPTON, a hmlt. in the par. of St. Peter, hund. of Thanet, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, near Ramsgate.

UPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Sibson, hund. of Sparkenhoe, co. Leicester, 4 miles N.E. of Atherstone railway station, and 3½ S.W. of Market-Bosworth. There are remains of an ancient chapel. Colonel Wollaston and the Earl of Stamford and Warrington are lords of the manor.

UPTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Headon, wap. of Bassetlaw, co. Nottingham, half a mile S. of Headon, and 3 miles N.E. of Tuxford.

UPTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Nash, hund. of Narberth, co. Pembroke, 3 miles N.E. of Pembroke, its post town, and 8 from Tenby, on a creek of Milford Haven.

UPTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Skipsea, N. div. of Holderness wap., East Riding co. York, 9 miles S.E. of Great Driffield. It is joined with Dringhoe.

UPTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Badsworth, upper div. of Osgoldcross wap., West Riding co. York, 5½ miles S.E. of Pontefract, and 1½ mile from Badsworth. Many of the inhabitants of the village are employed in the lime-works.

UPTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Dinton, co. Bucks, 3 miles S.W. of Aylesbury.

UPTON, a hmlt. in the par. of South-Milton, co. Devon, 2 miles S.W. of Kingsbridge.

UPTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Osmington, co. Dorset, 5 miles S.E. of Dorchester.

UPTON, a vil. in the par. of West Ham, co. Essex, 6 miles N.E. of St. Paul's.

UPTON, a tythg. in the par. of Tetbury, co. Gloucester, 1 mile N.W. of Tetbury.

UPTON, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Widness, co. Lancaster, 4 miles S.W. of Prescott, near the Runcorn railway.

UPTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Long Sutton, co. Somerset, 2 miles S.W. of Somerton.

UPTON, a vil. in the par. of Haselor, co. Warwick, 2 miles N.E. of Alcester.

UPTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Ratley, co. Warwick, 4 miles S.E. of Kington. It is a meet for the Warwickshire hounds.

UPTON, a tythg. in the par. of East Knoyle, co. Wilts, 2 miles S.W. of Hindon.

UPTON BISHOP, a par. in the hund. of Greytree, co. Hereford, 4 miles N.E. of Ross, its post town, and 5½ W. of Newent. The village is situated on the Upper Road from Gloucester to Hereford. The soil consists of red loam, with a subsoil of clay and rock. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £500, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum, £5 of which go to a school. There are a National school and a free school. The Manor House is the principal residence. Mrs. Scudamore is lady of the manor.

UPTON CRESSETT, a par. in the Chelmarsh div. of Stottesden hund., co. Salop, 4½ miles S.W. of Bridgnorth, its post town. It is situated on the Ditton Priors and Bridgnorth turnpike road. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £125. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, contains a brass to the Cressett family, date 1640. The Hall, which was surrounded by a moat, was erected in 1580, and was the seat of the Cressetts. The Rev. H. T. Pelham is lord of the manor and owner of the soil.

UPTON-CUM-CHALVEY, a par. in the hund. of Stoke, co. Bucks, 2 miles N.E. from Windsor, and 1 mile from Slough station, on the Great Western railway. It is a populous parish, including the chplry. of Chalvey, and the greater part of the market town of Slough. The Eton union poorhouse is in this parish. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Chalvey annexed, in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £220, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church, an ancient structure, has a circular font on three arches, a monument to Herschel, the astronomer, and three brasses bearing date from 1599. The parochial charities produce about £34 per annum.

UPTON GRAY, a par. in the hund. of Bermondspit, Basingstoke div. of co. Hants, 3 miles S.W. of Odiham, its post town. The par. includes the tythg. of Hoddington. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £404, in the patron. of Queen's College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £26 per annum.

There is a National school for both sexes. Hoddington House is the principal residence. C. Beaufoy, Esq., is lord of the manor.

UPTON HELIONS, a par. in the hund. of West Budleigh, co. Devon, 3 miles from Crediton, its post town, and 9 from Exeter. The village is situated on the river Creedy. The soil consists of red loam and clay, with a subsoil of gravel. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £223. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. Mrs. Guerion is lady of the manor.

UPTON LOVELL, a par. in the hund. of Heytesbury, co. Wilts, 5½ miles S.E. of Warminster, and 1½ mile S.E. of Heytesbury. The village is situated on the banks of the river Wiley. There is a woollen mill for the manufacture of fine broadcloth, employing a large number of hands of this and the adjoining villages. On Upton-Lovell Down is Knock Castle, a Roman encampment, with Bowls-Barrow near it. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £325, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church has a monument and effigy to the first Lord Lovell. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum, which go to Crouch's school.

UPTON MAGNA, a par. in the Wellington div. of South Bradford hund., co. Salop, 5 miles E. of Shrewsbury, its post town. It has stations on the Shrewsbury section of the Great Western and the Shropshire Union branch of the London and North-Western railways. The village is situated near the Shrewsbury canal and river Severn. Coal and limestone are found and worked. A hill at one end of the parish is occupied by rabbit warren and sheepwalks. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £546. The church, dedicated to St. John or St. Lucia, is an ancient edifice, containing an old pulpit of carved oak, and to the reading-desk is chained Bishop Jewel's "Defence of the Apology," &c. There is also the district church of Withington, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £190. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum.

UPTON NOBLE, a par. in the hund. of Bruton, co. Somerset, 3 miles N.E. of Bruton, its post town, and 7 from Frome. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the rect. of Batcombe, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells. There is a chapel for Wesleyans. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum.

UPTON-ON-SEVERN, a par., post and market town in the lower div. of Pershore hund., co. Worcester, 10 miles S. of Worcester, and 5 W. of Defford railway station. It is a station on the Tewkesbury and Malvern railway. It is situated on the river Severn, which is here navigable for vessels of 100 tons burden, and is crossed by a bridge erected in 1853 in place of an older one destroyed by a flood in 1852. It is a polling place for the county elections, and is supposed to occupy the site of the Roman station Upocessa, mentioned by Ravennas. Petty sessions are held at the police court once a fortnight. A manorial court is held occasionally. In 1651, prior to the battle of Worcester, Upton was occupied by Cromwell's troops. The streets are lighted with gas. The principal public buildings are a bank, town-hall, containing market house with assembly-rooms, and union poorhouse. A burial-ground, with chapels, lodge, &c., was opened in 1866, and is managed by a burial board. The Poor-law Union comprises 22 parishes and places. The surrounding country is well cultivated. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £917, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, was rebuilt in 1758. The register dates from 1546. A grant of lands by Edward Hall produces upwards of £100 per annum, and is apportioned in three equal parts, to the repair of the church, the repair of the bridge, and to other necessary purposes in the parish. There are a National school for both sexes, and an infant school. The Baptists and Roman Catholics have each a chapel. Ham Court is the principal residence. Dr. J. Dee, the astrologer, was rector here for a time, and died in 1608. J. J. Martin, Esq., is lord of the manor. Market day is on Thursday. Fairs are held on Mid-Lent Thursday, Whit Thursday, 10th July, and the Thursday before 2nd October.

UPTON PARVA, or UPTON-WATERS, a par. in the Wellington div. of South Bradford hund., co. Salop, 5 miles N. of Wellington, its post town, and the same distance from Admaston railway station. The village is situated on the river Tern, and on the road from Wellington to Whitchurch and Market Drayton. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £204, in the patron. of the lord chancellor. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. The Duke of Sutherland is lord of the manor.

UPTON PYNE, a par. in the hund. of Wonford, co. Devon, 3½ miles N.W. of Exeter, its post town. It is a station on the Great Western railway. The village is situated on the river Exe and the Thorwerton road. There are leather mills, and manganese, ironstone, and basalt are found. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £482. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, contains two memorial windows of Sir J. Northcote and his eldest son, an altar-piece representing the Last Supper, and monument of a crusader. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. There are a National school for both sexes and a Sunday-school. The Pynes is the principal residence. Sir J. Northcote is lord of the manor. A fair occurs on a revel in September every year.

UPTON SCUDAMORE, a par. in the hund. of Warminster, co. Wilts, 2 miles N. of Warminster, its post town, and 2½ S.W. of Westbury railway station. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £456, in the patron. of Queen's College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin, was rebuilt in 1859. The living was once held by T. Owen, the Oriental scholar. The Scudamores, who gave their name to the parish, were its owners from the Conquest to the time of Edward III. There is a National school.

UPTON SNODSBURY, a par. in the upper div. of Pershore hund., co. Worcester, 6 miles E. of Worcester, its post town, 5 N. of Pershore, and 2½ E. of Spetchley railway station. The village is situated on the road from Worcester to Inkberrow. The Worcestershire hounds meet in this parish, which includes the hmlt. of Cawsdon. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £95. The church is dedicated to St. Kenelm. The parochial charities produce about £23 per annum. Lord Coventry is lord of the manor.

UPTON-WARREN, a par. in the upper div. of Halfshire hund., co. Worcester, 2½ miles S.W. of Bromsgrove, its post town, and 3¼ N.E. of Droitwich. The village is situated on Upton Brock, near the Birmingham and Gloucester canal and railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £749. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, was partly rebuilt in 1793. The parochial charities produce about £29 per annum, of which £11 go to Lacy's school.

UPTON WATERS. See UPTON PARVA, co. Salop.

UPTON WITH SIGNETT, a hmlt. in the par. of Burford, hund. of Bampton, co. Oxford, 1 mile N.W. of Burford, on the river Windrush, near Upton Downs.

UPWAY, a par. in the Dorchester div. of co. Dorset, 4 miles S.W. of Dorchester, its post town, and 4 N.W. of Weymouth. The par. includes the lib. of Wabyhouse and the tythgs. of Elwell and Scottingway. The village is situated on the Downs near Windbatch Hill, at the foot of which rises a spring, the source of the river Wye. There are quarries of excellent building stone. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £269, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, has a painted E. window, and has been recently repaired. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a National school for both sexes. The Independents have a chapel. H. C. Goodden, Esq., is lord of the manor.

UPWELL, a par. partly in the hund. of Wisbeach, Isle of Ely, co. Cambridge, and partly in that of Clackclose, co. Norfolk, 6½ miles S.E. of Wisbeach, its post town, and 95 from London. The village, which is extensive, was formerly a market town, and in 1861 had a population of 4,783. It is intersected by the river Nene, the houses extending along its banks nearly to Outwell and Welney. The par. includes the chplry. of Welney, which lies in the cultivated fens of the Great Bedford level. In this part of the parish was a Gilbertine priory, founded in the reign of King John as a cell to the priory of Sempringham, and which at the Dissolution was valued at £13 6s. 1d. There was another small religious house at Mirmound, founded in the reign of Richard I. The land has been greatly improved within the present century, and fiax grounds are abundant. In 1826 a suspension bridge was erected over the Hundred Foot river. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of Welney annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £3,058. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. It contains two brasses of priests, bearing date from 1435, several monuments, an E. window, and carved pulpit. The church stands in the co. of Norfolk. The parochial charities produce about £346 per annum, which go towards the repair of the church, the support of the poor, &c. There are a free school for both sexes, and chapels for the Wesleyans, Baptists, and Primitive Methodists. C. W. Townsend is lord of the manor and principal landowner. A pleafair is held on 30th June.

UPWOOD, a par. in the hund. of Hurstingstone, co. Huntingdon, 2½ miles S.W. of Ramsey. Bury is its post town. The village is a place of great antiquity, and went by the name of Upwode at the time of the Conquest, at which time it was given by Ailwin the Saxon to Ramsey Abbey. The manor afterwards came to the Cromwells, Pheasants, &c. The land is fenny, and partly in common. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to that of Great Raveley, in the dioc. of Ely, val. £78. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has recently been restored. It contains several old monuments. The parochial charities produce about £12 per annum. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. R. H. Hussey, Esq., is lord of the manor.

URCHFONT, a par. in the hund. of Swansborough, co. Wilts, 5 miles S.E. of Devizes, its post town, and 3 N.E. of Market Lavington. The village is situated within a quarter of a mile from the road between Salisbury and Devizes. The par. includes the tythgs. of Eastcott and Wedhampton, and the chplry. of Wichfont, so called from a fountain or intermitting spring. This parish was once the property of Sir William Pynsent, Bart., who left it by will to the great Earl of Chatham, in testimony of respect for his character. The living is a vic.* with the cur. of Stert annexed, in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £370, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, was restored in 1840. The register dates from Henry VIII.'s time. The Independents have a chapel. There are National and infant schools. The graves in a corn field at Wickham's Green are said to be those of persons who died during the great plague. S. Watson Taylor, Esq., is lord of the manor.

URE or YORE RIVER. See OUSE.

UREGARE, a par. in the bars. of Coshma and Smallcounty, co. Limerick, Ireland, 2 miles S.E. of Bruff. It is situated on the river Morning Star. It formerly belonged to the De Lacys, whose ancient seat, Ballygrenane, is now in ruins. The property now belongs to Lord Carbury, of Bulgadine Hall, also in ruins. The chief seats are Uregare House and Greenpark. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Limerick, val. £100. The church is in ruins. There are two Roman Catholic chapels and several schools.

URGASHAY, a hmlt. in the par. of Camel, co. Somerset, 3 miles N.E. of Ilchester.

URGLIN, a par. in the bar. and co. of Carlow, Ireland, 3 miles N.E. of Carlow. It has the ruins of Graigue and another ancient castle. The principal seats are Rutland House and Johnstown. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ossory, Ferns, and Leighlin, val. with two others, £500, in the patron. of the bishop. The church has been rebuilt. There are two Roman Catholic chapels and several schools.

URLINGFORD, a par., post and market town in the bar. and co. of Kilkenny, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 14 miles N.W. of Kilkenny, and 81 from Dublin. It is traversed by the road from Kilkenny to Thurles and from Dublin to Cork. The town consists of one main street. It has a police station, where petty sessions are held, a dispensary, and bridewell. There is a small manufacture of worsted and flannel fabrics. The living is a rect. and vic. in the dioc. of Ossory, val. £112, in the patron. of the crown. The parish gives name to a Roman Catholic district. There are two National schools. There are ruins of a church, an old burial-place, a cromlech, ruined castle, and rath. Marymount is the principal seat. Fairs are held on 25th July, 15th August, 13th September, 12th October, 14th November, and 3rd and 22nd December.

URMSTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Flixton, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 6 miles S.W. of Manchester. The village is situated on the river Mersey. The soil is sandy, with a subsoil of sand and gravel. There are an infant school and a chapel for the Wesleyans. G. J. M. Ridehalgh, Esq., is lord of the manor.

URNEY, a par. in the bars. of Lower and Upper Loughtee, containing the town of Cavan. It lies near Lough Oughter, and is crossed by the road from Dublin to Enniskillen. The surface is generally under cultivation. The living is a vic., val. with Annagelliff £451. The church, situated at Cavan, was renovated partly by means of a loan from the late Board of First Fruits in 1816. The parish gives name to a Roman Catholic union, and contains two chapels, meeting-houses for Wesleyans and Presbyterians, and several public and private schools. Farnham is the seat of Lord Farnham. There are traces of a monastic building.

URNEY, a par. partly in the bar. of Raphoe, co. Donegal, and partly in the bar. of Slabane, co. Tyrone, prov. of Ulster, Ireland, containing part of Strabane, its post town, and the vil. of Clady. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Derry, val. £894, in the patron. of the bishop. The church was erected in 1734. The parish gives name to a Roman Catholic union; there are also a Presbyterian meeting-house and several schools. Urney Park, Urney House, and Castletown are the principal seats. The manufacture of linen is carried on.

URPETH, a tnshp. in the par. of Chester-le-Street, middle div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 8 miles N.W. of Durham. It is situated near Urpeth Burn, which rises under Pontop Pike, and flows about 12 miles E. and N. to the Tyne, near Red Heugh. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the collieries. Urpeth Lodge is the principal residence.

URQUHART, a par. in co. Elgin, Scotland, including a vil. of the same name. It extends in length about 4 miles, by about 3 in breadth, and is bounded by Speymouth and St. Andrews Lhanbryd. The coast is flat and sandy. The surface, which is undulating and well wooded, was formerly watered by the Loch of Cotts, which is now entirely drained. Water is scarce, although there are several springs, including the well of Finfan and the abbey well, once belonging to a Benedictine monastery, founded in 1124 by David I. as a cell to Dunfermline Abbey. The parish is traversed by the road from Elgin to Fochabers. The village is about 4 miles E. of Elgin, and is situated between the rivers Spey and Lossie, on the coast. This par. is in the presb. of Elgin and synod of Moray. The stipend of the minister is about £270. There are a Free church and a parochial school.

URQUHART and GLENMORRISTON, an united par. in co. Inverness, Scotland. It comprises the vils. of Milntown and East and West Lewiston. It extends in length about 30 miles from E. to W., with a breadth of from 8 to 12 miles; and is bounded on the N. by Kiltarlity, Kirkhill, and Inverness; on the E. by Loch Ness; on the S. by Boleskin and Kilmonivaig; on the S.W. by Ross-shire; and on the W. and N.W. by Kilmorack and Kiltarlity. This district consists of two glens which extend nearly parallel to each other, but are about 8 miles apart. Between the glens is a range of hills, the highest summit, Mealfourvonie, being 2,730 feet, is watered by the rivers, or mountain streams, Coiltie, Enneric, Morriston, and Loch Meikle. Glen Urquhart, which is about 10 miles in length, is fertile and wooded, and considered one of the finest glens in Scotland. The rivulet Enneric, which traverses the glen, forms two cascades at Morrel and Divach, the latter being a fall of 90 feet. The prevailing rocks are porphyritic granite, gneiss, serpentine, limestone, conglomerate, and Old Red sandstone. Game is abundant, especially in Glenmorriston. In the vicinity is the grave of Moni Mor, many cairns, Druid circles, ruined chapels, a fort, and the house of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem. The parish is traversed by excellent roads up the two chief glens towards Kyle-Rhea and the ferry to Skye, and by two cross roads connecting the glens along Loch Ness. This par. is in the presb. of Abertarf and synod of Glenelg. The stipend of the minister is about £262. The parish church, situated in Glen Urquhart, was erected about 1840; and at Meikle is a sub-parochial church, built in 1829. There is a Free church for Urquhart, and one for Glenmorriston and Fort-Augustus. There are chapels respectively at Invermoriston and Toraghoil, and an Episcopalian chapel at Corriemony. There are three parochial schools, situated at Glen Urquhart, Meikle, and Glenmorriston. The principal seats are Balmacaan, Glenmorriston, and Corriemony. A fair is held on the Tuesday before Beauly in November.

URQUHART and LOGIE-WESTER, a par. in the district of Wester Ross, cos. Ross and Cromarty, Scotland. It includes the detached district of Nairnshire, designated Ferintosh, and the vils. of Conanbridge and Culbockie. It extends in length about 9 miles, by a breadth of about 3½ miles, and resembles in form a rectangle, extending from N.N.E. to S.S.W. It is bounded on the N.W. by the river Conan and the Cromarty Frith, which separates it from Urray, Fodderty, Dingwall, and Kilteam. The surface is an inclined plane, gradually declining towards the Frith and the Conan. The land is fertile and well wooded. The prevailing rock is Old Red sandstone. On the moors stone coffins have been discovered. The parish is traversed by the great N. road across the S.W. corner, and by two roads across the Mullbuy towards Knockbain and Fortrose. This par. is in the presb. of Dingwall and synod of Ross. The stipend of the minister is about £201. The parish church was erected in 1795. There are a Free church, a parochial school, and two non-parochial schools. The principal seats are Ferintosh, Conanside, and Findon.

URR, a par. in co. Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 5 miles N.E. of Castle Douglas. It comprises the vils. of Dalbeattie, Springholm and Haugh of Urr, Hardgate, and part of the vil. of Crocketford. It extends in length about 16 miles, with an extreme breadth of 4 miles, but its mean breadth is little over a mile. It is bounded on the E. by the pars. of Kirkpatrick-Irongay, Lochrutton, Kirkgungeon, and Colvend, and on the W. by the pars. of Buittle, Crossmichael, and Kirkpatrick in Durham. The surface is moderately even, the greatest altitude being at Larg-Hill, which rises 600 feet above sea-level. The soil is fertile, upon a subsoil of granite rock, hard limestone, iron-ore, and shell marl, the first often protruding above the surface. It is watered by the Urr river, which rises in Urr Loch, on the borders of Dumfriesshire, and is traversed by the roads from Dumfries to Portpatrick and Kirkcudbright, and by the railway from Dumfries to Castle Douglas, which has a station at Dalbeattie. On the banks of the river are paper, corn, flax, and saw mills. This par. is in the presb. and synod of Dumfries, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is about £255. The parish church, erected in 1815, stands near the Moot Hill of Urr. At Dalbeattie, in this parish, are an Established church, a Roman Catholic chapel, dedicated to St. Peter, and a Free church; also an United Presbyterian church at Springholm. There are three parochial schools, situated in the centre of the parish, at Dalbeattie, and at Milton. Near Urr-Loch are remains of the Seatons' Castle, now the haunt of sea-fowl, and on the hills are traces of an ancient fortification.

URRA, a hmlt. in the chplry. of Bilsdale Midcable, par. of Helmsley, North Riding co. York, 5½ miles S.E. of Stokesley, on the river Rye, between Bolton Head and Wainstone hills.

URRAY, a par. in the district of Wester Ross, cos. Ross and Cromarty, Scotland. It comprises the quoad sacra pars. of Carnoch and Kinlochlychart, with the ancient par. of Kilchrist. It extends in length about 7 miles from N. to S., with a mean breadth of 3 miles, and is bounded on the W. and N. by Contin, on the E. by Urquhart and Killearnan, and on the S. by Kirkhill and Kilmorack. The surface is moderately even, and has a diversified aspect. The soil is of various qualities, but productive. In the vicinity are the ruins of Fairburn Tower, and pillar stones 5 feet in height near Beauly. The village of Urray is about 6 miles N.W. of Beauly, and has facilities for traffic both by land and water, owing to its proximity to Dingwall, Beauly, and Inverness. Salmon are caught in the rivers Orrin and Conan, and on the bank of the latter is a sulphurous spring. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the Ord distillery. This par. is in the presb. of Dingwall and synod of Ross. The stipend of the minister is about £252. The parish church is situated on the banks of the Orrin, near its confluence with the Conan. There are a Free church, a parochial school, and other schools. The principal seats are Brahan Castle, Highfield House, Ord House, Muirton House, and Tarradale.

URRIN, a stream, co. Wexford, Ireland, rises under Mount Leinster, and joins the Slaney near Enniscorthy.

URSWICK, a par. in the hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 3 miles S.W. of Ulverstone, its post town, and the same distance from Dalton. The parish is of large extent, and is divided into four townships—Much Urswick, Little Urswick, Bardsea, and Adgarley with Stainton. The village consists of the two hamlets of Great and Little Urswick. In the vicinity are traces of camps and forts, near which several Roman coins and a brass tripod were discovered. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £250, in the patron. of the landowners. The church has been recently restored. There is also a district church at Bardsea, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £100. The parochial charities produce about £38 per annum, of which £15 go to Marshall's free grammar school.

USAN, a vil. in the par. of Craig, co. Forfar, Scotland, 3 miles S.E. of Montrose. It is situated on the coast, and is a coast-guard station.

USE, a mountainous ridge, co. Cork, Ireland, attains an elevation of 1,329 feet above sea-level, and gives rise to the river Allo.

USHAW, a hmlt. in the par. of Lanchester, W. div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 4 miles W. of Durham. It is the site of a Roman Catholic college, established here in 1808, on the dissolution of the English college of Douay in French Flanders, in 1794. The building is adapted for the reception of 150 students, and contains a library of upwards of 12,000 volumes, with many illuminated MSS. Dr. Lingard and the late Cardinal Wiseman were educated in this college.

USHEVAGH, a sea loch, on the E. side of Benbecula, Western Islands, coast of Scotland.

USHLAWRCOED, a hmlt. in the par. of Bedwelty, lower div. of Wentlooge hund., co. Monmouth, 7 miles W. of Pontypool, and 8 from Tredegar.

USK, a par. in the bar. of East Narragh, co. Kildare, prov. of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles S. of Kilcullen. The surface is traversed by the road from Kilcullen to Baltinglass. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Dublin, val. with Dunlavin, £447, in the patron. of the archbishop. It is united to Narraghmore in the Roman Catholic division. There are ruins of a castle and a burial-place. Some fighting occurred here in 1798. Fairs are held on the Thursday before 12th May, and the first Thursday and Friday in October.

USK, a hund. in two divs., upper and lower, co. Monmouth; the upper div. contains the pars. of Gwernesney, Kemeys Commander and Inferior, Llangeview, Llangwm, Llanllowell, Llantrissent, Tredunnock, and Trostrey; the lower div. contains the pars. of Llabadock, Llandegveth, Llangattock, Llangibby, Llanhennock, Llanthewy-Vach, Llanfihangel-Llantarnam, and Ll. Ponte-y-Moile, Llanvrechva, Monkswood, Panteague, with the market towns of Caerleon and Usk, comprising together an area of 46,060 acres.

USK, a par., post and market town in the above hunds., co. Monmouth, 12 miles S.W. of Monmouth, and 10 from Newport. It is a station on the Monmouth branch of the Newport and Hereford (Great Western) line. The town is beautifully situated on the river of its own name, which is here crossed by a fine and very substantial bridge of five arches, erected by William Edwards, the architect of the celebrated Pont-y-pridd. Usk is a sessions and polling town, and jointly with Monmouth and Newport sends a member to parliament. It was the Brynbega of the ancient Britons, and the Burrium of the Romans, on the Via Julia. On an abrupt eminence overlooking the town are the ruins of the once magnificent castle, including the round tower, keep, and an extensive courtyard, surrounded with vestiges of rooms and other buildings. Its history is remarkable as the birth-place of kings. It formerly belonged to the family of Richard de Clare, who came over with William the Conqueror. It was possessed by the earls of Gloucester and Hereford till 1314, when by marriage it was claimed by the Earl of Ulster, through whose lady it descended to Lionel Duke of Clarence, the son of Edward III., through whom it was inherited by Mortimer Earl of March, marshal of England, and subsequently by his nephew, Richard Duke of York, with whom it was a favourite residence, and the birth-place of his sons Edward IV. and Richard III. At Richard's death it was given by Henry VII. to his son Arthur Prince of Wales, and in 1544 it became part of the dower of Queen Katherine Parr. On her death Edward VI. granted it to the Earl of Pembroke. It continued in this family till the 7th earl, when it devolved to his daughter, by whose son it was sold and again disposed of to Lord Clive, from whom it was purchased by the 5th Duke of Beaufort, and is now the property of the present duke. In the civil war of Charles I. it was taken by the Roundheads, and was finally dismantled by order of parliament. The earls of Clare had also founded a Benedictine priory near the church, the remains of which have undergone various transformations—the most recent of which has resulted in a handsome mansion with spacious rooms, just constructed, and as nearly as possible a restoration of that raised from the old materials on the site in the Tudor period. The fine archway of solid masonry still remains entire. There were other monastic houses in the town connected with the Black Friars and the Grey Friars; of the former some traces remain, and of the latter an old Norman gateway and part of a chapel.—The principal charity is that of Roger Edwards, founded 1621, with an income at present of above £500 derived from lands. By a recent scheme the trustees, who are fourteen in number, are directed to apply the funds to the support of almshouses with chapel and chaplain; the remainder for educational purposes in the town of Usk and some neighbouring parishes. A grammar-school for boarders and day scholars is maintained by it, where a liberal education is afforded to the inhabitants for a small quarterly payment. The elementary and infant schools are also assisted by the charity, and a country school is contemplated for some neighbouring parishes.—The town of Usk consists of several streets, the chief of which are arranged in the form of the ancient Roman square, the centre being occupied by gardens, the margin with dwellings. The principal street (Bridge-street) contains several handsome shops, and is well paved and lit with gas, while the central position of the town makes it an important and often busy thoroughfare as a county road. Usk is the head-quarters of the county constabulary, where most of the police are drilled, and the chief constable holds his office. A very extensive and well ordered model prison, on the separate system, stands just outside the town; it has already undergone one enlargement since its construction, and, as soon the Monmouth gaol is to be abolished, it will undergo yet further enlargement. A small but effective reformatory school also stands a few miles from Usk, for convicted boys.. The quarter-sessions for the shire, and the petty sessions for the division are held in the town-hall, which is a handsome and commodious structure, well lighted and aired, standing over the market house, and a well-arranged lock-up, with rooms for the reception of prisoners during trial. Usk is a corporate town, governed nominally by a portreeve, who possesses magisterial authority, but who generally devolves it on the county magistrates; there are also a recorder, aldermen, and burgesses. The church is a handsome structure; it was originally conventual, but the whole of the chancel which belonged to the priory has been destroyed, and a nominal chancel constructed under the tower, which is of massive work, and contains six good bells. The church is noted for its screen, which is of handsome canopy work, and stretches across the whole church from N. to S. The churchyard is adorned with several modern monuments and a fine vista of lime and other trees and fancy shrubs. Beneath the above-named screen is an ancient monumental brass, with an inscription, the interpretation of which has puzzled all antiquaries. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Llandaff, in the gift of W. A. William, Esq., of Llangilly Castle, val. £280. Besides the parish church there is a chapel-of-ease in the hamlet of Glascoed. The Independents, Wesleyans, Baptists, and Roman Catholics have each a chapel. There are several handsome dwellings here, of which the principal are Tybreith, Porth-y-Carne, Ty-Newydd House, &c.—The Pont-y-pwl ware once formed a chief object of manufacture, but has now entirely ceased. The great attraction to the town is the salmon fishery—the river being strictly preserved, and the fish abundant and of fine quality. The population of the parish in 1861 was 2,112, and of the borough 1,545. In the vicinity are numerous camps and ancient fortifications, the principal of which are Craig-y-Gaereyd, about 2 miles to the N.W.; Court-y-Gaer, 1,900 feet in diameter. The hamlets of the parish are Glascoed and Gwchelog, the former of which is isolated from the town of Usk. Friday is the market day, and a cattle-market is held on the first Monday in every month. The fairs are on the 20th April, Monday after Trinity Sunday, 29th October, and Shenkin Jones' fair for beef on the Monday before Christmas Day. The principal inns are, the "Three Salmons Hotel" and the "King's Head." The access by road and rail is excellent, and the proximity of Raglan Castle, the Crumlin Bridge, Tintern Abbey, &c., makes Usk an additional attraction to visitors.

USK, The, a river of South Wales, anciently called Isca, rises in a small lake on the northern side of the Bannan-Sir-Gaer, on the borders of cos. Carmarthen and Brecon, and flowing through Brecon and Monmouthshire for 60 miles, receives the tributary streams of the Honddu, Tarrell, Grwyne, Olway, Afon Llwyd, and Ebwy, and falls into the sea a little below Newport. Its entrance is marked by a lighthouse on the western shore, put up in 1829, and visible for 10 miles. It is navigable to Tredunnock, and is celebrated for its salmon and trout.

USKANE, a par. in the bar. of Lower Ormond, co. Tipperary, prov. of Munster, Ireland, 2 miles N.E. of Borrisokane, its post town. The parish is crossed by the road from Roscrea to Parsonstown. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Killaloe, val. with Ballingarry £156, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is in ruins. There is a National school. Uskane House and Sopwell Hall are the principal seats, on the demesne of the latter are the ruins of Drumanagh Castle.

USSELBY, a par. in the N. div. of Walshcroft wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3 miles N.W. of Market-

Rasen, its post town, and 7½ S.W. of Caistor. It is a station on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire railway. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £44. The church is dedicated to St. Margaret. Usselby Hall is the principal residence. C. T. D'Eyncourt, Esq., is lord of the manor.

USWORTH, a tnshp. and chplry. in the par. of Washington, E. div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 5 miles S.E. of Gateshead, its post town, and 2 N. of Washington. It is a station on the North Eastern railway. The village consists of the hmlts. of Great and Little Usworth. North Biddick forms a detached portion of the tnshp., but for ecclesiastical purposes is in the par. of Washington. There is an extensive colliery. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £161, in the patron. of the Rector of Washington. The church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, was erected in 1832. There is an endowed Church school, erected by Mrs. Susan Peareth, in 1814, who endowed it with an annuity of £30. There is also a colliery school at Little Usworth. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

UTKINTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Tarporley, first div. of Eddisbury hund., co. Chester, 1½ mile N.W. of Tarporley, near Delamere Forest.

UTLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Keighley, West Riding co. York, 1 mile N. of Keighley.

UTON, a tythg. in the par. and hund. of Crediton, co. Devon, 2 miles S.W. of Crediton.

UTTERBY, a par. in the wap. of Ludborough, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4½ miles N.W. of Louth, its post town, and 2½ S.E. of Ludborough railway station. The village is situated on the Roman Barton Street and the Fosseway, near which was an ancient encampment. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £111. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, contains a monument to William of Camberworth, once vicar, and several to the Harrold family, of great antiquity. The children of this parish have the privilege of attending the National school in the parish of Covenham St. Mary. The Free and Primitive Methodists and Wesleyans have each a chapel. The East Lincolnshire railway passes through this parish. The principal residence is Utterby House, with the armorial bearings of the Sapsford family over the entrance.

UTTLESFORD, a hund., co. Essex, contains Saffron Walden, and the pars. of Arkesden, Birchanger, Great and Little Chesterford, Great and Little Chishall, Chrishall, Dibden, Elmdon, Elsenham, Haydon, Littlebury, Newport, Quendon, Rickling, Streethall, Takeley, Wendens Ambo, Wendon Lofts, Wicken Bonant, Widdington, Wimbish, and parts of Henham and Stansted Mountfitchet, comprising an area of 52,170 acres, inclusive of Saffron Walden.

UTTOXETER, a par., post and market town in the S. div. of Totmonslow hund., co. Stafford, 14 miles N.E. of Stafford, its post town, and 10½ S. of Ashbourn. It is a station on the North Staffordshire railway. It is situated on the river Dove and the Caldon branch of the Trent and Mersey canal. The par. contains the tnshps. of Crakemarsh, Stramshall and Creighton, Loxley, and Woodlands, also the hmlts. of Woodgate, Little Bramshall, and Spath. Uttoxeter is a place of great antiquity, and was originally called Uttokeshather by the Saxons, and afterwards Uttoceaster and Utcester. It is a polling place for the county elections, and a petty sessions town. The manor was given by the Conqueror to Henry de Ferrers, and heretofore formed part of the Duchy of Lancaster, having been given by Henry III. to his second son, Edmund, from whom it came to John of Gaunt, and reverted to the crown in the person of Henry IV. By Charles I. it was granted to Viscount Mandeville, afterwards Earl of Manchester, and it is now vested in twelve shares in Earl Talbot and other proprietors. During the civil war it was occupied alternately as the head-quarters of the royalist and parliamentary forces. The town stands upon an eminence, rising from the western bank of the river Dove, across which is an ancient bridge of six arches, connecting the counties of Stafford and Derby. It consists of several good streets diverging from the market place, and is well lighted with gas. There are two banks, savings-bank, &c. The town-hall, which stands in High-street, was erected in 1855 at an outlay of about £4,000; the county court, petty sessions, and other public business is carried on within this building. The population of the parish in 1861 was 4,847, and of the town 3,645. There are two large breweries, a large cork-cutting establishment, cheese, skin, wash-leather, and glue factories. The first charter was granted in the 36th of Henry III. by William de Ferrars, Earl of Derby, which conferred on the burgesses all the privileges of a free borough, and in 1308 it obtained the grant of a charter for a weekly market and annual fair. Previous to 1636 it was subject to the honour of Tutbury, though a manor with power to hold a court baron. Petty sessions for the southern division of the hund. of Totmonslow are held here once a fortnight. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £136, in the patron. of the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has some stained windows, and was re-erected in 1828, with the exception of the ancient spired tower, at an outlay of about £6,000. The chantries of St. Mary and the Holy Trinity were endowed with houses and lands in the neighbourhood. There is also a district church at Stramshall, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £127. The parochial charities produce about £332 per annum, besides some almshouses. There is a free grammar school founded by the Rev. Thomas Alleyne in the 16th century, also National and infant schools. The Independents, Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, Roman Catholics, and Society of Friends have each a chapel. The Poor-law Union comprises 16 parishes or places, 12 in Staffordshire, and 4 in Derbyshire. The land near the town and in the vicinity of the Dove is fertile, being chiefly rich pasturage, and the numerous rivers and brooks abound in trout, grayling, and other kinds of fish. Sir Simeon Degge, the antiquary, Admiral Lord Gardner, and Thomas Alleyne, the mathematician, were natives of this town. The market-place is celebrated as the place were Dr. Johnson stood bare-headed for a whole day, as a kind of penance for disobedience to his father. Market day is on Wednesday. Fairs are held on 6th May, 19th September, 11th and 27th November, and 1st September, chiefly for cattle; and on the Thursday after the second Tuesday in March, the first Thursday in September, and the second Thursday in November for cheese.

UWCH-GARREG, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Machynllaeth, co. Montgomery.

UWCH GORFAI, a hund., co. Carnarvon, contains the pars. of Clynnog, Llanaelhaiarn, Llandwrog, Llanllyfni, and Llanwnda.

UWCH-GRAIG, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanddwywe, hund. of Ardwdwy, co. Merioneth, 4 miles from Barmouth, its post town, and 7 from Harlech. It is situated among the hills near Craig-y-Dinas.

UWCH-LLAWR-COED, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanwnog, co. Montgomery, 5 miles N.W. of Newton.

UWCHYCOED, a tnshp. in the par. of Penegos, co. Montgomery, 1 mile E. of Machynlleth. It is situated among the hills, and has some lead mines.

UWCH-Y-GARREG, a tnshp. in the par. of Llanfihangel-y-Pennant, co. Merioneth, 5 miles N.W. of Machynlleth.

UWCH-Y-MYNYDD, ISAF and USAF, tnshps. in the par. of Hope, co Flint, near Caergwrie, under Bettws Hill.

UXBRIDGE, a par., market town, and ancient municipal borough in the hund. of Elthorne, co. Middlesex, 15 miles N.W. of London. It is the terminus of a short branch line of the Great Western railway. It is a flourishing town on the south-western declivity of a range of hills, and extends down to the Colne, which divides Middlesex from Bucks, and is crossed by a brick bridge of five arches. It was originally founded by Alfred the Great, and formed part of Colham till 1669. During the civil war it became famous as the place where the commissioners of Charles and the Parliament met to consider the terms of a treaty, which however they could not agree upon, in 1645. It was occupied by Cromwell in 1647. The town consists mainly of one long street of well-built houses, some of which are ancient, and of several out-lying hamlets or suburbs. The streets are clean and well-lighted, and the shops have a thriving appearance. The principal buildings are the market-house, on pillars, 140 feet by 49 feet; the public rooms in London-street, where the county court is held monthly; the old bank, and the commercial branch bank, and two bridges. This place derives much of its importance from its numerous and extensive wharves, which facilitate the trade in corn, foreign timber, coals, slate, and other heavy commodities for the supply of West Middlesex and Bucks. There are extensive corn-mills, oil-mills, an iron foundry, four breweries, parchment works, several agricultural-implement factories, besides window, chair, and brick makers. It is the place of residence for many genteel families, provisions being abundant, with excellent fishing and shooting in the neighbourhood. The royal staghounds meet here. The population in 1851 was 3,236, and in 1861, 3,815. It was formerly governed by two constables and four headboroughs, but is now under a local board of health, and under the Public Health Amendment Act is divided into two wards, the old borough being known as the In ward, and the populous suburbs, the Out ward. It is a polling-place for the western division of the county, a petty sessions town, and head of an excise collection district. Uxbridge also gives name to a Poor-law Union comprising 10 parishes, though the poorhouse is situated at Hillingdon, and to a deanery in the diocese of London. The livings of the three ecclesiastical districts—viz., St. Margaret's in the In ward, and St. John's in the Out ward, or Uxbridge Moor, and the new district of St. Andrews, are perpet. curs.,* the first val. £82, the second £100, and the third about £200. The church of St. Margaret was built about the middle of the 15th century, and had formerly a chantry founded by Shirryngton. It contains an old font and the effigies of Dame Leonora Bennet, who once resided in the Treaty House, where Cromwell had his head-quarters, but which is now converted into the "Crown Inn." The local charities produce about £850 per annum, including £600 belonging to the "borough," and £100 being Townshend's bequest for the maintenance of a lecturer. There are a National school, a British school, and an infant school, and a school of industry. The principal residences are Hillingdon House, the seat of H. R. Cox, Esq., and Hillingdon Court, the seat of C. Mills, Esq. Market days are Thursday and Saturday. Fairs are held on 25th March, 31st July, 29th September, and 11th October, the two last being statute fairs.

UYA, an island in co. Orkney and Shetland, Scotland. It is situated between Unst and Yell islands, in Uya Sound, and has a harbour. It extends in length about 1½ mile by 1 in breadth.

UYA, or UYEA, a vil. in the par. of Unst, Shetland Islands, Scotland. It is situated between Unst and Yell islands, at the head of the sound to which it gives name. It is a place of modern date, and has a good harbour.

UZMASTON, a par. in the hund. of Dungleddy, co. Pembroke, 1 mile S.E. of Haverfordwest, its post town, and 7 miles from Milford Haven, on the river Cleddy. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David, val. £100, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church is dedicated to St. Ishmael.

V

VAAKSAY, an island, one of the Outer Hebrides, coast of Scotland. It is situated in Harris Sound, near the north-eastern extremity of North Uist.

VABON, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Dyffrun-Cidrich, par. of Llangadock, co. Carmarthen, on the river Towy, under Trichrug mountain.

VAILA, an island in the par. of Walls, co. Orkney and Shetland Islands, Scotland, 3½ miles N.W. of Skelderness. It is situated on Vaila Sound, near Grueting Voe, and is about 4 miles in circumference. The island is wholly the property of Scott, of Melby and Vaila House.

VAINOL. See FAENOL, co. Merioneth.

VAINOR, a par. in the hund. of Penkelly, co. Brecon, 4 miles N.E. of Merthyr Tydfil. The village is situated on the river Taff. The par. includes the hmlts. of Coed-y-Cymmar, Dyffrin, and Gelli. There are iron and coal mines, &c. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of St. David, val. £265. The church is dedicated to St. Gwendoline; near it is a pillar-stone. There are several cairns in the vicinity.

VAINOR, a tnshp. in the par. of Nantmel, hund. of Rhayader, co. Radnor, 4 miles S.E. of Rhayader, at the head of the river Dulas.

VAINOR, UPPER and LOWER, tnshps. in the par. of Llanbadarn-fawr, hund. of Geneur Glynn, co. Cardigan, 2 miles from Aberystwith, within which borough they are partly included. The land is the property of the Duke of Leeds.

VALE, THE, a par. in the Isle of Guernsey, Channel Islands, 3 miles N. of Peter's Port. It is situated at the northern extremity of the island, on Grand Havre Bay, and was formerly divided into two parts at the Braye du Val by an irruption of the sea, which occurred in the 13th century. Through the exertions of Sir John Doyle, the greater part of the overflowed lands were recovered by the erection of a bridge or dam near the Vale church, and are now under cultivation. In the close of the Vale, not far from the spot where the church now stands, a Benedictine abbey was founded in 692 by some fugitive monks from St. Michael's Mount in Normandy, which was subsequently endowed by Duke Robert of Normandy, father of William the Conqueror, with a large tract of land, constituting at that time (1032) near a quarter of the cultivated part of the island, which demesne at the Dissolution reverted to the crown, for which a special court is held three times a year. There are extensive granite quarries. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Winchester, held with the rect. of St. Sampson's, in the patron. of the governor. The church, dedicated to St. Michael the Archangel, was erected in 1117, and originally belonged to the Abbey. The French Protestants have a chapel. In the beginning of the present century two Druidical altars were dug out of the sands, and near the shore are the ruins of an ancient castle of the 10th century, called St. Michael or Vale Castle, supposed to be the earliest masonry in the island now extant; within the ruined ramparts are several flanking towers and a more recent pile of building used as barracks.

VALENTIA, an island and par. in the bar. of Iveragh, co. Kerry, Ireland, 4½ miles S.W. of Cahirciveen. It is a fertile and populous island, about 6 miles in length by 2 in breadth, situated at the mouth of the Valentia river, near Biginish Island. The shore is guarded by steep, rocky cliffs, rising 620 feet at Bray Head, where was formerly a beacon tower, and 886 feet at Rinnadrolaun Point. The village, which is considerable, is a postal and coast-guard station on Valentia harbour, the most westerly port in Ireland. This haven, lying inside the island, with about 7 fathoms at low water, is well sheltered, and has within the last few years risen into importance, owing to the Atlantic Telegraph Company having selected it as the point of landing for the great cable, being the nearest land to America, or about 350 miles nearer than Liverpool. There are extensive slate and flagstone quarries. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the coasting trade and in the fisheries. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Limerick, Ardfert, and Aghadoe, val. £170, in the patron. of the crown. The church was rebuilt in 1815 in place of an old one, the ruins of which remain. There are three Roman Catholic chapels and several schools. The Annesley family take from this place the title of Viscount Valentia.

VALEY an islet, one of the Shetland Islands, coast of Scotland, near Linga Island. It has a safe harbour, and gives name to a sound on the W. side of the Shetland group.

VALLAY, an island in the par. of North Uist, co. Inverness, Scotland. It extends in length about 2½ miles from E. to W., by a mean breadth of about 3 furlongs. A narrow sound, which becomes dry at low water, separates it from the north-western side of the island of North Uist.

VALLE CRUCIS, or LLAN EGWEST, a hmlt. in the par. of Llangollen, co. Denbigh, 3 miles N.W. of Llangollen. It has ruins of a Cistercian abbey, founded by Madoc ap Gruffydd Maelor about the close of the 12th century.

VALLENCE. See SOUTHTON, co. Wilts.

VAMPLE CROSS, a hmlt. in the par. of Nettlecombe, co. Somerset, 3 miles S.W. of Watchet.

VAN, or FAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Bedwas, co. Glamorgan, 4 miles N.E. of Caerphilly, on the river Romney.

VANGE, a par. in the hund. of Barstable, co. Essex, 4 miles N.E. from Horndon-on-the-Hill, its post town, and 1 mile from Pitsea railway station. The village is situated near a creek on the river Thames. The par. includes a part of Canvey Island, and a low tract of marshy land, called Bower's Marsh. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £310. The church is dedicated to All Saints. There is a school for both sexes, erected by Sir Charles Smith. Little Vange Hall is the principal residence.

VAREHOL, a tnshp. in the par. of Guilsfield, co. Montgomery, 5 miles N.W. of Welshpool, on the Guilsfield canal.

VARTRY, a river of co. Wicklow, Ireland, rises under Douce mountain, and flowing through the Devil's Glen, falls into the sea 2 miles N. of Wicklow.

VATERNISH. See WATERNISH, co. Inverness.

VATERSAY, or WATERSAY, an island in the par. of Barra, one of the Outer Hebrides, co. Inverness, Scotland. It is situated between Barra and Sanderay Islands, near West Sound. It measures about 3 miles in length by 2 in breadth, and is much indented by sea lochs or bays, which nearly divide it into two islands, the one called Vatersay, affording good and safe anchorage.

VAULTERSHOLME, a tythg. in the par. of Maker, hund. of Roborough, co. Cornwall, formerly in Devon, 2 miles S.W. of Devonport.

VAUXHALL, a suburban district of London, in the par. of Lambeth, co. Surrey, 2½ miles S.E. of St. Paul's. It is situated on the S. bank of the Thames, at the spot where the nine-arched iron bridge, built in 1815, crosses the river. It is a station on the South-Western railway, and was once a seat of the Archbishops of Canterbury, called Faukes or Fox Hall, which being pulled down gave its name to another, Copt Hall, now the site of a distillery. Vauxhall Gardens were originally laid out in 1660 as New Spring Gardens. There are schools belonging to the Licensed Victuallers' Company, and Singer's extensive stone-ware pottery. See LAMBETH.

VAYNOR-GLARE, a tnshp. in the par. of Glascombe, hund. of Colwyn, co. Radnor, 9 miles N.W. of Hay.

VAYNOR, ISSA and UCHA, tnshps. in the par. of Berriew, co. Montgomery, 4 miles N.W. of Montgomery, on a branch of the river Severn.

VE. See VIE SKERRIES, Shetland Islands.

VEEP, ST., a par. in the hund. of West, co. Cornwall, 3 miles N.E. of Fowey. The village is situated midway between Fowey and Lostwithiel. The parish is bounded on the W. by the navigable river Fowey, on the N. by the Leryn, and on the S. by Penpol Creek. The surface is hilly, and the soil fertile. There are remains of a small religious house founded by the Earl of Cornwall as a cell to the priory of Montacute, in Somersetshire. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £320. The church is dedicated to St. Cyricius. The Wesleyans have a chapel, and there is a parochial school.

VELINDRE, a hmlt. in the par. of Glasbury, hund. of Talgarth, co. Brecon, 4 miles S.W. of Hay, near Tregoed.

VELINDRE, a vil. in the hmlt. of Dyffrun-Cidrich, par. of Llangadock, co. Carmarthen, 3 miles N.E. of Llangadock, on the river Towy, under Trichrug.

VELIN-VACH, a vil. in the par. of Talachddû, co. Brecon, 4 miles N.E. of Brecknock. In the vicinity is Velin-Newydd, an old seat of the Vaughans.

VELLOW, a hmlt. in the par. of Stogumber, co. Somerset, 3 miles S.E. of Watchet.

VELYNDRE, a hmlt. in the par. of Llangendeirne, co. Carmarthen, 4 miles S.E. of Carmarthen.

VELYNDRE, a hmlt. in the par. of Dyffrun-Llangwnnor, co. Carmarthen, 1 mile S.E. of Carmarthen.

VEMENTRY, an islet, one of the Shetland group, co. Orkney and Shetland, Scotland, 3¼ miles E. of Papastour. It is situated on the S. side of St. Magnus Bay, on Eye Sound, which separates it from the mainland. The island measures about 5½ miles in circumference, and is inhabited by one family.

VENEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Abergwilly, co. Carmarthen, 2 miles N.E. of Carmarthen.

VENN, a hmlt. in the par. of Churchstow, co. Devon, 2 miles N.W. of Kingsbridge.

VENNACHAR, a loch in co. Perth, Scotland, 2 miles W. of Callander. It is situated near Coilantangle ford, under Ben Ledi, and is formed by a reach of the river Teith. The loch is about 3 miles in length by 1½ mile broad, with well-wooded banks.

VENNINGTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Westbury, co. Salop, 10 miles S.W. of Shrewsbury.

VENN-OTTERY. See OTTERY-VENN, co. Devon.

VENNY VACH, a hmlt. in the par. of St. John the Evangelist, hund. of Merthyr, co. Brecon. It is situated near Brecknock, under Caer Bannau and Pen-y-Crug camps.

VENTNOR, a winter watering-place and rapidly-rising town in the par. of Newchurch, co. Hants, 9 miles S.E. of Newport, and 10 S. of Ryde, with which it is connected by the Isle of Wight railway, recently opened through Sandown and Shanklin. It is built on the estate of the Earl of Yarborough, and has grown up since 1820, when it was a mere hamlet. The town now contains more than 3,000 inhabitants. It is well provided with hotels, baths, assembly and reading-rooms, lodging-houses, and all the necessary appendages of a first-class watering-place. Its rapid rise is to be ascribed to its situation and salubrious air, which causes it to be sought as a winter residence by persons of consumptive and delicate constitutions, the climate being nearly three degrees in winter milder than that of the adjoining southern counties, and freer from rain and damp than any other place in England. The older part of the village is situated close under the Undercliff, near the shore; but numerous roads have been carried up the sloping face of the cliff, and are now lined with villa residences, extending for nearly a mile along the Terrace-road. In the winter a comfortable warmth is secured by the shelter of the Undercliff on the N., and the lofty down of St. Boniface on the E., while in the summer the air is refreshed by the coolness of the sea-breezes from the W. and S. Here, when the temperature is 45° early in winter mornings, myrtles, fuchsias, and other delicate plants attain the size of shrubs. To the E. is the wild scenery of Luccombe Chine, and to the W. is Ventnor Cove, where curious pebbles and small diamonds are occasionally found, while a steep pathway leads up the face of St. Boniface Down to the Wishing Well. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Winchester. The parish church, dedicated to St. Catherine, was erected at the expense of J. Hambrough, Esq., in 1837, by whom the parsonage and National schoolhouse were also built; this latter building, however, has recently been pulled down, and a schoolhouse for the education of both sexes, including infants, erected on the site, the expense being defrayed by a grant from the Committee of Council on Education and by voluntary contributions. A second church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, was erected in 1861, by three ladies, the Misses Percy, and their sister Mrs. Thompson. The Wesleyans, Bible Christians, Plymouth Brethren, and Independents have each a chapel. Adjoining the Independents chapel is a British school. Steephill Castle stands about a mile on the road to St. Laurence, and was completed in 1835. A cave may be seen near the castle, a flagstaff marking its site.

VENTRY, a par. in the bar. of Corkaguiny, co. Kerry, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Dingle. It is situated on the N. side of Dingle Bay, near Dunmore Head, and gives name to a harbour 2 miles long by 1½ mile wide. The village is a coast-guard station and watering-place. At Cahir Trant is a Danish fort, and near Mount Eagle are the ruins of the old castle of the Knight of Kerry. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Limerick, Ardfert, and Aghadoe, val. £110. The church has been restored. There are two Roman Catholic chapels and several schools. The Mullins of Burnham House take the title of baron from this place.

VER, or VERLAIN, a river co. Herts, forming the head stream of the Colne.

VERNHAM-DEAN, a par. in the upper half of Pastrow hund., co. Hants, 8 miles S. of Hungerford, its post town, and 9 N.W. of Andover. The soil is clay upon a substratum of chalk. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Hurstbourne Tarrant, in the dioc. of Winchester. The church has been recently restored. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

VERWICK, a par. in the hund. of Troedyraur, co. Cardigan, 2 miles N. of Cardigan, its post town. It is situated near the mouth of the river Teifi. The Flemings were once routed here by the Welsh. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of St. David, val. £80. The church is dedicated to St. Pedrog.

VERWOOD, or FAIRWOOD, a tythg. and chplry. in the par. of Cranborne, co. Dorset, 3 miles from Cranborne, and 37 N.E. of Dorchester.

VERYAN, a par. in the W. div. of Powder hund., co. Cornwall, 4 miles S.W. from Tregoney, its post town, and 12 from Truro. The village is situated in a deep valley in the midst of hills, and near Veryan Bay, in the English Channel, by which it is bounded on the S. Veryan is mentioned in Domesday Book as Eterchy, at which period it was held by the Earl of Mortaigne. It includes the fishing cove of Portloe, and is traversed by the road from Tregoney to St. Mawes. Blue slate, lime, and manganese exist. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £339, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Ann of Sephori, or St. Symphoriana, contains a sculptured font, dating from 1100, and several monuments. The parochial charities produce about £22 per annum. There are schools for both sexes and chapels for the Wesleyans, Independents, and Bible Christians.

VEXFORD, HIGHER and LOWER, hmlts. in the par. of Stogumber, co. Somerset, 6 miles N. of Milverton.

VICARLAND, a vil. of Cambuslang, co. Lanark, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Glasgow.

VICARSTOWN, a vil. in the bar. of Stradbally, Queen's county, Ireland, 5 miles N.E. of Stradbally, on the Grand canal.

VICTORIA, a suburban district of the metropolis, lying between Bow, Hackney, and Bethnal-Green. It is skirted by the Great Eastern and North London railways and the Regent's canal, and is close to Victoria Cemetery and Victoria Park; the latter, which was commenced in 1842, lies a little to the N.W., and comprises about 290 acres of ground, laid out for the health and recreation of the large and crowded districts of Bethnal-Green, Whitechapel, and Shoreditch. Here are situated the East London Waterworks, and the hospital for chest diseases, built in 1851 by Ordish, with a sanatorium constructed of glass, 200 feet long, by Sir J. Paxton.

VICTORIA, a new county in course of being reclaimed from the Wash, between cos. Norfolk and Lincoln (which see).

VICTORIA. See TREMONTHA.

VICTORIA CHANNEL, one of the passages into the Mersey, co. Lancashire, with from 12 to 20 feet water, marked by the Formby and Crosby lights.

VIE SKERRIES, a group of small islets off St. Magnus Bay, Shetland Isles, coast of Scotland.

VIGEAN'S, ST., a par. in co. Forfar, Scotland. It comprises the vils. of St. Vigean's, Collistonmill, Marywell, Gowanbank, Auckmithie, and part of the post town of Arbroath. The parish consists in a main body and two small detached districts, the former extending in length about 8 miles from E. to W., with a varying breadth of from 2 to 4½ miles, and is bounded on the N. by Carmylie and Inverkeilor, on the E. by the German Ocean, on the S. by Arbroath and Arbirlot, and on the W. by Carmylie. The coast is rocky and indented with caves, the most curious of which is the "Gaylet Pot," entered by an arch 70 feet high and terminating in a nearly circular cavity, called the pot, 150 feet in diameter, and 120 in depth. The sea enters the cavern, and immediately communicates with the pot, in which the fluctuations of the tide may be seen, and during an easterly wind the water rushes and foams, creating a considerable noise. The prevailing rocks are sandstone and conglomorate. The soil is fertile and well cultivated. The parish is traversed by the Forfar railway. Previously to 1560 it included Arbroath, to which abbey it once belonged; it came through the Fletchers and Saltons to the Panmures. Some of the inhabitants are engaged in weaving, and others in the fisheries. This par. is in the presb. of Arbroath and synod of Angus and Mearns, and in the patron. of the crown. The stipend of the minister is about £269. The parish church was enlarged in 1827. Near it is a hill which has an eight-syllable echo. In the district of Inverbrothock are a quoad sacra parish church, two Free churches, and a Methodist chapel, and at Auchmithie is a small chapel-of-ease. There are a parochial school and several other schools. At Grange of Conan are the ruins of St. Vigean's chapel, measuring 23 feet by 15, and near it a spring which was once of great repute; there are also traces of Castlegory, once the palace of King Gregory. At Dichmount Law Cairn a view of the Grampians is obtained. The principal seats are Letham, Seaton, Abbethune, Springfield, Parkhill, Newton, Millbank, Woodlands, Almericcloss, Beachwood, and Hospitalfield.

VILLAFIELD, a suburban district of Glasgow, co. Lanark, Scotland, adjoining Glasgow.

VILLIERSTOWN, a vil. in the bars. of Decies-within-Drum and Coshmore, co. Waterford, Ireland, 5 miles S. of Cappoquin, and 28 S.W. of Waterford. It is situated on the river Blackwater, and is a post-office village and police station, where petty sessions are held weekly. The living is a perpet. cur., val. £100. Fairs are held on the 5th June and 4th September.

VINAVORE, an island in the par. of Uig, one of the Ross-shire Hebrides, Scotland. It is situated in the southern part of Loch Roag, about 2 miles from the mouth of little Loch Roag.

VINAY, an island in the par. of Bracadale, in the district of Skye, co. Inverness, Scotland.

VINEFORD, a hmlt. in the par. of Minehead, co. Somerset.

VIRGINIA, a small market town in the par. of Lurgan, bar. of Castlerahan, co. Cavan, Ireland, 16 miles S.E. of Cavan. It is situated on Lough Ramor, and belongs to the Marquis of Headfort, of Virginia Park. Petty sessions are held weekly. There are a police station and a post-office. Market day is Thursday. Fairs are held in each month except in January, February, and April.

VIRGINIA WATER, an ecclesiastical district in the par. of Egham, co. Surrey, 3½ miles W. of Staines, and 5 S. of Windsor. The Reading branch of the London and South Western railway has a station here. The district in 1861 had a population of 877, and a church called Christ Church. It is situated near the Thames and the artificial lake from which it takes its name. This lake, which is the largest piece of artificial water in the kingdom, extends into the county of Berks, and is shut in among large plantations of beech, pines, ash, and other trees, which constitute the wooded breaks of Windsor Forest. It was formed by Sandby in 1746, for William Duke of Cumberland, by turning several small streams into a natural marshy hollow, and is adorned by a Chinese temple, a model frigate, and imitation ruins, with a fall at the lower end of the lake, where it joins a branch of the Thames.

VIRGINSTOW, a par. in the hund. of Lifton, co. Devon, 7 miles S.E. of Holsworthy, and 6 N.E. of Launceston, its post town. The village is situated on the river Carey. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £103. The church, dedicated to St. Bridget, was rebuilt in 1852. H. Blagrove, Esq., of Lifton Park, is lord of the manor.

VIRLEY, or SALCOT VIRLEY, a par. in the hund. of Winstree, co. Essex, 7 miles S.E. of Kelvedon, its post town, and 8 S.W. of Colchester. It is situated on Virley Creek, near the river Blackwater's mouth. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £140. The church is dedicated to the Virgin Mary. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum.

VIVOD, a tnshp. in the par. of Llangollen, co. Denbigh, 1 mile from Llangollen. The house of correction is in this parish.

VOEL, a tnshp. in the par. of Cerrig-y-Druidion, co. Denbigh, 12 miles S.W. of Ruthin.

VOGRIE, a hmlt. in the par. of Borthwick, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 4 miles S.E. of Dalkeith.

VOLEGASTELL, a hmlt. in the par. of Llandilo-fawr, co. Carmarthen, 7 miles S.W. of Llandilo-fawr, on the river Cennen.

VORLAN, a hmlt. in the par. of Maenclochog, hund. of Kemess, co. Pembroke, 8 miles N.W. of Narberth.

VOTERSAY, one of the islands in the Sound of Harris, Outer Hebrides, Scotland, 2 miles S. of Bernera, and 1 mile N.E. of Stroma. Its circumference is less than 2 miles.

VOWCHURCH, a par. in the hund. of Webtree, co. Hereford, 9 miles S.W. of Hereford, its post town, and 7 N.W. of Pontrilas railway station. The village is situated in the Golden Valley, on the river Dore, a trout stream. The par. includes the hmlts of Monington and Straddle, and has a camp. The soil is sandy and loamy, with a subsoil of clay and rock. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £232, in the patron. of the Prebend of Putson Major, in the Cathedral of Hereford. The church is dedicated to St. Bartholomew. The parochial charities produce about £3 10s. per annum. There is a school for both sexes. W. S. Wood, Esq., is lord of the manor.

VOWFERRY, a hmlt. in the bar. of Coleraine, co. Londonderry, Ireland, 3 miles N. of Kilrea, near the ferry on the river Bann.

VOWMINE, a tnshp. in the pars. of Dorstone and Clifford, co. Hereford, 4 miles S.E. of Hay.

VRINE, a small loch in co. Ross, Scotland, 4 miles N.W. of Loch Fannick.

VRO, a parcel in the par. of Llangunider, hund. of Crickhowell, co. Brecon, 4 miles N.W. of Crickhowell. It is situated near the Usk and Brecon canal. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the iron and lime works.

VRO, a parcel in the par. of Llanthetty, hund. of Penkelly, co. Brecon. It is situated near the Usk and Brecon canal, and includes Tal-y-bont.

VRO, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanfihangel-Ar-Arth, co. Carmarthen, 9 miles S.W. of Lampeter.

VUIAVORE, an islet in the par. of Uig, Western Islands, co. Ross, Scotland. It lies on the W. side of Lewis.

VUIAY, an islet in the par. of Bracadale, co. Inverness, Scotland. It is situated in Bracadale Bay, on the W. side of Skye.

VYRNWY, a river of co. Montgomery, rises under Berwyn Mountain, and joins the Severn at Melverley.

W.

WABERTHWAITE, a par. in the ward of Allerdale-above-Derwent, co. Cumberland, 2 miles E. from Ravenglass, its post town, and 2 from Eskmeals station on the Whitehaven and Furness Junction line of railway. The village is situated on the river Esk. The land on the eastern side is rocky, and slopes down to the river Esk, which divides this parish from that of Muncaster. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £131. The church is dedicated to St. John the Evangelist. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a parochial school for both sexes, at which a Sunday-school is also held. Lord Muncaster is lord of the manor.

WABYHOUSE, a lib. in the Dorchester div. co. Dorset, contains the par. of Upway, comprising an area of 1,120 acres.

WACKERFIELD, a tnshp. in the par. of Staindrop, S.W. div. of Darlington ward, co. Durham, 7 miles N.E. of Barnard Castle, and 7 S.W. of Bishop-Auckland.

WACTON, a par. in the hund. of Broxash, co. Hereford, 4 miles N.W. of Bromyard, its post town, and 8 from Leominster. The village is situated near the Leominster and Tenbury turnpike road. The land is partly in hop-grounds. The soil is clayey. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £65, in the patron. of the bishop. The Earl of Somerset is lord of the manor.

WACTON, MAGNA and PARVA, pars. in the hund. of Depwade, co. Norfolk, 1½ mile S.W. from Long Stratton, and 1 mile from Forncett railway station. The two parishes, distinguished as Magna and Parva, are now consolidated. The village is situated near the line of the Great Eastern railway. The living is a rect.* with the sinecure rect. of Wacton Parva annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £302. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The church of St. Mary is in ruins. The register dates from 1560. There is a partly free school.

WADBOROUGH, a hmlt. in the par. of Holy Cross, hund. of Pershore, co. Worcester, 3 miles N.W. of Pershore. It is a station on the Midland railway, and is situated on the Birmingham canal.

WADDESDON, a par. in the hund. of Ashendon, co. Bucks, 5½ miles N.W. of Aylesbury, its post town, and 12 from Buckingham. The par. contains the hmlts. of Wescott and Woodham. The village is situated on the Roman way Akeman Street. In the vicinity is a branch silk factory, which at times employs a large number of hands. The living is divided into three portions, which are rects.,* the first portion being valued at £178, the second portion at £202, and the third portion at £152. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, contains several old monuments and brasses. The parochial charities produce about £146 per annum, of which £9 go to Beck's school. There are British and National schools for both sexes, two chapels for the Baptists, and one for the Wesleyans. The Duke of Marlborough is lord of the manor.

WADDINGHAM, a par. in the E. div. of Manley wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4 miles S.E. of Kirton-in-Lindsey, its post town, and 4 N. of Spittal. The village is situated on the line of the ancient Ermine Street and the river Ancholme. The surface is flat, and the soil chiefly clay and peat moor. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £900, in the patron. of the crown. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £74 per annum, of which £39 go to a school. The Wesleyan, Primitive, and Free Methodists have chapels.

WADDINGTON, a par. in the co. and lib. of the City of Lincoln, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 4½ miles S. of Lincoln, its post town. The village is situated on an eminence. Simon de Poppele founded a Templars' house here in 1246, the ruined chapel of which is near their hall. The par. includes the old chplry. of Meer, of which the chapel, dedicated to St. James, is in ruins. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £566, in the patron. of Lincoln College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, was re-erected about 1729. The parochial charities produce about £7 per annum. There is a National school. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a chapel. Lord Aveland is lord of the manor.

WADDINGTON, a chplry. in the par. of Mitton, W. div. of Staincliff wap., West Riding co. York, 1½ mile N. of Clitheroe, its post town, and 20 miles W. of Skipton. The village is situated on the western side of Ribblesdale, near the river Ribble. There is a cotton mill. Henry VI., after the battle of Hexham, was concealed at Waddington Hall. The living is a perpet. cur.,* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £122. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, was rebuilt in 1825. The parochial charities produce about £652 per annum, which go to Parker's hospital for 20 widows, founded in 1700. There is a school for both sexes, at which a Sunday-school is held. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The Hon. Mrs. Ramsden is lady of the manor and principal landowner.

WADDINGWORTH, a par. in the S. div. of Gartree wap., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5 miles N.W. of Horncastle, its post town. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £150. The church, dedicated to St. Margaret, was rebuilt about the commencement of the present century.

WADDON, a hmlt. in the par. of Portisham, co. Dorset, 5 miles S.W. of Dorchester.

WADDON, a hmlt. in the par. of Croydon, first div. of Wallington hund., co. Surrey, 1 mile W. of Croydon. It is a station on the Epsom railway. The river Wandle flows by the hamlet.

WADE, a tythg. in the par. of Eling, co. Hants, 3 miles W. of Southampton.

WADEBRIDGE, an ancient market town, partly in the par. of St. Breock, hund. of Pyder, and partly in that of Egloshayle, hund. of Trigg, co. Cornwall, 8 miles S.E. of Padstow, and 6 N.W. of Bodmin. There is a bridge of 17 arches, nearly 320 feet long, over the navigable river Camel, erected about 1485. Near the town, which has a considerable trade in corn, iron, copper ores, and granite, is a small dock, with wharves and quays. The population is about 800. The streets are lighted with gas, and there are a savings-bank, literary and scientific institution, and an iron foundry. There is a tram railway to Bodmin. In the vicinity are several slate quarries. Market day is on Friday. Fairs are held on the 12th May, 22nd June, and 10th October.

WADENHOE, a par. in the hund. of Navisford, co. Northampton, 5 miles N. of Thrapston, its post town, and 4 S.W. of Oundle. The village is situated on the river Nen. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £186. The church is dedicated to St. Michael. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a National school.

WADESMILL, a hmlt. in the pars. of Standon and Thundridge, co. Herts, 2 miles N. of Ware, on the river Rib.

WADHURST, a par. in the hund. of Loxfield-Pelham, rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex, 5 miles S.E. of Tonbridge Wells, and 4 S.W. of Lamberhurst. It is a station on the Tonbridge and Hastings railway. The village, which was formerly a market town by grant from Henry III., is situated on the road from Hastings to Tonbridge Wells. There are a post-office and savings-bank, and a penny savings-bank. In 1862 a library and reading room were opened. There are stone quarries and brick kilns. The par., which includes the hmlt. of Tidebrook, comprises about 10,135 acres, with a population in 1861 of 2,470. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £659, in the patron. of Wadham College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul, was restored in 1858. It contains several memorial windows and ancient monuments, and on the floor numerous plates of iron inscribed to various families. There is also a district church at Tidebrook, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £55. It was erected in 1856, and is dedicated to St. John the Baptist. The parochial charities produce about £23 per annum, besides several almshouses. There are National schools for both sexes. The Wesleyans and Baptists have chapels. Wadhurst Castle is the principal residence. The Marquis of Camden and Lord Dacre are lords of the manor.

WADLEY, or LITTLEWORTH, a tythg. in the par. of Great Farringdon, co. Berks, 1½ mile E. of Farringdon. It is a meet for the old Berkshire hounds.

WADSLEY and WADSLEY BRIDGE, vils. in the par. of Ecclesfield, wap. of Strafforth, West Riding co. York, 4 miles N.W. of Sheffield. At Wadsley Bridge is a station on the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincoln railway. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the collieries, and in the manufacture of clasp knives. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £230. The church was erected in 1834.

WADSWELL and WADSWICK, hmlts. in the par. of Box, co. Wilts, 3 miles S.W. of Corsham.

WADSWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Halifax, wap. of Morley, West Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Halifax. It is situated on the confluence of the rivers Calder and Hebden, near the Rochdale canal. It is the largest tnshp. in the par., including the hmlts. of Old Town, Hebden Bridge, and Mytholmroyd. The surface is uneven, and the chief part of the land is in moor and unenclosed sheep walks, affording tolerable pasture. The Baptists have chapels at Birchcliffe and Wainsgate, the Peculiar Baptists at Nutclough, and the Wesleyans at Crimsworth. The Earl of Scarborough is lord of the manor.

WADWORTH, a par. in the S. div. of Strafforth wap., West Riding co. York, 4½ miles S. of Doncaster, its post town, and 5 E. of Conisborough. The village is situated on the Balby and Worksop road. The soil is fertile, consisting of sand, clay, and peat, with a subsoil of clay and limestone. The surface is undulating and well wooded. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of York, val. £110. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains some old monuments, and an effigy to Sir E. Fitzwilliam, bearing date 1467. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There are a National school for both sexes, at which a Sunday-school is held. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. Wadworth Hall and Alverley Hall are the principal residences. G. S. Foljambe, Esq., is lord of the manor.

WAENFAUR, a chplry. in the par. of Llanbeblig, hund. of Isgorfai, co. Carnarvon, 2 miles from Carnarvon, near the Menai Straits.

WAENRHWYDDFYD, a hmlt. in the par. of Mold, co. Flint.

WAGG, a hmlt. in the pars. of Huish Episcopi, and Higham, co. Somerset, 2 miles N. of Langport.

WAGHEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Wawn, middle div. of Holderness wap., East Riding co. York, 5 miles S.E. of Beverley.

WAINFLEET ALL SAINTS, a par., market and seaport town in the Marsh div. of Candleshoe hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 18 miles N.E. of Boston, and 5½ from Firsby station on the East Lincolnshire railway. It is situated on a small creek in a marshy district skirting the river Steeping, near Boston Deeps. The port formerly admitted vessels of great burthen, but within the last century, owing to the waters being carried off by a wide drain to Boston Scalf, has become so choked that it is only navigable for small craft and lighters. The town chiefly consists of one street, which is well lighted with gas, and contains about 1,300 inhabitants. It has been considerably improved of late years, but was formerly of greater importance than at present. In the 11th year of Edward III. it returned one member to Parliament, and in 1359 it supplied two ships of war for the invasion of Brittany. It was the birth-place of Bishop Patten, or William of Waynfleet, the founder of Magdalen College, Oxford. A large portion of the land is marshy, and a little to the N. of the town is a barrow. At an early period the manufacture of salt from sea-water was extensively carried on, and the Roman road across the fen from Bannovallium to Lindum is still called the Salter's road. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £322, in the patron of the lord chancellor. The church, dedicated to All Saints, was rebuilt out of the materials of an older one which was taken down in 1820, on a site presented by the late Colonel Sibthorpe. The town also includes the small parish of St. Thomas, the living of which is a perpet. cur., but no remains of the ancient church now exist. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum, besides 23 acres of land. There are National schools for both sexes, and a free grammar school founded by Bishop Patten in 1484. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. There are a literary institute and a branch of the National savings-bank. C. B. Reynardson, Esq., is lord of the manor. Market day is on Saturday. Fairs for cattle are held on the third Saturday in May and 24th October.

WAINFLEET ST. MARY, a par. in the Marsh div. of Candleshoe hund., co. Lincoln, 16 miles N.E. of Boston, its post town, and 1 mile from Wainfleet All Saints. The village forms a part of the town of Wainfleet. Much of the land is marshy. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £201, in the patron. of Bethlehem Hospital. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, stands about a mile from the village. The parochial charities produce about £24 per annum. There is a school for both sexes, founded in 1831 by the Governors of Bethlehem Hospital, by whom it is supported.

WAINLEE, a vil. in the par. of Wolstanton, co. Stafford, 2 miles N. of Newcastle-under-Lyne.

WAINWEN, a tnshp. in the par. of Gladestry, co. Radnor, 4 miles S.E. of New Radnor.

WAITBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Kirkby Stephen, East ward, co. Westmoreland, 1½ mile S.W. of Kirkby Stephen, and 3 miles from Ravenstone. It belonged to the Wadebys in King John's time, and subsequently passed to the Dacres, Stricklands, Lowthers, &c. The village only contains 9 houses, though at some remote period it is said to have been a market town, and on Castle Carrick Hill are traces of a castle. In the village is an endowed free school for this and the township of Smardale.

WAITH, a par. in the hund. of Bradley-Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 5½ miles S.E. of Great Grimsby, its post town, and 9 N.W. of Louth. The village is situated on the Louth road and Tetney rivulet. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £86. The church, dedicated to St. Martin, was rebuilt in 1860 by C. H. Haigh, Esq., of Grainsby Hall. A school, with master's residence, has been erected at the expense of Mrs. Haigh, by whom it is supported. This parish has the privilege of sending one inmate to the almshouses at Ashby. C. H. Haigh, Esq., is lord of the manor.

WAITHAM HILL, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 4 miles N.W. of Ulverstone. It includes the hmlts. of Mosshouses, Marsfield, and Headhouse.

WAITWITH, a hmlt. in the par. of Catterick, North Riding co. York, 3 miles S.E. of Richmond, near the river Swale.

WAKEFIELD, a par., post and market town, municipal and parliamentary borough in the lower div. of Agbrigg wap., West Riding co. York, 9 miles S.E. of Leeds, and 28 S.W. of York. It has stations on the Lancashire and Yorkshire, and Bradford, Wakefield, and Leeds railways, and a joint station at Oakenshaw, about 2 miles from the town, for the North Midland and Great Northern railways. It is situated on the navigable river Calder, here crossed by a bridge of nine arches built by Edward III., and on the Aire and Calder navigation, by means of which a considerable trade is carried on in grain, malt, coals, &c. The parish of Wakefield, which is very extensive, comprising 9,311 acres, includes the chplry. of Horbury, the tnshp. and borough of Wakefield, the tnshps. of Alverthorpe-with-Thornes and Stanley-cum-Wrenthorpe. Its ancient name was Wachefeld, under which it is mentioned in Domesday book as belonging to the crown, and was subsequently given by Henry I. to the Warrens, whose seat was Sandal Castle. By Edward III. it was conferred on his natural son Edmund de Langley, who fell at the battle of Agincourt, and afterwards belonged to Richard Duke of York, slain in the battle of Wakefield Green. In 1554 this extensive baronial liberty became a portion of the Duchy of Lancaster, and through Henry Earl of Holland, the Cliftons, &c., descended to Thomas Osborne, first Duke of Leeds, in whose family it continues, but the manor belongs to Sackville W. Lane Fox, Esq. On the passing of the Reform Act of 1832, it was created a borough, with the privilege of returning one member to parliament. Under the Municipal Corporations Act it is divided into seven wards, and is governed by a mayor, eight aldermen, and 24 councillors. The population of the municipal and parliamentary boroughs, which are nearly co-extensive, in 1851 was 22,065, and in 1861, 23,350; but that of the whole parish in 1851 was 33,122, and in 1861, 35,739.—The town of Wakefield, which is situated in the centre of a thriving manufacturing district, may be considered the shire town of the West Riding, from its being the place of election for the knights of the shire for the West Riding, the place of custody for deeds and enrolments. The petty sessions for the lower div. of Agbrigg wap., as also for the borough, are held weekly on Monday. A county-court sits monthly, and the board of poor-law guardians meet fortnightly on Wednesday. The Poor-law Union comprises 19 parishes and townships. The manor-court is held annually at the Moot Hall. The town, which is built on a declivity near the river, contains several handsome modern streets, and even the older portion, which is irregularly laid out, has been recently much improved. The principal public buildings are the court-house, with Doric portico, in Wood-street; the corn-exchange, erected in 1837 in Westgate; the moot-hall, or manor court, in Westgate; the house of correction for the West Riding, covering a site of 20 acres, having been enlarged in 1824, at a cost of £120,000; and in Westgate the county lunatic asylum for the West Riding, erected at a cost of above £100,000 at Eastmoor; the union workhouse in Park-lane; the mechanics' institution, with library and baths attached, in Wood-street; the Tammy hall in Wood-street, 210 feet by 30, built for the sale of cloth and woollen stuffs, but now converted into a factory, that branch of trade having disappeared; the theatre, in Westgate; the general dispensary and Clayton hospital in Wood-street; the borough police-station in King-street; also the station of the West Riding constabulary at Cliffe House; the savings-bank in Burton-street; four commercial banks, assembly rooms, and library, three masonic lodges, gas and waterworks, and the new market-house, recently erected near the parish church, at a cost of £20,000, the old market-place in the centre of the town having become too small for the increased business. A considerable trade is done in grain, meal, wool, malt, coal, and stone, which are conveyed to the neighbouring manufacturing towns by means of the river Calder and the Aire and Calder navigation. Many persons are employed as maltsters, dyers, boat-builders, millwrights, blacksmiths, colliers, and some in the spinning of worsted and lambswool yarn, though this branch of manufacture has fallen off. There are extensive corn mills belonging to the corporation, several breweries, the Calder soap works, where artificial manures are also manufactured. In the immediate vicinity of the town are extensive market gardens. The soil is clayey but fertile, and the subsoil abounds in coal, stone, and mineral springs.—There are two weekly newspapers published in the town, the Express on Saturday, and the Journal and Examiner, on Friday mornings, with a second edition in the afternoon, containing the Mark-lane news of the day.—The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ripon, val. £450, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, is a handsome structure of the time of Henry III., but mostly rebuilt since 1724. It has a tower and spire 237 feet high, containing a peal of ten bells, and has been recently restored at an expense of £5,000, under the direction of G. Scott. In addition to the parish church are the district churches of St. John's with All Saints; St. Andrew's, Warrengate; St. Mary's, Primrose Hill; Trinity, George-street; St. Michael's, Westgate Common; and in the rural districts the churches of Alverthorpe, Horbury, Outwood, Stanley, and Thornes Common, the livings of which are all perpet. curs., varying in val. from £225 to £150. The most noteworthy of these churches, which are all modern, is that of St. John, erected in 1791 at a cost of £10,000, and made parochial jointly with All Saints by Act of Parliament; St. Michael's church, on Westgate Common, erected in 1858, with an E. window of five lights; and St. Mary's chantry, situated on the bridge, originally founded by Edward IV., but entirely rebuilt in 1847 at a cost of £3,000. There are three chapels in the town belonging to the Wesleyans, two to the Independents, and one each to the Primitive Methodists, Free Church Methodists Association, Baptists, Roman Catholics, Unitarians, and Society of Friends' meeting-house. The local charities produce nearly £3,000 per annum, besides almshouses and numerous provident and charitable institutions.—The free grammar school, founded in 1592 by the Saviles under a charter of Queen Elizabeth, has an income from endowment of £350, with three exhibitions to the universities of Oxford and Cambridge, and two scholarships at Clare Hall. Archbishop Potter, Dr. Radcliffe, founder of the library which bears his name at Oxford, and the great classic scholar, Dr. Bentley, were educated at this school. There are besides the Green-coat school, with an income of £800, now removed from Westgate to the old grammar-school; the Wesleyan training schools, Lancastrian schools in connection with the mechanics' institution, also National and infant schools belonging to the several ecclesiastical districts.—In 1821 a Roman mint was discovered here, with above 100 lbs. of Roman copper coins, many silver coins, and the clay moulds for casting. Market days are Wednesday and Friday, the former for cattle, and the latter for corn, meat, and provisions. Fairs lasting two days are held on the 4th July and 11th November for cattle, sheep, and horses.

WAKEHAM, a vil. in the par. of Portland, co. Dorset, 5 miles S.E. of Weymouth.

WAKELEY, an ext. par. place in the hund. of Edwinstree, co. Herts, 2 miles S.W. of Buntingford. It was formerly a parish.

WAKERING, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Rochford, co. Essex, 4½ miles N.E. of Southend. The parish is situated near the mouth of the Thames, where is a small but convenient haven. The village is traversed by the road to Foulness Island. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £300, in the patron. of the bishop of London. The church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. There is a chapel for the Independents and a National school.

WAKERING, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Rochford, co. Essex, 4 miles N.E. of Southend. The par., which adjoins that of Great Wakering, includes the island of Potten, which is formed by the river Bromhill and the haven of Wakering. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £250, in the patron. of the Governors of St. Bartholomew's Hospital, London. The church is dedicated to St. Mary.

WAKERLY, a par. in the hund. of Corby, co. Northampton, 7½ miles S.W. of Stamford, its post town, and 6 E. from Uppingham. The village is situated near the river Welland, which divides this county from that of Rutlandshire. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £100. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £3 per annum. The Marquis of Exeter is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

WALBERSWICK, a par. in the hund. of Blything, co. Suffolk, 1½ mile S. of Southwold, its post town, and 8 miles from Yoxford. The village is situated near the mouth of the river Blythe, which separates it from Southwold. It was formerly a place of greater importance than at present, and had an extensive fishing trade, but was burnt in the years 1583, 1633, and 1683. A large portion of the land is in heath and marsh. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £41. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, was built in the 15th century, but is now a ruin. There are day and Sunday schools. The Independents and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel.

WALBERTON, a par. in the hund. of Avisford, rape of Arundel, co. Sussex, 3½ miles S.W. of Arundel, its post town, and 7½ E. of Chichester. The village is situated on the Arundel and Bognor road. The living is a vic.* annexed that of Yapton, in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £468, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum, which go to J. Nash's school, &c. There are National schools for both sexes. Avisford House and Walberton House are the principal residences.

WALBURN, a tnshp. in the par. of Downholme, wap. of West Hang, North Riding co. York, 1¼ mile S.W. of Downholme, and 5 miles S.W. of Richmond. T. Hutton, Esq., is lord of the manor.

WALBY, or WALDBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Crosby-upon-Eden, Eskdale ward, co. Cumberland, 4 miles N.E. of Carlisle. The village appears to have derived its name from its situation near the Roman wall of Severus.

WALCOMB, a tythg. in the City of Wells, co. Somerset, adjoining Wells.

WALCOT, a par. in the wap. of Aveland, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 9 miles S. of Sleaford, its post town, and 1 mile N.W. of Falkingham. In the vicinity is a powerful mineral spring, and other springs of good quality. The surface is undulating and in some parts hilly. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £159. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has a stained E. window, and in the S. aisle is a canopied niche with buttresses. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. There is a school for both sexes. Lord Aveland is lord of the manor.

WALCOT, a hmlt. in the par. of Alkborough, co. Lincoln, 11 miles N.W. of Glanford-Brigg, near the river Trent.

WALCOT, a tnshp. in the par. of Chirbury, co. Salop, 8 miles N.W. of Bishop's-Castle.

WALCOT, a par. partly within the city of Bath, and partly in the hund. of Bath-Forum, co. Somerset, 2 miles from Bath Easton, and 6 from Marshfield. This parish includes that part of the city of Bath lying on the N.N.E. and N.W. sides of the parish of St. Michael. It is situated on the Great Western railway, under Sion, Lansdown, and Beacon hills. The living is a rect., with St. Margaret's chapel, and the cur. of St. Stephen's, Lansdown Hill, annexed, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £600. The church is dedicated to St. Swithin. In addition to the parish church are the district churches of Christchurch, Portland Chapel, and All Saints' Chapel. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum.

WALCOT, a vil. in the par. of Haselor, co. Warwick, 2 miles N.E. of Alcester.

WALCOT-CUM-MEMBRIS, a hmlt. in the par. of Holy Cross, upper div. of Pershore hund., co. Worcester, 1½ mile N.W. of Pershore. It includes Drake's Broughton.

WALCOTE, a hmlt. in the par. of Misterton, hund. of Guthlaxton, co. Leicester, 1½ mile S.E. of Lutterworth. Here was formerly a chapel. The inhabitants are employed in agriculture and frame-work knitting. The chapel-of-ease, dedicated to St. Martin, has long been demolished.

WALCOTT, a par. in the hund. of Happing, co. Norfolk, 1½ mile from Happisburgh, and 5 miles N.E. of North Walsham. Stalham is its post town. The village is situated near the eastern coast. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc of Norwich, val. £43, in the patron. of the bishop. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum.

WALCOTT, a tnshp. in the par. of Billinghay, first div. of Langoe wap., parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, 2 miles N.W. of Billinghay, and 7½ N.E. of Sleaford, its post town. The village is situated near Walcott Delph. In the vicinity are some barrows. The living is a perpet. cur. annexed to the vic. of Billinghay, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church is dedicated to St. Oswald. The parochial charities produce about £8 per annum. The Wesleyans have a chapel. A. Wilson, Esq., is lord of the manor.

WALCOTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Charlbury, hund. of Chadlington, co. Oxford, 7 miles N.W. of Woodstock.

WALCOTT, a tnshp. in the par. of Wellington, co. Salop, 4 miles N.W. of Wellington. It is a station on the Shrewsbury and Birmingham railway. The township is situated on the river Tern.

WALDBY, a tnshp. in the par. of Crosby-upon-Eden, ward of Eskdale, co. Cumberland.

WALDEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Aysgarth, wap. of West Hang, North Riding co. York, 10 miles S.W. of Middleham. It is joined with Burton to form a township.

WALDEN, KING'S. See KING'S WALDEN, co. Herts.

WALDEN, SAFFRON. See SAFFRON WALDEN, co. Essex.

WALDEN, ST. PAUL'S, a par. in the hund. of Cashio, or lib. of St. Alban's, co. Herts, 5 miles N.W. of Welwyn. The living is a vic.,* val. £150, in the patron. of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, London. The church is dedicated to All Saints. The Independents and Baptists have each a chapel. There is a National school. This parish is one of 14 entitled to a share of the charity of Henry Smith, and there are other small charities distributed in clothing and bread.

WALDEN-STUBBS, a tnshp. in the par. of Womersley, lower div. of Asgoldcross wap., West Riding co. York, 7 miles S.E. of Pontefract, and 1 mile S.E. of Womersley railway station. The village is situated near the river Wente. At a farm in the vicinity is an old seat of the Shuttleworths. The soil is sandy upon limestone, with a mixed subsoil.

WALDERSHARE, a par. in the hund. of Eastry, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 4 miles N.W. of Dover, its post town, and 6 from Deal. There is an old seat of the Monings, which came to Lord North. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £133, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains some old monuments. There is a National school for this and the adjoining parishes, entirely supported by the trustees of the late Earl of Guilford. The principal residence is Waldershare Park, built by Inigo Jones for Sir H. Furnese. Roman urns, tiles, and coins have been found in the vicinity. A fair is held on Whit Monday.

WALDERTON, a tythg. in the par. of Stoughton, hund. of Wrestbourne, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 6 miles N.W. of Chichester.

WADLINGFIELD, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Babergh, co. Suffolk, 3 miles N.E. of Sudbury, its nearest railway station and post town, and 71 from London. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £800, in the patron. of Clare Hall, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Lawrence. The register dates from 1550. Roger Spencer, Lord Mayor of London in 1594, was born here. J. M. Rodwell, Esq., is lord of the manor.

WALDINGFIELD, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Babergh, co. Suffolk, 4½ miles N.E. of Sudbury. The principal residence is Holbrook Hall, the seat of a branch of the Hanmer family. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Ely, val. £360. The church is dedicated to St. Lawrence. The Wesleyans have a chapel. Mr. D. Rose Hodgson is lord of the manor.

WALDITCH, a par. in the hund. of Godderthorne, Bridport div. of co. Dorset, 1½ mile S.E. of Bridport, its post town. The parish is situated on the road from Bridport to Dorchester. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Sarum, val. £54. The church is dedicated to St. Mary, and was formerly a free chapel or chantry.

WALDLEY, a hmlt. in the par. of Marston-Montgomery, hund. of Appletree, co. Derby.

WALDRIDGE, a hmlt. in the par. of Dinton, co. Bucks, 3 miles N.W. of Prince's Risborough.

WALDRIDGE, a tnshp. in the par. of Chester-le-Street, middle div. of Chester ward, co. Durham, 3 miles from Chester-le-Street, and 5 N.W. of Durham. A large portion of this township is in moorland. In the vicinity are some stone quarries and an extensive colliery.

WALDRINGFIELD, a par. in the hund. of Carlford, co. Suffolk, 4 miles S.E. of Woodbridge, its post town, and 8 from Ipswich. The village is situated on the river Deben. The soil consists of loam near the river, but in other parts is sandy, with a subsoil of sand, crag, and clay, in which coprolites are found. A small trade is carried on in malt, which is shipped from Waldringfield Cliff. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £112. The church is dedicated to All Saints. There is a meeting-house for Anabaptists. The Rev. G. H. Porter is lord of the manor.

WALDRON, a par. in the hund. of Shiplake, rape of Pevensey, co. Sussex, 6 miles S.E. of Uckfield, and 8 N.W. of Hailsham. Hurst Green is its post town. Some iron works were formerly carried on. From the churchyard a view is obtained of Lewes and the South Downs. The par. includes the hmlt. of Cross-in-Hand. At Geer's Wood lignite exists, and there are several chalybeate springs in the parish. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £455, in the patron. of Exeter College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains numerous old brasses. The register dates from the period of the Reformation. The parochial charities produce about £2 per annum. There is a parochial school. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The Earl of Chichester and M. Trehorne, Esq., are lords of the manor. Fairs are held on the 23rd April and on the 19th November at Cross-in-Hand.

WALES, a par. chiefly in the S. div. of Strafforth wap., West Riding, but partly in the lib. of St. Peter's, East Riding, co. York, 7 miles S. of Rotherham, its post town, 2 W. of Kiverton Park railway station, and 10 S.E. of Sheffield. The village is situated near the Chesterfield and Trent canal, which here passes through a tunnel 2¼ miles in length, and near the river Rother. The par. includes the hmlts. of Walleswood, Norwood, and Bedgralve. It is mentioned in Domesday book as Walise, and belonged to Morcar, Earl of Northumberland. There is a colliery. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £190, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church is dedicated to St. Peter or St. John. The parochial charities produce about £9 per annum. S. L. Fox, Esq., is lord of the manor.

WALESBY, a par. in the S. div. of Walshcroft hund., parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3 miles N.E. of Market-Rasen, its post town, and 7½ S. of Caistor. The village is situated on the Wolds. The par. includes the hmlts. of Risby and Otby. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £441. The church is dedicated to All Saints. There is a National school for both sexes, which is used as a place of worship for the Wesleyans. W. Angerstein, Esq., is lord of the manor.

WALESBY, a par. in the Hatfield div. of Bassetlaw wap., co. Nottingham, 3½ miles N.E. of Ollerton, its post town, and 12 N.W. of Southwell. The par. includes the hmlt. of Willoughby. The surface is level, and the soil partly clay and bog. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £158. The church is dedicated to St. Edmund. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. There is an endowed school. The Earl of Scarborough is lord of the manor.

WALFORD, a par. in the hund. of Greytree, co. Hereford, 3 miles S.W. of Ross, its post town, and 7 N.E. of Monmouth. The village is situated on the river Wye. The soil is clayey, sandy, and loamy, with a subsoil of clay, rock, and red brick earth. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £218, in the patron. of the Bishop of Worcester. The church is dedicated to St. Leonard. There is also the district church of All Saints at Bishopswood, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £35. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. There are also some almshouses. There is a free school for both sexes situated at Bishop's Wood. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a chapel. Bishop's Wood House, Hill Court, Old Hill, and White Hall are the principal residences. Captain K. M. Power is lord of the manor.

WALFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Lintwardine, hund. of Wigmore, co. Hereford, 8 miles S.W. of Ludlow. It is situated near the river Teme, and includes the hmlts. of Letton and Newton.

WALFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Baschurch, co. Salop, 6 miles N.W. of Shrewsbury.

WALGHERTON, or WALKERTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Wybunbury, hund. of Nantwich, co. Chester, 4 miles S.E. of Nantwich, and 3 from the Basford railway station.

WALGRAVE, a par. in the hund. of Orlingbury, co. Northampton, 9 miles from Northampton, its post town, and 6½ N.W. from Wellingborough. The village is situated near the river Nen, on the road to Kettering. Some of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of shoes and in lace-making. The living is a rect. with that of Hannington annexed, in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. respectively £613 and £212, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, has lately been reroofed. The parochial charities produce about £80 per annum, exclusive of an almshouse. There is a free school, and the Baptists have a chapel. Sir J. H. Langham, Bart., is lord of the manor.

WALHAM, a hmlt. in the par. of Clareborough, co. Notts, 1 mile N.E. of Great Retford, near the Chesterfield canal.

WALHAM-GREEN, a district chply. in the par. of Fulham, Kensington div. of Ossulstone hund., co. Middlesex, 1 mile N.E. of Fulham, its post town, and 5 S.W. of St. Paul's. It is situated near the river Thames. In 1861 the ecclesiastical district contained a population of 6,931. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of London, val. £180, in the patron. of the Vicar of Fulham. The church, dedicated to St. John, was erected in 1829 at an expense of about £10,000. The Butchers' Almshouses are situated here.

WALHAMPTON, a tythg. in the par. of Boldre, co. Hants, 1 mile N.E. of Lymington.

WALKDEN MOOR, an ecclesiastical district in the par. and borough of Manchester, co. Lancaster, 5 miles N.W. of Manchester.

WALKER, a tnshp. in the par. of Longbenton, E. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 3 miles E. of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, its post town. It is a station on the North Shields and Newcastle railway. The township is bounded on the S. by the river Tyne, and is crossed by a basalt dyke. It includes the vils. of Walker, Low Walker, and Walker Quay. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the iron and coal trade, and in the chemical and other works. The soil is chiefly clay. Along the banks of the river are extensive manufactories and coal-staiths. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Durham, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church was erected in 1848, and contains some stained windows. There is a school for both sexes. The Independents, Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Presbyterians have chapels.

WALKERINGHAM, a par. in the North Clay div. of Bassetlaw wap., co. Nottingham, 4 miles N.W. of Gainsborough, its post town, and 10 N. of East Retford. The village is situated near the Chesterfield canal and the ferry over the river Trent. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £204, in the patron. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, and in the churchyard is the shaft of an ancient cross. The parochial charities produce about £32 per annum, of which £15 go to Woodhouse school. There is a chapel for the Wesleyans. The Duke of Newcastle is lord of the manor.

WALKERITH, a tnshp. in the par. of Gainsborough, wap. of Corringham, parts of Lindsey, co Lincoln, 2½ miles N.W. of Gainsborough. It is situated on the river Trent at the ferry. A chapel was erected in 1834 for the use of the Wesleyans.

WALKERN, a par. in the hund. of Broadwater, co. Herts, 6 miles S.W. of Buntingford, its post town, and 4 E. of Stevenage railway station on the Great Northern line. The village, which consists of a street nearly a mile in length, is situated on the banks of the river Beane, on which is a corn mill. The manor came from the De Burghs, Mareschals, Morleys, to the Capels, in the reign of Henry VII. It is a meet for the Puckeridge hounds. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £428, in the patron. of King's College, Cambridge. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains a monument to a Knight Templar. The parochial charities produce about £4 per annum. There is a National school, and the Independents, Wesleyans, and Baptists have chapels. The Earl of Essex is lord of the manor. A fair is held on 5th November.

WALKHAMPTON, a par. in the hund. of Roborough, co. Devon, 5 miles S.E. of Tavistock, its post town, and 10 N. of Plymouth. The village is situated in the valley of the Walkham rivulet, near the border of Dartmoor Forest. In the vicinity are a copper mine and some extensive granite quarries. The par. includes part of the hmlt. of Little Horrabridge. The soil is varied. The Plymouth railway passes through the parish. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Exeter, val. £125. The church stands upon an eminence on the verge of Dartmoor Forest. The parochial charities produce about £15 per annum. There is a free school, founded in 1719 by Mrs. Woodford. The Wesleyans have a chapel. A fair is held occasionally.

WALKINGHAM-HILL, an ext. par. place in the upper div. of Claro wap., West Riding co. York, 4 miles N.W. of Knaresborough, and 6½ S. of Ripon. It consists of two farms and a rabbit-warren.

WALKINGTON, or HOWDEN FEE, a par. in the waps. of Howdenshire and Harthill, East Riding co. York, 2½ miles S.W. of Beverley, its post town. The par. includes Provosts Fee. In the vicinity are traces of three ancient sanctuary crosses, respectively situated on the road to Beverley, on the road from Beverley to Bentley, and on the road to Bishop Burton. On the E. side of the parish the soil consists of clay, and on the W. of chalk. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of York, val. £676. The church, dedicated to All Hallows, was rebuilt in 1820, with the exception of the tower, which is old. The parochial charities produce about £100 per annum, £5 of which go to a school. There is a parochial school for both sexes, erected in 1855. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel.

WALKINSTEAD. See GODSTONE, co. Surrey.

WALKLEY, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Nether Hallam, par. of Sheffield, West Riding co. York, 2 miles N.W. of Sheffield.

WALKMILL, a vil. in the district of Audenshaw, par. of Ashton-under-Lyne, co. Lancaster, 3 miles S.W. of Ashton-under-Lyne, and 4 E. of Manchester, near the Huddersfield canal and the river Tame.

WALKMILL, a tnshp. in the par. of Warkworth, E. div. of Coquetdale ward, co. Northumberland, 5 miles S.E. of Alnwick.

WALK-MILLS, a hmlt. in the par. of Smethcott, co. Salop, 3 miles N. of Church Stretton.

WALL, a tnshp. in the par. of St. John Lee, S. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 4 miles N.W. of Hexham, its post town, and 22 N.W. of Newcastle-upon-Tyne. It is a station on the Border Counties railway. The village is situated on the North Tyne, near Cilurnum-on-the-Wall. It was at this place that King Oswald, who was afterwards canonised, raised the standard of the cross and defeated the Britons under Cadwalla. In the vicinity are extensive stone quarries. In the cemetery is a mutilated Roman altar. The living is a cur. in the dioc. of Durham. The church, dedicated to St. Oswald, was originally erected by the monks of Hexham. W. B. Beaumont, Esq., is lord of the manor.

WALL, a tnshp. in the par. of St. Michael, S. div. of Offlow hund., co. Stafford, 2 miles S.W. of Lichfield, its post town, and within which borough it is included. It is intersected by the ancient Watling Street, and is the Roman station Etocetum, where Roman coins, bricks, and traces of a castle have been discovered. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Lichfield, val. £47. The church, dedicated to St. John, was consecrated in January, 1843.

WALLACE, a vil. in the par. of Ewenny, co. Glamorgan, 1 mile S.E. of Bridgend.

WALLACETOWN, a quoad sacra par. and town in the par. of St. Quivox, co. Ayr, Scotland. It is situated on the E. side of Newton-upon-Ayr, of which it is a suburb. It was founded in 1760 by Sir T. Wallace of Cragie, since which period it has made rapid strides of prosperity. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in weaving and in the collieries. Wallacetown is in the presb. of Ayr, and in the patron. of communicants. The stipend of the minister is about £150. There are a Free church, an United Presbyterian church, a Reformed Presbyterian church, an Original Secession church, and chapels respectively for the Independents and Roman Catholics. There are also several schools.

WALLASEY, a par. in the lower div. of Wirrall hund., co. Chester, 4 miles N. of Birkenhead, its post town, and 11 from Great Neston. Steamboats ply continuously from Egremont and Seacombe ferries to Liverpool. This parish, situated in the N.W. corner of the county, is a peninsula of a triangular form, bounded on the W. by the Irish Sea, on the N.E. by the Mersey, and on the S.E. by a branch of the Mersey called Wallasey Pool. The village, which is much frequented for sea-bathing, occupies a site at the mouth of the river Mersey, opposite Liverpool, near Black Rock fort. The par. contains the hmlts. of Lisceard, Poulton-cum-Seacombe, Egremont, and New Brighton. Many houses have recently been erected along the banks of the Mersey. The soil is chiefly sandy, with a subsoil of rock. During the excavation of Wallasey Pool, horns of the Cervus Elephas were discovered. In the vicinity is a lighthouse, which has been removed inland twice, in consequence of the encroachments of the sea; and on the Black Rock, at the N.W. point of the parish, is a fort, mounting 15 guns. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Chester, val. £540, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Hilary, was recently erected in place of the old one, which was burnt in 1857. In addition to the parish church are the district churches of New Brighton, St. John's, Lisceard, and Seacombe, the livings of which are perpet. curs. The parochial charities produce about £119 per annum, of which £94 go to the free grammar school. The principal residence is Leasowe Castle, formerly the seat of the Egertons; and near it is an enclosure, formerly a common, where races were run till 1760. It was here that the Duke of Monmouth ran his horse, in the reign of Charles II., won the plate, and presented it to the daughter of the Mayor of Chester.

WALLBOTTLE, a tnshp. in the par. of Newburn, W. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 5 miles N.W. of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, its post town, and 2½ N. of Ryton railway station. It is situated on the turnpike-road from Hexham to Newcastle, and near the river Tyne. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the collieries, which are of great magnitude. The Roman wall formerly passed through this township. There are schools for both sexes, and the Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. The whole of the soil belongs to the Duke of Northumberland.

WALLCOTT, a hmlt. in the par. of Chalbury, hund. of Chadlington, co. Oxford, 5½ miles S.E. of Chipping-Norton.

WALLERSCOTE, a tnshp. in the par. of Weaverham, second div. of Eddisbury hund., co. Chester, 2 miles S.W. of Northwick. It is situated near the Grand Junction railway and the river Weaver.

WALLERSTHWAITE, a hmlt. in the par. and lib. of Ripon, West Riding co. York, 3½ miles N.E. of Ripley. It is joined with Markington.

WALLIFORD, a vil. in the par. of Inveresk, co. Edinburgh, Scotland, 1½ mile E. of Musselburg, near the field of Pinkie.

WALLINGFORD, a post and market town, municipal and parliamentary borough, having exclusive jurisdiction, but locally in the hund. of Moreton, co. Berks, 15 miles N.W. of Reading, and 13 S.E. of Oxford. It is a station on the Great Western railway. It is an ancient borough, situated at a ford, on the western bank of the river Thames, and was strongly fortified by the Romans, from which circumstances it derives its name, Guallen in British and Vallum in Latin, each signifying "an old fort." In the Saxon times it continued to be a place of considerable strength, until burnt by the Danes in 1006. In the reign of Edward the Confessor it ranked as a royal prescriptive borough. The honour having become vested in the crown, was given by Richard I. to his brother John. It was subsequently annexed by Act of Parliament to the Duchy of Cornwall, but was granted by Henry VIII., with the castle and manor, to Cardinal Wolsey, who conferred them on his newly-erected college of Christ Church, Oxford. At the commencement of the great rebellion the castle was repaired and garrisoned for the king, and was not surrendered till nearly the close of the war; in 1653 it was dismantled by order of Parliament. All that now remains is a portion of the walls towards the river, mantled with ivy. The town, which is traversed by the road from Reading to Oxford, consists principally of a spacious market-place and two streets, which are well paved and lighted with gas. It contains a townhall, with market-house beneath, a police-station, mechanics' institute, savings-bank, and the Royal Berks Horticultural Society. The population of the municipal borough in 1861 was 2,793, and of the parliamentary, 7,794. The principal residences are Castle Priory and Castle House. The river Thames is crossed by a stone bridge, constructed, in 1809, of several arches, and about 900 feet in length. Some business is done in malting, but it is not so extensive as formerly. Wallingford is a borough by prescription, and has received charters from various sovereigns, and, under the Municipal Act, is governed by a mayor, who is returning officer, 4 aldermen, and 12 councillors. It formerly returned two members to parliament, but since the passing of the Reform Act of 1832, only one for an extended district. Petty sessions for the division are held every Friday. The town formerly contained 13 churches, but now comprises only 4 parishes—All Hallows, St. Mary-le-More with St. Leonard's, and St. Peter's. The living of All Hallows is a sinecure rect., belonging to Pembroke College, Oxford, the church having been demolished in 1648. The livings of St. Mary and St. Leonard are rects., in the patron. of the bishop. The church of St. Mary was erected in 1658 out of the materials of the castle. It is surmounted by the figure of a knight on horseback, supposed to represent King Stephen. The church of St. Leonard is old, with Norman traces. The living of St. Peter's is a rect., val. £100. The church, erected in 1769, contains the tomb of Sir William Blackstone. The Independents, Baptists, Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Society of Friends have each a chapel. The charities produce about £300 per annum. There are a grammar, diocesan, and National schools, also infant and Sunday-schools. An almshouse for six widows was founded and endowed by William Angier in 1681. The Poor-law Union of Wallingford comprises 28 parishes or places, 17 of which are in Berks, and 11 in Oxfordshire. Wallingford formerly conferred the title of viscount on the Earl of Banbury, but it is now merged in the earldom of Abingdon. On Wittenham Hill, near the town, are remains of an ancient encampment, where many Roman coins have been found. Richard de Wallingford, Abbot of St. Alban's, and John de Wallingford, a monk of that Abbey, were natives. Market-day is on Friday for corn and cattle. Fairs are held on Thursday in Easter week for cattle, and on 29th September for pleasure.

WALLINGFORD CASTLE PRECINCTS, an ext. par. place in the borough of Wallingford, co. Berks.

WALLINGTON, a hund., in two divs., co. Surrey: the first contains the pars. of Addington, Chaldon, Coulsdon, Croydon, Sanderstead, and Woodmansterne, comprising an area of 21,910 acres; the second hund. contains the pars. of Beddington, Carshalton, Cheam, Mitcham, Morden, and Sutton, comprising an area of 14,560 acres.

WALLINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Beddington, second div. of the hund. of Wallington, co. Surrey, 1 mile S. of Beddington, and 2½ miles S.W. of Croydon. It is situated near the Epsom railway, on the river Wandle and the Roman way Stone Street. It was formerly called Waleton, and had a church till 1791.

WALLINGTON, a par. in the hund. of Odsey, co. Herts, 3 miles E. of Baldock, its post town, and 7 N.W. of Buntingford. The village is situated under Motley Hill. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £398, in the patronage of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The register dates from 1661. The parochial charities produce about £5 per annum. There is a National school.

WALLINGTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Fareham, co. Hants, half-a-mile N. of Fareham, on the creek to which it gives name.

WALLINGTON-CUM-THORPLAND, a par. in the hund. of Clackclose, co. Norfolk, 4 miles N. of Downham-Market, its post town, and 8 S. of Lynn. The village is situated near the Lynn railway. The living is a rect. annexed to that of South Runcton, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is in ruins. Wallington Hall, the ancient seat of the Coningsby and Gawdy families, is in an extensive park. E. Peel, Esq., is lord of the manor.

WALLINGTON-DEMESNE, a tnshp. in the par. of Hartburn, N.E. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 11 miles S.W. of Morpeth, and half a mile S. of Cambo, on the river Wandsbeck. The Hall is situated in grounds watered by the river Wansbeck, which is here crossed by a bridge. Sir W. C. Trevelyan, Bart., is lord of the manor. In pulling down the remains of Fenwick Tower, in 1775, several hundred gold nobles, of the coinage of Edward III., were found in an open stone chest.

WALLINGWELLS, an ext.-par. place in the Hatfield div. of Bassetlaw wap., co. Nottingham, 3 miles N.W. of Worksop. It is situated on the York border, and is the site of a Benedictine nunnery founded in the reign of King Stephen.

WALLISEA, ISLE OF, in the hund. of Rochford, co. Essex. It is now a peninsula formed by the rivers Crouch and Broomhill, and connected with the mainland by a causeway, kept up at the expense of the several parishes of Canewdon, Eastwood, Paglesham, Great Stambridge, and Little Wakering.

WALLOP, a tnshp. in the par. of Westbury, co. Salop, 10 miles S.W. of Shrewsbury, on a branch of the river Severn.

WALLOP, NETHER, a par. in the hund. of Thorngate, co. Hants, 7 miles S.W. of Andover, and 3½ N.W. of Stockbridge, its post town. The parish is situated under Danebury Hill, on which are remains of a fortification with ramparts, strengthened on the western side by an outwork, and supposed to have been formed by Canute the Great. The surface is hilly and the soil chalky. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £350. The church, dedicated to St. Andrew, contains several old monuments and two brasses—one of an abbess, bearing date 1432, and the other of a mitred abbot. The Baptists and Wesleyans have each a chapel. There are National schools partially endowed. The principal residence is Wallop House. Lord Bolton is lord of the manor.

WALLOP, OVER, a par. in the hund. of Thorngate, co. Hants, 7 miles S.W. of Andover. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £850. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, contains several monuments. There is a village school.

WALLS AND FLOTTA, a par. in the South Orkney Isles, coast of Scotland. It is situated on the Pentland Frith, and contains the southern portion of the island of Hoy, extending in length about 7½ miles from N. to S., with an extreme breadth of 6 miles. It is so much indented by Longhope Bay that during the influx of spring-tides it resembles two separate islands. On the bay are a battery and two martello towers, and at Candick Head is a lighthouse. A great portion of the land is in pasture and common. The united par. of Walls and Flotta is in the presb. of Caviston and synod of Orkney. The stipend of the minister is about £158. There are two parish churches, situated respectively at Walls and Flotta—the former was erected in 1832. There are two parochial schools, besides several others.

WALLS AND SANDNESS, a par. in the Shetland Isles, coast of Scotland. It comprises the districts of Walls and Sandness on the mainland, and the islands of Foula, Papa Stour, Vailia, and Linga, extending in length about 7½ miles from N. to S., with a breadth of 5 miles. The surface is irregular, and the coast-line rocky, rising in many parts 100 feet above sea-level. Along the shore are Gruting, and other voes or inlets, where fish and wild fowl are caught. The rocks consist of gneiss, granitic porphyry, quartz, and Old Red sandstone. A thousand acres or upwards are under tillage. The village of Walls is about 15 miles W. of Lerwick, and is situated between St. Magnus and Scalloway bays. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the fisheries. This par. is in the presb. of Olnafirth and synod of Shetland. The stipend of the minister is about £158. There are four parochial churches—viz., Walls, Sandness, Papa Stour, and Foula—the first was erected in 1743. The Independents have chapels, situated respectively at Walls and Sandness. There are three Society schools.

WALLSEND, a par. in the E. div. of Castle ward, co. Northumberland, 4 miles N.E. of Newcastle, its post town, and 4 from North Shields. It has three stations on the Newcastle and North Shields railway. Wallsend is situated near the mouth of the river Tyne, at the extremity of the wall of Severus, from which circumstance its name is derived. The par. includes the tnshps. of Wallsend, Howdon Pans, and Willington, and has at Wall-haws, or Cousin's House, traces of the Roman station Segedunum, where pottery and other relics of antiquity have been discovered. It is the centre of an extensive coal district, supplying as many as 2,500,000 tons of best coal, termed "Wallsend," for the London and other markets. The Wallsend mine, in which so many lives have been lost, and other surrounding collieries, are now filled with water. An engineering company has been formed and works already erected to pump out this subterranean lake. The village is large and well-built, containing many good houses with a spacious green in the centre, crossed by a raised causeway. The population of the township in 1861 was 2,371, and of the parish 6,715. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of copperas and earthenware. Near the town are extensive limekilns, a steam corn mill, roperies, shipbuilding yards, and chemical works. The two brothers, John and William Martin, the former distinguished as an historical painter, and the latter the inventor of several ingenious machines, were natives of this parish. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Durham, val. £300, in the patron. of the dean and chapter. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, was built in 1809 at an expense of £5,000. The register dates from 1669. The old church, which was dedicated to the Holy Cross, has been pulled down. There are also the district churches of Howdon Pans and St. Peter, the livings of which are perpet. curs., val. £196 and £222 respectively. There are village schools for both sexes, and the Wesleyans, New Connexion and Primitive Methodists, and Presbyterians have chapels.

WALLSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of Fermoy, co. Cork, Ireland, 3 miles S.E. of Doneraile. The village is situated on the river Awbeg. The land is fertile, upon a substratum of limestone. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Cork, val. £400, in the patron. of the bishop. The church has long been in ruins. The principal seats are Wallstown House, Ballywater, and Wallstown Castle, the last the old seat of the Walls family, which was confiscated and given by Cromwell to the Ruddocks, but is now a ruin.

WALL-TOWN, a tnshp. in the par. of Haltwhistle, W. div. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 2½ miles N.W. of Haltwhistle, its post town, and the same distance N. of the Greenhead station on the Newcastle and Carlisle railway. It is situated on the line of the Roman wall, and includes the stations Æsica, or "Great Chesters," and Vindolana, now termed "Little Chesters," where remains of baths, altars, inscriptions, and other relics have been found. At a farm in the vicinity is part of an old castle of the Ridleys, and on a hill near Four Law barrows, are three stones termed the "Mare and Foals."

WALL-UNDER-HAYWOOD, a tnshp. in the par. of Rusbury, co. Salop, 4 miles S.E. of Church Stretton.

WALLYFORD. See WALLIFORD, co. Edinburgh.

WALMER, a par. in the hund. of Cornilo, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, and about 7 miles from Dover. It is a bathing place and coast-guard station adjoining Deal on the Dover road, and contains many villas and a large number of comfortable lodgings. The season lasts from the middle of July to the end of October. Some time back it was a non-corporate member of the port of Sandwich, but was incorporated with Deal in 1699. In the village are baths, reading rooms, a large brewery and malting establishment, and an esplanade. It was anciently held by the D'Aubervilles and Crowl, or Kereill, families, traces of whose ancient house still exist. Near the seashore stands Walmer Castle, the official residence of the Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports. It was originally built by Henry VIII. in 1539, as a fortress for the defence of the coast, and was restored by Pitt when lord warden. Since the appropriation of the castle as a mansion for the lord warden it has undergone considerable alterations, and the fosse been converted into a garden. The late Duke of Wellington frequently resided in the castle, and died there in 1852. The extensive building known as the Royal Naval and Military Hospital, which formerly served as a coast-guard station, is now converted into a barrack for marines. The parish of Walmer consists of two parts, Upper and Lower Walmer, and contained in 1861 a population of 3,275. The living is a vic. with the cur. of St. Saviour's annexed, in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £240, in the patron. of the archbishop. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, has an ivy covered tower, and a Norman arch, and in the churchyard are two yew trees. The chapel-of-ease of St. Saviour's, in Lower Walmer, was consecrated, in July, 1849, by Archbishop Sumner. The parochial charities produce about £1 10*s.* per annum. There is a National school, built in 1857, and supported by voluntary contributions, for boys, girls, and infants. There is also a military chapel school attached to the barracks, where service is performed for the troops on Sunday, and which is used as a school during the week. Near the church are a deep fosse, and other traces of ancient entronchments supposed to be of Roman formation.

WALMERSLEY - CUM - SHUTTLEWORTH, a tnshp. in the par. of Bury, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 2½ miles N.E. of Bury, its post town. It is situated on the river Irwell, and has a railway station at Summerseat. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the cotton spinning mills. In the neighbourhood are the ruins of a beacon tower, said to have been erected in Elizabeth's time, and nearly opposite, on an eminence, is the seat of the Grants, the eminent manufacturers. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £130, in the patron. of trustees. The parochial charities produce about £23 per annum, of which £3 go to a school. There is a National school. The Independents and Wesleyans have each a chapel, and the latter a day-school.

WALMSGATE, a par. in the hund. of Hill, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 6¾ miles S.E. of Louth, its post town, and 3½ S.W. of Claythorpe station on the East Lincolnshire railway. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Burwell, in the dioc. of Lincoln. The church having fallen to ruins the inhabitants attend that of Burwell, at which place is the National school. The Hall is the principal residence. T. Y. D. Yorke, Esq., is lord of the manor.

WALMSLEY, a chplry. in the par. of Bolton-le-Moors, hund. of Salford, co. Lancaster, 4 miles N. of Bolton.

WALNEY, ISLE OF, a chplry. in the par. of Dalton, hund. of Lonsdale North of the Sands, co. Lancaster, 5 miles S.W. of Dalton. This place, which is insular at high water, is situated between Morecambe Bay and the river Dudden, opposite the village and port of Barrow, which is reached by a ferry. It contains the vils. of North Scales and Bigger. A lighthouse was erected in 1790 at the southern end of the island, which has a revolving light 70 feet high, and visible for 13 miles. The sea is gradually encroaching upon the land, which was formerly an extensive forest, but has now scarcely a tree. Several rare plants grow here, and at North Scale is an intermittent well. On the northern extremity of the island stands the castle of the "Pile of Fouldrey," erected in 1327 by the Abbot of Furness for the protection of the inner harbour. It was once of considerable strength, but is now a ruin. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £90, in the patron. of the Vicar of Dalton. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was restored in 1856. A National school has been recently erected.

WALPOLE, a par. in the hund. of Blything, co. Suffolk, 2½ miles S.W. of Halesworth, its post town, and 8 from Saxmundham. The village is situated near the river Blythe. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £80, in the patron. of the Church Patronage Society. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum. There is an endowed free school. The Independents have a chapel, which is the oldest in the county. Lord Huntingfield is lord of the manor. Fairs are held in Whitsun week and on Michaelmas day.

WALPOLE ST. ANDREW, a par. in the hund. of Freebridge-Marsh-Land, co. Norfolk, 7½ miles S.W. of Lynn, its post town. It is a station on the Lynn branch of the Midland and Great Northern railways. The village is situated on the Roman sea wall, near Cross Keys Wash. The soil is loamy. The par. includes the hmlt. of Cross Keys, from which point a high embankment and a bridge have been constructed across the estuary to Long Sutton in Lincolnshire. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £1,259. The church is dedicated to St. Andrew. The parochial charities produce about £135 per annum, of which £100 go towards Curton's school. There are National and parochial schools, the latter at Cross Keys, and a chapel for the Primitive Methodists. Roman bricks and pipes for draining were discovered here in 1727. This parish gives name and title of baron to the Earl of Orford. The Rev. C. H. Townsend is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

WALPOLE ST. PETER, a par. in the hund. of Freebridge-Marsh-Land, co. Norfolk, 8 miles S.W. of Lynn, its post town, 6 N.E. of Wisbeach, and 1 mile S. of Walpole St. Andrew's. The parish is situated on the Roman sea wall, and includes a small extent of salt marsh and the hmlt. of Marshland Fen. The living is a rect.* with the cur. of St. Edmund's annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £925, in the patron. of the crown. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. There is a chapel-of-ease at Marshland Fen, dedicated to St. Edmund. The parochial charities produce about £198 per annum, of which £82 go to Butler's almshouse. There is a free school founded and endowed by Anthony Curton in 1705, for this parish and that of Walpole St. Andrew. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel.

WALRIDGE, a tnshp. in the par. of Stamfordham, N.E. of Tindale ward, co. Northumberland, 10 miles N.E. of Hexham.

WALSALL, a par., market town, parliamentary and municipal borough in the hund. of South Offlow, co. Stafford, 8 miles N.W. of Birmingham, 6 E. of Wolverhampton, and 119 N.W. of London. The town was formerly confined to an eminence, but has of late years extended over the plain or marsh beneath. It is built on a small rivulet which runs into the Tame, is a place of considerable antiquity, and ranks as the second market and manufacturing town in the county. Queen Elizabeth is said to have visited it in 1586, and signed a deed conveying a grant of land to the town. Henrietta Maria, Queen of Charles I., stayed here in 1643, on her way to join the king at Edgehill. Charles I. granted it a charter, which was confirmed by Charles II. The area of the parish is 8,182 acres, and the population in 1861 was 39,690, being an increase of 12,868 since 1851. The parish is divided into two parts—Walsall Borough and Walsall Foreign. The population of the former in 1861 was 8,166; of the latter 31,524. There are numerous canals running through and by the town, and the South Staffordshire branch of the London and North-Western railway has a station there. A new direct line to Wolverhampton is projected. The recent extension of Walsall is due to its proximity to a district abounding in coal, iron, and limestone. The manufactures here comprise saddlery, hardware, and coach ironwork, locks, bolts, and keys. There are also brass and iron foundries, chandelier and gas-fittings manufactories, tanneries, and extensive corn mills. The town is throughout lighted with gas supplied from the corporation works in Wolverhampton-street, and draws a plentiful supply of pure water from the neighbourhood of Lichfield. There are large reservoirs connected with the waterworks near the Pleck. The corporation, which consists of a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 17 town councillors, partly derives its revenues from lands and buildings within the parish, and from an estate at Bascote, in Warwickshire, which produces nearly £300 per annum. The Reform Bill of 1832 constituted Walsall a borough, and it returns one member. The townhall is in High-street: the old edifice, erected in 1734, has been demolished, and the foundation-stone of a new townhall and gaol was laid on the 24th of July, 1865, on the old site. The assembly-rooms are at the "George Hotel." The county court offices are in Lichfield-street, the public free library in Goodall-street, and the workhouse at the Pleck. In Littleton-street are swimming and private baths, erected in 1861, supplied with water from the limestone springs. There is a small hospital, called the Cottage Hospital, in Bridge-street. Opposite the grammar-school is a sheet of water surrounded by gardens, formed by the excavations for limestone. In the centre of the town is a square called the Bridge, the chief building in which is the "George Hotel:" in the centre is a clock and two cannons from Sebastopol. Walsall, which is in the dioc. of Lichfield and archdeac. of Stafford, has four churches. The parish church, dedicated to St. Matthew, stands at the top of High-street, and is approached by a steep ascent and a flight of steps. The church was rebuilt, with the exception of the tower, spire, and chancel, in 1821, and is capable of seating 2,500; the annual value is £500. St. Peter's is in Stafford-street, val. £300, in the gift of the vicar. St. Paul's, the Bridge, is connected with the grammar-school and in the patron. of the governors, and the val. is £50. St. John's, at the Pleck, val. £112, is in the gift of the vicar. There are also within the parish churches at Walsall Wood and Bloxwich. There are numerous dissenting chapels in both the Foreign and Borough—about seventeen in number, belonging to the Independents, Baptists, Wesleyans, Methodist Free Church, and Primitive Methodists. The Roman Catholics have two chapels at Walsall and one at Bloxwich. The free grammar school, in Lichfield-street, was rebuilt in 1849. The school was founded by Queen Mary, and has one exhibition to Oxford or Cambridge. It is endowed with 298 acres of land, producing about £500 per annum. The old blue-coat school has merged into a National school. The new pile of buildings in red and blue brick with stone facings in St. Paul-street was completed in 1850, and has accommodation for 500 children, 40 of whom, according to the terms of the original institution, are clothed and educated gratis. There are other schools, and numerous Sunday-schools connected with the different places of worship, and numerous small charities belong to the poor of Walsall, consisting of doles of bread, clothing, &c. There are also the Harper and Mollesley almshouses, in Bath-street, for six and eleven poor women or widows respectively. The annual proceeds of the Fiskley charity, about £50, is devoted to apprenticing the children of the poor. In Bath-street is an old burial-ground belonging to the parish church. The new cemetery is at the Pleck. A medicinal well, called Alum Well, a short distance from the town, was formerly noted, its waters being impregnated with iron. Quarter, county court, and petty sessions are held here. The borough magistrates sit every Tuesday and Thursday. There are quarterly meetings of the ironmasters. Walsall has a coroner, town clerk, recorder, and treasurer, and there is an annual court-leet. There are two large branch banks in Walsall—the Birmingham Banking Company having an establishment in High-street, and the Staffordshire Joint-Stock Bank one at the Bridge. The savings-bank has transferred its business to the post-office savings-bank. The principal landowners are Lord Hatherton, Earl of Bradford, and Captain Mellish. There are three papers published here—the Walsall Free Press, Saturday; the Walsall News, Saturday; and the Walsall Advertiser, Saturday and Tuesday; the latter is for free circulation. The union county of Walsall contains the sub-districts of Walsall, Darlaston, Aldridge, and Bloxwich, being an area of 21,603 acres, and containing a population of 59,908. The county court jurisdiction comprises Aldridge, Barr, Bentley, Darlaston, Moxley, Norton, Pelshall, Rushall, Walsall, and Wednesbury. Tuesday is the market-day. There are three annual fairs—on the 24th of February, Whit-Monday, and the Tuesday preceding Old Michaelmas Day; and the races are held on the Wednesday and Thursday following. The racecourse is near the railway station.

WALSDEN, a hmlt. in the par. of Rochdale, hund. of Salford, co Lancaster, 5 miles N.E. of Rochdale, its post town, and 10 from Burnley. It is a station on the Leeds section of the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. It is joined with Todmorden. There are cotton-mills, collieries, stone-quarries, and chemical works, which afford employment to the chief portion of the inhabitants. The soil is clayey, with a rocky subsoil. A portion of the Roman road from Manchester to York passes through this parish. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £150, in the patron. of the crown and bishop alternately. The church is dedicated to St. Peter. There is a parochial school for both sexes. J. Dearden, Esq., is lord of the manor.

WALSHAM, a hund., co. Norfolk. It is mentioned in Domesday as Walesha, and contains the pars. of Acle, Beighton, Fishley, Halvergate, Hemblington, Moulton, Panxworth, Ranworth, Reedham, Tunstall, Upton, South Walsham, Wickhampton, and Woodbastwick; comprising an area of 26,700 acres.

WALSHAM-LE-WILLOWS, a par. in the hund. of Blackbourn, co. Suffolk, 5 miles N.E. from Ixworth, its post town, and 4 from Finningham railway station. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Ely, val. £93. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £89 per annum, realised chiefly from town estate. There are schools for both sexes, and the Independents, Wesleyans, and Baptists have chapels. The Rev. T. B. Powell is lord of the manor. Near the church is an old mansion, formerly a cell subordinate to the Abbey of Ixworth.

WALSHAM, NORTH, a par. and market-town in the hund. of Tunstead, co. Norfolk, 14 miles N.E. of Norwich, and 25 N.W. of Yarmouth. It is situated on an eminence between the rivers Ant and Bure. It was once of more importance than at present, but was much damaged by a fire in 1600, when the market cross, built in the reign of Edward III. by Bishop Thirlby, was repaired or rebuilt by Bishop Redman, of Norwich. This cross having again become diapidated, was repaired a few years ago by the inhabitants; the ecclesiastical commissioners, in whom the property is vested, having declined to expend any money upon it. Many new houses have recently been erected in the suburbs, and on the recently enclosed heaths, known as the White Horse, Spa, and Blue Bell commons. The principal buildings are the market cross, a corn exchange recently built at a cost of £600, the old theatre, now occupied as a National school, a savings-bank, four commercial branch banks, gasworks, and Ebridge water-mill of Messrs. Press, on White Horse common. North Walsham is a polling place for the eastern division of the county, and a petty sessions town. In the vicinity are two crosses, said to mark the spot where John Lytester, a dyer of Norwich, and one of Wat Tyler's men, was defeated by Spencer, the warlike bishop of Norwich, in 1381. The principal trade is in agricultural produce. The population, in 1851, was 2,911, and in 1861, 2,873. The living is a vic.* with the rect. of Antingham St. Margaret annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £336, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an old structure, with a tower originally 147 feet high, but now much dilapidated, the upper part having fallen in 1724. It contains an antique font, with a canopy, two effigies of the Paston family, the one of Sir W. Paston, bearing date 1608, and the armorial bearings of John of Ghent and St. Bent's Abbey. The walls and interior of the church have lately been restored, at a total cost of £2,200. The pulpit is elaborately carved, and there is a beautifully carved prayer-desk, presented to the church by the late M. J. Shepheard, Esq. Four new windows have been inserted: one (memorial) by R. Chamberlin, Esq., of Norwich; one by John Hales, Esq., surgeon, Holt; one by Mrs. Murray, the wife of the present vicar; and the fourth by Mrs. Wilkinson, the wife of George Wilkinson, Esq., solicitor, North Walsham. The Wesleyan and Primitive Methodists, Independents, and Society of Friends, have each a chapel. There is a free grammar school, founded by Sir W. Paston in 1606, which has an income from endowment of about £250, and a good library, bequeathed by the Rev. R. Berney, for the use of the scholars. The school-house was rebuilt in 1765, and is the place where Lord Nelson, Archbishop Tenison, and other eminent men, received the rudiments of their education. There are several small charities. The bishop of Norwich is lord of the manor, and impropriator of the rectorial tithes, now leased to Mr. Shepheard. Lord Suffield and J. Berney Petre, Esq., are the principal landowners. Market-day is Thursday, chiefly for corn.

WALSHAM, SOUTH, an ancient town in the hund. of Blofield and Walsham, co. Norfolk, 3 miles N.W. of Acle, and 10 N.E. of Norwich. This place, which is situated on the S. side of the river Bure, was once much more considerable than at present. After the dissolution of the Abbey of St. Benedict, on the opposite side of the river, it gradually fell into decay, and is now only a village of about 700 inhabitants. It is divided into the two parishes of St. Lawrence and St. Mary; the former is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £511 10*s., in the patron. of Queen's College, Cambridge; the latter is a vic., val. £160, in the patron of the trustees of Great Norwich Hospital. The two churches are situated in the same churchyard, but that of St. Lawrence was destroyed by fire in 1827, and the chancel only has been restored. The register of St. Lawrence dates from 1570, and that of St. Mary from 1550. The parochial charities produce about £60 per annum. There is a small school.

WALSHCROFT, a wap. in two divs., North and South, in the parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln; the former contains the pars. of Claxby, South Kelsey, Kingerby, Kirkby-cum-Osgodby, Newton-by-Toft, Normanby-on-the-Wolds, Owersby, West Raisen, Thornton-le-Moors Toft-next-Newton, Usselby, and part of Caistor, comprising an area of 26,810 acres; and the latter, the pars. of Binwood St. Gabriel and St. Mary, Croxby, Linwood, Market and Middle Raisen, Stainton-le-Vale, Tealby, Thoresway, Thorganby, Walesby, and North Willingham; comprising an area of 30,420 acres.

WALSHFORD, a tnshp. in the par. of Hunsingore, upper div. of Claro wap., West Riding co. York, 3 miles N.E. of Wetherby. It is situated on the river Nidd, and is joined with Great Ribston.

WALSHTOWN, a hmlt. in the bar. of Barrymore, co. Cork, Ireland, 6 miles N.W. of Middleton.

WALSINGHAM. See WOLSINGHAM, co. Durham.

WALSINGHAM, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of North Greenhoe, co. Norfolk, 1 mile N.E. of Little Walsingham, its post town. The village is situated in the vale of the Stiffkey rivulet, and on the road from Fakenham to Wells. It comprises the united parishes of All-Saints and St. Peter, and was formerly of considerable importance, but is now a small agricultural village. The living is a don. cur. annexed to the perpet. cur. of Little Walsingham, in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £168. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum. Roman urns and coins have been discovered. In the vale is the ancient mansion called Berry Hall, the seat of the Brook family.

WALSINGHAM, LITTLE, or NEW, a par. and small town in the hund. of North Greenhoe, co. Norfolk, 5½ miles N.E. of Fakenham, its post town, 28 N.W. of Norwich by road, or 38¾ by rail, and 1 mile S. of Old Walsingham. It is a station on the Wells branch of the Great Eastern railway. It is situated in a vale surrounded by heights, near the river Stiffkey, here spanned by a bridge. The village, which contains a population of 1,006, is a petty sessions and decayed market town. It anciently belonged to the Clares, and was celebrated for the shrine of Our Lady of Walsingham, constructed of wood, after the model of Santa Casa, at Nazareth. The shrine was erected in 1061 by the widow of Ricoldie Faverches, and was made an Austin priory by her son Sir Geoffrey. This institution became immensely rich, and at the Dissolution was valued at £445 14*s.* 4*d.* Prior to the Dissolution it was visited by several crowned heads; especially Henry VIII., who, in the second year of his reign, walked hither barefoot from Barsham, but afterwards caused the image of Our Lady of Walsingham to be burnt at Chelsea. The site and lands were then given to Sir Thomas Sydney, and now belong to H. Lee Warner, Esq., in whose grounds are the ruins of this pile, consisting of the great western portal and eastern end of the conventual church, the refectory, 78 feet by 27, a portion of the cloisters, and a stone bath with two wells, known as the "Wishing Wells." A county court is held monthly, and petty sessions on the first Monday in every month. The market, formerly held on Friday, has been some years abolished. The living is a perpet. cur. with the vic. of Houghton-in-the-Dale annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, joint val. £168. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains a font carved with the seven sacraments of the Church of Rome and the Crucifixion, and several monuments—one to Sir Henry Sydney, and others to the Lee Warner family. The register dates from 1558. The parochial charities produce about £300 per annum. There are eight almshouses, a free school, founded in 1639, and a National school for both sexes. The Independents, Primitive Methodists, and Wesleyans have chapels. There was a bridewell here containing 53 cells, occupying the site of the old Lazar Hospital, but it was abolished about 1860, when the quarterly sessions were also discontinued. The place gives title of baron to the De Greys of Merton. A fair is held on the second Monday after Whit-Monday, and statute fairs on the Fridays before and after Michaelmas Day.

WALSOKEN, a par. in the hund. of Freebridge Marsh-Land, co. Norfolk, 1 mile N.E. of Wisbeach, its post town, of which it is a suburb. It is separated from Wisbeach by a small stream, over which is a bridge. Within these last few years the village of New Walsoken has greatly extended, and in 1861 had a population of 2,683. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Norwich, val. £1,285. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains an old font. There are some charities of considerable amount. The Primitive Methodists have two chapels. Archbishop Herring was born at the Rectory in 1693, and died in 1757. C. Metcalfe, Esq., of Wisbeach, is lord of the manor. There was anciently a chapel with a guild of the Holy Trinity, and a hermitage, of which the site is now unknown.

WALSTON, a par. in the upper ward of co. Lanark, Scotland. It contains a vil. of its own name and that of Ellsrickle. It extends in length about 3½ miles from N.W. to S.E., with an extreme breadth of about 3 miles, and is bounded on the S. by Peeblesshire, and on the other sides by the pars. of Biggar, Libberton, Carnwath, Dunsyre, and Dolphington. Its surface is hilly and pastoral, rising at Walston Hill 1,500 feet above sea-level. The lower grounds are watered by the river Medwin, which abounds in trout. Sandstone and limestone are worked, but the rocks chiefly consist of felspar, porphyry, clinkstone, and greenstone. In the vicinity are traces of a double-ditched circular camp, 77 yards in diameter, also a good spring at Walston Well. The parish is traversed by the road from Biggar to Edinburgh, and by that from Carnwath to Peebles. The village of Walston is situated about 5 miles N. of Biggar, on the river Medwin. This par. is in the presb. of Biggar and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. The stipend of the minister is about £157. The parish church was erected in 1789. There are a Free church, parochial school, and a subscription school.

WALTERSTONE, a par. in the hund. of Ewyas-Lacy, co. Hereford, 3 miles S.W. of Pontrilas railway station, and 15 S.W. of Hereford. Abergavenny is its post town. The village is situated on the river Monnow, on the borders of Monmouthshire. The soil consists of red clay. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Hereford, val. £136. The church is dedicated to St. Peter or to St. Mary. The parochial charities produce about £6 per annum. Near the church is a circular moat, but no traces of any building within its enclosure. In the vicinity are two camps. There is also a farm-house which was once the residence of Lord Burleigh, whose coat-of-arms is still to be seen in the windows.

WALTERSTONE, a hmlt. in the par. of Llanrhidian, co. Glamorgan, 10 miles S.W. of Swansea. It was founded by Henry I.'s chaplain, Walter de Mapes, who translated the "British Chronicle" into Latin.

WALTERSTONE, a hmlt. in the par. of Llancarvan, co. Glamorgan, 4 miles S.E. of Cowbridge.

WALTERSTOWN, a par. in the bar. of West Offaly, co. Kildare, Ireland, 3 miles S.W. of Kildare. The village is near the site of Fitzgeralds' castle, of which there are no remains. The soil is light and sandy, with a considerable tract of bog. The living is a rect. annexed to that of Narney. The church has long been demolished.

WALTHAM, a par. in the hund. of Bridge and Petham, lathe of St. Augustine, co. Kent, 8 miles S.W. of Canterbury, its post town, and 5 E. of the Wye railway station. The village is situated on the Roman way Stane Street. The par. includes the hmlt. of Handwell Green. The land is partly in hop-grounds. There were formerly chapels-of-ease at Ashenfield and Waddenhall. The living is a vic.* with that of Petham annexed, in the dioc. of Canterbury, val. £535. The church is dedicated to St. Bartholomew. There is a National school for both sexes, and the Wesleyans have a chapel.

WALTHAM, a par. in the hund. of Bradley-Haverstoe, parts of Lindsey, co. Lincoln, 3½ miles S.W. of Great Grimsby, its post town, and 9 N.E. of Caistor. It is a station on the Great Northern railway. The village is situated on the road to Binbrook. This parish, as well as several others, were included in the parliamentary borough of Great Grimsby in 1832. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Lincoln, val. £331, in the patron. of Southwell Collegiate Church. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains a monument of black marble, with the effigies of Joan Waltham and her two children, bearing date 1420, also a broken brass, discovered in 1849 under the boards of a pew in the N. aisle, bearing a Latin inscription to John and Margaret Waltham, but without date. The register dates from 1561. The Primitive Methodists and Wesleyans have each a chapel, and the latter a school. There is also a temperance hall. B. Annington, Esq., is lord of the manor. A statute fair for the hiring of servants is held in the first week in May.

WALTHAM, a hund. in co. Essex, contains the pars. of Chingford, Epping, Nazeing, Waltham Abbey, and part of Roydon, comprising an area of 25,240 acres.

WALTHAM ABBAS. See WALTHAM WHITE, co. Berks.

WALTHAM ABBEY, or HOLY CROSS, a par. and small market town in the hund. of Waltham, co. Essex, 12 miles N.E. of St. Paul's, London, by road, or 15 by the Cambridge section of the Great Eastern railway, on which it is a station. This parish is situated on the river Lea, and includes Waltham Forest, which belongs to the crown, also Hainault and Epping forests, part of what was the great wood or weald of Essex. The parish contains 11,870 acres, and includes, besides the town of Waltham, the tnshps. of Holyfield, Sewardstone, and Upshire, or Uptra, and the ecclesiastical district of High Beech. The population of the parish in 1861 was 5,044, and of the town 2,873; the latter consists chiefly of one long street, containing the station of the N. division of the Metropolitan police, where petty sessions are held weekly on Tuesdays, and the courthouse in High Bridge-street, where a county court is held monthly. On the banks of the Lea are a government establishment for refining saltpetre and manufacture of gunpowder, several flour mills, and a manufacture for percussion caps; there are also malt kilns, a brewery, silk-mill, and a pin factory. It is said to owe its origin to Canute's standard-bearer, Tovy, who built here a church, which was reformed as a college by Harold in 1062, and subsequently converted by Henry II. into a mitred abbey for Augustine Canons, which continued to flourish till the Reformation, when its revenues were valued at £1,097 per annum. It was then surrendered by Robert Fuller, the last abbot, to Henry VIII., who gave the site to Sir A. Denny. All that now remains of this abbey is the nave with its two side chapels, constituting the present parish church of Holy Cross and St. Lawrence, and to which a square tower was added at the western end in 1558. It has recently been partially repaired, but funds are needed for further progress. There are many monuments, including two brasses bearing date 1559, and effigies of the Dennys. The living is a don. cur. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £195, in the patron. of trustees. This living was once held by Bishop Hall and by Fuller. In the Abbey cemetery are said to be interred the bodies of Harold and his brothers, who fell at Battle, by their mother Githa, with the simple epitaph, "Hic jacet Harold infeliz." There is also the district church of St. Paul, at High Beech, the living of which is a perpet. cur.* in the patron. of the Bishop of London. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a chapel. There are a free school, endowed by Leverton with about £170 per annum, National, and British and Foreign schools, and a mental improvement society with a small library. The parochial charities produce about £370 per annum, including £70, the endowment of Green's almshouses. Besides the parish church, there are some ruins of the abbey, including part of the abbey wall, a vault, gateway, and a bridge. Roger de Waltham, one of the monkish chroniclers of the time of Henry III., and Bishop John de Waltham, were born here. It was here that Cranmer, afterwards Archbishop of Canterbury, was first introduced to Henry VIII., and suggested the referring of the question of the king's divorce to the divines and learned men of England, instead of submitting to the decision of the Pope. Market day is on Tuesday. Fairs are held on the 14th May and 25th and 26th September.

WALTHAM, BISHOP'S. See BISHOP'S WALTHAM, co. Hants, and the like of other places similarly compounded.

WALTHAM-CROSS, a ward in the par. of Cheshunt, hund. of Waltham, co. Essex, 11 miles from London, and 1 mile W. of Waltham Abbey. It is a station on the Cambridge branch of the Great Eastern railway. It is situated between the New River and the river Lea, and evidently takes the suffix to its name from the cross built by Edward I. in commemoration of Queen Eleanor; this structure consists of three stories raised on six steps, and is embellished with armorial bearings, niched figures, and a spire. It has been restored at various periods, and is now in excellent preservation.

WALTHAM, GREAT, a par. in the hund. of Chelmsford, co. Essex, 4½ miles N.W. of Chelmsford. It is situated in a fertile district watered by the river Chelmer. In the village is an old building called the guildhall. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £300, in the patron. of Trinity College, Oxford. The church, dedicated to SS. Mary and Lawrence, contains several monuments and frescoes. There is also the district church known as the Black Chapel, the living of which is a perpet. cur., val. £20. The parochial charities produce about £85 per annum. The principal residence is Waltham Hall, the seat of Captain Chamier, R.N.

WALTHAM, LITTLE, a par. in the hund. of Chelmsford, co. Essex, 4 miles N.E. of Chelmsford. The village is situated on the high road to Norwich, through Bury, and near the river Chelmer. On the banks of the river are two corn mills. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Rochester, val. £600. The church is dedicated to St. Martin. The Independents have a chapel. The parochial charities produce about £175 per annum. The principal residence is Waltham Lodge.

WALTHAM, NORTH, a par. in the hund. of Overton, co. Hants, 6 miles S.W. of Basingstoke. The village is situated near the line of the South-Western railway. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Winchester, val. £380, in the patron. of the bishop. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, has been recently enlarged. There is a National school. The parochial charities produce about £14 per annum.

WALTHAM-ON-THE-WOLDS, a par. in the hund. of Framland, co. Leicester, 5 miles N.E. of Melton-Mowbray, its post town, and 11 S.W. of Grantham. The village, which is old, was formerly a market town. Lime is burnt in the neighbourhood. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Peterborough, val. £481. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, was restored and repewed in 1838. In the interior is an old font and three carved stalls. The parochial charities produce about £35 per annum. There is a National school with a small endowment, and a chapel for the Wesleyans. An assembly hall was erected in 1838 at the expense of about £800, the site being presented by the Duke of Rutland, who is lord of the manor. A large cattle and horse fair is held on the 18th and 19th of September.

WALTHAM ST. LAURENCE, a par. in the hund. of Wargrave, co. Berks, 4½ miles S.W. of Maidenhead, its post town, and 3 from Twyford. The village is situated near the Great Western railway. At Wargrave a court-baron is held annually, and at Weycock Highrood are traces of a Roman camp. The living is a vic. in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £211. The church, dedicated to St. Laurence, was thoroughly restored in 1847. There are several monuments, particularly one to Sir Henry Neville. The parochial charities produce about £74 per annum. There is an endowed National school. Lord Braybrooke is lord of the manor.

WALTHAMSTOW, a par. in the hund. of Becontree, co. Essex, 6 miles N.E. of St. Paul's, London, and 1 mile W. of Lea-bridge station on the Great Eastern railway. It is situated on the navigable river Lea, here crossed by a bridge, and near the borders of Epping Forest, through which a new road has been cut to Woodford. The village is a suburb of London. It contains the police station for the N. division of the Metropolitan police, and is within the N.E. postal district. It is mentioned in Domesday book as Wealanestun, and at that time was held by Judith, the Conqueror's niece, from whom it passed to the Nevilles and Bishop Montaigne, who in 1624 intrusted the government to a select vestry of 17 persons, besides the minister and churchwardens. The par. contains the hmlts. of Clay Street, Hall End, and Chapel End, with a population in 1861 of 7,137, and includes upwards of 40 miles of roadway. On the banks of the Lea are extensive copper, flour, and oil mills. George Gascoigne, the poet, was born here in 1578, and Edmund Chishall, the antiquary, was once vicar. Courts leet and baron are held occasionally. The living is a vic.* in the dioc. of London, val. £800. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was erected in 1535 by Sir G. Monox, who was lord mayor of London in 1514. The interior contains some old monuments and brasses, one to J. Russell by Chantrey. The edifice was enlarged in 1817 at an expense of £2,000. In addition to the parish church are the district churches of St. John's, St. Peter's, and St. James's, the livings of which are all perpet. curs.* The parochial charities produce about £773 per annum, including the bequest made by Henry Maynard in 1686 for school, minister, &c. There are also the Lord Mayor Monox's free school and almshouses, Squire's almshouses, and various other schools. The Independents, Unitarians, and Roman Catholics have each a chapel.

WALTHAM, UP, a par. in the hund. of Box, rape of Chichester, co. Sussex, 6 miles S.W. of Petworth, its post town, and 8 N.E. of Chichester. The village is situated on the high road from Petworth to Chichester. The parish forms a part of the South Downs. The surface is undulating, with a chalky soil. The living is a rect. in the dioc. of Chichester, val. £108. The register dates from 1790.

WALTHAM, WHITE, or ABBAS, a par. in the hund. of Beynhurst, co. Berks, 4 miles S.W. of Maidenhead. The village is situated on the line of the Great Western railway, and near a branch of the river Loddon. The surface is level, and the soil a strong loam resting on chalk. The living is a vic.* united to the rect. of Shottesbrook in 1744. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, contains two brasses, the earliest dating from 1445. There was formerly a chapel-of-ease at Feens. The Independents and Lady Huntingdon's Connexion have each a chapel, and there are National schools. At Bery Grove many Roman tiles, bricks, and coins have been discovered; and at Little Green is the house where Thomas Hearne, the antiquary, was born in 1680. In this parish is a farm called Snewin's House, said to have been the hunting seat of Prince Arthur, eldest son of Henry VII., and in which the learned Dodwell wrote his book "De Cyclis Veterum."

WALTON, a par. in the hund. of Newport, co. Bucks, 2 miles N.E. of Fenny-Stratford, its post town, and 48 from London. The village is situated on the river Ouzle, near the Grand Junction canal. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Oxford, val. £232. The church is dedicated to St. Michael, and is the mother church to Lympton and Bowbrickhill. The parochial charities produce about £11 per annum. C. Pinfold, Esq., is lord of the manor.

WALTON, a par. in the hund. of Whitley, co. Somerset, 2½ miles S.W. of Glastonbury, its post town, and 6 N. of Somerton. The village is situated on the main western road from Exeter to Bath. The soil is clayey, with a subsoil of blue lias stone. Many curious fossils have been found in the limestone quarries. The living is a cur., annexed to the rect. of Street, in the dioc. of Bath and Wells. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. The register dates from 1671. There is a National school for both sexes, at which a Sunday-school is held. The Wesleyans have a chapel. The Marquis of Bath is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

WALTON, a par. in the hund. of Colneis, co. Suffolk, 10 miles S.E. from Ipswich, its post town, and 4 from Harwich. The parish is bounded on the N.E. by the river Deben, on the S.W. by the harbour of Harwich, and on the S. by the North Sea. The village is situated betwixt the rivers Deben and Orwell. The surface is flat, and the soil generally a rich loam with patches of sand and crag. There is a ferry across the river Orwell, plying to and from Harwich and Shotley. Languard Fort is situated in this parish, as also some small remains of Walton Castle, a stronghold of the Bigods. The living is a vic.,* with that of Felixstow annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich, joint val. £290. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, was restored in 1857. The interior contains two brasses bearing date from 1459. The register dates from 1550. The parochial charities produce about £1 per annum. There is a school for both sexes. The Duke of Hamilton is lord of the manor. There are considerable remains of a Benedictine priory, founded as a cell to the monastery of Rochester in the reign of William Rufus, which continued till 1528, when it was given to Cardinal Wolsey towards the endowment of his intended colleges. Many Roman coins have been found here, and in the adjoining parish of Felixstow, where was a Roman station and mint.

WALTON, a par. in the hund. of Eskdale, co. Cumberland, 10 miles N. of Carlisle, its post town, and 3 N. of Brampton. The village is situated near the river Irthing, on the site of the Roman station Petriana, now called Castle Steads, on the old wall which crossed the parish, and out of the materials of which several houses have been built. The par. includes the tnshps. of High and Low Walton. The surface is undulating, and includes a considerable extent of moorland and peat moss. The soil is argillaceous, with patches of loam. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Carlisle, val. £124. There are an endowed school and a Sunday-school. W. P. Johnson, Esq., of Walton House, is lord of the manor.

WALTON, a par. in York ainsty, West Riding co. York, 3 miles S. of Wetherby, its post town, and three quarters of a mile from Thorpe Arch station on the Harrogate railway. The village is situated on the ancient Watling Street, near the river Wharfe. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of York, val. £75. The church, dedicated to St. Peter, contains an effigy of a knight in armour, and a tablet to N. Fairfax, Esq. The parochial charities produce about £20 per annum. The register dates from 1619. There is a National school for both sexes. G. L. Fox, Esq., is lord of the manor.

WALTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Sandal Magna, lower div. of Agbrigg wap., West Riding co. York, 3 miles S.E. of Wakefield, its post town. The village is situated on the North Midland railway, and is a meet for the Bramham Moor hunt. There are soap and alkali works. Walton House, Refuge House, and Walton Hall, are the principal residences, the latter was the seat of the late C. Waterton, Esq., author of "Wanderings in South America."

WALTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Baswich, E. div. of Cuttlestone hund., co. Stafford, 3 miles S.E. of Stafford, its post town. It is in conjunction with Baswich, and adjoins the turnpike road from Stafford to Rugely. The living is a cur. annexed to the vic. of Baswich, in the dioc. of Lichfield. The church, dedicated to St. Thomas, was erected in 1845. There is a National school for both sexes. The Marquis of Anglesea is lord of the manor.

WALTON, a lib. in the par. of Stone, co. Stafford, half a mile S. of Stone, on the river Trent.

WALTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Eccleshall, N. div. of Pirehill hund., co. Stafford, 2 miles S.E. of Eccleshall. It is a station on the London and North-Western railway. It is situated near the river Sow.

WALTON, a hmlt. in the par. and borough of Aylesbury, co. Bucks, adjoining Aylesbury.

WALTON, a tythg. in the par. of Bosham, co. Sussex, 3 miles W. of Chichester.

WALTON, a tythg. in the par. of Downton, co. Wilts, 6 miles S.E. of Salisbury. It is joined with Wick.

WALTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Cults, co. Fife, Scotland, 3 miles S.W. of Cupar, near Walton Hill.

WALTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Chesterfield, hund. of Scarsdale, co. Derby, 2 miles S. of Chesterfield, near the river Ipper.

WALTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Kimcote and Knaptoft, hund. of Guthlaxton, co. Leicester, 4 miles N.E. of Lutterworth. Many of the inhabitants are employed in frame-work knitting. The Methodists have a chapel.

WALTON, a tnshp. in the par. and hund. of Grantham Soke, parts of Kesteven, co. Lincoln, near Grantham. It is joined with Spittlegate.

WALTON, a district in the par. of Bishop's Frome, co. Hereford, 4 miles S. of Bromyard.

WALTON, a hmlt. in the par. of Paston, lib. of Peterborough, co. Northampton, 3 miles N.W. of Peterborough. It is a station on the Midland railway.

WALTON, a hmlt. in the par. of King's Sutton, co. Northampton, 5 miles S.W. of Brackley.

WALTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Onibury, co. Salop, 4 miles N.W. of Ludlow.

WALTON, a tnshp. in the par. and co. of Radnor, 3 miles S.E. of New Radnor, within which borough it is included, and 8 from Presteign. It is joined with Womaston.

WALTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Stottesden, co. Salop, 4 miles N. of Cleobury Mortimer.

WALTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Worthen, co. Salop, 13 miles S.W. of Shrewsbury.

WALTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Ercall Magna, co. Salop, 6 miles N.W. of Wellington.

WALTON, a tnshp. in the par. of Much Wenlock, co. Salop, near Much Wenlock.

WALTON CARDIFF, a par. in the lower div. of Tewkesbury hund., co. Gloucester, 1 mile S.E. of Tewkesbury, its post town. It is situated on the road from Tewkesbury to Evesham, near the river Severn and the Gloucester and Birmingham railway. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Gloucester and Bristol, val. £53, in the patron. of All Souls' College, Oxford. The church, which is dedicated to St. James, was built in 1658. The interior has lately been restored. The interments take place at the neighbouring parish of Aschurch. The parochial charities produce about £1 10*s.* per annum. In the vicinity is a mineral spring.

WALTON DETVILLE, an ecclesiastical district, formerly a hmlt. in the par. of Wellesbourne Hastings, Warwick div. of Kington hund., co. Warwick, 8 miles from Warwick, 5 from Stratford-on-Avon, and 3½ N.W. of Kington. The village is situated on a branch of the river Avon. Walton has belonged to the ancestors of Sir C. Mordaunt from Henry VIII.'s time. The Warwickshire hounds meet here. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of Worcester, val. £156. The church, dedicated to St. James, was restored and endowed by the late Sir C. Mordaunt, Bart., of Walton House, which was restored by Hakewell. There is a day-school for both sexes.

WALTON, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Freebridge-Lynn, co. Norfolk, 9 miles S.E. of Lynn, and 7 N.W. of Swaffham. This parish was consolidated with that of Gayton Thorpe in the early part of the present century. The land is arable, with the exception of a small proportion of woodland, and about 200 acres of warren and common. The chief crops are wheat, barley, and turnips. The living is a vic.,* val. £157, with the rect. of Gayton Thorpe annexed, in the dioc. of Norwich. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The register dates from 1560. There was formerly a chapel, dedicated to St. Andrew, but which is now in ruins. The parochial charities produce about £25 per annum. There is a National school for this parish and that of Gayton Thorpe. A. Hamond, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal landowner.

WALTON, EAST, a par. in the hund. of Dungleddy, co. Pembroke, 7 miles N.E. of Haverfordwest. It was anciently called Wale-town, from its founder W. De Wale, who bestowed it on the neighbouring commandery of Knights Hospitallers at Slebeth. The parish contains only 110 acres, but the village is considerable. The living is a perpet. cur. in the dioc. of St. David's, val. £60. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. The charities consist of a share with Llysvraen.

WALTON HEAD, a hmlt. in the tnshp. of Kirkby Overblow, West Riding co. York, 6 miles N.W. of Wetherby.

WALTON INFERIOR, a tnshp. in the par. of Runcorn, hund. of Bucklow, co. Chester, 2 miles S. of Warrington. The village is situated near the river Mersey and the Bridgwater and Mersey and Irwell canals.

WALTON-IN-GORDANO, a par. in the hund. of Portbury, co. Somerset, 2 miles N. of Clevedon, its nearest railway station and post town, and 12 S.W. of Bristol. The village is situated nearly opposite to Cardiff, on the Bristol Channel, and under the Clevedon hills. On the summit of a hill overlooking the village are the remains of Ralph de Mortimer's castle, built shortly after the Conquest, which is now used as the National schoolhouse. It subsequently came to the Seymours, Thymes, and Richard de Walton. The soil is light and sandy, with a subsoil of limestone and rock. The living is a rect.* in the dioc. of Bath and Wells, val. £209. The church, dedicated to St. Paul, was enlarged in 1838. There is a National school. Sir William Miles is lord of the manor and sole landowner. There are some remains of an old chapel belonging to the castle, with a piscina and cross.

WALTON-LE-DALE, a tnshp. in the par. of Blackburn, lower div. of Blackburn hund., co. Lancaster, 1½ mile S.E. of Preston, its post town, and 7 miles from Chorley. This tnshp. comprises a tract of elevated land overlooking the valleys of the Derwent and Ribble, and contains the hmlts. of Brownedge, Cuerdon Green, Bamber Bridge, and Moon's Mill. The population in 1861 amounted to 7,383. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the cotton mills and print works. Market gardening is carried on. The soil is fertile. The banks of the rivers are steep and clothed with wood. The living is a perpet. cur.* in the dioc. of Manchester, val. £156, in the patron. of the Vicar of Blackburn. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, was partly rebuilt in 1794. The parochial charities produce about £78 per annum, of which £16 go to a school. There are National schools for both sexes, a Sunday-school, and a workhouse. Sir H. B. Hoghton, Bart., is lord of the manor. This place was the scene of a battle fought 17th August, 1648, between Cromwell and the Duke of Hamilton. Here, in 1715, General, or Parson Wood and his congregation defended the passage of the Ribble against Scottish rebels. In 1701 the Duke of Norfolk, the Earl of Derwentwater, and other leaders of the Jacobites, incorporated themselves by the style of the "mayor and corporation of the ancient borough of Walton."

